
This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

GoogleTM books

<https://books.google.com>

Princeton University Library

32101 081978106

]

]

An aerial photograph of the Princeton University campus, showing various buildings, trees, and parking lots. In the foreground, a large, oval-shaped stadium is filled with spectators, with a football field visible in the center. The stadium is surrounded by a running track.

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

Vol.91 No.1

Sept. 12, 1990

Football Preview

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

Vol.91 No.1

Sept. 12, 1990

FEATURE

- 12 $2.7 Billion (and Growing)
Managing Princeton's Endowment
by Anne Matthews '81

DEPARTMENTS

- 3 LETTERS
- 6 BOOKS
- 8 PRINCETON NOTEBOOK
N.J. Supreme Court Rules for Sally Frank '80; Laurance Rockefeller '32 Gives $21 Million for Human Values Center
- 17 SPORTS
Garrett-less Football Team Faces Challenges and Opportunities in 1990
- 22 CLASS NOTES
- 39 MEMORIALS

On The Cover

Some 38,000 fans came out for last fall's Yale game, a contest that recalled the days when Tiger teams routinely filled Palmer Stadium. Photograph by Nat Clymer.

FROM THE ARCHIVES

Strolling the Yale campus in the winter of 1949, Jim Mills '45, Dave Finnie '46, and Pete Throop '45 turned heads in their raccoon coats. The three were students at Yale Law School. Recalls Finnie, "The raccoon coat had its heyday in the 1920s and was long out of style by then—we found these in a thrift shop and were just having some fun."

J. I. MERRITT '66, Editor

ANDREW C. MYTELKA '85, Managing Editor
DAVID WILLIAMSON III '84, Staff Writer
NIALA O'CONNOR '89, Assistant Editor
STACY M. WIZOLA, Art Director
R. T. HOWELL, Production Manager
NANCY S. MACMILLAN, Business Manager
LOLLY O'BRIEN, Advertising Director

BOARD OF EDITORIAL DIRECTION

EDWARD R. WEIDLEN '66, Chairman
LEA B. BELICH GELD '82 • LONDON Y. JONES '66
JAMES P. KELLY, JR. '76 • ELLIOTT D. LEE '74
PATRICIA H. MAINS '72 • JOHN A. MCPHIE '53

PUBLICATION BOARD

DOROTHY L. BEDFORD '78, Chairman
ROBERT K. DURKEE '69 • ROBY HARRINGTON III '51
WALTER H. LIPPINCOTT, JR. '60 • PETER O. PRICE '62
PETER G. SMITH '46 • DANIEL N. WHITE '65

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE

ROBERT F. SENNOTT, JR.
Ivy League Magazine Network
254 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001 • (212) 684-5603

LOCAL ADVERTISING/PRINCETON EXCHANGE

LOLLY O'BRIEN (609) 258-4886

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is an independent magazine supported by alumni class subscriptions and by paid advertising. Its purpose is to record news of the alumni and at the same time to review without partiality the achievements and problems of the administration, the faculty, and the student body of Princeton University. The views expressed in the Alumni Weekly are those of signed contributors or the editor and do not necessarily represent official positions of the university.

PUBLISHED BY

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540
Telephone (609) 258-4885
TWX 510-685-2306 UNIV PRESS PRIN • FAX (609) 258-6305

ELECTRONIC PAW BBS: (800) 258-3002

Materials can be transmitted to our offices via telecommunications, using the upload facility in the file-transfer section of the Electronic PAW computer bulletin board system. Its protocols are 300/1200/2400 baud, eight data bits, one stop bit, and no parity. It is online 24 hours a day.

PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY (ISSN 0148-8270)

Vol. 91, No. 1, September 12, 1990

Printed By William Byrd Press, Richmond, Virginia Annual subscription $19.50 (foreign postage $5 extra); single copies $1.50. All orders must be paid in advance. Copyright © 1990 Princeton University Press. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Second-class postage paid at Richmond, Va., and at additional mailing office.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to PAW Address Changes, 3175 Princeton Pike, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

*“If the PAW was the only benefit of paying class dues...
I would be way ahead.”*

by Sandford Nemitz '54

Member of the Class Affairs Committee and Editor, Treasurer's Newsletter

No college or university annually publishes as many issues of its alumni magazine as Princeton. Seventeen times. Biweekly during the academic year. Timely, comprehensive, interesting and relevant – the Princeton Alumni Weekly is a bargain compared to consumer magazines.

But PAW is just one of many benefits you receive by paying class dues. Dues underwrite the whole operation of class activities:

- Executive and class committee meetings
- Class projects
- Faculty speaker programs
- Class scholarship funds
- Newsletters and other mailings to the class
- The Class contribution to the Alumni Council
- Annual dinner programs
- Alumni Day get togethers
- Reunions planning
- Assistance for needy classmates
- Class memorial services
- Telethons
- Regional reunions
- After the game gatherings

And all the other programs your class officers plan for your benefit.

Class dues provide the deposits needed for reserving space for class events; pay the communications expenses for class stationery, printing, postage and telephoning, and provide the startup funds for reunions, class gatherings, class projects, etc.

Class Dues Make The Difference. You Make It Happen.

Princenton's strong class affiliations are unique among alumni organizations. Class dues provide the difference but only you can make it happen by being a dues payer. On the average, 52 percent of all Princeton alumni pay class dues. We're grateful to those who are supportive. However, with postage rates going up, inflation again on the rise, we need the help from all classmates. If you're not among the 52 percent join the club now...you're the beneficiary.

Watch this space for regular announcements of Alumni Council news and events.

Alumni
Council

Princeton University

Alumni Service Awards

The award to Sally Frank '80 for alleged "selfless service" to the university is a shocking affront to alumni(ae) who give many hours twelve months of the year to the Best Old Place of All (PAW, July 18). There are hundreds of people out here in the regions who devote time and energy to recruiting top applicants, working for Annual Giving, and promoting Princeton in many ways. These people are entitled to know the names of Alumni Council officers who endorsed the Frank nomination, or, better yet, the names of those on the council who resigned in revulsion.

Several of my fellow alumni are considering reducing their Annual Giving gift to $10—a one-year protest, albeit a costly one to the university. If that is too extreme, we can all boycott Alumni Day next February, an occasion on which we have in the past left the Jadwin luncheon literally choked with pride and love for a university excelled by no other on this continent.

In any event, the Alumni Council should begin screening nominations for the second annual Disloyalty Award in 1991. There must be others who have cost the university thousands in legal fees, or who have undermined traditions, or who have campaigned for negative causes.

NAT BOYNTON '39
Delmar, N.Y.

As I was flipping through the July 18 PAW, my feelings of affection for Princeton turned to shock and disbelief to see that Sally Frank '80 had been selected to receive an alumni service award. I think her attire at the awards ceremony (as per the photograph in PAW) is illustrative of her level of respect for the university. It is bad enough that the university bends over backward to admit and then appease the Sally Franks of this world, but the Alumni Council's decision to honor her is an affront to the great majority of Princeton alumni.

HUGH E. MCGEE III '81
Houston, Tex.

EDITOR'S NOTE: When she received the award, Frank was wearing her tenth-reunion outfit, a baseball uniform.

I was shocked to learn that the selection committee chose Sally Frank '80 as one of this year's recipients of the Alumni Council Award for Service to Princeton. There must have been a reason for this choice, but what it might be escapes me! If the university administration wants all eating clubs to admit women, then Sally Frank performed a service to the administration, although certainly not to Princeton.

I am astonished that the committee didn't realize the adverse consequences of this selection and the controversy it would generate among alumni, to the detriment of the university. This was evident in Annual Giving (one of my classmates cut his usually generous gift to a pittance), Reunions (some alumni canceled), and respect for the Alumni Council.

The choice also seems to be a slap in the face to the many women who have served the university in so many unsung ways. Why not one of them instead of Sally Frank?

JOHN G. KELLOGG '32
Princeton, N.J.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer is a past recipient of the Alumni Council service award. For more on Sally Frank, see page 8.

I am writing to object to the Alumni Council's decision to grant a service award to John W. Bitner '38 for his role in (as reported in your article) "sustaining the university's R.O.T.C. programs." Last year, despite significant disagreement within the Princeton community, the administration determined that R.O.T.C. was not a university program and therefore was not subject to the university's equal-opportunity policy. For the Alumni Council to recognize a graduate for "selfless service" to the university on account of his service to R.O.T.C. is inconsistent and inappropriate. It raises serious questions about the integrity of the university's stance against R.O.T.C.'s discrimination against gays and lesbians.

Clearly, the administration has some explaining to do. All alumni have a right to expect clarity and consistency in the university's policies. Either the Alumni Council's award to Mr. Bitner should be rescinded, because R.O.T.C. is not a university program; or (if it is a university program) R.O.T.C. should be made to comply with the university's equal-opportunity policy.

ROBERT H. SPENCER '87
Brooklyn, N.Y.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Alumni Council comprises alumni volunteers, and its selection of winners of the alumni service award is made independent of the university administration. The phrasing "the university's R.O.T.C. programs" was PAW's and paraphrased Bitner's citation, which did not refer to the Army R.O.T.C. unit currently on the campus as a university program.

Swimming Test

Your article on the university's decision to drop the freshman swimming test requirement (Notebook, July 18) quotes Dean Lowe as stating, "Looking into this, I found no evidence that a degree has ever been withheld for this reason." I can think of at least one exception to this remark—my late classmate William C. Fuellhart '25. Bill was present at our graduation (I can remember him still, sitting a few rows from me in his R.O.T.C. uniform), but few in our class, myself included, were aware that he did not receive a diploma. Not until our fortieth reunion, in 1965, did this become known. We were gathered on the lawn of the Hun School when President Robert F. Goheen '40 '48, following a short address, asked Bill to come forward. President Goheen then revealed that Bill had not received a degree that June day in 1925 because he had either never taken or failed to pass his swimming test. So it was that, forty years later, the president of Princeton presented Bill with his diploma, to the hearty applause of several hundred classmates and spouses.

D. HARVEY PHILLIPS '25
Bradford, Penn.

Your article on the end of the swimming test took me back to the fall of 1943, when fellow freshman Dick Benedict, like me hating the calisthenics that went with required phys. ed., came up with an imaginative way to avoid same: we couldn't swim! Removing the Red Cross Lifesaving patch from my trunks, I joined the swimming class with Ben. Somehow, we managed to take several months to learn how to stay afloat, thus postponing the evil day of push-ups, jump-ups, and other unhappy exercises.

When we finally joined our perspiring classmates, we discovered in effect a scam, in which half the class answered "here" in varying tones of voice as the roll was called, not only for those present, but also for the absentees. Unfortunately, in time the latter came to outnumber the former, and the instructor finally figured out what was going on. After lecturing us on the Honor System, he referred the miscreants to Nassau Hall. There, happily, we were able to persuade the dean that the Honor System applied only to exams and scholastic work, not to attendance at required athletics. It was, however, suggested that our roll-call practice be discontinued.

RICHARD G. ASHWORTH '47
New York, N.Y.

Despite the assertion that "all but a handful of living Princetonians" have been subjected to the university's swimming test, I seem to recall an absence of this test for female undergraduates, at least in the first year of coeducation, due to inadequate locker-room facilities. That would have engendered about 150 bona fide swim-test-exempt "living Princetonians," making for an unwieldy "handful." I can't believe that such a large number of Princeton's women would have perished—drowned?—since graduation.

ELLEN HYMOWITZ MALTZ '73
New York, N.Y.

All-Male Clubs

Some comments on the letter of Herbert Hobler '44 (PAW, July 18) with respect to the all-male eating clubs:

Mr. Hobler's assertion that the clubs are "off-

Prepare for a Championship Season This Fall...

With our plush Tiger Throw.

Thick, soft and "furry." Machine washable, acrylic and cotton. Brown tones. 60" x 80". Tiger $30.00 plus tax; by Biederlack. ($3.00 shipping and handling)

Mail and phone orders welcome.
Use your H. Gross Charge, Visa, MasterCard or AMEX.

STORE HOURS
Mon-Wed 9:30-6:00
Thurs-Fri 9:30-9:00
Saturday 9:30-6:00
Sunday 12:00-5:00

One Palmer Square
Princeton, NJ 08542
609-924-6088

At the sign of the goose...®

NEWLY RE-ISSUED IN HARDCOVER:
Princeton by Robert Gambee. The most complete, richly illustrated portrait of Princeton ever published is now available in both paperback ($19.95) and clothbound ($34.95) editions. Add $3.95 shipping. N.J. residents add 7% tax.

the PRINCETON University Store

36 University Place, Princeton, N.J. 08540

Call toll-free: From N.J., 1-800-624-4236

Elsewhere in the U.S., 1-800-631-0137

☐ U-Store ☐ VISA ☐ MasterCard ☐ AmEx
Acct. # _____

Exp. Date _____

Qty _____

Name _____

Address _____

City, State _____

ZIP _____

campus social clubs" is highly debatable. In fact, the basis of Sally Frank '80's suit against the all-male clubs was that they are an integral part of the university. Because the university receives federal funds, it cannot legally discriminate against women. Mr. Hobler may assert that Tiger and Ivy are university-independent all he wants, but it is an issue for the courts to decide. The Fly Club case at Harvard, although relevant, involves a different university with a different history, and the outcome of that suit ought not to determine the outcome of Frank's.

With respect to Mr. Hobler's analogy between all-male clubs and ethnic and cultural groups on the campus, several points are worth making. The student groups on the campus exist for such purposes as promoting cultural traditions and providing places where members may feel free from social and cultural isolation. But none of the student groups on the campus, to my knowledge, excludes people based on their sex or ethnic background. Men may join the Women's Center, whites may participate in Third World Center activities, and so on. I, for example, a Jew, was made an honorary member of the Princeton Arab Society. The failure of most students to take advantage of groups that do not represent their own ethnicity is more a sign of the parochial interests of most Princeton students than a sign of the exclusiveness of the groups. Another point: as mentioned above, many of the student groups exist to provide places where the dominant culture (at Princeton and in the U.S.) is not so all-pervasive and overwhelming. Such a refuge is not needed for men per se.

No one says that any Princeton student can't associate with whomever he or she wants. But to institutionalize the desires of students to exclude certain people is wrong. Imagine the uproar if any of the exclusive clubs announced that blacks were no longer welcome at Bicker. ("We don't have anything against blacks, we just can't relax around them.") Why is discrimination against blacks unacceptable but not discrimination against women?

Freedom of association, like states' rights, is a lofty principle that has been debated by repeated attempts to use it to buttress discrimination. As Mr. Hobler points out, the rise of fraternities and sororities shows that Princeton students will continue to associate with members of their own cultural groups, whether or not the all-male clubs continue to exist. So be it. But fraternities and sororities are not recognized by the university and are not institutionalized, and so they are a far lesser evil than the all-male eating clubs. You can't force a man to socialize with a woman, but you cannot sanction his refusal to do so.

ROBERT B. GROSSMAN '87

Brookline, Mass.

Beer Jackets

The letters about beer jackets in the July 18 PAW absolutely demand comment. Frederick Doolittle '32 does an excellent job of explaining the jacket mystique, but the other two letters are wide of the mark.

Let me point out to Robert Altman '82 that, however much I may agree with his concerns about promoting the use of alcohol, the beer jacket was not worn just during drinking bouts, any more than wearing the "ice-cream suit" of our era demanded ingesting such food, or the donning of a polo shirt indicated an addiction to horse hockey.

The beer jacket was comfortable, convenient, relatively cool, and economical. A beer suit—jacket and trousers—cost $2.65, and even during the Depression that was a pretty good bargain. I bought two of them, one to wear while the other was in the laundry. We wore them to class, around the campus, to athletic events—all over except on such formal occasions as visits to New York or at times when we expected our parents to call. And of course, we wore them at Senior Singing, which, alas, I probably have to explain to later generations.

David Kornblau '83 comments on the "tastelessness" of our garments. Coming from a member of his generation, that's funny, especially when one considers what his contemporaries wore . . . and wear. But maybe this is merely another manifestation of the yuppie syndrome.

EDWARD M. WILLIAMS '36

Penlynn, Penn.

Snake Oil?

Regarding your cover story on Foster Gamble '70 and mind fitness: as opposed to Mr. Gamble's contention, brainwave biofeedback is the snake oil of the nineties (PAW, June 13). No longer can a merchant sell clear fluid in a bottle from the back of a truck. In his place, there is the seller of enigmatic biorhythms using quadraphonic sound systems and large video screens. The principle is the same; there is no proof that either remedy works.

In contrast to another of Mr. Gamble's statements, Nautilus equipment, to which he likens brainwave biofeedback, doesn't "fine-tune" (whatever that means) the body. Rather, it builds muscle mass by increasing the size of muscle cells. If brainwave biofeedback did that, the brain would be crushed against the skull.

Before extolling the merits of this unproven technology, the MindCenter Corporation needs to develop controlled studies defining its limits and indications, apart from testimonials of those who have experienced biofeedback in a FutureMind module. No doubt the sellers of snake oil extolled their product in a similar fashion.

PAW is not a peer-reviewed journal, but it can do better.

JEROME V. MURPHY, M.D. '58

Kansas City, Mo.

Please be careful with PAW. To many of us out here in the boonies, it is Princeton! I miss the old covers, but I have come to like your crazy colors on the header. I have also come to like many of the thoughtful pieces dealing with essentially non-university concerns.

But give us a break! The issue of June 13 would make our local Sunday-supplement editor blush. I assume that everyone on your staff was in a hurry to get away for the summer. The only article of general interest (and certainly one is usually enough) was a three-page piece breezily publicizing something that looks like snake oil, with no demonstration to the contrary. I refer to the article on mind fitness, which cites no authority but the entrepreneur himself for the virtues of his business. There may be great validity to his MindCenter, but the story nowhere demonstrates this. Do the editors run this sort of thing by qualified faculty for comment?

Time, Newsweek, and our local newspapers have given in to TV and USA Today and concluded that our minds can only handle spritely graphics and short articles. Surely Princeton's reputation as a great university is damaged by your assumption of alumni ignorance.

THOMAS B. FAXON '46

Denver, Colo.

The garish cover of the June 13 PAW reminds me of a Captain Marvel comic book. Why don't you stick with stodgy campus views and keep us old alumni happy?

STEPHEN VALENTINE III '47 '49

Birney, Mont.

Wrong Birds

Your lacrosse correspondent either needs a refresher course in ornithology or perhaps an eye examination for color blindness! In the July 18 PAW, in describing Princeton's upset win over Johns Hopkins in the N.C.A.A. tournament, he referred to the Hopkins team as the Cardinals. Since the players for that "perennial lacrosse juggernaut" were wearing blue uniforms and have always been called the Blue Jays, one wonders whether your reporter was even at the game! Stanford's teams are, I believe, called the Cardinals, but I am not aware that they play lacrosse. There is a baseball team in St. Louis . . .

ROBERT O. BIERN, M.D. '54

Annapolis, Md.

Carolina Rice

I would like to correct a mistake in your article on Carolina Gold rice (PAW, April 18). The local physician who introduced rice planting to South Carolina was Dr. Henry Woodward, the first English settler of South Carolina and a hero of many adventures. He was a statesman, explorer, ambassador to the Indians, and according to the Dictionary of American Biography, the "pioneer of English expansion in the lower South."

BRUCE M. CLAGETT '54

Friendship, Md.

A Perfect Place For A . . .

Weekend Escape

Imagine... THE RESIDENCE INN*

$79.00*

- Studio Suites with Queen Sized Beds.
- Separate Living Room, many with Fireplaces.
- Fully Equipped Kitchens.
- Complimentary Continental Breakfast.
- Heated Pool, Whirlpool and Sport Court.

* Rates valid Friday and Saturday nights only based upon availability. Rates are subject to 6% New Jersey State Sales Tax. Escape Rates not valid in conjunction with other discounts.

THE RESIDENCE INN PRINCETON
4225 Route One • Princeton, NJ 08540
(201) 329-9600

The New Princeton Club of New York

Opening floor-by-floor throughout 1990

- Attractive, "clubbier" entrance lobby.
- 3 new dining rooms, each one unique.
- 9 restyled private dining rooms.
- 48 newly decorated bedrooms.
- Women's rooms added on all floors.
- Expanded alumni activities
- Plus: squash courts, fitness center, library, lounge, varied member events.

Join during our major renovation:

- save $250 entrance fee (will not be waived again).
- and get a free $100 dinner in the new Woodrow Wilson Room.

Call or write: Membership Secretary
The Princeton Club of New York
15 West 43rd Street, NY NY 10036
212-840-6400

Family History in a Society Gone Insane

A GENERATION LOST: CHINA UNDER THE CULTURAL REVOLUTION

Zi-ping Luo '85 • Henry Holt, $22.50

HUAXIAO, the word for chemistry in Chinese, might be translated as "the study of changes." In Shanghai, the Cultural Revolution denied Zi-ping Luo any chance for a bachelor's degree, but she was able to study science, languages, and literature in secret with distinguished and politically disgraced Chinese professors during that time. Princeton's chemistry department admitted her to its graduate program in 1980. Since then, Luo has completed her doctorate, obtained several U.S. patents, and written this book—the harrowing story of an educated Chinese family after 1966.

Most of the relevant changes, according to this autobiography, are in personalities. A Generation Lost is presented as a set of letters to a professor whom Luo knows only from having discovered his notebook, in which he records his intention to commit suicide. Memories of the Cultural Revolution have become too painful for him.

The immediate, ostensible aim of each letter is to give "Professor Hu" hope for living. But the discourse is carried on at a distance: both the letter-writer and the recipient are in America, more than a decade after most of the events they describe. They remain strangers until the end of the book. The letters are connected loosely, giving an impressionistic effect. Luo gives each main character (including herself) a pseudonym.

This makes for a novel-like text, full of flashbacks, characters who enter the narrative and depart, remembrances of things past linked by themes as much as chronology, and without apologies for the parts of the story that remain untold. Luo, like Scheherazade of The Arabian Nights, leaves each letter open-ended, promising Professor Hu she will resolve some mystery in the next mailing—so that he postpones his suicide or decides against it. Tragedy is less glaring, through a mist.

The narrative is more rich than organized, and because of the horrific content, it is effective in that form. Even the book's title is uncertain: early on, Luo says plainly, "my generation was lost," yet later she says (more accurately) the opposite. Few characters or symbols in the book are fully stable. Virtues and faults in people are frequently her topics, but Luo sees these as mixed in nearly everyone but her literary father, "my idol and closest friend."

In her youth, Luo writes, she argued that as a matter of definition, "a good comrade has made mistakes"—so the book inexplicitly posits experiences, not abstract ideas, as the basis for moral judgment. "All literature must be written with blood," she says. A solid family is also golden here, not tarnished with time and trials. The book also suggests the need for tolerance among different kinds of people. No generation need be lost, she writes, if it learns about experience, family, and tolerance.

Zi-ping Luo '85

FROM A GENERATION LOST

For Luo and her sister, independent study became the means to self-respect. They also spent ten years on research to remove the anti-revolutionary labels with which their parents had been tagged. They soon garnered hard evidence that the "rightist" stigma had been unfairly attached to their father, but trips to the prosecutor in that 1950s case, to work units, and even to Beijing failed to "reverse the verdict" until 1984, half a decade after both parents had died. This book does not forgive China's bureaucracy for such injustice, and there is no reason why it should.

For a Western reader craving an experience of China, not just a treatise on the years 1966 to 1976, this beautifully written book is also very rich. Traditional Chinese concerns fill the pages: health and herbs, eating, calligraphy, punning. When Luo concludes that "After all, family is more important than education," it is easy to learn from these terms of choice.

Luo is less concerned about why the Cultural Revolution occurred than about what kinds of personalities could survive it. Her aim is Job's, not Burke's. This autobiography is like such other first-hand accounts as those of Liang Heng and Judith Shapiro '75, Cheng Nien, Dai Hsiao-ai, Gao Yuan, Ling Ken, Lo Fulang, Yue Daiyun, and the subjects of Anne Thurston's interviews. All are devoid of structural ideas about government, even about what kind of regime might prevent another Cultural Revolution (such as is unlikely now, partly because people remember the earlier one). But this lack of concern about structural issues does not even distinguish Luo from the many Chinese intellectuals whose profession is political science. Democracy is a current theme, but A Generation Lost does not discuss it at all.

Luo's aim is to honor and repeat her parents' literary skills while telling the story of their family, and she succeeds in this gloriously. She is proud to be a member of the intellectual elite (and is a person of much candlepower), but her book betrays less hauteur than is usual among educated Chinese. She also shows a somewhat greater effort to see virtues in other social groups. Such attitudes might undergird Chinese democracy better than imported ideas can.

As a scientist, Zi-ping Luo seems to sense what is still missing here: "No matter how cruel the hurt is, if one can analyze it with a cool eye, it has already begun to heal." She doesn't quite deliver on this insight, saying simply that China "was a society gone insane." Aside from describing such labels of ostracism as her father's "rightist" tag, she fails to offer reasons for the tragedy. Metaphors and aphorisms—an earthquake, "a spark can burn a prairie"—are the main means here of explaining why there was so much violence. But Luo's book stands firmly on its own ground, because, in the final analysis, it treats the Cultural Revolution as an event in which people could test themselves and, in a few cases, improve themselves. The tragedy after 1966 was just one episode in a "stream of pain" that has afflicted China for years: the war against Japan, the civil wars, the anti-rightist movement, the famine after the Great Leap Forward, and the repression after the Tiananmen Massacre were (from the point of view of the partici-

ST. CROIX

Everything you expect from a vacation paradise.

Beaches, Tennis, Golf, Dining,
Entertainment, Shopping,
Relaxation

Ralph Locke Islands, Inc.
P.O. Box #800
Waccabuc, N.Y. 10597
Toll Free Nationwide
(800)-223-1108

The Buccaneer
ST. CROIX, U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS

President of Princeton University Investment Company (PRINCO)

Investment Company oversees management of University's endowment and other investments (approximately $2.7 billion).

President reports to the PRINCO Board Chairman and President of Princeton University and oversees a small staff. Provides information and recommendations to facilitate the Board's decision making process, participates in Board meetings, and implements Board decisions. Assists Board in analysis of portfolio strategies and market performance, including allocation of assets among investment categories. Also oversees the collection and preparation of data and other material to assist Board in evaluating "special situation" investments. Works closely with external managers, and makes recommendations to Board on the engagement, continuation, or termination of external managers.

Requires financial background, basic understanding of investment decision making, and strong communication and organizational skills. Should be confident and decisive and be able to mobilize relevant resources on the PRINCO Board and elsewhere in the Princeton "network".

Please send resume to:

Richard R. Spies
Vice President for Finance and Administration
Princeton University
One Nassau Hall
Princeton, New Jersey 08544

Princeton University
Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

pants, if not of society as a whole) similar times of self-testing. As the revolution ends because people remember these excesses, the contexts for personal growth will become more normal.

This book is a hymn to vitality. Zi-ping Luo was married in California this year, on the very day her autobiography was published. For her and for China, the story does not end. Optimists prove to be tough characters.

—Lynn T. White III '84 (hon.)

Lynn White is a professor of politics and international affairs in the Woodrow Wilson School. He also is associated with the departments of politics and East Asian studies.

Scholarly Fraud

FORGERS AND CRITICS: CREATIVITY AND DUPLICITY IN WESTERN SCHOLARSHIP

Anthony T. Grafton • Princeton University Press, $14.95

EARLIER THIS YEAR, the venerable British Museum challenged visitors' views with "Fake? The Art of Deception," an exhibition featuring hundreds of artifacts, from antiquity to the present, that turned out not to be quite what they seemed at first. Among them were the remains of the fabricated Piltdown Man, a copy of The Protocols of the Elders of Zion (a fraudulent creation of Jewish-conspiracy theorists), imitation Louis Vuitton luggage, the famous Czechoslovakian state photograph in which the image of President Alexander Dubček disappeared after the Soviet invasion of 1968, and many faked objets d'art.

What is it about fakes that exercises such a hold on our imagination? Is it our secret satisfaction at seeing some rascal (these fakers are never dangerous crooks) tweak the noses of the experts? Anthony Grafton, Princeton's Mellon Professor of History, doesn't overtly answer these questions in this essay, but you can detect his delight in recounting tales of literary frauds old and new. Rather, his main point is how much modern scholarship owes to early critics' attempts to distinguish genuine from forged documents; some of these critics were forgers themselves. Just as "it takes a thief to catch a thief," he writes, "it takes a forger to expose a fake."

Throughout history, forged documents have been incredibly common. Indeed, by Grafton's estimate, "perhaps half the legal documents we possess from Merovingian times" and "two-thirds of all documents issued to ecclesiastics before A.D. 1100" are fake. Why so many forgeries? The reasons range from a popular demand for more works of long-dead authors to a city's desire to better document its origin and history to a frustrated writer's desire to revenge himself on his gullible critics. In antiquity, forging a work in the style of, say, Sophocles, was held to be a way of doing honor to the great Greek tragedian.

Nowadays, despite scholarly and technological advances in the detection of forgeries, says Grafton, fakery still goes on. Only "unskilled forgers"—like Konrad Kujau, author of the Hitler diaries—fail. Yet one need not be an expert forger in order to be a successful faker. Scholarship in the sciences and humanities is often so arcane that we must take the scientist's word about experimental data or the humanist's word about archival material. Printed citations, seemingly the badges of accuracy, can endow forgery with an air of authenticity. This brief book's chief value lies not just in the sometimes fascinating accounts of forgers, or the literary detectives who smoked them out, but in the way it makes us think about scholarly veracity in general. In a sense, this further legitimizes the scholarly mission, for with all these fakers and forgeries about, scholarship must continue ad infinitum.

—Andrew C. Mytelka '85

Books Received

GREAT BRITAIN'S SOLOMON: JAMES VI AND I IN HIS THREE KINGDOMS

*Maurice Lee, Jr. '46 '50
University of Illinois Press $32.50*

PERSONOLOGY: METHOD AND CONTENT IN PERSONALITY ASSESSMENT AND PSYCHOBIOGRAPHY

*Irving E. Alexander '49
Duke University Press
$42.50 cloth, $18.95 paper*

POETRY OF CONTEMPLATION:
JOHN DONNE, GEORGE HERBERT, HENRY
VAUGHAN, AND THE MODERN PERIOD

*Arthur L. Clements '54
State University of New York Press
$49.50 cloth, $16.95 paper*

HUDSON HERITAGE: AN ARTIST'S PERSPECTIVE ON ARCHITECTURE

*Karl Beckwith Smith III '72
Salmagundi Press
66 Main St., Cold Spring, NY 10516
$15.95 paper*

Supreme Court Rules Against Clubs; Ivy, Tiger Ordered to Admit Women

SALLY FRANK '80 won a sweeping victory in her lawsuit against Princeton's two remaining all-male eating clubs on July 3, when the New Jersey Supreme Court ruled unanimously that Tiger Inn and the Ivy Club have "an integral relationship of mutual benefit" with the university and must therefore comply with the state's antidiscrimination laws. The Supreme Court's decision reverses an earlier appellate court ruling and reinstates a decision by the New Jersey Division on Civil Rights that, in May 1987, ordered Tiger and Ivy to admit women.

"It would be disingenuous for the clubs to assert that they could ever exist apart from Princeton University," Justice

Marie Garibaldi wrote for the court. "The clubs gather their membership from Princeton and, in turn, provide the service of feeding Princeton students. Because of this, the clubs lack the distinctly private nature that would exempt them from the Law Against Discrimination." The opinion also said that it would be impossible for the clubs to sever their ties to Princeton and that they must "discontinue their practice of excluding women purely on the basis of gender."

Attorneys for Tiger and Ivy immediately asked the court to stay its ruling, pending an appeal, but the stays were denied. As a result, Tiger and Ivy have ninety days from the date of the decision to comply with its terms or to file an appeal with the United States Supreme Court, the last recourse available to them. The attorney representing Tiger, Russel H. Beatie, Jr. '59, said that the club had every intention of appealing to the nation's high court.

Frank, who first filed suit against the clubs eleven years ago, expressed elation at the state Supreme Court's decision. "The day after the decision, I was flying," Frank said. "I feel vindicated. The court really recognized the importance of the case and the fact that this discrimination must stop."

By contrast, an angry Beatie had harsh words for New Jersey's top court, which

The Frank Case: Eleven Years and Counting . . .

December 1978 Tiger and Cottage refuse to allow Frank to bicker.

February 1979 Frank bickers at Ivy but is refused membership. She files a gender-discrimination complaint with the N.J. Division on Civil Rights against Ivy, Tiger, Cottage, and the university. The Division later refuses to process the complaint.

November 1979 Frank files another discrimination complaint, asserting that because the clubs are "public accommodations" and function as "arms of Princeton," they are violating N.J.'s Law Against Discrimination.

December 1981 The Division on Civil Rights dismisses the complaint, saying that the clubs are private and separate from the university. In February 1982, Frank appeals to the N.J. Appellate Division.

August 1988 The Appellate Division vacates the Civil Rights Division's ruling and orders a full investigation.

March-April 1984 Two day-long fact-finding conferences are held by the Division on Civil Rights. The clubs and Frank agree on more than two hundred "stipulations" of fact; the Division's chief of enforcement resolves eighteen disputed stipulations. This action later forms the basis for the clubs' appeal.

May 1988 The Division decides that it has jurisdiction and finds that probable cause exists to believe that the clubs discriminate against women.

July 1988 Frank files suit as a "contested case" with the N.J. Office of Administrative Law. In December, an administrative law judge (A.L.J.) determines that the Division has jurisdiction.

Sally Frank '80

January 1988 Cottage decides to admit women.

February 1988 Cottage settles with Frank for $20,000 in damages and legal fees and is dropped from the suit. The director of the Division on Civil Rights affirms the A.L.J. on jurisdiction and remands the case for further proceedings on issues of liability and remedy. These proceedings continue for the next year.

July 1988 Frank and the university settle. In return for being dropped as a defendant, the university pays Frank $27,000 in legal fees and agrees to condemn publicly the all-male admission policies of Ivy and Tiger. During the summer of 1986, the A.L.J. holds a six-day hearing to determine the remedy.

January 1987 The A.L.J. recommends that Frank be awarded $2,500 in damages; that Frank not be awarded membership in either club; and that the clubs sever certain ties to the university to attain "distinctly private" status.

May 1987 The director of the Division on Civil Rights reverses the A.L.J. and orders Tiger and Ivy to admit women. The director also increases the damages to $5,000 plus legal fees but agrees with the A.L.J.'s recommendation that Frank not be granted membership. The clubs appeal.

October 1988 The Appellate Division sends the case back to the Division on Civil Rights for a "trial-type" hearing on all issues, including jurisdiction. In November, Frank appeals to the N.J. Supreme Court, arguing that unless overturned, the appellate court's decision would cause "significant individual and societal harm."

September 1988 The N.J. Supreme Court, having once sent the case to the appellate court for clarification, agrees to rule on the case.

February 1990 The undergraduate members of both Ivy and Tiger vote to admit women. A second vote, required by the clubs' graduate boards, is scheduled for the fall of 1990 at Ivy and the spring of 1991 at Tiger.

July 1990 The N.J. Supreme Court rules in Frank's favor. The decision reinstates the original ruling of the Division on Civil Rights that ordered Tiger and Ivy to accept women.

This will get you to Tokyo in about 14 hours.

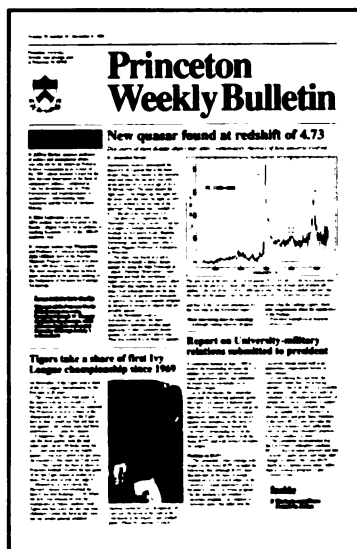

This will get you back to the U.S. in about 14 seconds.

AT&T's USADirect® information card makes it easy to call home when you're overseas. Just dial the USADirect access number for the country you're calling from and you'll be connected to an AT&T Operator in the U.S. within seconds. Use your AT&T Card or call collect. It's fast. It's economical. And it's available in over 50 countries. For your information card, just call 1 800 874-4000, Ext. 301.

What's happening on campus?

If you subscribe to the Princeton Weekly Bulletin you won't have to ask!

News and feature stories keep you up to date on University events and people, developments in research and teaching, and student activities and perspectives. The Weekly Calendar lists campus events: lectures, concerts, athletic contests, exhibits, movies.

A subscription for 30 issues covering the academic year 1990-91 is just $18 from Communications/Publications, Stanhope Hall, Princeton University, Princeton NJ 08544.

is considered one of the most progressive in the country. "I'm baffled that the New Jersey Supreme Court could have held a three-hour hearing on the question of the constitutional right to the freedom of association, and mentioned that right not once in a fifty-page decision," he said.

But the case that the state Supreme Court reviewed dealt with questions of jurisdiction, not the issue of freedom of association. (As Garibaldi wrote in the opinion, "The clubs have fiercely contested the threshold issue of jurisdiction because, once jurisdiction is established, there is no question that the clubs discriminated against women.") In essence, the jurisdictional issue hinges on the question of whether the clubs had a fair opportunity to present evidence to the Division on Civil Rights.

At the root of the jurisdictional dispute are a pair of fact-finding conferences the Division on Civil Rights held in 1984. In a three-pronged argument, the clubs contended that they were unaware that the conferences could lead to a resolution of the jurisdictional issue; that the Division relied on inappropriately resolved "stipulations" of fact in making its decision on jurisdiction; and that other material facts relevant to jurisdiction were not considered. Last year, a state appellate court agreed with the clubs and sent the case back to the Division on Civil Rights for a full hearing.

Frank then appealed to the high court. Reversing the appellate court, the state Supreme Court rejected the clubs' arguments on all three counts. Although the court agreed that eighteen "stipulations" were inappropriately resolved, it found them irrelevant or immaterial to the central issues in the case. The court also found that Pamela Poff, the director of the Division on Civil Rights, did not rely on any disputed evidence in making her ruling that the Division had jurisdiction over the clubs. "The Director did not focus on the assiduously maintained legal separateness of the clubs," the court said. "Instead, the Division relied on the 'gestalt' of the relationship between the university and the clubs."

The court thus concluded that "Based on our examination of the record, we find this procedure accorded the parties their administrative due process rights. Moreover, we conclude that there are no disputed facts that are material to the jurisdictional issue; hence, the Division properly invoked its jurisdiction. We also conclude that the Division properly found that the clubs discriminated against the plaintiff on the basis of her gender and affirm the Division's remedies against the clubs."

The university, which until the mid-1980s maintained that the clubs and Princeton were independent entities, issued a statement strongly supporting the Supreme Court's ruling. "We believe that Ivy Club and Tiger, because of their relationship to the university, should admit women," said Thomas H. Wright, Jr. '62, the university's vice president and general counsel. "We hope that the two clubs will now comply immediately with the decision."

Despite the clubs' professed intention of fighting the case all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, events may obviate such a course. The undergraduate memberships of both Tiger and Ivy voted last spring to admit women, reportedly by a wide margin at Ivy and a narrow one at Tiger. The graduate boards of both clubs have said that they would abandon their single-sex policies if the undergraduate members voted in consecutive years to admit women. Ivy has scheduled its second vote for the fall—perhaps even before the date by which the club must file an appeal to the Supreme Court—but Tiger won't vote again until the spring.

Rockefeller Gives $21 Million to Create Center for Values

IN THE LARGEST single gift to Princeton in more than twenty-five years, Laurence S. Rockefeller '32 has contributed $21 million to create a center for the study and teaching of human values. Designed to encourage an interdisciplinary approach to questions of ethics and morality, the new Center for Human Values will support at least six new endowed professorships and will encourage the study of moral issues across Princeton's entire academic spectrum.

The center will not be constituted as an academic department, nor will it offer courses of its own. Rather, it will provide resources to enable a variety of departments—from religion and philosophy to politics, art, and the sciences—to better address these issues. Scholars filling the new Rockefeller Professorships, for example, will be listed as members of existing departments, and will be expected to bring their expertise and interest in values to these fields.

SUMNER RULON-MILLER III '61
261 Madison Avenue, Suite 1200
New York, New York 10016
212-661-8660
executive financial planning
RULON-MILLER, INC.

According to President Shapiro, this interdisciplinary method is critical to the success of the center. "By bringing together creative thinkers from across the academic and non-academic worlds," added that the center will "symbolize an ethos of openness and pluralism at Princeton."

Shapiro focused on many of these themes during his inaugural address, in Laurence Rockefeller '32's latest gift to Princeton will establish a Center for Human Values. He is pictured with his wife Mary at the dedication of the 1988 addition to Firestone Library.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

Shapiro said, "the center will enable us better to frame and address the complex ethical challenges of our time, and to explore new ideas that can help shape our future commitments to each other." He

January 1988. In particular, he discussed the role that the modern university should play in setting moral standards for society. Rockefeller, listening in the audience, was intrigued and began to ponder how Shapiro's conception might become a reality. (Rockefeller has a longstanding interest in these questions: he was a philosophy major, and his senior thesis was entitled "The Concept of Value and Its Relation to Ethics.") Thus began two years of exploratory talks that culminated with the establishment of the center.

"I am most grateful to [President Shapiro], the faculty, and students for providing a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to participate in something of such major importance, as well as timeliness," Rockefeller said. "It seems to me that the challenges we face as a pluralistic, global society will best be met by individuals whose training embraces an understanding of the relationship of mind, body, and spirit to their basic values and sense of well-being."

A month after the Rockefeller gift was announced, President Shapiro named Amy Gutmann, the Mellon Professor of Politics and the director of the Program in Political Philosophy, to a three-year term as director of the center. In shaping the direction of the center, Gutmann will have the assistance of an executive committee of six other members of the faculty. For the near future, the center will operate out of the top floor of 1879 Hall, which is currently undergoing renovation and expansion.

After a thirty-three-hour occupation of President Shapiro's office, supporters of SHARE leave Nassau Hall last April 25. The resignation of SHARE's director over the summer may result in more student activism.

PHOTO BY ROBERT P. MATTHEWS

University Announces Resignation Of SHARE Director Myra Hindus

THE CONTROVERSY surrounding Princeton's Sexual Harassment/Assault Advising, Resources, and Education program, or SHARE, took an unexpected turn in June, when the university announced the resignation of SHARE's director, Myra Hindus. Joyce Clark, a psychologist and consultant based in New Hampshire, and the author of last year's "Princeton Women Students Needs Assessment," will serve as the interim director of SHARE for 1990-91.

Hindus's departure, which was disclosed in a carefully worded statement that was released the day after graduation, left many questions unanswered and could spur continued student protest this fall. In particular, the statement did not address the question of whether there was a connection between Hindus's resignation and the militant actions last spring of a group of students advocating more resources for SHARE (PAW, June 13).

Angered by what they perceived as the administration's failure to address the problems of sexual harassment and assault at Princeton, these students—who called themselves Supporters of SHARE, or S.O.S.—occupied President Shapiro's office in Nassau Hall for two days in late April. Among other things, they demanded that SHARE's staff be increased from one full-time and one half-time counselor to two full-time counselors. The protests continued well after the students left Shapiro's office, and several hundred seniors wore white armbands at commencement in support of the demonstrators.

Hindus, who was out of town when the sit-in began, did not participate in the demonstration, nor did she comment publicly on the students' tactics or methods. Rumors nonetheless persist that Hindus either orchestrated, or at least tacitly supported, the sit-in. For their part, the members of S.O.S. insisted that they had acted without Hindus's knowledge or backing. ■

$2.7 BILLION (AND GROWING)

To Manage the Nation's Third-Largest Endowment, Stay Nimble and Keep the Long View

Anne Matthews '81

PRIVATE UNIVERSITIES these days live or die by their endowments. Students come and go, but balance sheets are forever. Thus, the Harvard Management Corporation, which handles the Crimson's endowment, requires three floors of Boston's Federal Reserve skyscraper. Yale's financial gurus occupy a newly renovated three-story Victorian on the New Haven campus. But the Princeton University Investment Company (PRINCO, for short) occupies a narrow, white frame house in the warehouse-and-tavern stretch of lower Alexander Road, next door to the Rosedale Mills and Feed Store ("Fertilizer, Lime, Root Mulch, Salt Hay Our Specialties"). It's the sort of spot Jack Benny would admire—and it's wholly in keeping with PRINCO's sober, responsible, low-key approach to university investment.

Since 1987, the building's corner office (a modest blue-gray room, decorated with posters of scenes of the campus) has been occupied by T. Dennis Sullivan '70, who has nursed Princeton's $2.7 billion endowment, the nation's third largest, through market crashes, international tensions, and campus spending rebellions.

"I look at the endowment and see two hundred years of possibility," Sullivan says emphatically. "As does PRINCO's thirteen-member board. The task of keeping it all in order, of unlocking value, is one of the finest financial jobs that exists anywhere—and a huge responsibility."

By academic standards, his pay is also huge. The PRINCO presidency is the highest-paying position on the campus (current salary: $223,125). It's also among the most nerve-wracking.

"That post has Wall Street numbers attached, yes," says Richard R. Spies '72, Princeton's financial vice-president, "but for Wall Street responsibilities."

Observes the outgoing chairman of PRINCO's board, John C. Beck '53: "Running PRINCO is a killing job. Managing our twenty-eight outside investment managers is tough enough, but in the health of the endowment rests the university's whole future."

As the first president of PRINCO, Dennis Sullivan has been defining the job as he goes. His background in economics, politics, and public finance has made him less a traditional money manager than a juggler of process and people. Sullivan, who holds an M.A. from Oxford (he was the first Daniel M. Sachs '60 scholar), was director of finance for the city of Newark, New Jersey, and secretary of finance for the state of Delaware, served in Nassau Hall as assistant to President Bowen from 1977 to 1980, and then was a vice-president in public investment banking at J. P. Morgan Securities, Inc., before he took on PRINCO's presidency.

"My days in this job," he explains, "have gone to researching new firms, liaising, facilitating, tying up loose ends"—which has sometimes

T. Dennis Sullivan
'70 outside the white
frame house that is PRINCO's home.

PHOTO BY JOHN W. H. SAMPSON '88

meant walking the muddy cornfields of Kossuth County, Iowa, one morning, inspecting a proposed farmland purchase, then flying the next day to Lafayette, Louisiana, to investigate the possible acquisition by Princeton of offshore oil and gas leases.

But now Sullivan is heading to the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, in New York, to serve as its financial vice-president. "He'll be doing much the same here that he's been doing at Princeton—oversight of the fund's endowment, plus getting involved in grant making," says former President Bowen, who now heads the Mellon.

The search now underway at Princeton for Sullivan's successor has the full attention of specialists in the economics of philanthropy and higher education around the country: because Princeton's endowment is larger than the G.N.P. of some small countries, the care and nurturing of such wealth can signal trends, changes, and developments for other practitioners of institutional investing. To take just one example, the very simplicity of PRINCO's administrative structure—so unlike the financial bureaucracies that serve many of Princeton's peers—baffles and fascinates some Princeton watchers.

"Technically, PRINCO is an impossibility," says one Harvard-trained investment consultant in Washington, D.C. ("Don't use my name," he adds, "two of my three children are Princeton grads.") He frowns, thinking. "You people simply shouldn't be getting such good results. And with no personnel to speak of! The Harvard endowment has over a hundred people playing with $5 billion; you have one guy, basically, and he's handling $2.7 billion."

Yes and no. The head of PRINCO also possesses a unique money-management resource: Princeton alumni volunteers with world-class financial acumen. Current members of the board of directors include Malcolm S. ("Steve") Forbes, Jr. '70, president and C.E.O. of Forbes magazine; John H. Scully '66, general partner of San Francisco Partners, in Mill Valley, California; Edward E. Matthews '53, vice-chairman of finance for New York's American International Group; and Richard B. Fisher '57, president of the Morgan Stanley Group, Inc., and the incoming chairman of the PRINCO board.

Although PRINCO is not a separate legal entity, it is a free-standing organization with its own board of directors. Nine of the thirteen directors, all alumni from the world of finance, are elected by Princeton's trustees for three-year terms. Four university officials serve ex officio: the university's president and treasurer, the PRINCO president, and the chairman of the trustees' Committee on Finance. A five-member executive committee of PRINCO meets monthly to analyze the performance of outside managers and recommend investment decisions.

"Princeton's endowment," says President Shapiro, "is distinguished by the truly extraordinary level of care given it, both by its managers

*"The payoff," says Sullivan,
"is not in next quarter's results, but next century's."*

and by the alumni expertise brought to bear."

Dennis Sullivan discovered these truths the hard way on October 20, 1987. "At the scariest moment of the whole crash," he recalls, "with the market down seven hundred points in three days, the PRINCO board—all these investment professionals with their world collapsing about them—took the time for a long, long conference call about Princeton's funds—and decided to buy back in."

THE EARNINGS chart of Princeton's endowment for the last three generations records many such hard decisions. For most of the endowment's history, investment decisions were in the hands of the trustees. In 1928, Dean Mathey '12 (chairman of the investment committee) sold off the university's stock holdings, saving the endowment millions when the market crashed a year later. Just after the outbreak of World War II, he pushed Princeton back into equities—an equally wise call. Lending to savvy entrepreneurs has also worked: in 1961, Mathey's successor, Harvey Molé '29, lent Ray Kroc a million dollars to buy a chain of hamburger stands from two California brothers named McDonald. Ten years later, Princeton was still earning a fraction of a cent on every Big Mac sold: $5.4 million in all.

But changing markets in the post-Vietnam, oil-embargo decade finally encouraged a shift in Princeton's money tactics. In 1977, with the endowment just above the half-billion mark, the university hired four investment managers, three for stocks and one for bonds. "It was clearly time," says Spies. "The trustees had been handling nearly all investment decisions ever since the 1920s. That burden was becoming unrealistic." Under this new arrangement, the endowment doubled—and doubled again during the heyday of supply-side Reaganomics.

PRINCO was formed by trustee assent in April 1987. There were three reasons for doing so, according to Carl W. Schafer, the university's former financial vice-president and treasurer, now president of the Atlantic Foundation: "First, the sheer growth of the university's endowment to about $2.5 billion. It was thought that managing this sum might well require full-time attention. Second, the investment world had become much more varied, requiring more staff effort to analyze investment choices. Third, PRINCO was a chance to bring to bear the skills of a larger number of alumni experts, letting them participate in the investment process without increasing the size of the board of trustees."

"The head of PRINCO is not really the chief investment officer of the university," notes Spies. "The PRINCO board is, and, with their advice, the board of trustees."

There's a lot to invest. Although it's only the third largest overall, Princeton's endowment has the highest per-student value in the U.S. (Harvard, nearly three times Princeton's size, has nearly $5 billion; the University of Texas, about $3 billion; Yale, $2.6 billion.) Princeton's fund is invested primarily in stocks (60 percent) and fixed-income securities (25 percent), but about 15 percent is in real estate, venture capital, and other specialized assets.

The sheer range of investment is startling. When computer software is developed in Berkeley, California, Princeton gets a cut; when a shopping center goes up on Princeton-held land in Phoenix, or cable TV is installed in Georgia homes, money flows to Princeton. The university has interests in U.S. savings and loan associations (all healthy, it seems) and in Singapore comic-book printing companies. "We try to stay nimble," says Sullivan.

While Harvard, Yale, and Stanford tend to

*"Technically,
PRINCO is an impossibility," says one Harvard-trained investment consultant.*

Pictured from left to right: John C. Beck '53, Richard R. Spies '72, and Richard B. Fisher '57.

PHOTOS BY LARRY FRENCH

manage their money at least partly in-house, Princeton hires only outside specialists and lets them compete, a process that's been described as "pouring an enormous pot of money into various portfolios, then seeing what happens."

The financial footwork in such matters rests with twenty-eight investment managers—largely recruited and supervised by Sullivan—who deploy chunks of Princeton's money on five continents. Projects range from local ventures like Princeton's Forrestal Center to global investments handled by New York's John Bristol & Co. and by Bahamas-based Templeton International. Fixed-income funds go to (among others) New York's Fiduciary Trust, balanced-management work to Boston's Grantham, Mayo. Limited partnerships handle deals with venture capitalists in Princeton, San Francisco, Hong Kong, Singapore, and London. Princeton also works with one leveraged-buyout firm, Clayton & Dubilier.

In an era of global finance, PRINCO's biggest new trend is investing overseas. Some $50 million has been moved to London, there to be allocated by Rockefeller & Co. among small businesses on the Continent in advance of the opening of a free market in Western Europe in 1992; $30 million is in interests on the Pacific Rim, many in Hong Kong and Singapore.

"We don't jerk the money around," Sullivan explains. "But global markets have evolved very fast, and we with them, in a fairly major way. In international securities alone, 5 percent of our assets were in foreign stocks and bonds five years back. Now it's 16, 17 percent."

AFTER ONLY three years of operation, most observers agree that a verdict on PRINCO's work is not yet possible. According to the annual report of Princeton's investments, the total return on the university's portfolio for the fiscal year 1989 was 14.8 percent, below the Dow (18.4 percent) and the S.&P. 500 (20.5 percent) but above the Morgan Stanley World Index (13.1 percent). Princeton's equity managers averaged a 17.7 percent return for fiscal 1989, again trailing the Dow and the S.&P. 500, but exceeding the Morgan Stanley World Index. Princeton's outside bond managers achieved a blended total return of 4.6 percent in fiscal 1989, according to the annual report. For the same period, the Salomon Brothers Bond Index was 16.2 percent, the Shearson Lehman Hutton Government/Corporate Bond Index 12.3 percent, and the Salomon World Government Bond Index 4.2 percent.

Every investment decision can be a test of both PRINCO's investing nerve and its firmly held philosophy: when in doubt, choose long-term over short-term gains. "We cultivate patience," says Spies. Princeton's money men (there are no women at present) treat the endowment like a garden, pruning, watering, and sometimes uprooting.

"The payoff, if we do this right," says Sullivan, "is not in next quarter's results, but next century's."

Questions of risk versus prudence are crucial because the endowment plays an unusually prominent role in university finances. Princeton's operating budget comes from five main sources:

- Endowment earnings—25 percent, far higher than at most universities;
- Tuition—25 percent;
- Sponsored research (government and foundation grants)—20 percent;
- Annual Giving and other gifts and grants—15 percent; and
- Miscellaneous income, from student fees to housing and property rentals—15 percent.

Princeton's record of investment achievement is formidable. Throughout the 1970s and much of the 1980s, Princeton's returns rated first among twenty-four college and university funds. During the boom days of the mid-eighties, guided by the trustees' five-member investment committee, Princeton's holdings were again ranked number one among the larger university endowments, achieving a compounded total return of 19.4 percent. In today's dyspeptic financial climate—exacerbated by the Persian Gulf crisis—decisions made by PRINCO will be keenly watched, around the country as around the campus.

Dennis Sullivan will be watching, too—but from Manhattan by day, Brooklyn by night. He, his wife Susan, a former city planner (now a student at Pratt Institute), and the two Sullivan sons, ages eleven and eight, consider themselves firmly settled in Prospect Heights.

"We've moved around a lot in fifteen years of marriage," says Sullivan. "And I've spent plenty of so-called vacations at the Jersey shore, drafting Forrestal Center financing plans. Now we're all in one place, which pleases me. But I will surely miss this job. There's been a lot of joy in doing well for Princeton. Every day, every decision, you feel it. The eighties were an extraordinary time for the endowment; will we be clever enough for the nineties? How will we advise the president and trustees? That's the heart of PRINCO."

Anne Matthews '81 directs the university's nonfiction writing program.

THE SHAPE OF THINGS TO COME

CTS Extender™

Get ready to hit shots you never imagined possible. With more power and more touch than ever before. All it takes is one look at the Prince Extender Series and you'll see why. Its innovative teardrop shape allows the main strings to be lengthened and the string bed enlarged so there's more area to hit with. And all it takes is one swing to feel its light weight for increased mobility and racquet speed.

You can select from four models, depending on your style of play: there's the Extender™, Extender SC™, Extender Comp™, and the new CTS Extender™, which features the unique Constant Taper System™ technologies—including the exclusive Cushion Grip System™. They're all performance racquets, combining the benefits of power and control.

The Extender family from Prince. By the looks of it, squash will never be the same.

prince® LET THE GAMES BEGIN.™

Garrett-less Football Team Faces Challenges and Opportunities in 1990

FOR THE LAST three years, the name "Garrett" has been synonymous with Princeton football. Brothers John '88, Jason '89, and Judd '90 led the Tigers to three winning seasons in a row; each season saw a steady progression toward the kind of gridiron respectability that Princeton lacked during a prolonged slump in the 1980s. And then last year, fueled by Judd's record-shattering performance at tailback, the Garrett era reached its climax as Princeton won a share of the Ivy League title, its first in twenty years.

Now Judd has departed to the greener pastures of the N.F.L., where he's battling for a spot on the roster of the Philadelphia Eagles. (Jason plays for the New Orleans Saints, John for the Cincinnati Bengals.) For Tiger head coach Steve Tosches, the departure of the last of the Garretts provides both a challenge and an opportunity. The challenge will be finding someone to fill the shoes of Princeton's all-time rushing and scoring leader. The opportunity will be to prove his oft-made assertion that Princeton's rise in the Ivy League was the product of more than just the prolific Garretts.

"I don't want to take anything away from the Garretts, because they were outstanding ballplayers, but there were ten other guys on the field with them," Tosches says. "Last year, for example, we had a pretty darn good defensive team. I like to think that the program has risen in quality up and down the roster and that we have a solid foundation."

With only eight starters returning from last year's championship team, however, Tosches will have to draw heavily on the foundation he's built over the last three years. Many of the guys in uniform this fall won't have played much varsity ball. "But that's the league," Tosches explains. "You wait your turn to play. You can't hold their inexperience against them. Without going overboard, I feel pretty good about the kids stepping up."

Consequently, don't expect any radical departures from the offensive and defensive philosophies that Princeton has pursued since Tosches took over three years ago. If anything, the offense might be more balanced. The tailback, whoever he is, will get handed the ball, but not the thirty-three times a game that Judd averaged. Joel Sharp '91, the quarterback, will throw more often than last year, but probably not as frequently as Jason did. "We're going to spread it around a little more," Tosches says. "Chris Hallihan, our fullback, will get some more runs. We want to mix it up."

On defense, Princeton will be hard pressed to duplicate last year's effort, which saw the unit lead the league in rushing defense, total defense, and scoring defense. The biggest concern is at game in 1988?) But after this year, no more. Princeton's northern colleagues complained about always finishing their seasons on the road, and the Ivy League agreed. Starting next year, Princeton-Dartmouth games will close the schedule, alternating between New Jersey and New Hampshire.

Going into training camp, Tosches' depth chart looked something like this:

Quarterback: Joel Sharp, an hono-

Fullback Chris Hallihan '91 throws a block for quarterback Joel Sharp '91 against Penn last year. This backfield tandem will shoulder the burden of the Tigers' offense this fall.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

linebacker, where the graduation of Franco Pagnanelli '90, the team's emotional and intellectual leader last year, leaves a large gap. "We're pretty thin there," Tosches concedes. "It's one place where a lack of experience can really hurt you." The defensive line and the secondary look more solid. In Mike Hirou '91, the Tigers' captain and a three-year starter at safety, Princeton has a hard-nosed defender in the Pagnanelli mold.

A note on scheduling. For many years now, the Tigers' season finale has been a home game, alternatively against Cornell or Dartmouth. This eminently sensible decision has made it unnecessary for anyone to play football in Ithaca or Haver in late November. (It can be bad enough in Princeton—remember when the scoreboard froze during the Cornell game in 1988?) But after this year, no more. Princeton's northern colleagues complained about always finishing their seasons on the road, and the Ivy League agreed. Starting next year, Princeton-Dartmouth games will close the schedule, alternating between New Jersey and New Hampshire.

Running Backs: Chris Hallihan '91, the Tigers' burly fullback, came on strong at the end of last season and showed that he can run as well as block. Tailback, however, remains a question mark—after all, a guy named Garrett started Princeton's last thirty games at that position. Among the contenders in a wide-open competition are junior Mel Gaylord and a pair of speedy but fragile sophomores, Eric Hamilton and Michael Lerch.

35

A 35th Birthday Party That Lasts for Three Months... And You're Invited!

When the ball is teed up at the 35-yard line September 15, a three-month celebration of Ivy League football's 35th birthday will begin. ESPN makes it very easy for you to join in the celebration. For the third straight year, the national cable network is proud to present five action-packed games. Don't miss it!

9/15	Penn at Dartmouth	12:30 ET
9/22	Northeastern at Harvard	12:30 ET
10/6	Lafayette at Columbia	12:30 ET
10/27	Brown at Cornell	12:00 ET
11/10	Princeton at Yale	12:30 ET

ROACH BROTHERS
REALTORS

SYDBURY GLEN

Philadelphia's prestigious Main Line now offering "Sydbury Glen", magnificent restored 1906 Furness designed stone mansion on three protected acres. Approx. 15,000 S.F., six bedrooms, spectacular kitchen, elegant baths, eleven fireplaces, petite ballroom/gameroom. Fifteen minutes to Philadelphia. 1½ hours to Manhattan.

ROSEMONT STATION
1251 MONTROSE AVENUE
ROSEMONT, PA 19010
215-527-6400

Wide Receivers and Tight Ends: Marin Gjaja '91, big and mobile, will probably assume the starting job at tight end. The receivers, however, are utterly untested. (The ten candidates have a total of two varsity receptions among them.) But a lack of experience at this position isn't a new problem for the Tigers: in each of the last two years, untried players have stepped in and performed well. Without the powerful running attack of recent years, Tosches would like to see this trend continue.

Offensive Line: Mike Davis '91, a first-team all-Ivy selection at guard last year, will anchor the line with tackle Gavin Lowrey '91. The remaining positions are up for grabs, but the Tigers have some sizable bodies to fill out the line, including Pete Barclay '91 (6'7", 290) and Mike Straughn '91 (6'3", 270). At center, Tosches must find a replacement for Bob Surace '90, a three-year starter.

Defensive Line: The Tigers lost three of four starters from last season's outstanding line, and as a result the coaching staff will watch this area nervously. Renard Charity '91 returns as one of the ends and will be paired with either Leon Newsome '92 or Tom Ryan '92. At tackle, Steve Schildt '91 seems ready to start.

Linebackers: Jim Freeman '92, the only sophomore to start on defense last year, blossomed as an outside linebacker and returns for another campaign. Joe Macaione '91, another sometime starter, gives the Tigers some depth. The inside linebacking jobs, however, should generate intense competition in training camp. Look for Gene Demorat '93, the top defender on the freshman team, and Aaron Harris '93, who sat out last year with an injury, to be among the top contenders.

Defensive Backs: One of the Tigers' strongest units last year, the secondary should again be consistent. The captain, Mike Hirou, will call the shots from his strong safety position. Hirou doubles as a punt and kick returner. The versatile Trevor Crossen '91, who's played on both the offense and the defense during his varsity career, has the inside edge on the free safety slot. The ever-enthusiastic James Lowry '91 returns as one cornerback; the other spot is unclaimed.

Kickers: Placekicker Chris Lutz '91 will be hoping to regain his all-American form after a dismal 1989, when he had trouble adjusting to kicking without a tee (the N.C.A.A. abolished its use last year). Jason Scott '92 may handle kickoffs and might challenge Lutz for field goals and

P.A.T.s if his problems continue. In a seemingly annual ritual, Tosches will have to find a new punter; perhaps just as significantly, the team needs a new long snapper to replace Rick Emery '90.

ONLY A POOL or a die-hard fan would predict with confidence the outcome of the Ivy football race. The league is distinguished by very high player turnover, thin depth charts, and no freshmen; as a result, any notion of a prohibitive favorite must be abandoned. And now that Brown has fallen to Columbia-like depths, it's even tough to identify the worst team in the league.

I will nonetheless advance the bold assertion that Princeton isn't the worst team in the league. But the Tigers probably aren't the league's best team, either—at least, not now, before injuries and emotion and all the other imponderables have cluttered the picture. Rather, it's Yale, last year's co-champ with Princeton, that seems favored by most observers, although this preference may just be a reflex action by sportswriters long beguiled by Yale coach Carm Cozza's charms. Eli-haters can take solace from the position in which last year's heavy favorite, Penn, finished: next to last.

Bearing all these factors in mind, and of course being wildly biased toward the home team, the guess here is that Princeton will have a fourth consecutive winning season and should be in the hunt at season's end. One disclaimer is in order: if the Tigers are going to repeat as champions, they must avoid season-ending injuries to any of their key players, especially on the thin defense. The big question mark? Easy—running back. The big game? Also easy—the televised encounter with Yale at New Haven on November 10. A brief rundown of Princeton's opposition, week by week, follows.

At CORNELL: Jim Hofher takes over at the helm in Ithaca as the Big Red's third head coach in three years. Unfortunately, he may find himself steering a rudderless ship. The offense returns eight starters from last year's 4-6 (2-5 Ivy) team, but the bad news is that Cornell's strength last year was on defense. More bad news: beyond an experienced line, the defense is largely young and untested.

FORDHAM: In 1989, just elevated from Division III, the Rams were easy pickings for the Tigers in Princeton's 1,000th football game. There's no reason to believe that the Colonial League's new doormat will stretch Princeton this year, either. Fordham's defense allowed more than thirty points a game last season and doesn't appear much improved. The Rams' offense should be better, though.

At COLGATE: With Holy Cross off the Tigers' schedule, the Red Raiders should give Princeton its toughest non-league challenge this season. The 'Gate offense, which features a solid line and experienced backs and receivers, should be able to score a bunch of points this year, but Colgate must find ways to shore up its sieve of a secondary. This could be a very high-scoring game.

BROWN: The Bruins, a pathetic 2-8 last season, have a new coach and a new offense. The jury's still out on whether Mickey Kwiatkowski and the redoubtable "Delaware Wing-T" will make a difference in Providence. (Under the late Ron Rogerson, Princeton briefly flirted with this formation, and it has always given the Tigers trouble.) Brown's difficulties last year were mostly on defense, however, as the Bruins surrendered 115 more points than they scored. Nine starters from that battered unit return.

Coach Steve Toesches ponders a team that doesn't have a Garrett to pass, catch, or run with the ball.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

At BUCKNELL: With the graduation of Colonial League M.V.P. Scott Auchenbach, the Bison are hurting at quarterback—but not at very many other positions. The offensive line and the secondary are particularly strong, although the defensive line is untested. The last time the Tigers met Bucknell, in 1988, Princeton's abysmal special-teams play almost gave away the game. This year's contest could hinge on similar circumstances.

HARVARD: Joe Restic, beginning his third decade as the Crimson's coach, always manages to come up with surprises. Most recently, Restic's squad ambushed an overconfident Yale team in 1989's final game, a victory that gave Princeton a share of the Ivy title. The Tigers should be careful not to return the favor in this year's matchup. On paper, the Crimson look weak in almost every department, but don't count on a weak Harvard eleven showing up in Palmer Stadium on October 20.

At COLUMBIA: The perennially poor Lions, 1-9 last season, seem to define the term "snake-bitten." Last year, injuries crippled a team poised to improve dramatically, and only a late-season victory over Cornell kept Columbia from another winless year. Strong freshman teams in recent years should help the situation, though, and if Ray Tellier can keep his troops healthy, perhaps the Lions can win some games and earn some much-needed respect.

PENN: The Quakers suffered through two seasons in one in 1989. After jumping out to a 4-1 start, Penn dropped an excruciatingly close game to Yale and then unraveled, losing the rest of its games, including a 30-8 pounding at the hands of Princeton. What's worse, Penn graduated its two best players, running back Brian Keys and quarterback Malcolm Glover. As a result, coach Gary Steele must find replacements for about 90 percent of his offensive production. On defense, the linebackers are the best of a young unit.

At YALE: In quarterback Darin Kehler, Yale has the most dangerous offensive player in the league, and if the Elis repeat as Ivy champs, it will be largely because of his multiple talents. (Last year, running out of the wishbone, Kehler had more rushing than passing yardage.) Kehler and Yale's fine running backs will operate behind a large and experienced line, giving Yale the best ground attack in the league. On defense, the Elis have a powerful linebacking corps but have done little to improve the league's worst secondary.

DARTMOUTH: The Big Green finished strongly last year, relying on a stingy defense that was second overall (behind Princeton) in the league. Again this year, defense will be Dartmouth's strong suit, as eight starters return. It may be that the Big Green need all the defense they can muster: with the departure of both their starting quarterback and their leading rusher, the offense may have problems putting points on the board. If Dartmouth can fill these holes, this season-ending matchup could be among Princeton's toughest.

—David Williamson '84

STEWARTSON-DOUGHERTY
Real Estate Associates
366 Nassau Street
Princeton, N.J. 08540
PHONE: 609-921-7784

ARMOUR ROAD

This beautifully built brick Williamsburg story and a half Colonial is most conveniently located within walking distance of town and University and just a step from New York and local buses. A vestibule and wide entry hall lead to a large living room with fireplace and south facing bay window, separate formal dining room, cozy paneled study with lots of book shelves, powder room, efficient kitchen and large storeroom for expansion. Upstairs a master bedroom with its own large tile bath, two other bedrooms and tile bath. Screened porch, attached garage, slate roof, and central air. All sited on a lovely half-acre with mature shade trees, a box garden, and spacious lawn areas. $468,000.

Robert Dougherty '50 Julie Douglas w/'41
Paul Douglas '41 Betsy Stewardson Ford w/'54
Georgia Graham w/'52 J. B. Smith '45
Diane Unruh w/'70 Barbara Broad w/'38
Betty McClelland w/'50 Judy Perrine s/'69
For no obligation—information about real estate in the Princeton area call (609) 921-7784 or Outside of New Jersey 1-800-542-0067.

REALTORS

Representing Previews Executive Homeseach

Associate Director Leadership Gifts

Major responsibility is to secure capital support in amounts exceeding $100,000 from alumni, widows, parents and friends of Princeton University. Responsible for enlisting, motivating and providing staff support for those alumni volunteers who solicit prospective donors. Successful candidates will be those who can inspire confidence, who can develop strong working relationships, who are energetic and able to meet demanding schedules and who are committed to the objectives of higher education and the University's mission. Strong verbal and writing skills, initiative, and maturity are required. A knowledge of the tax aspects of charitable giving is desirable. Considerable travel is required.

Position is available immediately. Please send resume to: Deborah Raikes-Colbert, Office of Human Resources, Clio Hall, Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 08544.

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY
Equal Opportunity Employer m/f

FOR RENT

PARIS: Elegant small studio for two just off the Seine in the 6th. 2 min. walk to the Louvre, Notre Dame. 609-924-4332.

BARBADOS: Home of the late John L. Roe Jr. '34. West Coast on bluff overlooking Caribbean. Three air-conditioned BRs, cook, maid, gardener, laundry, swimming pool. 215-527-0585.

PARIS: Rue de la Paix, Elegant apartment. Suitable for 2 or 3. 7-days preferred. $200/night. 212-838-1731.

STOCKING ISLAND, Exuma, Bahamas: Octagonal wood and glass home, spectacular 360-degree sea view. All modern conveniences. $1000 weekly for two with boat. Sam Burns '46, 407-231-2822. Brochure avail.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FLA.: Delightful beachfront condominium. Magnificent gulf view. Spacious 2 BR, 2 baths, loft. Pool. Tennis. Will Smith '63. 908-842-2096.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS (Virgin Gorda): Elegant new villa directly on own private snorkeling beach. Spectacular, panoramic view of North Sound including Bitter-End (dive school, etc.) Perfect weather year round. 3 BR, 2 bath, magnificent LR, wrap-around deck, full mod. kit., microwave, dishwasher; marina, fishing, pool, tennis. (Restaurant, provisioning, staff, car, available extra.) $2,500/wk. 609-921-7872.

EXCLUSIVE LUXURY 4 BR, 4 bath villa at private Tryall Club in Montego, Jamaica. Private pool, staff of four, gorgeous grounds overlook Caribbean and championship golf course. Also private tennis, scuba, beach and club house. Available at 2 or 3 BR rate off-season. 203-254-0228 (h) or Carol Shaw at 203-929-6391.

LONDON LUXURY FLATS: In Knightsbridge, Mayfair, Chelsea, Kensington, Whitehall Court. One, two, three bedrooms. Furnished and decorated by owners. Rented by day, seven day minimum; reduced rates when exceeding six months. Call during office hours: 518-686-7841.

KAUAI, HAWAII: 4 BR, NaPali Coast beach house. $650-850/wk. 703-560-7900.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant villa on blue Caribbean. Breathtaking views. Daily maid. All amenities. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

ITALY: Renting delightful holiday accommodations, each personally selected. Tuscan castles, Umbrian farmhouses. Seaside villas, lakeview cottages. Centrally-located apartments Venice, Rome, Florence. Week/month. 415-821-9345.

ST. THOMAS: 2 or 3 BRs on the water, spectacular downisland view. H. Macaleer. 919-942-8439.

SANIBEL ISLAND: Gulf front condominium, 2 BR with pool and tennis. Weekly/Monthly. Boozan '79, 201-522-8219.

CENTURIES OLD FARMHOUSE at edge of Sabine hill town. Easy reach of Orvieto, Perugia, Assisi, Spoleto, Florence, Rome. Magnificent setting on 4 acres. Restored recently. Architect Ellen Jawdat of Washington, D.C., M.Arch. Harvard. Work executed by Valentini Ristauo of Rome. All modern comforts. C. Joseph, 1 Lincoln Plaza, New York, NY 10023, 212-873-5104.

PORT ANTONIO, JAMAICA: "Nirvana:" Fully equipped, staffed, 3 bedroom, 2 bath, beachfront villa on mile-long, mostly deserted beach. Surf, few tourists. $800/wk. in season. 207-359-4447.

ST. JOHN: Off-season rates. 2 bedroom villa, pool, spectacular view. 508-668-2078.

LONDON RENTALS: Privately owned flats and houses in London's best areas offering comprehensive personal service at attractive prices. One week minimum stay. Call: A Place Like Home, London. 800-526-0215.

MAINE: Tenants Harbor and Port Clyde. Wonderful homes, fully furnished, immaculate and comfortable. $200-$2,000 per week, year round. C. Lang, POB 282, Tenants Harbor, ME 04860. 207-372-8906.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant waterfront villa on Caribbean. Spectacular view. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

KAUAI LUXURY CONDO on the ocean in sunny Poipu. Fully equipped. 2 BRs, 2 baths, free tennis at Waiolahi Tennis Club. $600/700 per week. 213-681-6869.

ST. BART'S, FRENCH WEST INDIES: Luxurious sea-side villa surrounded by privacy, beautiful beaches and French restaurants. 412-687-2061.

PARIS. LEFT BANK APARTMENT: St. Germain, close to D'Orsay, Louvre, Rodin. Sunny. Fireplaces. Antiques. Luxuriously furnished. Memorable! 412-687-2061.

ROME, ITALY: 18th century villa amidst vineyards. Splendid views and location. 609-921-8595.

BEQUIA, GRENADINES: For rent charming beach house on Friendship Bay Beach. Sleeps four. Excellent cook/housekeeper provided. Phone 514-935-6444.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS: Our secluded beach house on beautiful Brewers Bay, Tortola. 3 baths, maid, bunk room. Weather perfect all year. Rates: R. H. Smith '42, Westover Park, Stamford, CT 06902; 203-323-2294.

MAD RIVER SUGARBUSH AREA: Comfortable farmhouse for up to 20 skiers. $350 per day. William Iler '51, 508-922-0010.

TORTOLA. BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS: Luxury 5 bedrm., 3 bath villa. Pool. 11 island view. Every amenity. Maid, car included. Two thousand, six hundred dollars weekly. 516-283-2299.

MONHEGAN ISLAND, MAINE: 4 BR, 2 bath. Panoramic island, ocean view. Available June-September, $700/wk. Bill Walker '64. 215-687-3271.

SKI VERMONT: Spacious 4 bedroom house near Stratton/Mt. Snow. 703-522-5454.

GREAT CAMANOE, BVI: Secluded home, magnificent view on private island. 2 BR, baths. Land Rover and Whaler. $900/week. Doug Martin '54. 203-426-2928.

SAIL THE VIRGINS: The best beaches, best views, best of everything. Fully equipped 40' O'Day. 2 cabins, salon, galley, 2 heads, shower, sleeps 7. Captain, provisioning available. 201-747-3976.

VAIL, CO: 3 BR plus loft. 5 min. from gondola and great skiing. $225/night. $275 during Christmas and spring break. Bruce Brookens '67; 303-761-8815.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK: Rocky Mountain seclusion, minutes from skiing. Creek-side home sleeps six. No X-mas. 303-926-3907.

ST. JOHN: Fabulous private home near beach. Peaceful. Furnished. Box 12287, St. Thomas, VI 00801. 809-775-4266.

SUN VALLEY, ID: Luxurious, spacious, ski condo at base of Mt. Baldy in Warm Springs. 3 BRs, 3 baths, fireplace. Walk one block to lifts, restaurants, shops, apres ski. Bill Travers '71, 607-257-7322.

CARIBBEAN, VIRGIN GORDA, B.V.I.: Leverick Bay. Three bedroom villa directly on water. Private grotto and dock for swimming, snorkeling, boating. Low $1,500. High $2,000/week. Owner 813-395-2985. Jack Zwick, 17080 Captiva Dr. S.W., P.O. Box 207, Captiva, FL 33924.

EXUMA, BAHAMAS: Fully equipped 4 BR loft home. New van. Magnificent ocean view. Private beach. $1,000 weekly in season. 302-428-1455, evenings.

PRINCETON: 3 bedroom, 2 bathroom furnished house near Palmer stadium. Approximately November through April, $1,200. Shep Kimberly '45. 609-924-3024.

BEQUIA: Jewel of the Grenadines. Quiet. Beautiful. Friendly. Stone house overlooking the sea. Three bedrooms with baths. Pool. Beach. Housekeeper-cook. Three-week rental $5,250. 914-763-8030.

LUQUILLO, P.R.: Newly refurbished completely equipped 2 bedrm. 1 ba. apts. Beach 1 block, stores nearby. Special alumni rate. Beautiful beach and views. E. Pinney '47, P.O. Box 2210, Martinsburg, WV 25401. 304-263-4660.

FLORENCE ESTATE: Monthly or yearly. $1,500/month. 219-874-8740.

CARMEL, CALIFORNIA: Cute two bedroom, two bath home close to town. Weekly or longer-term rentals. Rosemarie Carter, 408-624-2930.

DORDOGNE, FRANCE: 18th C. farmhouse, 3 BR, pool, 18 acres. Available weekly/monthly. 803-884-2564 (h), 803-577-0960 (o). Tallman.

FRANCE: 1820 manor near Le Mans. 8 bedrooms, 4 1/2 baths, extra sinks, period furniture, baby grand piano, all conveniences. 30 acres; own pond, Olympic-size swimming pool, tennis. Golf, riding 20 minutes. Maid and cook available. Yearly less July: $2,500 mo. + utilities. 203-785-9376 or Paris 34-84-14-90.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FL. CONDOMINIUM: 2 bedrooms, 2 baths. Pool, tennis, sauna. 3 minutes to unspoiled beach. Near bird sanctuary, golf. Also off-season rates. 216-721-2322, 216-721-2370.

PROVIDENCIALES, Turks and Caicos, BWI. Luxury "Villa Camilla" offers beauty and serenity on undiscovered tropical island 90 minutes from Miami. 3 bedroom/3 bath-house fronts pristine 12-mile beach with virgin snorkeling, diving; bill, bone fishing. Sleeps 6-8. $2,000/wk. high; $1,500/wk. low. Guesthouse apartments sleep 2-4. $750/wk. high; $500/wk. low. *71. 617-731-2194.

BLOCK ISLAND: Oceanfront house, 3 state view, featured in Metropolitan Home, 3 bedrooms, 2 baths. $1,600/week July & August, $1,000/week June & September, $800/week October through May. 617-244-9410.

MAINE COAST MT. DESERT region. Furnished island cabin. 200 ft. secluded cove near deepwater anchorage miles at sea. 201-782-9586.

DRAMATIC noted-designer house in spectacular Mexican valley near Cuernavaca; pool, rooftop terraces, hottub, houseman and cook. Available for weekly or monthly rental. Jones, Box 3239, Noroton, CT 06820. 203-655-2242.

ISLAND PARADISE: Secluded beachfront villa on Gulf of Mexico; 90 minutes from Tampa; spectacular sunsets, surf, shelling; heated pool, tennis, bicycles, fishing; sleeps 6. $125/night; $640/week; 10% Princetonian discount! 813-985-6406.

SAN MIGUEL de ALLENDE, MEXICO: Artist's paradise. Well-furnished town house, 2 BR, 1½ baths, roof patio, beautiful view of whole city. $400 monthly includes maid service. Car rental optional $100. Until Dec. 31. Bob Minton '40. 508-369-5390.

FOR SALE

MANHATTAN: East 74th Street. Huge alcove studio. Luxury doorman building. $110,000. 212-628-6782.

PROVENCE, FRANCE: Authentic 18th century farmhouse restored and modernized. In medieval perched village 2 minutes down cobblestones from chateau. Terraced garden, pool, view of Lubéron mountains. Available after July. Asking $550,000. Mills '39, rue Tracapelle, 84220 Gordes, France.

EASTERN SHORE OF MD: Seeking residential property in waterfront mid-shore area, convenient to Washington, Baltimore and Phila.? Call Juana Mestres w'57. Clare Hughes Real Estate, Cambridge, MD 21613. 301-228-4236 (o), 301-228-4787 (h).

MANHATTAN: East 70's. Fabulous deal, 2 BR, views, stunning terraces. Mid-$300's neg. Call J. Thompson, Key Ventures 212-439-1610 or 212-570-6676.

ISLAND HOUSE: See "For Rent, Stocking Island."

CIRCA 1760 SALTBOX FARMHOUSE: Original fireplace and baking oven. Baking for soldiers encamped for the Battle of Bennington done here. Plank floors with rose head nails; Christian Doors and "Morning Staircase"; 5 bedrooms, 8 rooms, 2 baths. Apartment over garage, grounds include perennials, stone walls, birch cluster, apple orchard, views. 9.94 acres. $375,000. Coldwell Banker Hoisington Realty, P.O. Box 87, Bennington, Vermont 05201. 802-442-8337.

PLACE YOUR AD IN THE PRINCETON EXCHANGE

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____

State: _____ Zip: _____

Tel. #, (W): _____ (#): _____

My ad should run _____ time(s),

beginning the month of _____

Classification:

Payment for all insertions must accompany initial request. My check for $ _____ is enclosed. Rates per insertion: 1-5 insertions, $1.50 per word; 6-10 insertions, $1.45 per word; 11-17 insertions, $1.40 per word. Send to Princeton Exchange, Princeton Alumni Weekly, 41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540 (609)258-4886. No phone orders please. Issues are published 17 times from September through July. Ads will appear five-six weeks after receipt. When calculating payment, multiply number of words X number of insertions X rate per word to arrive at total price. P.O. Box number counts as two words, phone number as one word. No charge for zip code or class numerals. We cannot accept pay box numbers. Please attach this coupon to text and make checks payable to Princeton Alumni Weekly.

BIDDEFORD POOL, MAINE: Unique 1 BR + den condominium in quiet, charming summer community 30 minutes south of Portland. Prime location. Harbor + ocean views from large deck. Walk to wonderful sand beach, $160,000. Owner '54, 212-258-6510 or 207-282-6010.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK, COLORADO: Unique properties. 10% of commission proceeds donated, in your name, to the Yellowstone Bighorn Research Association in memory of my father, Professor Erling Dorf, Hon. '33. Bob Dorf 303-476-2421.

VERO BEACH, FLORIDA: Two bedroom, two bath villa with pool, steps to ocean. Club amenities available. $349,500. Call Dale Sorensen Real Estate, 407-231-4712. (William Grier '32)

MANHATTAN, CPW: One bedroom, two bathroom. Luxury doorman building. $165,000. Must sell. 212-522-2532 or 203-329-1872.

FOR SALE/FOR RENT

NANTUCKET—Come join the 400 happy Princeton families. We have large and small rentals, investment opportunities, estates and commercial enterprises. AND we give your investments TENDER, LOVING CARE—PREFERRED PROPERTIES. Nancie B. Taylor, w'43, Lucy T. Eaton, d'43. 508-228-2320, 800-338-7715.

WASHINGTON, DC, METROPOLITAN area, Northern Virginia, Maryland. Sales, rentals, land, property management. Colleen Finks w'61, associate broker, Pardoe & Graham, 6729 Curran St., McLean, VA 22101; 703-734-7020; eves., 703-821-2850.

FLORIDA GULF COAST: Sun, surf, sport, culture, amazing realty values below national average. For homes, condos, investment and business opportunities call Margaret Sherman, Centruy 21 Americana Properties, St. Petersburg, 800-421-9591, 813-821-3829 (h).

RESORTS & TRAVEL

PRIVATE TOURS, FRANCE: Individually selected itineraries to historic regions. Contact: Claudia de Guère, St. Cirq-Lapopie, 46330 France. Tel: 011-33-65-31-23-04.

ENJOY THE REAL NEW ZEALAND interestingly and comfortably guided by knowledgeable New Zealanders. Write: Grant Simpson, Whitianga, New Zealand.

LONDON, ENGLAND: Luxury self-catering apartments in the heart of Mayfair. We offer you the comfort and privacy of a recently converted period Georgian town house. British Breaks, Ltd., P.O. Box 1176, Middleburg, Virginia 22117. Telephone 703-687-6971. Fax 703-687-6291.

FLORIDA KEYS, BIG PINE KEY: Fantastic open water view, Key Deer Refuge, National Bird Sanctuary, stilt house, 3/2, screened porches, fully furnished, stained glass windows, swimming, diving, fishing, boat basin. 305-665-3832.

EXPEDITIONS & OUTINGS

HUNTING: Deer and elk. Magnificent mountain ranch. Photographic paradise bordering wilderness area. Tom Turnbull '59, Four Bar Ranch, Box 686, Carbondale, CO 81623.

BED & BREAKFAST

PRINCETON AREA: Alternative lodging in comfortable private homes. Bed & Breakfast of Princeton, P.O. Box 571, Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3189.

MANHATTAN B & Bs and private apartments. Prime locations, attractive rates. AT HOME IN NEW YORK, P.O. Box 407, NYC 10185. Lois Rooks, Director. 212-956-3125; fax 212-247-3294.

WANTED TO BUY

DR. SEUSS: First and early editions: collector. Steven Magid. 212-517-8899 evenings.

OLD BANJOS, MADOLINS, GUITARS: Any condition, for cash. Vic Williams '53, The Banjo Den, 95 Hallam Road, Buffalo, NY 14216. 716-873-9797.

PRINCETON ALUMNUS '75 seeks low-tech manufacturing company with $10MM-$40MM sales. East coast location preferable. P.O. Box 335, Locust Valley, New York, 11560.

OLD TRAINS: Private collector interested in sets and collections. Contact David A. Hoffman, M.D. '54, 1330 Penn Ave., Wyomissing, PA 19610. 215-373-4271.

BUSINESS SERVICES

BUILD UP YOUR BUSINESS. To increase sales, you need professionally created brochures, ads, mailings, catalogs, logos, etc. Word-Wise Advertising, founded 1973, offers a complete creative service to the small and mid-size business. Building a business is tough enough — don't make things worse by using unsophisticated marketing materials. Word-Wise can give you Fortune 500 style at reasonable cost. Call 212-247-0124.

EUROPE 1992! Doing business in Germany? Princeton grad provides full range of information engineering, personnel and management consulting services. David T. Fisher '69, Personatec GmbH, Wilhelmstrasse 16, 6200 Wiesbaden, W. Germany. Tel. 011-49-6121-305-005. Fax. 011-49-6121-305-006.

PROFESSIONAL TAX PLANNING, ACCOUNTING, AUDIT REPRESENTATION. Personal and business. Enrolled to practice before IRS. By appointment. 212-947-6031. Virgil M. Cummins '67 (EA), 430 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10001.

GOODS & SERVICES

PERSONALIZED TICKET SERVICE: Broadway, concerts, opera, sports. Entertainment, Inc! 609-799-7077.

CRAYFISH: Shipped live. Write for prices. Pyramid Farms Crayfish, 4340 Egypt Rd., Cambridge, MD 21613.

JOHN LENNON 1970 Bag One lithographs, signed, numbered. Buy/sell. Dorothy Rogers Art Search, Boston. 617-267-6040.

RARE IRISH WILD SMOKED SALMON: Delivery worldwide. 800-668-6275 Giftmark (Ireland). $70/2 pound side. (Spectacular 2 ft. long fish, serves 20) Free recipes.

NANTUCKET, MA professional lawn and landscape service available for your summer home. Also, winter caretaking. Blair Perkins, Box 2095, Nantucket, MA 02584. 508-228-5345. Family of Ted Raphael '49.

UNUSUAL ANTIQUE PRINT COLLECTION: Turkish, North African, others. W. Spencer 904-371-8344.

OPPORTUNITIES

YOUNG MD with great idea seeks capital partner(s). R. Austin '84, 54 Mendosa Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94116. 415-759-6389.

12

ARTHUR C. HOLDEN
Box 182
Washington, CT 06793; 203-868-7063

While we were preparing for the 1990 Reunions, as well as experiencing the quickening of old friendships that are stimulated each Reunion, we did some special correspondence with Sally Schanbacher, the daughter of George and Melinda Bunn. She let us see at least two collections of letters written by members of 1912 to her father, thanking him both for the 1942 and 1945 products of his fascinating and very personal Hobby Horse Press; namely his little pamphlet "The Benches on Nassau Street," and writings on the influence of Prof. Charles Osgood exerted through his classes devoted to the English literary figure, Dr. Samuel Johnson.

Princetonians are reminded that Melinda Bunn's death occurred no longer ago than February 27, 1990. Before her marriage she must have had some idea of the delightful sense of humor possessed by our classmate, George W. Bunn, former editor of the TIGER. Certainly it must have been Melinda's influence which finally focused our "Gib's" delightful sense of humor through his homemade publications to a circle far wider even than the circle of his devoted classmates.

13

ALISON R. BRYAN
Box F
Frenchtown, NJ 08825

A son of '13, Joseph Parsons Jr. '50, wrote the Class Notes for '13 for many PAW issues during 1989-90. We thank him for his fine effort. Some of the future notes will be written by the Class Secretary, as the only known living member of the Class.

In the June 1990 issue of the PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY, mention was made of the death of Myrtle, the widow of our Lionel V. Silvester. Her son, Lionel Jr. '45, writes that his mother was 100 years old at the time of her death. She had lived in her own home until the last year of her life. The sympathy of the Class was offered to her three sons, who were mentioned in the June PAW.

Five Princeton undergraduates, recipients of the 1913 War Memorial Scholarships, have sent their thanks. They will be mentioned in a future PAW.

14

C. EARL MOORE
Rosemont Plaza, Apt. 117
Rosemont, PA 19010

Have you heard the news? There are some new kids on the street. Yes, 1,185 of them: 57% boys, 43% girls—the Class of 1994. If you would like to know the reasons why the class is a star-studded group of freshmen, here are a few.

One of the members is the first-prize winner of the Westinghouse Science Competition. Another member is the winner of the International Physics Olympiad held in Warsaw, Poland. Another one is an Olympic-class swimmer and the daughter of a Princeton '60 graduate. Another member is the published author of a children's book. Another one is the founder of the first high school chapter of Habitat for Humanity and the first high school student to serve on the International Board of Advisers to that organization. Another member is the president of the National Assn. of Negro Musicians, and is also a winner of a humanities scholarship. There is the young lady from Surrey, England, who came to Princeton from the Royal Ballet, to which she was selected after completing high school two years ago. There is a young black man from South Africa who attended the Gilman School in Baltimore, and in case your brakes don't work, there is a young lady from a small town in Oregon who, in addition to graduating first in her class and serving as editor-in-chief of the yearbook, also rebuilds cars and drives in demolition derby events.

According to Dean of Admission Fred Hargadon, the Class of 1994, which includes 76 students from 23 foreign countries, has a host of members with noteworthy accomplishments. To the Class of 1994, a very warm welcome to Princeton is deserved.

Word has been received from Henry Elliott Jr. '59 that his mother, Carola D. Elliott, the wife of our classmate Henry Elliott, died July 7, 1990. Another sad event was to hear from Henry Canda '43 that his mother, Norma Armstrong Canda, the wife of our classmate Hank Canda, died July 23, 1990.

We have a memorial in this issue.

15

ROBERT BOYLE III '47
Box 2335
Wayne, NJ 07470

Well, guys, we've outlived the tradition established by Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft in 1911, when we entered. All of the Class of 1915 had to swim 220 yards, using both the breast stroke and the back stroke, and perform "at least a fair dive." (If the dive requirement had been enforced, this secretary wouldn't be writing this column—he does remember passing the rest of the test in July '43 in Brokaw pool). Alas, the phys.-ed. requirement established in 1911, too, has gone the way of all flesh (see the July 18 PAW).

That issue also had a great letter from Nancy Cumming Connolly, daughter of our Joe, on Magnolia trees. Regretfully, her mother's death is noted.

We report the death of George Williams on Aug. 10, 1989. His son thought he'd reported this. George was a member of the Class Executive Committee, and had succeeded Ross Meeker as Annual Giving agent until his health prevented his serving. (See the note about Ross's brother in the '14 column in the July 18 PAW Reunions issue.)

We are grateful to George Copeland, another executive committee member, for assuming the A.G. role.

17

IRA GRAMANN, c/o Chemical Bank
30 Rockefeller Plaza, Ste. 6100
New York, NY 10112

It was 77 years ago that the Class of 1917 entered Princeton as freshmen. Now there are 16 classmates remaining. It is important that we maintain our lines of communication. Our treasurer has sent out our annual Class dues statements, and when you submit your payment, please send a few lines informing us of your activities, which we may include in these notes.

During the summer we had a note from Beth Boadway, Walter's widow, in which she wrote that their youngest grandson, Gary Walter Cox, was invited to be a professor at Princeton, in the field of economics. He opted instead to join U.C.-San Diego, where his bride is employed. Mrs. Boadway was thrilled that he was invited to the "best old place of all." She sent best wishes to the Class. A very informative, interesting, and appreciative letter was received from Peter Dutton '91, a recipient of the Donald Neil Campbell Ross '17 War Memorial Scholarship.

Evan Miller writes that he is still O.K.

We regret to report the death of Irving Riker's widow, Eleanor, on July 1, 1990.

We have a memorial in this issue.

18

JARVIS CROWELL
Meadow Lakes, Apt. 3108
Hightstown, NJ 08520

The two characters in Reunions garb are your class secretary Jarvis and his stepson, Alan Kirk, who was celebrating his 40th reunion. Alan is working with Jarvis on these columns, as you know.

We just received the summer issue of PRINCETON TODAY and found, on page eight, an article entitled "Frank Baker: Peppery Member of the Class of '18." It discusses Frank's travels and gives a good flavor of the nature of our exceptional prexy. One does have to wonder a bit about a quoted sentence: "I still drink a high-ball occasionally, but I try to limit myself to two a day." That's occasional?

Albert Lamar '54 called the other day with the sad news that our beloved Lamartine died on June 22 in his hometown, New Orleans. Albert will send along a memorial and we will print it at once.

We need news from you loyal classmates. Please send to Alan Kirk, 827 Turkey Run, McLean, VA 22101.

19

GEORGE B. LARSEN
14 Lake Forest Dr.
Charlottesville, VA 22901

Here we are starting the 1990-91 year. The picture is of Franklin Wilbur riding in the parade, and he said he had a fine time. The above will correct our saying, in the July 18 issue, that no 1919er attended the reunion.

A nice letter from Burnham Hockaday saying he is getting around to some extent. His wife is confined to a wheelchair, but keeps active. Many friends have founded the Clara Hockaday Parkinson's Disease Fund. Daughter Laura is still one of the top supporters for the KANSAS CITY STAR.

It is with deep sorrow that we report the death of Stan Quay on June 11, 1990, and we extend our deep sympathy to the entire family.

20

SALLY S. McALPIN W'20
Box 670
Princeton, NJ 08542

How dull are the summer months without even a glimpse of 'my' Princeton classmates. What a vacuum to write from. Fortunately we can fill it with one item, from WWI, sent in by Nelson Dane last spring. It is this photo, from the BUC-A-BRAC, of the Princeton Naval Training Unit probably about early 1917. Surely some of you can recognize a face or two. Are they training in Princeton?

THE PRINCETON NAVAL UNIT IN ACTION

I, of course, recognize the left-hand cadet marching alongside his comrades, shorter than the others, he is Dave McAlpin. The commander was Rear Admiral Caspar F. Goodrich; John Harlan was battalion commander, two of the company commanders were Bill English and Asa Bushnell, and in Company A that you are looking at, Bill English was the company commander and Dave McAlpin was the first chief of section. A second page lists all of A Company (there were A, B, C, and D). Whether Company A were all 1920 men, I don't know, but I recognized seven names: John Harlan, Dave McAlpin, W.H. English, A. Bushnell, A.P. Morgan, George Sibley, and A.E. Stevenson (Bill?).

We are desperately sorry for the mistake of listing Homer H. Hewitt Jr. in the list of deceased classmates in the July 18 issue. He is very much alive and understandably upset at this error.

Jay N. Schroeder III informs us that Jay N. Schroeder has died. A memorial will follow.

21 A. EDWARD CONOVER
331 Lower Doughton Rd., Apt. C-4
Newtown, PA 18940

Hello everybody, here we are again—embarking on the 1990-91 season. Subtract 1921 from 1991 and what does that mean? That our 70th reunion is on the horizon and that we are all nonagenarians.

The meat and potatoes of this column is a word now and then from classmates, and from widows of classmates, of whom we have just as many readers as there are classmates—God bless them.

When Don Foresman learned that he is now a V.P. his reaction was to hope that it would be a long time before there would be any more changes.

Looking over Tom Roberts's Annual Giving summary for 1989-90, we see that our participation percentage went up from 67.5 to 72.72. That's heading in the right direction.

Four of our Class widows have recently changed their address. The new addresses are: Mrs. Tyler M. Bartow, Box 198 Kendal, Kennett Square, PA 19348; Mrs. William Bolton, Room 314, St. Joseph Villa, Flourtown, PA 19031; Mrs. Walter A. Dew, 1324 Olivia Ave., Ann Arbor, MI 48104; Mrs. Truman C. Penney, 2736 Kipling Ave. South, Minneapolis, MN 55416.

Bill Rogers died in his sleep on July 14, 1990. A memorial will follow. The Class extends sympathy to his family.

23 LARRY GOOS
201 W. Evergreen Ave., Apt. 716
Philadelphia, PA 19118

 Christine Riddle Stewart, currently recuperating in Princeton Medical Center's Merwick, is well remembered by the Class of 1923 for her years of dedicated service to Princeton. Born the youngest of nine children in Helensburgh, Scotland (of a clan whose family crest boasts a "rampant tiger"), Miss Stewart has resided in the United States since 1911. She began her career with the University in the office of John Duncan Spaeth, and later began work in the admission office of Dean Radcliffe Heermance.

In 1929, Miss Stewart transferred to the Graduate Council (now the Alumni Council), where she served until her retirement in 1964. At one time, Miss Stewart was the only woman to hold a "commission" in an organization of 30,000 men. For this, and for her years of devoted and unflappable service, in 1954 Christine Stewart was honored by the Alumni Assn., which presented her with an expense-paid, six-week vacation to Scotland.

In the same year she was hailed in the Princeton Town Topics with these glowing words: "Ms. Stewart can be classified as a member of that select group which by its very presence 'changes the whole face of affairs' . . . for aiding and simplifying university tasks assumed by Princeton alumni scattered throughout the world; for successfully working with the human equation in all that she undertakes; for readily admitting that she is 'just a little prejudiced' in favor of Princeton town and Princeton gown, she is Town Topics' nominee for Princeton's Woman of the Week."

We regret to report the death of Kenn Stryker-Rodda on June 28, 1990. We have memorials in this issue.

24 RICHARD H. HOBBS
862 Prospect Ave.
Winnetka, IL 60093

Prof. David R. McKee's address is now P.O. Box 4, Cambridge, NY. The Rev. Adelmer R. Bryan now resides at Reynolds La., Shady, NY.

We have notes from: Martin R. Everett, A. L. McCloskey, Edwin M. Rick and Jack Blum Van Urk. All report that they are well and active. Jack Van Urk writes that while he is still riding, he now watches others follow the hounds.

We regret to report that Ira M. Appel died May 1, 1990, Robert S. Long May 18, William W. Reidemester May 23, and Edward K. Hessberg June 18. Also that Howard F. Baer lost his wife, Isabel, on July 25. She was very prominent in St. Louis civic affairs.

In the total amount contributed by our Class to Annual Giving, 1989-90, our record was excellent—over $70,000—higher than any class up to 1931, save 1925 on its 65th. Much credit goes to our widows. God bless them as always! The percentage of classmates contributing was, however, considerably less than it should have been: 55% (46 out of 83 still with us). Surely we can all agree that this is not as high as it could and should be!

25 JOHN L. K. JENNERY
Box 123
Montchanin, DE 19710

The Class of 1925 first appeared as alumni when about 50 of us marched into the opening football game in the fall of 1925 behind the imposing figure of President Bruno Hills. This year, the fall reunion will be at the Harvard game on Oct. 20. Join us for lunch at the Class table in Jadwin Gym.

An important element in our successful 65th was the contribution made by the outstanding members of our undergraduate crew. Rick Hough '92, undergraduate secretary, is shown in the photo driving

Princeton's Ambassadors

ON A RECENT fact-finding trip to Prague sponsored by the Council of American Ambassadors, these five Princetonians posed for a picture. They are (left to right): Shelby Cullom Davis '30 (ambassador to Switzerland, 1969-75), Adolph W. Schmidt '26 (Canada, 1969-74), Robert D. Stuart, Jr. '37 (Norway, 1984-89), William H. Taft III '42 (Ireland, 1953-57), and Leon J. Weil '48 (Nepal, 1984-87).

Digitized by Google PHOTO COURTESY OF LEON J. WEIL '48

Sandy Turner in the P-rade. His raised hand hides Pete Street in the following cart. In the background are Bob McMillan, Ted Stevenson, and Charlie Taylor. Cressy Belden '91, who ably handled the reception desk, writes, "It was an honor to spend last weekend with all of you, and I can hardly believe it was a job. No words can aptly describe the love I feel for those of you who attended and shared Princeton stories, advice for life after Old Nassau, and those maxims for getting through every day. Every time I see a P-rade I will think of you (undoubtedly wearing your reunion jackets) and give thanks that our paths crossed. Thank you for a touching and meaningful three days." We are also grateful to Tom McCabe '91 for conducting us to and from H.Q. in the Class station wagon.

We regret to report the deaths of Dave Corcoran on June 14, 1990, and (belatedly) Wheeler McDougal on Feb. 24, 1989.

26

ROBERT WOHLFORTH
57 Rockwell Rd.
Ridgefield, CT 06877

The Ralph P. Kinder Class of 1926 Scholarship has been established by the University from an endowed fund provided by the late Mrs. Becky Kinder in memory of Ralph, our former President and holder of many Class offices over the years. The scholarships, which will begin in 1991, are for deserving undergraduate students. The Class has also received a bequest in memory of Joe Elder from Joe's widow, the late Charlotte Elder.

Celebrating sixties wedding anniversaries: Mary and Wooz Supplee, number 62 on June 14; Madge and Ted Beck, their 61st on July 10; and Mildred and Bob Wohlforth, number 60 on Sept. 2.

At the Westfield, N.J. memorial service for Bob Smythe on Mar. 17, the Class was represented by Madge and Ted Beck, Della Sue and Jim Neuman, Patty and Bill Nevis, Janet and Cbet McSpadden, Buzz Hallock, Charlie Hemmerysley, and Bob Ward.

A welcome note from Clarence Gunther—the first in almost four years—clears up his recent whereabouts. Gunth has been snorkeling around the Virgin Islands most of last spring, and just recently surfaced long enough to report from his Rivierra Beach, Fla. home.

Ralph Martin, who is easily the second-most-active man of his age in the State of Ohio, reports that he still plays tennis and golf, delivers mobile meals to old folks, maintains 35 birdhouses on his local golf course, and works on the local Bloodmobile, collecting for the Red Cross.

Nate Moysse will have a granddaughter in the Class of 1994 this fall; proud father is son Bill '66.

A heart bypass and the repair of a broken hip have been taken in stride by Barrous Dunham, who now walks with or without a cane, and who expects to be fully recovered by the end of this year.

Our sympathies go to George Besler, whose wife, Dorice, died on March 12. We have memorials in this issue.

27

MILSON R. BURN
36 Lexington Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06119

I thank all who have heeded my pleas for news. Garner writes that Bill Plus, his four-year room-

Ancient Marathoner

ON A HUMID Saturday in June, three cyclists speed down the bike path beside the Great Road, just outside Princeton. Ahead, someone is running in their way, forcing them to veer onto the road. As they flash by, their heads swivel for a look. There is a sudden pause in the whirling pedals and the staccato clicking of chains, for the object of their rubbernecking is no ordinary runner. It is Alan Poole '37.

Poole was sixty-two when he ran his first marathon. That was fourteen years ago. Since then, he has run twenty-four more. And now he is training for his twenty-sixth, his first international race, the Berlin Marathon. On September 30, some twenty thousand runners will compete on a course that winds through both East and West Germany.

As Poole continues down the Great Road, his left arm swings to the west, but the rest of him heads north, at a slight tilt, toward Hopewell. He plans an intermediate stop at Drake's Corner Road, where earlier he stashed a water bottle. His route will cover fourteen miles.

Pausing to answer a few questions about his late-blooming athletic career, he puts his hands on his hips. The exercise has pinked his cheeks. For most of his life, he says, with only a slight catch in his breath, he worked on Wall Street as an investment analyst, drank recklessly, weighed fifty pounds more than he does now, had high blood pressure, and generally felt bad all the time—a major comedown for someone who ran fifth on his freshman cross-country team. In 1978, he determined to do something about it and resumed running. He ran the mile in the alumni track meet at Reunions in eight and a half minutes and coughed for two hours afterward.

At age seventy, in the Rhode Island Senior Olympics, he ran the 10,000 meters, rested fifteen minutes, ran the 2,000 meters, rested thirty minutes, then ran the 1,500 meters. He won all three events, setting records in the 10,000 and 2,000. A year later, he repeated his victories, and set new records. If he is not bionic, he at least has remarkable powers of recovery. When he finishes his run today, he will slug down a beer, lie on his couch for half an hour, then get on with his Saturday routine. At the top of the hill, his blue eyes twinkling, he confesses, "I worked harder on the hill because I didn't want to look bad." But surely a septuagenarian's knees and back should creak and groan. Not Poole's. "I've had some trouble with blisters, and a pulled hamstring once, but Bobby Sinkler [a former athletic trainer at Princeton] fixed me right up. Three years ago, I tripped on a curb and broke my hip. Joe Zawadsky ['51] put five pins in it and told my wife I'd never run again. I sent him a photo of me crossing the finish line in my first marathon after the accident. But the hip took an hour off my time, and I've lost some bounce. I peaked at seventy-three."

Before breaking his hip, Poole was ranked eleventh nationally among marathoners aged seventy to seventy-four. His running credits include the Baltimore, Boston, Jersey Shore, Newport, and New York marathons. His fastest time—four hours.

He continues to work as an investment counselor. But as for puttering and doddering, as once befit a person his age, he will have none of it. "I hate golf. I used to play it, but it interfered with my running, so I quit and gave my clubs to my son. My wife says running has improved my disposition."

Poole reaches Drake's Corner Road, where he refreshes himself from his secret well. One of his goals, he says, is to "run in the New York Marathon when I'm eighty." The most ancient marathoner adds wistfully, "This year, a ninety-one-year-old German ran in it and finished. I thought eighty would be an achievement."

—Daniel N. White '65

Alan Poole '37

PHOTO BY JOHN W. H. BRIMPSON '98

mate in Pyne, has left his 43-year residence in Marmonck, N.Y., for a retirement home. He and John are longtime rivals in producing families. Bill's total is six children, twenty grands and one great-grand. John boasts seven, eleven, and twelve, and still growing. John will be on his usual trip to France in September.

Lam Clifford says that Bill Van Alstyne has been in the hospital with a circulatory problem in a leg. Bill is on top of the world for having a grandson bearing his name—son of Bill Van Alstyne '55. Lam Clifford has telephone chats with Jess McFarland, who sounds "pretty well." Lam has just about recovered from a back problem, and is out on the links again.

George and Mart Denniston and son Elliott relished three weeks in Devon, Cornwall, and London, and were delighted by the London theater, but failed to locate Londoner Bill Ballard. Joe Bryan visited London in June for a granddaughter's wedding, and spent a delightful evening with Bill and Pam Ballard. He was shocked by the prices in London. He is looking forward to a visit from Hugo Bell.

Joe Prendergast, still on his farm at Aldie, Va., is supervising extensive rehabilitation on President Monroe's mansion and on his own townhouse, in Washington Square, N.Y. Bernie Thulin is having fun and playing the stock market. He has left his Richmond home of nearly 40 years for a suburban retirement community. He has had a second hip replacement, but hopes to continue playing golf.

From Vero Beach, Fla., Fisb and Duckie Crawford went to Far Hills, N.J. in June, to attend the wedding of Harden IV—"Six days of partying and hulla-balloo"—which they loved, no matter how tiring. They have two great-grandchildren, and another is due in October—hopefully a future Princetonian. They are still fighting to save Vero Beach from "voracious developers." Welcome, classmates on tour, they remind us.

28

FL. PARK JOHNSON
Box 28
Penney Farms, FL 32079; 904-284-8898

With the fall season upon us, and pigskins flying through the air, we look forward to the big football day luncheon at Jadwin Gym, the Harvard game day, Sat., Oct. 20. There will be the usual '28 table ready for classmates, wives, families, and guests. Detailed announcements and instructions will be forthcoming. The annual Class luncheon at the Princeton Club of New York will be held on Mon., Dec. 3 this year.

The final report on the 1989-90 Annual Giving campaign brought the good news of the largest total in history amounting to $18,605,030. '28's off-year total was a modest $50,341, but the giving percentage was up to 67.3, which was very satisfying, and we all salute our Class Agent, Bill Woodward, for the excellent job he has done.

When Alice and Park Johnson went to a regional rally and workshop of Habitat for Humanity in St. Petersburg, Fla. in April, they enjoyed the added bonus of a good visit at the hospitable home of Ethel and Bill Read in Sarasota. Anne and Dave Hinchman were also present. When the conversation covered several cases of classmates who have been largely immobilized or slowed down by health handicaps, Dave remarked, "This talk makes me feel positively spry!" Alice and Park also enjoyed, in the course of a short cruise to Bermuda, a delightful afternoon with Isabel and Tom Childs in their charming home, Stancombe Glade (actually in a small forest), in Paget, near Hamilton, in early May. The Childses wanted their warm remembrances and regards to be given to the Class.

During the summer came word of the death of Harry Grumpelt, a retired accountant and Christmas tree farmer, at his home in Salisbury, Conn., on June 25. Our sincere sympathy is with his wife, Ann, and their children.

29

LOUIS F. KEMP
12 Winthrop Rd.
Guilford, CT 06437; 203-453-4846

Geological authority Prof. Jack Fanshaw points out that the Alumni College was held at the Yellowstone-Bighorn Research Assn. Camp, near Red Lodge, Mont., Aug. 11-18. It was originally called the Princeton Geology Camp and was started in 1930 by Princeton Prof. W. T. Thom Jr. Our Class was represented there in 1931 by those working towards a Ph.D., including Jack Vbay, Johnny Lucke, and Jack Fanshaw.

Charlie Arni still runs Driftwood Ranch on Orcas Island, Wash. Last year he recounted some early experiences when he first started in the movies. He wrote, "In BALL OF FIRE, I remember being dumped into a garbage truck with my fellow actors—I was a lawyer. ROMAN SCANDALS was my first 'acting' job in Hollywood. I played the wine taster for the emperor, dressed in a toga. I tasted wine (ginger ale) from 9 A.M. until 5 P.M. and fell to the hardwood floor after every taste. I was black and blue and sore all over, but I made 50 bucks and was a very happy guy. Fifty bucks bought rent for a month and a week's food in those days."

Regretfully I report the death of Marc Haas, noted philatelist, on July 8 and our beloved Jim Carey on July 24. At Jim's memorial service on July 27, Carl Breuer, Spence Marsh, Mac McPherson, Harvey Mole, Dan O'Day and Dave Smith represented our Class. Our deep sympathy to their families. Memorials will follow.

30

ROBERT A. "RED" SCHMIDDER
8008 Westover Rd.
Bethesda, MD 20814

Last April Bill Roberts made a trip to Arizona to have the pleasure of "meeting, holding, and playing with" his six-month-old great-granddaughter, who was visiting her other great-grandparents in Phoenix. While in Arizona Bill called on several classmates, including Laddy Koehn, who is still playing golf several times a week, and who has a grandson entering Princeton in September. Bill also visited Bob Schaefer in Carefree. Bob is in good health and keeps busy with local civic endeavors. In Sun City Bill met with Dick Pieters, who was recovering from a triple bypass operation. The Pieters were planning to spend the summer in Sun City in lieu of their usual summer in the Northeast. While in Phoenix Bill also called on Associate Natalie (Brisco) Clapp and her new husband. Natalie had sustained a bad fall, breaking her collar bone, and getting a slight concussion. This caused postponement of a scheduled trip around Mexico and Guatemala. However, as previously reported, the Clapps did get to Reunions.

Charlie Ellis (the one with the middle initial H) has moved into a retirement home in Kennett Square, Penn. Prior to moving Charlie had been out to the Mayo Clinic for back surgery to relieve pressure on his spine.

Shelby Davis was awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws degree by the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy of Tufts Univ. in June. Prior to that Shelby made a two-week tour of Eastern Europe as a member of the Council of American Ambassadors. While ambassador to Switzerland in the early 1970s, Shelby was one of the founders of the Princeton Club of Switzerland.

Jane and Harold Jones devote a great deal of their time and energy to the Virginia Home for Boys in Richmond. Jane and Harold are on the Board of Governors of the home. It is the only one of its kind in continuous operation since 1847.

With great sadness we report the death of Bill McClesney in Florida on June 30.

31

HUGH T. KERN
15-01-U Meadow Lakes
Hightstown, NJ 08520; 609-448-4100

Hello, again! Here we are back at the old stand purveying things old and new, but always waving the '31 banner with pride. More than sixty years ago a determined, be-dinked group of freshmen scouted the campus and settled in for classes, the Cane Spree, and mid-semester uniform tests. That was long ago, and we all remember it well; well, pretty well. Dean Heermance got us in; President Hibben dismissed us with his signature, and we went home with our diploma, "rejoicing we'll be."

We have a chance to renew our youth next June 6-9, 1991, when we celebrate our 60th reunion—an event not to be missed. As the old New Yorker cartoon put it, as a couple stood on the dock, watching the transatlantic ship move out to sea, one said to the other, "Don't just stand there; do something." For all of us, do respond to the questionnaire which Al Genung is sending out for a new Class directory; do give Pen Reed names and suggestions for Class officers to carry us along for the next quinquennium (as Casey might say, "you could look it up"); do answer in the affirmative when Dusty Farnum prods laggards; do respond generously to Art Crocker when he calls for Class dues and to Dave Kreidler and Woody English for the special Annual Giving appeal; and, do return the form that Bill Newman needs to make firm reservations for our super-60th.

Everyone should have "The Flap," with our Class calendar. Our first gathering will be at Jadwin Gym for the Harvard game, Oct. 20. Lunch is available or bring your own and your own libation. Set-ups provided. Remember that today is the tomorrow we dreamed about yesterday.

32

MATLAND A. BOW
Seven Gates Farm
Vineyard Haven, MA 02568

Welcome to the 58th anniversary of your matriculation at Princeton. There is no better way to start the year than with a picture of two stalwarts who have done so much for our Class for many years. It was taken by Fritz Brauer at the last reunion, and embraces four important functions in two bodies: Jim Roubotham, Class president and perennial reunion chairman, and Jack Kellogg, V.P. and perennial A.G. chairman. Jack's efforts for the previous campaign brought in $81,818, a larger sum than any other off-year class older than ours, and also larger than 18 much-bigger younger classes. We also took in $23,640 in other gifts, for a grand total of $105,451, also a record for all off-year classes older than ours, and for 19 younger classes. On behalf of Jack and the University, thanks to all of you for your splendid and ongoing generosity.

ODDMENTS FROM THE SUMMER: On July 4 the Dick Wallises had a family reunion that included all Dick's siblings and spouses (10), the next generation (34), and the next generation (20), for a grand total of 64, an uproarious get-together at the Y.M.C.A. of the Rockies, Estes Park, Colo. Earlier the Don Hookers went to New Orleans for a nephew's wedding where Don had a long and nostalgic talk with another Don—Mr. Halsey—of that city.

We report with sorrow the death of Wally Ely on July 3.

33

ARTHUR MOORE
600 E. Cathedral Rd., Apt. A314
Philadelphia, PA 19128

This is the last column before the Broadmoor event, discussed in the summer newsletter, our first western reunion. A couple of last-minute notes from Regional Chairman Bob Long. It is important to be on time at the opening cocktail party, hosted by Milli and Charlie Tuft, viz: 5:30 Sunday evening; also a warning: those who plan to make sightseeing trips on Wednesday cannot check out on that day. For any details or for last-minute reservations, call Bob at 719-473-3765.

Announcing a new member of the Class of 1994: Morgaen Donaldson, granddaughter of Lenchen and Frank Townsend. Many of us met her at last fall's Dartmouth game party at Hanover. Though on her father's side she comes from a very Harvardian family, she applied to both Princeton and Harvard, was accepted by both, and wisely chose Princeton. Her graduation on June 8 in Maine caused Frank and Lenchen to miss our Class dinner, but with a dramatic southward dash on Saturday, they made it to Princeton in time for the P-rade.

Jim (Fluckey) Snowden has sent us a brochure which tells of the dedication of Fluckey Hall at the Naval Submarine School, named for Jim's brother, Rear Admiral Eugene Fluckey, one of the greatest submarine skippers of WWII.

We have lost two more classmates, Bill Wright, in London; and Bob Gwinn, in Nashville; both on June 23, 1990. We have memorials in this issue.

34

RALPH K. PITOMI
4347 Province Line Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

SKYTOP LODGE, secluded in the Poconos at Skytop, Penn., will be the site of our next mini-reunion, Wed., Oct. 10 to Fri., Oct. 12, a week before the Harvard game at Princeton and at the height of the fall foliage. Bill Eisenbart, an old Skytop hand, will be our on-site manager, and he and Hazel promise a warm reception and a memorable visit. Plan to arrive Wednesday afternoon in time for cocktails (in orange jackets, of course) in a private area, and to depart sometime Friday. If you haven't made reservations call the reservations manager at once at 717-595-7401, mentioning the Class of '34.

THE HARVARD GAME IN PRINCETON Oct. 20 (order due date for tickets is Sept. 28) will be preceded by our traditional picnic in Jadwin Gym under the competent direction of Events Chairman Alex Keer. Bring your own lunch or buy from a Food Services counter in the gym. B.Y.O.L.; set-ups will be provided by our longtime steward, Will Hammond.

SPECIAL NOTICE: There will be a brief meeting of the Class Executive Committee that morning at 10 A.M. sharp at the '34 Barn. All classmates and their wives are urged to attend. Time will be allowed to get to Jadwin for refreshments before lunch.

Some Class!

We have a memorial in this issue.

35

JOSEPH C. HAZEN JR.
94 Essex Rd.
Summit, NJ 07901

FALL PICNIC: Sat., Oct. 20, Harvard game, Jadwin Gym, 11 A.M. Turkey and fixin's by Jane Northwood; side dishes by other '35 ladies. Set-ups on the Class, but bring your own bottle. Game time: one o'clock.

WINTER LUNCHEON. Instead of the usual dinner in Princeton, there will be a luncheon in N.Y.C. on a December date to be announced. Long Island, Westchester, and Connecticut contingents please copy.

SPRING MINI-REUNION: One week, Thursday to Thursday, beginning Feb. 28, on St. Croix, U.S. Virgin Islands, hosted by Dorothy and Jack Brown. Housekeeping units on the beach, restaurant, swimming pool, nearby tennis and golf. More details later.

KUDOS. Last May Bob Winters received an honorary doctor of humane letters from Keuka College in upstate New York. But such recognition is not new to Bob: he earned a master's degree at Tufts and a doctorate and second master's at Harvard. Nor is Keuka new to Bob: his father was a professor of history there, and Bob served on the college's board of trustees between 1978 and 1987 and is now a trustee emeritus.

TRIVIA. According to the Alumni Council's computer, the children of 56 of the 319 living classmates also went to Princeton. Seven of the living classmates saw two of their children go to Princeton. The Class of '63 included the biggest number of '35 offspring: seven.

IN MEMORIAM. John Appel of Wilmington, Del., Dec. 17, 1913—Jan. 21, 1990; Henry Underbill of Jericho, N.Y., Apr. 7, 1913—May 8, 1990; John Kepbart of St. Petersburg, Fla., June 7, 1912—July 14, 1990.

36

JAMES Q. BENSON
24 Aylesbury Cir., Windermere
Madison, CT 06443

We hope you all had a good summer! In nine short months many of us will enjoy our 55th reunion June 6-9.

This is the first of 17 PAW issues for this school year. Your secretary is always in need of interesting news. For those who missed reading our Class column in the July 18 issue of the WEEKLY, Howie Menand was pictured serving his last commencement as Princeton's rain marshal. During his 41 years in this unique job, it rained only once on the outdoor ceremony, in 1962 when he was in Italy on sabbatical. What a great non-rainmaker!

The team of David H. Winton and his daughter Anne W. Black were recognized at last spring's annual commencement of Colby-Sawyer College of New London, N.H. Dave received an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. He is a former member and chairman of the college's board of trustees. Anne, president of the alumni board, was the 17th individual to receive the college's highest honor, the Susan Colgate Cleveland Medal for Distinguished Service.

Roger E. Kellogg proudly announces that his grandson, Jeffrey D. Lyman, has been admitted to Princeton. A graduate of the Hackley School of Tarrytown, N.Y., and an eagle scout, he was on the swimming and track teams.

Bob Erler sent us the program of the 224th annual meeting last May of the Medical Society of New Jersey. The 34th annual bestowal of its Golden Merit Award was conferred on every member who has held the degree of Doctor of Medicine for 50 years. Among those honored were doctors A. L. Baker Jr., R. E. Erler, J. T. Mason Jr., A. M. Schaeffer, A. L. Smith, and J. A. Strazza Jr.

It is with sadness that we announce additional deaths in 1990 of Peter Kerr, Feb. 9; Harry F. Bliss Jr., June 9; John A. Stikwell, June 11; Theodore B. Keer, July 6; and Francis H. Bell II and Benjamin H. Taplin, both on July 10. We now stand at 362 among the living. We have a memorial in this issue.

37

STANFORD F. MEDINA
250 Broadway, Rm. 2104
New York, NY 10007

Just to give full coverage to Ned Candee's wedding last April to Jane Morgan Bogardus in Bronxville, pictured are (l-r): Bob Edwards, the marrying parson; matron of honor Pamela Phillips; bride and groom; and best man son Hal '75.

Annual Giving telethon miscellany. Larry Applegate: at Harbor Island in the Bahamas. Bob Dumper: suffering from emphysema. Joe Harris: fishing for red fish and sea trout. Gar Lotspeich: with two hip operations. Sid Johnson had open-heart surgery two years ago, elected director of revenue and finance of Monmouth Beach. Sid Jr. has Sid III and daughters Patty Ann and Katie. Louise and Geof Stengel celebrated his 75th and her 70th birthdays at the Greenbrier last April, assisted by sons Sandy '65 and Bill '70, daughters Ellanor and Louise. No grandchildren, just spas and golf. Mac Lynch: looking for advertising revenue for his TV station. Harry Slau-son visited grandchildren in Shelter Island, fell off a ladder and broke both heels. He is still conducting his small business, trademark protection through advertising, from his home, and expects his first grandchild in December. Len Sargent: about 60 miles from Brooke Shields. Phil Nicholson celebrated his 50th wedding anniversary with Frances last July 7. He maintains the 220 lbs. he was in the Cane Spree, exercises by biking and rowing a 12-ft. aluminum boat on a lake, and is now in a retirement village, Leisure Towne in Vincentown, N.J.

We have a memorial in this issue.

38

WILLIAM P. TAMS
Box 167
Moran, WY 83013; 307-543-2396

It is now 56 years since the Class of '38 joined the Princeton family.

Continuing with news of the 52nd reunion: Attendees were Karen and John Armitage, Marty and Jack Biner, Ruth and Les Block, Paul Bradbury, Barbara and Hank Broad, Howie Brokaw, Betty and John Burke, Elenora and Ned Chambers, Madeline and Arnold Daler, Fred Field, Irma and George Frank, Kate and Hank Gardiner, Lou Gray, Jessie and Fred Henze, Bill Hoffmann, Mary and George Hogeman, Doc Kelley, Fred King, Jean and Ed Koos, Vivie and Rufe King, Mike Lazaron, Mannette and Dan Lieblich, Emily and Tom Maren, Ed McLean, Jean and Andy McLeod, George Morgan, Barbara and Jack Platten, Coogie and Charlie Powers, Lois and Charlie Reed, Connie and Bill Richardson, Ellen Holke and John Scon, Clarice and Jim Simpson, Nancy and Bud Underwood, Ginnie and Palmer Way, Chuck Williams, Cy Warner, and Maddy and Dave Wilson. It was Cy Warner's first Reunion ever (subject to audit), with hopefully more to come.

After being awarded his A.B. in chemistry in 1938, Tom Maren stayed at Princeton for another year, doing the required work for a master's in English, but leaving before receiving his degree officially to make his living as an industrial chemist. Hoping to teach a class in English literature at the Univ. of Florida Medical School this fall, he wrote to remind Princeton of his long-ago work. The English Department voted unanimously to grant him the degree, so, unbeknownst to most of the 52nd reuners, Tom stayed on for graduation, joining the younger, but no more sprightly graduates in cap and gown, with his family in proud attendance.

Early warning: Class Executive Committee meeting Friday night, Oct. 19, Harvard game next day. In memoriam: Lonnie Noofin, who died June 26.

39 RICHARD R. UNA
12 Charlotte Ct.
Briarcliff Manor, NY 10510

Ben Coates commissioned this portrait of his friend Fumi Konoe '38 and presented it to the University recently. Hanging in Jones Hall (formerly Fine) it recalls the life and special qualities of Fumi, in whose memory the Prince Fumi-taka Konoe, Class of 1938 Memorial Scholarship Program was established by Ben three years ago.

The program provides for two students from Japan, one male and one female, to study at Princeton each year. The portrait's plaque reads in part: "... champion golfer, captain of golf teams. Died in Russian prison 1956. Ambassador of good will at a time of descending darkness. This portrait and the scholarships are given in his name on behalf of the very many students who cherished him during his Princeton days by Benjamin Coates '39." Among those on Fumi's undefeated golf team in 1938 were Ed Clark, Lee Maxwell, and Trum Richards.

Last April Brud Harper was guest speaker at The Asheville School's Founders' Day Program. While on campus, he visited the gym's trophy room, where he was startled to see a handsome photo of Karl Pettit. Turns out in 1989 Karl had been recognized for an unusual honor: he still holds the school's long-jump record—set 56 years ago!

In our July 18 Reunions column, reporting the dedication of DeNunzio Pool, one sentence incorrectly named Brud Harper instead of Dick Hough. We should have said, "Hough," (not Brud), "who held six American and three world records while in college, gave a short talk." Our apologies to both.

With sorrow we record the deaths of Joe Applegate, Jim Arnold, Jack Bramball, Jack Daniel, Bob Forman, John Hanson, and John Moffat.

40 BENJAMIN FULLER
6119 Vernon Terr.
Alexandria, VA 22307; 703-329-1981

Pictured quietly carousing together at an earlier Class gathering are our newly elected President Ted Nevins and retiring President Gene Gillespie.

Friend of Mother Earth

ON SUNDAY, September 23, the New York Times, the Washington Post, and the International Herald Tribune will carry ads asking for readers to spend an hour meditating on the "divine nature and interconnectedness of everything God created." The ads are the brainchild of Paul Walsh '42, and in their focus on spiritual matters, they are a world removed from the ads for toothpaste and Annual Giving that he once penned, respectively, as an advertising copywriter for New York ad agencies and as a fundraiser for Princeton University.

Walsh is president of Fellowship in Prayer, Inc., a Princeton-based interfaith organization whose aim is to promote prayer and meditation throughout the world. Walsh, who had served on the fellowship's board for years, took over its reins in 1988, when he retired from the university's Office of Development Communications. Founded in the 1940s to heal the global and religious rifts opened by World War II, Fellowship in Prayer under Walsh's direction has picked up the banner of ecology.

Believing that the environmental movement would benefit from a unifying, spiritual vision, Walsh has organized a weekend of activities culminating in a "Worldwide Day of Prayer and Meditation to Help Heal Mother Earth" on September 23, the autumnal equinox. Members of Fellowship in Prayer in more than sixty countries will participate. Walsh has also planned a program of events in Princeton. On Saturday, September 22, Father Thomas Berry, an environmental writer and author of The Dream of the Earth, will speak at 2 P.M. in McCosh 50. The Western Wind, an a capella group, will perform in Alexander Hall that evening. At 9 A.M. on Sunday, the University Chapel will host an interfaith "deep ecology" service featuring religious leaders of many faiths in a program of "prayer, ritual, and celebration," according to Walsh.

Walsh came to his position as the head of a spiritual organization by a circuitous route. As an undergraduate, he majored in English, debated for Whig-Clio, and directed programming for WPRU, the student radio station. During his advertising career, he worked for Benton & Boles, and as director of the Compton Agency's international TV campaigns, he came up with the famous slogan for Crest toothpaste, "Look, Ma—no cavities!"

Tired of the frenetic pace of big-time advertising, he went to work for the university in 1972. The less intense lifestyle he found in Princeton allowed him to pursue his interests in Buddhism and Native American religions, subjects he began to write about for Fellowship in Prayer, the organization's magazine.

Walsh believes that scientists, legislators, and environmental activists all have key roles to play in helping to resolve Mother Earth's problems, but their efforts, he says, must be infused with a kind of faith that "celebrates the sacredness of all the universe as well as our physical and spiritual interdependence with it."

—Nuala O'Connor '89

Paul Walsh '42

PHOTO BY JOHN W. H. SIMPSON '86

Our best wishes and strong support to Ted and a huge "well done and thank you" to Gene.

Thanks and three locomotive cheers to the following for producing such a grand slam 50th Reunion: Chairman Gl Kayser, and his committee of Chiz Anderson, Buzzer Boozan, Joe Bradshaw, Barbara Ellis, Ed Farley, Ted Fryer, Gordon Griffin, George Hamid, Pat Merle-Smith, Bob Minton, Marsh Palmer, Bucky Turner, Bud Arberg and Art Schmitt for special entertainment contributions; Tom Wilcox, Jim Watkins, Bugle Morris, and others, for the leadership in making possible a 50th reunion warms up Saginaw, a 650-pound Siberian tiger, for an appearance at '44's fiftieth in 1994. Does this excel classmate Herb Hobler's addition of elephants to the P-rade during '44's fortieth? George and Saginaw live in Phoenix, Arizona.

The Tiger's Smile

GEORGE CHESTER '44

PHOTO COURTESY OF GEORGE CHESTER '44

gift to Princeton well over the $1,500,000 goal. Neil Froeb and Reg Hudson, for organizing the spectacular 1940 crew performance on Lake Carnegie; Herb Epstein, for 10 years' faithful service as Class treasurer. Welcome to your new regional V.P.s: Reg Hudson, New England; Dick Wells, N.Y. area, Gil Kayser, N.J.; Crawf Madeira and Johnny Yates, Pennsylvania/Delaware; Beau Pearre, Maryland and south; Brooks Jones, Midwest; Rube Ross and Walt Pettit, West; Bob McEldowney, Florida. The 247 classmates, along with wives and guests, present for our FABULOUS 50TH "never had a better time," and those of you not able to get back were sorely missed. Now FORWARD WITH FORTY to the next 50 years and our not so far-off 55th Reunion, with many happy Class gatherings between now and 1995.

41

BILL WILSON
Box 1420
Bridgehampton, NY 11932; 516-537-2458

That's Mary Morris Preyer Fountain being blessed by Princeton's Sen. Bill Bradley '65. Mary was born Aug. 8, 1989, and is a shoo-in for the Class of 2010. Her mother, Emily Preyer Fountain '81, and our own Rich Preyer are in attendance.

Our Class was doubly honored at Reunions this past June when Turk Thacher '66, son of our departed Jake and an honorary member of '41, was grand marshal of the P-rade and carried the Frank Gorman Memorial Mace. He wore Jake's '41 reunion jacket. A sexy female informant told us that only '41's "hard core" showed up for the festivities. Mighty fine core—hard or soft! Again we owe gratitude to Bill Pettit for masterminding our off-year reunions, and to Bill and Elizabeth for the top-drawer party they put on in their beautiful home.

Forty-six years late, Bryan Bell, down in Big Easy, received a package from the U.S. Army with nine medals and ribbons from WWII (including a Bronze Star), with a letter of apology from a Brigadier General. "Misplaced records," don't you know.

Thanks to generous classmates and to Bill Smart and his helpers for Annual Giving, '41 raised $114,009 this campaign just past. Participation was an encouraging 70%. '41 is among 32 off-year reunion classes exceeding $100,000.

It's less than nine months 'til our 50th, and our goal is to have everyone who possibly can come, be there, even if mobility isn't all that great. Barring a money shortfall, this will be a "no-fee" reunion—no "send check" return envelopes.

We have memorials in this issue.

42

ARMSTRONG HUNTER
R.R. 1, Box 250
Perkinsville, VT 05151; 802-263-5361

A State of the Class Report, now 48 years out.

The University is in touch with 475 of us. With the deaths of Hal Roser and Ross Shaw since last column, those who have left us number 192; thankfully, we are in touch with 101 wonderful women who survive them. Neither the University nor the Class is in touch with six classmates who continue to wish to receive no mail, and the nine for whom we have no current address. (Anyone with a lead on John Cusson, John DeChamplon, George Foster, Roger Fulton, Dave George, Christian Gunther, Bill Hyde, Fernando Lopez, or Dave Welsh, is urged to share it with Don Vreeland.)

In less than 21 months we celebrate 50 years out.

Our 50th Year Book (Sam Schreiner, editor) is in preparation (anyone still dilatory in sending requested data is urged to get it in) and goes to Herb Bailey for production in just four months. Plans for our 50th reunion are underway with Bill Hagenab, Bob Steinboff, Bomber Elmer, and Ben Brush in charge. Activity for our 50th Year Gift to the University has begun. Howie Armstrong, Phil Schaff, Jim McCabe, and a committee of 29 others head things here. There will be other 50th-year events of which we'll all learn as time moves on.

Many of us are retired, but many are yet in the workaday world. Most of us are reasonably healthy, but some need care. Many are great travelers; an amazing number of us play golf. We were indeed a motley crowd when we came together in 1938; as Peter Putnam has reminded us, now scattered abroad we're again a motley crowd. But as we approach The Big 50, there seems to be a drawing together more and more of the once-young, now a bit older, members of Princeton's Greatest Class. Good.

I'll end with a personal word. Attending Princeton was privilege; being in touch with members of '42 is privilege. It's a great group. I give thanks. A.H.

43

JACK LAPLIN
10 Vardon Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06117; 203-523-8929

I am pleased to begin my 13th year as your secretary on a happy, nuptial note. As detailed by Bill Dunklin: "Newton Allen and Malinda Crutchfield, a cousin of Newt's late wife, were married on June 24 in Charlotte, N.C. Newt's Princeton roommates and spouses—Jeanie and Rolo Frye, Ann and Phil Shivel, and Ethel and yours truly were on hand for the wedding. Following a mountain and beach honeymoon, they returned to their home in Memphis, Tenn." The Class joins in mass congratulations!

"Long-time-no-hear-from" Department: Bill Harvey says he enjoyed his seventh-annual month-plus holiday, mostly in Germany and Iceland, and that he's "90% retired, but just can't quit!" *Roy Zucker*man writes he's enjoying the "breezy Class Notes" and spent some time with the Van Burens this past April. Andy Todd, in Houston, reports an unusually hot summer, which seemingly began in April. Bob Richards: "On June 9, Cindy and I savored an evening of conversation with Henry Uhl, while he was in Atlanta for the member-guest golf tourney at Ansley Country Club, where his brother Bob '39 is a member."

According to Phil Connell, Nantucket Island is a summer playground for many Princetonians. He says '43ers include Bob Osmun, Norm Asber, Ed Seckel (a permanent resident), and Phil himself.

The Class extends condolences to Patsy and Ed McKeown, whose daughter Elizabeth died in her sleep Memorial Day weekend, after having fought multiple sclerosis in courageous fashion almost half her life.

44

HERVEY S. STOCKMAN
1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

This past spring, before the dog days of July and August, a gent out for a bit of health and strength in the Cape Cod dusk picked up on his quintessential headset the clear signal of N.Y.C.'s WCBS airing a real-estate feature. The subject: a couple facing retirement and what to do about the biggest asset of their life, their house. The answer came from none other than the author of Dean Witter's guide for investors, Stretch Gardiner. The big guy came on in an easy, breezy way to say: (a) sell the house, though they've loved it; (b) invest the proceeds in an income-yielding bond or mutual fund; (c) resist the temptation to take a loan to make home improvements. One wonders if other 44's on the Cape, Russ Boles, Walt Winskip, and Hunter Craig, caught that WCBS piece. Probably not. Who comes to the Cape to reach for N.Y.C. radio? Apropos Hunter, he was awarded an enormous lapel button at the final Exeter 50th dinner, "Sexiest Class of '40 Member." He loved it. Wally Schaff, from Hanford, Wash., responding to the recent revelations of radioactive pollution releases, recalls with bitter sadness one of its victims, his roommate, Jim Pentress, a lung cancer casualty in June 1987. The Exeter mob applaud John Gatch, program director at their 50th, a spectacular success, as well as for his expansive '40 class column. John married Hilda Marie Janneson of Washington, D.C. May 12, 1990.

John Ware, our Class V.P., reports 46 classmates "will" or "might" make the New Orleans Mini, April 4-7, 1991. While on minis, start your planning for the Harvard Game, Jadwin before and Maclean afterward, Oct. 20. Don Thomson has graciously accepted the onerous position of Class Agent vacated with Sandy's passing. Our finances will permit unchanged dues. Happiness, good health, good fortune and good luck in the months ahead.

We have a memorial in this issue.

45

WARREN W. HENNON
U.S. Courthouse, 915 Lafayette Blvd.
Bridgeport, CT 06604

Herewith an encore appearance of the famed 45th reunion logo, and herewith a second installment concerning that magical weekend. Musical entertainment was provided on Thursday night, as previously noted, by the inimitable Rock King. On Friday, Bill Scheerer presented the big band known as the Decades. Saturday night's music was provided by the Speakeasy Jazz Babies. The younger and more physically fit among us gyrated vigorously around the dance floor, but many were off to an early bedtime at the A.T. & T. Hopewell Conference Center.

A pleasant event of the weekend was the current Triangle review, EASY STREET, in the opinion of many the finest show that Triangle has produced in years, so classmates are advised to catch it on its national tour at the end of the year. Humorist Jean Shepard entertained addicted alumni at his 25th annual presentation in Alexander Hall.

New Class officers were installed, with appreciation expressed to Wat Stewart and the outgoing group. President is Jim Mills, backed by V.P.s Barney Barnhart, Bill Scheerer, and Charlie Towers. Holdovers are treasurer Jim Kerrigan and secretary Eginton.

Once again, kudos to hardworking Reunion Chair Shep Kimberly, aided by Phil Azoy, Barney Barnhart, Dave Frank, Tom Hartmann, Nels Hubbell, Bob Leulen, Jim Mills, Betty Sanford, Frank Schaffer, Bill Scheerer, Bill Speers, and J. B. Smith.

Space does not permit publication of the attendance roster in this column, but it will appear in the next column.

46

ROBERT CAMPBELL JR.
Investors Security Services
636 Morris Tpk., Short Hills, NJ 07078

Here is a football story. Ken Kauffel is again the best single-wing football coach in the country, and possibly the only one. After 31 seasons of coaching football in school and college, he retired in 1982 with a record of 102-52 and 7. He has now reactivated himself and is again head coach at Lawrenceville School. He comments, "The headmaster introduced me to the kids, and they thought I was talking a 'new' formation, until I showed them 1982 films of my team in action. The game has changed a lot, I guess. Years ago they used to have a little kid as quarterback so they could throw him over the line. Anyway, we're having fun with the single wing."

A few months ago Alec Pond was appointed acting president of Rutgers Univ. He was graduated with some of us in the summer of '47, took a master's and a Ph.D. in Physics at Princeton, and went on to teach at Washington Univ. and S.U.N.Y.-Stonybrook before going to Rutgers in 1982.

Harvard Game: '46ers Lunch at Jadwin Dinner at Jadwin Physics

Grant Peacock advises that he has organized a 1991 post-reunion two-week trip to Spain for 30 lucky people. The itinerary will include first-class hotels and paradors in Madrid, Avila, Toledo, Cordoba, Seville, Granada, and Malaga. Almost all meals are included, plus the round-trip airfare for approximately $3,200 per person, and $470 single person supplement. Anyone interested immediately call Grant at 203-438-8735.

Dr. Orr Elder lives with his daughter (Betsy '75) and her family in Oconomowoc, Wisc. His wife, Mary Jane, died last year following a heart operation, and Orr says he became bedridden from a stroke many years ago. Nonetheless, he enjoys a variety of cable entertainment, is an avid sports fan, and has four active grandchildren around the house to keep him company.

We have memorials in this issue.

47

ARA BURNELL
Box 7034
Tucson, AZ 85725; 602-741-4715

As we turn the corner from summer into fall—with the hope that the recent R. & R. season resulted in enjoyment for all—let's take another look back at spring's climax: '47's Fabulous 43rd Reunion. And who better to feature than management consultant Bill Jackson, who spent much time consulting with off-year chairman Charlie Metter about managing a major? Bill will head up our 45th, less than 21 months from now!

A heartfelt June letter to the VALLEY NEWS in Vermont from Abbie and John Gregson of Quechee, praised seat belts and compassionate passers-by for saving them from severe injuries and possible death in an auto accident that demolished their car. John wrote, in part: "At 4 P.M. on a clear afternoon, while driving west on I-89 at 65 M.P.H., I fell asleep for an instant... Totally out of control, the car hit the guard rail, destroying stanchions, rocking, spinning and nearly tipping over until finally coming to a screeching stop in the middle of the highway."

Several communiques from Else and John Ausland in Oslo indicate that 1990 has been an upbeat year to date. Despite the current "economic squeeze" in Norway, Else seems to be running her two pharmacies "quite well." John still contributes occasional articles to the INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE, though he has broadened his scope of subjects to include computing. On a July trip to Moscow, where they stayed near the Kremlin and

Princeton Clubs and Associations

PAA OF DALLAS: Sun., Sept. 30—Princeton vs. S.M.U. women's soccer; pre- and post-game activities. Gametime 1:00. For further info., please call Shirley Lake '83 at 214-691-6617 (h) or 214-661-8100 (b).
PAA OF WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA: Thurs., Oct. 11—President Harold T. Shapiro '64 will speak at the annual dinner. For further details, call Steve Olson '70 at 412-355-6496 (b).

PC OF PHILADELPHIA: Tues., Oct. 23—President Harold T. Shapiro '64 will speak at the annual dinner. For further details, call Andrea Micek at 215-884-9288.

PAA OF SOUTHERN NY AND NORTHERN PA: Sat., Sept. 15—Reception following the Princeton-Cornell football game under Princeton canopy next to the stadium. For info., call Stan Panosian '61 at 607-733-3302 (b).

PAA OF CENTRAL NY: Sat., Sept. 29—Tailgate prior to the Princeton-Colgate football game in Hamilton, 11 A.M.—1 P.M. For info., please contact Jim Griffith '76 at 315-724-8104 (b) or 315-339-6578 (h). Please submit notices for this column eight weeks in advance to Elizabeth Hunt, Alumni Council, Maclean House, Princeton Univ., Princeton, NJ 08544.

Red Square, the Auslands got in line to visit Lenin's tomb but skipped a longer one to the newly opened McDonald's.

We are saddened to report that Dick Dietze died June 29, three weeks after attending the 43rd. A memorial will follow.

48

DAVID K. FENNIE
106 Snowden Ln.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3340

Dispatches from Scandinavia indicate that the '48 contingent was dignified, alert, attentive, and had a simply marvelous time. Ellie and Bob Meyer made flawless arrangements and subsequent trips are already on the drawing boards.

The next scheduled gathering is Oct. 20 after the Harvard game. It will be Dutch-treat at Springdale Golf Club. Those coming from afar would be well advised to pick up a copy of Anne Rivers Siddons' new novel, KINGS OAK, for plane/train reading. It is set in the deep South's wealthy, beautiful fox-hunting country and has to do with star-crossed lovers.

Leukemia Fighter

Herb Strauss '51 and singer Judy Collins.

PHOTO COURTESY OF THE LAURI STRAUSS LEUKEMIA FUND.

SIX YEARS AGO, Evelyn and Herb Strauss '51 lost their twenty-six-year-old daughter Lauri to leukemia. In her memory, the Strausses established the Lauri Strauss Leukemia Foundation, which is dedicated to advancing research toward a cure for this disease. The foundation awarded its first major research grants in 1989, to the Long Island Jewish Medical Center and the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center. Among the recipients of this year's grants is Princeton's valedictorian, Loren D. Walensky '90. The award allows Walensky to continue his clinical research on a promising anticancer drug under the guidance of Edward C. Taylor, the Barton Hepburn Professor of Organic Chemistry.

The foundation also sponsors a lecture series at Sloan-Kettering and an annual benefit concert. Last year's concert, held at New York's Lincoln Center and featuring Judy Collins, raised more than $50,000 and was made into a televised special, "Judy Collins—From the Heart." Collins later joined the foundation's board and will host this year's concert, on Friday, September 14 at Lincoln Center. The concert will have a Broadway theme, and among the scheduled performers are Robert Merrill, Maureen McGovern, Charles Strouse (the composer of Annie), Sheldon Harnick (Fiddler on the Roof), and jazz pianist Dick Hyman. Tickets are available from Lincoln Center. Additional information on the Lauri Strauss Leukemia Foundation, Inc., is available from its offices, at 30 Park Avenue, Suite 11F, New York, NY 10016.

Remember PEACHTREE ROAD, a best seller; Anne has outdone even herself. We don't recommend that Charles Hood read enroute—at least if he flies the plane. Charles suspects he is among the oldest to get a pilot's license, a lifelong ambition just accomplished.

Don Maggitt's BANKERS, BUILDERS, KNAVES AND THIEVES, a story of low morals and high finance, success and suicide, has been doing very well. It is the story of E.S.M., an obscure Florida broker of U.S. government bonds, and the largest-ever securities fraud. Don paints one chapter of the S. & L. debacle with horrifying clarity, and will follow with another book on the whole S. & L. mess. Don does not limit his interests to high finance and low scams. He has been involved with the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, Mt. Sinai Medical Center and the American Jazz Orchestra.

The Class is saddened to learn of the death of John Pribronic on May 17, 1990.

49

ALVIN R. KNAGHT
Limerick Lane Poetryworks®, 5 Birch Ln.
Chappaqua, NY 10514; 914-238-0352

Welcome back! Hope you had a great summer. My IN box is loaded with news, so let's get right to it. Rev. John Bright writes: "Retired after 34 years as an Episcopal priest in order to stop paying both ends of Social Security, and to give someone else a chance to have as much fun as I. I'll help out if I'm wanted, but there is no shortage of other retired windbags ahead of me. Sandra and I are remodeling old houses, thereby reversing the chronology of my Master, who started out as a carpenter and then went to preaching. I've moved back to Portland, Ore., where I have family and old friends."

Dr. Don Wysbam tells us: "Have returned to Christian Medical College, Ludhiana, Punjab, India, for three years to help as cardiology consultant. The college is getting a new Siemens cardiac cath unit, and hope to get coronary arteriography and cardiac bypass surgery off the ground. Dorie and I see many changes since 1968, but feel challenged by opportunities. Extra bedrooms—would welcome visitors."

Sam Hill has made a spectacular recovery from the metastasized cancer of the neck that hit him in July 1988. He has compiled a lengthy account of all symptoms, operations, treatment, and reactions he endured—along with his and his church community prayer activity throughout—which may be supportive to anyone faced with the same grim challenge. Sam tells us he's still working hard as an attorney, and he and Betty are enjoying the beach and their nine grandchildren. Their address is 214 Longwood Rd., Baltimore, MD 21210.

Over the summer we have received word of the death of three classmates. We sadly report that Al Burr passed away on January 27, Tom Bissett on June 1, and Harry "Bud" Fleming on June 13. Class memorials to each will appear in upcoming issues.

REMINDER: '49 Class Luncheons. First Thursday of each month, Princeton Club of N.Y. Check with Class V.P. Tony Widmann, 212-683-3700.

50

PETE BUCHANAN
151 West St.
Beverly Farms, MA 01915; 508-922-1650

Your alternate secretary is delighted to be back on the watch. Picking up where Sid Fox left off with Reunions, it should be recorded that the Class was well represented in the alumni-faculty forums. Dave Billington, who received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree from Union College this spring, led off Thursday with the "New Art of Structural Engineering." Friday Sam Howell and Joel Nixon both loaned their unique perspectives (associate director of Princeton athletics and V.P. of the N.H.L., respectively) to the forum entitled: "The Mess of Intercollegiate Athletics and How to Clean It Up." Hank Bird participated in "America, Home of the Free, Brave, and Homeless," and Ed Jones in "Art vs. God and the First Amendment." Also on Friday afternoon Jim Billington followed up his morning presentation to the Class by appearing in "The Electronic Erosion of Democracy." On Saturday many classmates with staying power went to hear Paul Ingersoll on "Art and the Collector."

John Stratton received recognition as a former editor of the PRINCETON ENGINEER, on its 50th anniversary, while Bob Cronheim, our new president, was accorded accolades by the many classmates who stayed at, and ate brunch at, his newly renovated Palmer Inn on Route One.

Among those who couldn't be on hand, Steve Post, currently in private psychoanalytic practice and teaching at St. Louis Medical School, had a family wedding in Seattle. Even further away, Chuck Mosmann was fulfilling a commitment to teach at the School of Management of Fudan Univ. in Shanghai. Weddings of children claimed the attention and energies of Babe Clarkson and Bo Kelly, while Baird Atwood also reported a conflicting major family event. Tony Hutchins' absence revolved around his own wedding, as he was at the Harvard commencement of his future stepson. Tony was married on Bastille Day to Kathleen Cherot.

51

RICHARD K. PAYNTER
49 Wilson Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-921-8720

Charlie Ganoe is indefatigable. He is ever training for another marathon. In May he ran in the one in London and finished in the very respectable time of 4:55. The time in the picture (Charlie's arm is upraised) is inaccurate. "My actual time from starting line to finish was 4:55—large crowds and deep puddles" cost Charlie 11 minutes to reach the line. He is at this very moment training for the Berlin Marathon in September. "This is one of the world's major marathons. It will be very big this year—it covers both East and West Berlin for the first time."

Annual Giving chairman Bill Brown and his cohorts did another outstanding job this past year. Class participation (66.1%) was the second-highest off-year percentage in the '50s; ditto the total of $197,688. The Class of '50 raised $1,268,943 at its 40th. We will top that.

Chick Deyo sends a clipping announcing Wally Kain's intention to run for a seat on the Sanibel (Fla.) city council in November. Wally is president of Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife, in addition to his deep interest in painting, photography, and environmental projects in the area.

David Williamson retired from NASA last February "after over 30 years—intend to enjoy it."

According to Forbes, a major reason for the success of Jack Bogle's stable of mutual funds in the Vanguard Group is low management costs. He also has a genius for picking outstanding managers.

The Class will have cocktails and dinner at Woodrow Wilson after the Harvard game, Oct. 20.

Sad news. Ira Rosenstein's widow, Pat, died this summer as did Peter Fleming's wife, Jane. Two vibrant ladies whose loss diminishes the Class.

52 Don O'Connor
4630 30th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20008

'52's FOREIGN AFFAIRS FORUM Oct. 13—Princeton—Join us!

Led by John Emery, once again the Class led all other off-year classes in A.G. The total was $247,862.

Larry McNichols was presented the highest individual public service citation of Omaha's Rotary Clubs at a recent banquet. Larry is president of Century III Advertising Inc., and was cited for his many civic, charitable, and professional activities.

Biddle Worthington was elected to the board of governors of the American Stock Exchange.

Bob Griffin is president of the California Mortgage Bankers Assn. this year. In the rest of his time, he is vice chairman of Crossland Mortgage Co.

Among our many other distinctions, we are probably the first class to boast of Our Man on Alcatraz. Since his retirement from the Postal Service, Jim Rockwell has been working as a National Park Ranger on the big rock. Jim originally planned on following the call of the wilds, but finds he likes the crowds—one million tourists annually.

Reinhard Loosch has been having a busy time helping to integrate East Germany into the West. He's been working out of Berlin quite a bit and will have many memorable tales to tell. John Sharpe recently celebrated the arrival of his third grandchild, Joshua, son of John's daughter, Betsey.

Bud Gillette's son, Christopher, heads the Reuter VisNews bureau in Hong Kong, and has been traveling to such spots as Ulan Bator, Mongolia. Another visitor there was Jim Baker.

With great regret I report the loss of Jim Marvin on Feb. 13, and Mort Meyer on July 21, both to cancer.

53 Patricia J. Lombar
Box 18
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

We recently received word from Hugh Richardson reporting on the activities of Russ Pickering. According to Hugh, Russ went to Texas six years ago seeking fame and fortune. He is shown here in a picture entitled "IN SEARCH OF BLACK GOLD—Warrior with Chariot, circa '84," which shows him wearing shades, a dude's hat, brown-and-white wingtips, clunky cufflinks, holding a cigar, standing in front of his Chrysler Imperial and oil rig. He apparently was successful in his quest, as the "warrior" is now back in D.C., where he has opened an office for Torch Energy Advisors.

It's been some time since we've heard from Bill Bancroft. He writes that he has retired after five years as V.P. of the Thoroughbred Owners and Breeders Association. Despite the retirement, he and brother Tom '51 are still active in the business and currently have eleven horses in training. He urges Jimmy Burst to contact him promptly if he wants to buy a good horse "cheap."

Class Cocktail Party After Harvard Game Oct. 20 Fine Tower

Mrs. John Kelly, W '36, was kind enough to send news of George Ives. George, the former president of Ives Oil Company and Ives Transport in New Bern, N.C., has been appointed director of finance and business of the North Carolina Symphony. George's latest venture continues a long personal commitment to community service in his native North Carolina.

54 Dick Stevens
1 Valley Sq., Ste. 101
Blue Bell, PA 19422

As Lou would say, "WELCOME BACK." Now that the suntan lotion has been put away and the supply of tonic water is exhausted, we can get back to the serious matter of "telling it like it is" for the great Class of '54. The Class has come through the summer unscathed and enriched, with our workers working, our travelers traveling, and our authors writing. Yes, Yogi, it's deja vu all over again...

As all history majors know, Lucius Clay did for West Germany what General Douglas MacArthur did for Japan albeit with a lot less publicity. Now you can read all about it in a masterful biography, LUCIUS D. CLAY: AN AMERICAN LIFE, by our own Jean Smith. If it had not been for Clay insisting on the Berlin airlift, we would have cut and run, says Jean. This was the critical turning point in post WWII European history, which is very much in the news today. On the personal side, Jean is a professor of political science at the Univ. of Toronto. His daughter Sonja '86 is an Army first lt. in Augsburg (sound familiar?) and his son Christopher, U.S.N.A. '89 is a Navy pilot in Pensacola. Read the book... it's a winner. Dick Leslie ran the L.A. marathon in 3:42 with his wife Nancy close behind at 4:12 and reports, "too many Girl Scout cookies the preceding week." Tony Maruca's son Mike was ordained in the Jesuit priesthood in Baltimore.

"Hizzonor," Bill Hudnut, is running for secretary of state in Indiana. Guess what? One of his key volunteers is Alan Wheliban's youngest daughter (of four), Jackie. Let's see—classmates helping classmates, families helping classmates—do the math—it's an incredible support system.

Scott Parry just purchased Grover's Mill, the 250-year-old grist mill (four miles from McCosh 10) where Orson Wells had Martians landing in his classic "War of the Worlds" radio program on Halloween 1938. Scott's forte is training and management development. He has a client list of Fortune 500 companies as long as your arm. If you want a good scare, call the training house 609-452-1505 and pretend you can hear the creatures invading.

55 Mark Romans
40 E. 88th St.
New York, NY 10128; 212-722-7447

Class Party after the Harvard Game Oct. 20

When the stock market reached its all-time high on July 16, 1990, the WALL STREET JOURNAL heralded the event with this headline. 1955 always makes peaks!

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL TUESDAY, JULY 17, 1990

Industrials Climbed 19.55 to 2999.75 On Strength of Earnings Reports

The Class's final figures for Annual Giving show that an astounding $1,053,042 was raised through the Herculean efforts of Class Agent Tom Boyatt and Special Gifts Chairman Gordon Douglas. An extraordinary tip of the hat to both. Our participation in the alumni-faculty forums in June was greater by a factor of 100% than was boasted about in our Reunions column. The complete list of speakers is: Win Adkins, Fred Almgren, Asbok Bbaunant, Ed Cervone, Tom Graham, Bob Hollander, Peter Lewis, Jim Macalester, Scott McVay, Ralph Nader, Dick Turner, and Gene Wong.

Gerry Rosen is the author of A NEW SCIENCE OF STOCK MARKET INVESTING, which was published by Harper and Row. Gerry, an internationally prominent theoretical physicist who specializes in the mathematical description of nonlinear dynamic systems such as the stock market, outlines a scientifically sound and truly useful technique for consistently achieving higher returns in bull markets and preserving investment capital in bear markets.

It is with deep sorrow that we record the loss of classmates Ed Stabel, on July 20, of a heart attack; Chet "Lin" French, on July 21, of throat cancer; and George "Chip" Parks, on Aug. 11, in a scuba-diving accident.

56 David M. Jordan
410 Rodman Ave.
Jenkintown, PA 19048

LOOSENING TIES: Pete Willauer reports that he has left the Hurricane Island Outward Bound School in Maine after 25 years. He and Betty sailed to Grenada and back to Maine in their 28-year-old wooden boat before Pete settled down to serious job hunting. Dave Smith has rejoined the single ranks after 30 years of marriage; his work at DuPont, he says, "is still interesting and challenging."

BEGINNINGS: Al Berlind and Andriana Ierodiakonou were married in December. Andriana is a poet/foreign correspondent who is currently advising President Vassiliou of Cyprus on press and other matters. Al writes, "Cyprus continues to charm, but the Turkish occupation casts a pall," and advises that his daughter Marika will enter Princeton with the Class of 1994. Tedd Thomas is out of consulting and back into operational business, off to Minneapolis to head up F.M.G., Inc., the good people who bring us products like Vitabath, Claire Burke Home Fragrances, and Foltene (for thinning hair).

Ed Rothenberg was promoted recently to associate medical director in charge of Pacific Bell's disability assistance program ("trading a white coat for a flak jacket," Ed says), and John D'Arms was named vice provost for academic affairs at the Univ. of Michigan, a job he takes on while continuing as dean of the graduate school.

Bob Schleb attended his 30th reunion of the Stanford Law Class of 1959 last fall and was disappointed to note that Jerry Kurtz didn't make it down from Alaska for the occasion.

We were saddened to learn of the death on June 19 of Ed Coffey. The summer after graduation we worked with Ed as dishwashers at Hogate's Restaurant in Ocean City, N.J., before Ed went on to a distinguished career in pathology. A memorial will follow.

57

JACK SCHLEB
Box 6177, Yorkville Station
New York, NY 10128; 212-427-3575 (H)

Bob Adams' daughter Jenny '81: "Having heard the threat of rain, Dad had several Princeton umbrellas Fed-Exed to the house on the eve of my very rainy wedding day. We hope we won't need them again this month when he escorts my sister, Chrissie '87, to the altar one year to the day of my wedding. Among the guests at my reception were Ted Foot and Miles Siefert, Bob's Princeton roommates and ushers in his wedding."

John Wiley & Sons, a publisher of textbooks and educational and scientific journals, has named Charles R. Ellis its president and C.E.O. He was most recently president of the American unit of Elsevier, a Dutch publisher and Wiley competitor. Ellis worked in England for most of the 1970s, as managing director for Robert Maxwell's Pergamon Press.

Tigers on the Air

THREE PRINCETON football games will be broadcast over a national radio network this year. The new Ivy League Football Network—a joint venture between Koor Communications, Inc., of New London, New Hampshire, and the Council of Ivy Group Presidents—will broadcast ten Ivy games, including Princeton contests against Cornell (September 15), Fordham (September 22), and Brown (October 6). The broadcasts begin at 12:30 E.S.T. and will be carried on the following affiliates: KAIM Honolulu (AM 870); KENI Anchorage (AM 550); KLAS Las Vegas (AM 1230); WEEP Pittsburgh (AM 1080); WMET Gaithersburg, Md. (AM 1150); WTAN Clearwater, Fla. (AM 1340); WFAS White Plains, N.Y. (AM 1230); WCAP Lowell, Mass. (AM 980); WNTK New London, N.H. (AM 1020); WKDR Burlington, Vt. (AM 1070); WKRI Warwick, R.I. (AM 1450); and WNRI Woonsocket, R.I. (AM 1380).

ESPN will televise the Yale game on November 10 at 12:30 P.M.

The Florida Academy of Sciences named Martin A. Uman, professor of electrical engineering at the Univ. of Florida, the Florida Scientist of the Year 1990. Uman was also recently named Univ. of Florida Teacher-Scholar of the Year, the highest faculty award. He is director of the Univ. of Florida Lighting Research Laboratory.

Anibony S. Abbott's book of poems, THE GIRL IN THE YELLOW RAINCOAT (St. Andrews Press), has been nominated for the Pulitzer Prize.

Gregory Farrell, executive director of the Fund for the City of New York for 20 years, left that post June 1 to move into new spheres.

58

RALPH L. DeGROFF
7 Grace Sq.
New York, NY 10028

Welcome back! I hope that everyone had a very pleasant summer. John Boatwright was featured in the May 7 Charlotte Observer for his business success and for his contributions to the community. "I have never heard anyone say anything bad about the man," says another businessman. "Listening well is not enough. You have to dig deeper. You have to find out what the premise is, what the person accepts on faith." His analytical and humble approach has won John friends and his leadership position as president of N.C.N.B. Corp.'s North Carolina bank, with responsibility for consumer banking in the Carolinas and Florida. A devoted community-minded citizen, he is head of the Charlotte Uptown Development Corp., a group dedicated to improving the central city. He also heads the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Housing Partnership, a public-private effort to house the poor. "Boatwright brushes off suggestions of his sainthood, saying that for any banker, civic service is motivated by altruism and a business need to be in touch with a community's movers and shakers." He does, however, subscribe to the adage, "The greatest thing is to plant a shade tree under which you'll never sit."

John Saubill was recently elected a member of the board of directors of Nacco Industries, a forklift-truck producer and consumer products and mining concern headquartered in Cleveland. John was also pictured and featured in the CHRONICLE OF PHILANTHROPY, in an article about the recruitment of corporate managers for the nonprofit sector. When he left McKinsey and Co. to become president of The Nature Conservancy, John, who took a 90% cut in salary, was quoted, "You feel as though you're accomplishing something very important for mankind, which is harder to find in the profit sector."

PRINCETON-HARVARD GAME—OCT. 20: Join your classmates on the upper porch of Cap & Gown at 11 A.M. with your picnic lunch and refreshments.

59

JAY M. SORREL
11321 Rolling House Rd.
Rockville, MD 20852

Thirty-five years ago, almost to the day, 782 of us gathered in Alexander Hall to hear President Harold W. Dodds welcome us to Princeton. Today we number 739. In June 1994 we will celebrate our 35th reunion. Let's all be there!

John Lemp was quick to wrest the "most grandchildren" crown from Malcolm Matbeson, weighing in with a total of five. John also claims three other titles: longest marriage (35 years); oldest child (John III, born Mar. 22, 1956); and first child born after graduation (Carl, born Dec. 6, 1959).

A couple of years ago the common-stock fund at Princeton Bank & Trust Co. outperformed only 23% of its competition. Today it outperforms 98%. The secret: Frank Lane, who took over as investment officer in Feb. 1988. Frank's inside tip for his classmates: "The 1990s will be a period of getting back-to-basics in the selection of stocks."

Bob Burt has been named president of the F.M.C. Corp., a Chicago-based chemical producer and maker of military equipment. Joe DeDeo became president and C.E.O. of Young & Rubicam Advertising Worldwide in March 1990. Bob Manfuso has announced his withdrawal from active management of the Laurel and Pimlico race courses, and plans to relax at Chanceland Farm, his new residence-thoroughbred farm in Maryland.

The Class of 1959 set a new off-year Annual Giving record for itself, finishing with a total of $162,098. Bob Litell led sectional participation with 72% in the N.Y.C. area. Thanks to all who participated, and an invitation to "come aboard" this year to those who didn't.

ON THE GO: Sid Morgan, from La Jolla, Calif., to Aliso Viejo, Calif.

The Class joins with Arv Anderson in mourning the loss of his wife, Polly, who died of leukemia in Dec. 1989, and with David Hoopes, whose wife, Abby, was killed on July 11, 1990, in an airplane accident while on a photographic safari in Africa.

60

MASON LOWANCE
100 Lincoln Ave.
Amherst, MA 01002

The 30th reunion was a splendid affair, with some 185 classmates attending. Parker Harrell has done a remarkable job as president, expanding such functions as the annual Class dinner on Alumni Day. Thanks to all the outgoing officers, particularly Jeff Brown, who did not miss a column in five years and will be a very hard act to follow. Not only can he draw and design: he also writes extremely well! The new Class officers are Terry McCray, President; Stan Dees, V.P.; Evan Busb, treasurer, and your scribe. It is hard to believe that our next major reunion will be the 35th!

The Newberry Library has provided a summer of research opportunity and classmates in Chicago have been most hospitable. Richard Brennan is general counsel for Continental Illinois Bank, and his son, Joseph, a second-year law student, is interning at Bell, Boyd, and Lloyd in Chicago, where Cam Avery is a partner and member of the firm's executive committee. Cam is also vice chairman of the Ravinia Festival committee, where the Chicago Symphony Orchestra performs for the summer months, just as the B.S.O. heads for Tanglewood and the Berkshires. We have enjoyed several evenings under the stars out there. John McCarter commutes from a lovely home in Northfield to his offices at Booz, Allen, and Hamilton, which are in the same building as Cam's law firm. John is also chairman of the local PBS affiliate, as previously reported. Jim McCarter '89, is an M.D./Ph.D. candidate at Washington Univ. Medical School, and was a varsity rower in college. Cam's daughter, Joanne, will enter Princeton with the Class of 1994. Charlie Barber is a professor of history at Northeastern Illinois Univ. in Chicago, and he is also an accomplished jazz and blues singer, as many will recall from the reunion performances in June. We spent a superb evening at the Railroad Inn, where a dixieland quintet backed Charlie on such Fats Waller numbers as "Ain't Misbehavin'" and "Mean to Me." Pictures of all these to follow.

61

GEORGE BRACKLEY III
98 Winfield Ln.
New Canaan, CT 06840

To start off the new year, here's a shot from our 29th, showing Prexy Iseman and Stu Patrick toting our banner in the P-rade, with Stanger, Kornrumpf, Scasserra, and Hunter following close behind.

Peter Frame is prof. of medicine at Univ. Hospital in Cincinnati, where he heads up the AIDS program. Daughter Diane is a junior at Washington Univ. in St. Louis, where she's a Phi Beta Kappa and Mortar Board scholar, according to a note from Peter's wife Betsy. Also in Cincinnati, Steve Dana is teaching history at Xavier, Northern Kentucky and Cincinnati, returning to what he'd done in the 1960s, after publishing in the 1970s and fundraising in the 1980s. Damon Runyon reveals the scary fact that he was a passenger on Aloha Airlines flight 243 two years ago when the fuselage came apart. "No lasting effects except for a 'saber scar' on my forehead," he says. (Are you listening, plastic surgeon Jay Keyser!). Col. Eric Doren, U.S.A.F. (Ret.), is the new V.P. for University Relations at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical Univ. in Daytona, having served earlier as chancellor.

Jack Barsbay is chairman of the Department of Mathematics of the City College, City Univ. of New York, having taught there since 1972. Daughter Berna is a junior at Princeton. Jack notes, "We've enjoyed our recent visits to Princeton, which certainly seems a happier, healthier environment than the one I remember. Three cheers for coeducation."

62 Eric W. Johnson
2221 Craigo Ct.
Vienna, VA 22182; 703-280-9080

Welcome to another academic year. Hope every one of you had a great summer.

The Dec. 5, 1989 St. Louis POST-DISPATCH reported that Hal Kroeger Jr. sold the company he founded in 1965, Distribix Inc., to Paper Corp. of America, a subsidiary of Alco Standard Corp. of Valley Forge, Penn. Distribix, with annual revenue of $200 million, has nine facilities in the central U.S. Hal comments, "The business was growing and I found myself less able to pursue things that are of personal interest to me. I'm really taking a breather."

The WALL STREET JOURNAL, in an article dated the same day, reported that John Mendelson, one of Wall Street's best-known gurus and head of market analysis at Dean Witter until last September, would become exclusive consultant to C.I. Global Partners Securities Corp., the U.S. investment-banking arm of France's Credit Lyonnais. INSTITUTIONAL INVESTOR magazine has listed John as a member of its "All-American Research Team" for 13 consecutive years from 1977 to 1989.

Ab Lawrence's wife Ann caught a world-record 170-lb. halibut in Aug. 1989 in Elfin Cove, Alas. "She was five-and-a-half-months pregnant at the time." On Nov. 14 she gave birth to E. Abbott Lawrence IV, "our first son, who appears to be future Cannon Club material, if Weed Crane's grandiose plans for Cannon materialize."

Forde Medind's wife Kate, with Random House, edited Nancy Reagan's book My Turn, Michener's CARIBBEAN and Peter Benchley's next book.

Cartier Patten's daughter Ashlee '90 was co-captain of women's crew, the team that had an undefeated first boat and which won the National Championship in Madison, Wisc. this spring.

Kenneth A. Mills died June 2 after an extensive battle with M.S. and, near the end, cancer.

63 SILSON S. EDWARDS
Elgin Academy, 350 Park St.
Elgin, IL 60120

For those of us who are facing the ambivalent joys of empty or soon-to-be-empty nests, there comes the delightful and somewhat terrifying reminder that some classmates are still building families. Harvard Freshman Dean Hank Moses and his wife, Missy, announce from Cambridge, Mass., the arrival of William Frederick Moses Holland May 25.

Bill Merlino has something to brag about: his oldest child, Tjede, a sophomore at Wellesley, last year was rookie of the year on the varsity soccer team and qualified for the Division III national championships in diving. His youngest, Heidi, was one of the top scorers on the high school soccer team that went to the N.Y. state championships. Dexter Peacock is chairman of the management committee of Andrews and Kurth, a Houston law firm.

Mike McBride has been in Hong Kong since June 1989, working at the American consulate. Wife Lee and daughter Meg (16) are with him, while daughter Kerry is working with the State Department in Washington, D.C. Dave Long reports, "Have moved out of the investment counseling business which I owned and worked for since 1969. Am now providing general financial consulting for individuals in my new company, David M. Long, Ltd." Hilton Smith, Duffy Hughes, Bill Lucas, Randy Revelle, and Steve Crane got together again for their third biannual Memorial Day cruise through the San Juan Islands in Washington. Hilton's son Dan was a nationally ranked rower and heavily recruited last year by colleges. He chose the Naval Academy, where he is now in his first year. Randy's daughter Lisa entered Princeton this fall as a freshman, as did Jim Mitchell's son David.

64 JOTHAN JOHNSON
Box 12
Blawenburgh, NJ 08504

It's a summer to remember for Nat Floyd who was married on June 23 in N.Y.C. to Mary Joan Hoene of Boise, Ida., an attorney with PaineWebber in the city. On hand to cheer on the happy couple were George Rudolph '63, John Mayo, John Bradley, Dick Purkiss, Jo Johnson, Mike Greco '65, Sam Abernathy '65, Dick Chandler and Bill Birch.

A forthcoming book purports to offer new evidence that could free Jeffrey MacDonald '65, the Green Beret doctor convicted in 1979 of killing his wife and daughters. The controversial case became more widely known after the publication in 1983 of Joe McGinniss's best-selling book FATAL VISION. Harvey Silverglate, MacDonald's attorney, will soon ask the U.S. District Court in Raleigh, N.C., to give MacDonald a new trial.

Dick Springs is planning to expand his cattle ranch in eastern Oregon and perhaps turn it into a Princeton ranch. According to Bill Purcell, a number of classmates have indicated a desire to purchase $15,000 "units" in the venture. If you'd like more information, give Dick (503-339-3772) or Bill (212-906-7344) a call.

The CHEERLEADERS are back and Amy Gordiner '92 is among them. They'll be gallivanting along the sidelines during the Harvard game on October 20th and will, we hope, stop by the Class reception after the game. Join us on October 20 if you can, and circle April 11-14, 1991 on your calendar for the 1964 mini-reunion in New Orleans.

65 J. MICHAEL PARISH
Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts
1 Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004

If the physiognomies (although not the hairstyles) in the accompanying photo look familiar, that's because they belong to Holly (daughter of Tom) Holzer '92, Christine (V.Z.) Williams '92, Sara (Rick)

Thielbar '93 and Diana (Mike) Clifford '91, four members of this last season's women's crew. Beth Holzer '94 will be joining this ensemble about the time you read this, if not before, and Emily (Jim) Moren '93 is also part of the current scene. Scott Hill reports that his son Charles is in the Class of '93, so if he hasn't made useful connections in this area up until now, he can use this column as a lead.

Ebullient notes about what a great time was had by all at the 25th reunion have issued from Norm Bensley, Steve Gabbe, Paul Gottlieb, John McIlwain, Bill Sherrill, Bob Taylor, and Rockwell Townsend. Rocky made the most of the occasion by running in the alumni track meet and turning in a 64-second quarter-mile. He notes for the record that Tony Nuland finished in a very respectable 67 seconds, although if you talk to Tony he will emphasize the fact that he pulled it out just ahead of Rocky in the 100 yard dash at the same meet.

Our final Annual Giving total made us the first class in University history to top the $3-million mark, thanks to John Diekmann, Jim Pearce, Don Roth, and many others. We have much to be proud of, much to be thankful for, and much to look forward to. Another year begins.

66 JEFFREY M. McCOLLUM, A.T.&T. Products
5 Wood Hollow Rd., Rm. 1J19
Parsippany, NJ 07054

Think back 25 years ago—Sept. 1965. Princeton was preparing to play Rutgers. For most of us the senior thesis was still an idea waiting to be developed. For many, the reality of being a Princeton senior was a little daunting. Who were you with then? Get in touch with them and plan to share our 25th reunion June 6-9, 1991, together.

"Who," you might ask, "Is that tall gentleman with Lanny Jones?" Earlier this year, as part of his editorial responsibilities at PEOPLE Magazine, Lanny and PEOPLE's Washington Bureau Chief, Maria Wilhelm, had an opportunity to interview President Bush. The accompanying photo is proof positive of the Class of '66's deep penetration of the White House.

UPPING THE ANTE: The books are closed on Annual Giving 1990. The Class of '66 was one of 32 classes to reach the $100,000 level as 439 of us ($8.796) contributed $145,753. The 25th-year class, 1965, exceeded $3 million. We will be expected to top their total of $3,085,101. Plan to dig as deeply as you can.

Jim Merritt, Jim Parmenier, and others are working hard on the 25th reunion book and have received biographies from nearly 60 of us. Those who have yet to respond—get going! We need your biographies now if they are to make it into the book, which is scheduled to go to the press at the end of this year. Call Jim Merritt at 609-258-4931 if you have misplaced your biographical form and need another. Lanny Jones will be mailing you a questionnaire for the confidential class poll later this month. The results of the poll will also be included in the reunion book, so it's important that you fill out the questionnaire as quickly as possible.

67

Peter J. Tunson
6503 Massfield St.
Worthington, OH 43085

Thanks to honorary classmate Sally Price, we have this official sighting of attendees at our 23rd reunion: Adamson, Bassett, Bltner, Blumenbub, Bowen, Brace, Bremer, Buck, Code, Cummins, Esber, Field, Foster, Gessel, Hummer, Huyler, Johnston, Kelbaugh, Kelemen, Liddell, Losey, Maxson, Parl, Paternotte, Price, Ronca, Staker, Strasburger, Todd, Torkelsen, T. Tulenko, Turner, B. Wood, J. Wood, Woodward, Wyatt. Festivities included dinner at Prospect House, put on by John Torkelsen, the Class song ("67...Made in Heaven") by Gus Esher, and dancing at the '65 reunion site.

This photo was sent by William H. Congleton '42 as part of the 1990 award materials from the New England Region Anti-Defamation League dinner honoring Steven and Barbara Grossman for distinguished community service. Barbara and Steven have three sons: David, Benjamin, and Joshua.

Frank Upbam, who is now a law professor at Boston College, was in Wuhan, P.R.C., doing research on Chinese economic and legal reforms when he was caught up, during the Tianamen massacre, and involved in organizing a State Dept. evacuation flight to Hong Kong. One of the largest groups of Americans near Wuhan was Princeton-in-Asia, with whom Frank spent two years in Taiwan.

Jay Bramhall writes to suggest that any classmates "looking for some fine technical talent" should contact him. Jake (Moose) Bramhall '90 just graduated—in mechanical engineering.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO: Egypt and Saudis agree to end Yemen war. Indians battle Pakistanis in Kashmir. Violence in Dominican Republic marks return of exiled Pres. Juan Bosch. U.S. government gives Lockheed $2-billion defense contract. Bob Dylan ("The Times they are a-Changin'") booed at Newport Folk Festival. Top song: Beatles' "Help!"

Editor's Note: The pictures accompanying the classes of 1967 and 1968 columns in the July 18 issue were reversed. PAW regrets the error.

68

Jon Kurnik
Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour St.
Hartford, CT 06115; FAX 203-524-7057

MEMORANDUM

TO: The Class
FROM: Regan Kerney, Reunion Chairman
DATE: June 1990
SUBJECT: Who was at the 22nd?

The following registered and came to dinner: Kalmbach, Mitchell, Clark, Chase, Bedell, Cramer, Dunning, Budney, Webster, Platten, Bosley, Gore, Kerney, Oznot, Holmer, Wachter, Hollander, Maier, Potter, Roe, Dietz, Stone, Sessa, and Harrison.

Dinner totaled 45, including wives and kids. (24 classmates, including Oznot.) At dinner, the Class honored Charlie Kalmbach for his countless years of service as Annual Giving chairman. Class Chairman Eric Chase presented Charlie with a plaque to that effect. Several classmates also received special door prizes—the last bottles of wine from the 20th reunion. Among them were: Cramer—longest geographical distance (Chicago); Stone—longest existential distance (19th century); and Hollander—longest distance in taste (he chose the wine).

Also signed in: Fleming, MacPhail, Schulze, Weissenberger, Zissler, Fox, Klimek, Briit, B. Peterson, Glass, Whelan, Gratton, Davis, and Mineo. Also sighted: Mike Ryan, Whalen, Ledyard, and Richer. Total known back: 42.

During the P-race, Sessa and Kerney maintained their tradition of leading locomotives. When called upon to give a locomotive for Shapiro, the Class gave one—for Vivian Shapiro, much to her surprise, and then Harold. Then P-race Grand Marshall Turk Thacher '66 announced the '68 contingent as follows: "That's the Class of '68. If there's a bad tradition at Princeton, they probably started it." Probably right, too.

Please note: We are planning a fall dinner for the Saturday night of Harvard weekend, which is in October. Mark your calendars. Strong message in following columns.

Editor's Note: The pictures accompanying the classes of 1967 and 1968 columns in the July 18 issue were reversed. PAW regrets the error.

69

PAUL GEORGE SITTENFIELD
1854 Keys Crescent
Cincinnati, OH 45206

Can it really be 25 years ago this month that we wandered on to the Princeton campus to embark on our undergraduate educations? The memories are vivid, although the years elapsed are many.

Happily, milestones still come to us, and special ones at that. Lovely Leigh Hayes Axelrod, Christy Wise and Bob's first, joined them this past April 24. The family lives in Washington.

Meanwhile, on June 20, Heather and Brian Kenny welcomed their first, Brian Hartford Kenny.

March 29 was heir-rival date for Kari and Bob Flob's Eric Austin. The young fellow joins Jason (19), Tony (9), and Kristen (2).

Wedding bells continue to peal. On April 14, Ginna Vogt '77 and Bob Hernandez were married with Gary Watts standing up as best man. Other Princetonians also joined the festivities.

Finally, the most recent nuptials which have come to our attention occurred on July 7 when Ann Blumberg and Steve Grabam were married in Chilmak, Mass. Ann is a freelance writer and a contributing editor to BUSINESS INTERNATIONAL. Steve is managing director in the investment banking business of PaineWebber in N.Y.

Now, on to 25 more years of good lives and good loves. Congratulations and warm wishes to all.

70

JAN KURNIK
113 Laurel Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08544

Greetings and felicitations, and welcome to the first column of our Post-Twentieth Era. While the positive fall-out from that extravaganza continues to provide fodder for some of our future columns, please keep those cards and letters coming in. Without your help, we'd be at a loss for words.

Pictured is the historic Changing of the Guard (not to be confused with the Old Guard known as the Class of '69!), as Peter Kopff uses his best legal acumen to convince his successor, Mickey Pohl, that President for Life is simply an honorific title, and the Pohl Administration is now firmly in control. We extend our heartiest thanks to Peter for all his labors. As the Romans said, "Ave atque vale!"

Modesty undoubtedly prevented the previous secretary from mentioning the outstanding job of childcare provided by Deb and Ed Gwazda, with incredible assistance from Pam Addison '92.

Also occurring at the Class meeting were several dubious distinction awards, recognizing classmates who have made significant transitions since graduation. Among those singled out were Mark Baskin (Least Hair), John Arbogast (winner in two categories: Hairiest and Long Distance Award—in from South Africa), Dick Respass (Most Internal Revenue Audits), Bob Blair (Lost Most Weight), Don LaHaye (Grayest Head of Hair), Brian Hunter (Yuppest, in a hotly contested race), and Dan White (Most Luggage at Reunions—15 pieces).

71

STUART E. ROCKENBORN
Gracie Station, P.O. Box 1142
New York, NY 10028

ANNUAL GIVING WRAP-UP: As Annual Giving came to a close, the Class of 1971 hit the targets of $104,718 and 59.7% participation. For all who gave, the Class of 1971 is grateful. Nearly one-fourth of the funds, from one-third of the donors, however, were received during the last two months of the campaign.

LOOKING AHEAD: We are now officially in our Twentieth Reunion year. The current A.G. record of a twentieth is just over $1.2 million, set this year by the Class of 1970. As you think about this year's campaign, try to make your pledge and your gift early. Giving early will stop the flow of gift requests to you and it will also make the lives of Class Agent Larry Joachim and his A.G. volunteers much less harried. The Class of 1971 established major records at our 10th and 15th, and we have also set off-year records. Our goal is to continue to be "record setting" this year. And, as you think about your gift, consider what being at Princeton meant to you when you attended, and what being a Princetonian has meant to you since you graduated.

THE COUNTDOWN IS ON: In a little less than nine months, you will be celebrating the 20th anniversary of your graduation. Why don't you plan on celebrating with old friends and classmates at your TWENTIETH REUNION.

Things are beginning to fall in place for what promises to be another "state of the art" event that cognoscenti in the Class of 1971 have come to expect. Begin to make your own plans now. It's not too early to book a hotel room.—The particulars: June 6-9, 1991, Holder Courtyard. Be there.

72

KIP HAWITT
21 Wildcat Rd.
Darlen, CT 06820

In contrast to the widespread scandal and failure in the savings and loan industry, there comes news of a small, closely held, traditional S.& L. in Cuyahoga Falls, Oh., that continues to serve its community, stay profitable, avoid the problems that are plaguing the rest of the industry. That's Valley Savings & Loan Co., which has recently chosen David Hunter as chairman of the board. David is the third generation of his family to lead the S.& L., which was founded by his grandfather in 1923. While chairman, he will continue his private law practice as a partner and commercial lawyer at Brouse & McDowell in Akron. Writes David, "Piloting a savings and loan in the 1990s should prove to be a real challenge. One of the biggest missions we face is continuing to educate the public that the phrase 'strong, stable, and secure savings and loan' is not an oxymoron."

Tom Woodward writes that he is now settled in the Tampa Bay area and is enjoying his current position as assistant professor at Trinity College of Florida. He is teaching cultural anthropology, Spanish, cross-cultural ministries, and introductory science. Tom and his wife, Normandy, have three children in college. Meanwhile, he has established the C.S. Lewis Fellowship—a forum of Christian college faculty members in Tampa Bay, to help sponsor an annual lecture at Princeton with the Princeton Christian Faculty Forum.

Anne and Ed Strauss had their first child, Louisa Ryder Strauss, on June 16. Louisa had been to Reunions a few days before, but decided to wait until 1991 to actually join the P-rade. Late news was also received that Marcia and Neil Lebbhar had their third child, Peter Neil Lebbhar, on Aug. 7, 1989. Neil is rector of the Episcopal Church in Jackson, Fla.

73

R. GREGORY PLIMPTON
Box 14545
North Palm Beach, FL 33408

Bill Carpenter, wife, Christie, and twins Caitlin and Jennifer are about to announce the addition of William Eric to the clan. He was born Feb. 28. The twins are pictured here inspecting their new brother for quality control purposes. Bill is president of Teal Electronics, a leading manufacturer of electronic power clean-up devices, in San Diego.

If you hurry to Charleston, S.C., you might still be able to catch the American landscape painting exhibit at the Gibbes Art Museum. Therein, you will find four paintings by our own Jim Lecky. Jim also teaches art at Suffolk Community College.

Art Oller is back on the East Coast again, running Chevron's commercial paper program. His latest child, Scott, was born on May 7, adding to Sophie (6) and Devin (3).

Robin Lloyd has been moved from his Post as NBC's White House correspondent to a new beat covering South Africa for the network. Speaking of Lloyds, Jack Lloyd's smiling face was seen recently in a TOWN & COUNTRY article about Watch Hill, R.I. Jack is a director of the Chapel there, and has long used the town as an escape from hot summer weekends in Philadelphia.

74

JOHN STRYKER
15 Woodbine Rd.
Kendall Park, NJ 08824

TIGER CUBS: Ellen Bortner '11 (shown here) brought her dad, Dave Bortner and her mom, Cindy Roth Bortner, to Reunions again this year. Ellen, born in Nov. 1989, actually made her first trip to Reunions prenatally, and then attended Alumni Day last February. Dave, an attorney in West Chester, Penn., and Cindy, a schoolteacher, believe it's never too soon to start instilling proper values in your children.

Fred Strobel and his wife, Monica Reznik (Vanderbilt '78), now have two daughters: Paich, born June 5, 1986; and Sarah McKay, born Feb. 5, 1989.

Fred has an ad agency in Nashville called The Burgundy Group, which he says is "not 'Thirtysomething,' but definitely something!"

Dallas Dixon welcomed a new daughter, Ariel Thayer Dixon, in Oct. 1989. Dallas is an attorney in Trenton, N.J., and a major force in the Mercer Cty. Democratic Party.

Juanita James and her husband, Dudley Williams, became the parents of Dudley Norman Williams III on Dec. 7, 1989. The family has moved to a new home in Stamford, Conn.

On April 23, 1990, Anne Kathryn Taylor Sprogel was born to Kathy Taylor and her husband Jon Sprogel. Kathy is now the head of the English department at the Baldwin School in Bryn Mawr, Penn., and Jon is a V.P. of Mellon Bank. Their son Jay is now four years old.

75

MELISSA KISER MESROBIAN
940 Riverside Ave., Berkeley Square
Trenton, NJ 08618

After years in Louisiana, Henry Reiff has moved to Westminster, Md., where he works at Western Maryland College as coordinator of the graduate program in special education.

Nancy and Louis Berlin celebrated the birth of their fourth child, David Frank, Nov. 15, 1989, by establishing the Frank Berlin Memorial Leadership Fund for the B'nai Brith Hillel Foundation at Princeton. The fund is named for their uncle, Frank Berlin, who died in Aug. 1989. Income from the fund's endowment will enable Hillel's director to give promising students the opportunity to participate in leadership development programs.

Joe Serota has left his law firm of 12 years to be a name partner at a new firm in Miami, Coffey Aragon Martin Burlington & Serota. The firm deals with commercial litigation.

Don George, travel editor of the San Francisco EXAMINER, has received awards from the Pacific Asia Travel Assn. for Best Travel Story of 1987 and Best Newspaper Travel story of 1988; his section came in as first runner-up for the Best Newspaper Travel Section of 1988, according to the Society of American Travel Writers. Don is also the happy father of an energetic daughter, Jennifer (4).

Casceil Medlin was married Sept. 24, 1989, in Cambridge, to Peter Aronson of Redlands, Calif. The Aronsons are living in Phoenix, Ariz., where Casceil is an attorney and partner in Brown & Bain.

76

JAMES L. MARKETOS
Lane & Mitterdorf, 919 18th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20006

Your Class Secretary is (happily) overwhelmed with classmate news, but space limitations make it impossible to report everything here on a timely basis. Bear with me. I hope to issue a newsletter to reduce the backlog.

Mark your calendars for our first pre-15th-reunion event: a light (and free) Class brunch before the Harvard game on Oct. 20. It'll be on the top floor of New South beginning at 11:00. Call Tom Byrne's answering machine (609-683-1559) by Oct. 13 to R.S.V.P. The Class has also partially subsidized a block of 40 tickets for the game, available on a first-come, first-served basis ($10/adult; $5/child under 12). Call Tom's machine to order tickets. Only orders placed by phone AND followed by a check (payable to Princeton Class of 1976), mailed to Tom for receipt by Oct. 13, at 101 Hun Rd., Princeton, NJ 08540, will be eligible for ticket allocation. Tickets will be distributed at the brunch.

Here are some notes of new additions to the Class of '76 family. The drawing, by Pat McLaughlin, is of his son Ian Patrick, born Oct. 11, 1989. This past

April Pat joined the Dallas law firm of Godwin, Carlton and Maxwell. Toni and Dave Liemer announce the birth of their second son, Joshua Todd, on Mar. 12, 1990, joining brother Ross (4). Dave is a V.P. and associate creative director at McCann-Erickson, a N.Y.C. advertising firm. The photograph is of Alexander Dunnegan Haller Gottsch, born Nov. 6, 1989, to John and Julia Haller Gottsch, joining brother William.

77

JAMES BARRON
15 W. 72nd St., Apt. 24-B
New York, NY 10023

FOR WHOM THE GAVEL FALLS: President Jose Pincay-Delgado has called a Class meeting for Sat., Oct. 6, at 10:30 A.M. in the Woodrow Wilson School (before the Brown game). Check the easel in the W.W.S. lobby for the room number.

HEY, FELLOWS: Steve Shiva was a Sloan Fellow at the Stanford Business School during the 1988-89 academic year. After earning his master's degree, he left NASA and joined Integrated Systems, Inc., a Silicon Valley software company, as V.P. of product development. Heading to Stanford this year are Kathy Kiehl, a Washington correspondent for the Houston Post, and Michael Zielenziger, the Pacific Northwest correspondent for the San Jose MERCURY News. They're among 18 journalists from around the world who have been awarded John S. Knight Fellowships. Noting that the Knight Fellows pursue independent courses of study at Stanford, Kathy quipped: "I've threatened to study tennis to advance my Washington career."

THE HIGH-TECH LIFE: Worth MacMurray moved to Reston, Va., to be closer to his job as in-house counsel for G.T.S.I., a systems integrator and micro-computer reseller in Chantilly, Va. Norm Asber is a senior technology director at Technology Applications, Inc., in Alexandria, Va. "We do things like put together and operate supercomputer facilities for the government," he explains. Norm reports that Steve Strickland has just finished two years of post-doctorate work at Harvard and has accepted a teaching position at the Univ. of Virginia. He'll teach in the electrical engineering department. Jeff Kruk has left Houston and high-energy physics for Baltimore and astrophysics. He's now working on the Hopkins Ultraviolet Telescope.

78

BOB PESKIN
Box 886
Middlebury, VT 05753

Andrea de Cholnoky was married on March 10, 1990, to Scott Curtis Wilson in Greenwich, Conn. Scott, an alumnus of Penn and, like Andrea, a Harvard Business School graduate, is a director in Salomon Bros.' corporate-finance dept. Bridesmaids included '78ers Holly Richardson Stresse, Anne Rogers Leslie, Eve Stockton and Darcy Schaffer Hadji-pateras. Andrea writes, "Unfortunately, Darcy didn't make it to the wedding as she gave birth, in London, to her first child, a boy, two days before the wedding." Pictured are (front row, l-r): Dorie Deland,

Young Alumni Activities

PC OF WESTERN WASHINGTON: Wed., Sept. 26—Moscow Treasures Art Exhibit. Call Jon Evans at 206-883-2410 or 206-323-2932 for info.

PC OF MICHIGAN: Sept. 12—Planning meeting; Oct. 27—Orange and Black Halloween party; Nov. 10—Princeton beats Yale; Dec. 14 or 16—Holiday party. Call George Corser (313-647-0054) or Michael Sklar (313-995-1831) for further info. or to help with these events.

Young Alumni—Please call or mail information for this column six weeks beforehand to Charlotte Cooney at the Alumni Council, 609-258-3353.

Roy D. Oppenheim, '82

(formerly with White & Case)

announces the formation of Oppenheim & Pilelsky, P.A.

Mr. Oppenheim will continue to concentrate in the areas of Real Estate, Development and Entrepreneurial/Business Related Activities.

1290 Weston Road, Suite 214
Fort Lauderdale, Florida 33326
(305) 384-6114 Fax (305) 384-6115

Members Florida and New York Bars

Grant A. Peacock '46

Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

*Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased*

Suite 2600
450 Park Avenue at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022

(212) 753-4640

Barge Cruise Southern France Along beautiful, unspoiled Canal du Midi. "La Tortue" is spacious (95' x 15'), comfortable, with large sundeck, lounge, three twin staterooms. Notable cuisine, bicycles, minibuses. Seasoned, agreeable British crew. Weekly charters April–October. Color brochure. Write "La Tortue" Dept. P., Box 1466, Manchester, MA 01944.

Ranch Kimball '80, Andrew Holmes '77, and Andy Cowherd '74; (back row): Anne, Holly, Abby Potter Hutchinson, bride and groom, Victor Masch, Tom Walker '77, and Eve. Other alumni in attendance included Ted Gamble '75, Susie Stupin Gamble '75, Pendleton King '76, Lisa Pawel '79, and Harry Hagerty '82. But that's not Andrea's only news: "I guess all good things happen at once. I was promoted to partner at Nordeman Grimm the week of my wedding."

Since last summer, Jesse Milan has been chief of staff to the president of Temple Univ. For eight years prior to the move, Jesse had practiced law. Temple is the largest state-related university in Pennsylvania, with 34,000 students, 10,000 employees, and an annual budget of $650 million.

79

MARTHA KRAMER
27 North St., Apt. 6-R
Stamford, CT 06907

WEDDING BELLES: Martha Kramer married John Zimmerman (Worcester Polytechnic '77) last spring. Appropriately, Martha included ivy and snippets of black-and-orange ribbon in her bouquet. Pictured with Martha and John are (l-r): P. C. Pitts, brother-in-law Lynn Olson '87, Rob Fairweather '75, Laura Mandes '77, Mike Molynieux '76, Lisa Matthews '76, Bob Ruxin '76, and Rick Nash '81. Former Class secretary Sue Liemer also married last spring. She and her husband, Jeff Monk, escaped from the chilly Northeast to enjoy a two-week honeymoon in the Galapagos Islands. Julie Hatterer married Michael Gelb; Julie is a physician and director of psychopharmacology services at Presbyterian Hospital.

OTHER BEGINNINGS: Lisa Reid Mayer had her second son, Drew Wainwright Mayer, last spring. Still working for Goldman Sachs in San Francisco, Lisa notes that her habit of pre-dawn rising for the opening of the N.Y. markets prepared her for the sleep deprivation motherhood entails. Richard Kaplan also had his second son; he and his family happily reside in a suburb of Chicago, where Richard is a practicing attorney in patent law and litigation.

IN THE NEWS: Former Class president John Pouschine was featured in an article on people of White-Russian descent, which appeared in the June issue of MANHATTAN INC. John visited Leningrad in 1988 to help celebrate the 500th anniversary of his family name, and has helped form the Russian-American Exchanges Organization to foster more business with the Soviet Union. Shabab Sharify, a television news reporter, has moved from N.Y.C. to work for the ABC-affiliate in Seattle. So far, he likes living in "the most-livable city" in the country, noting the decrease in "blood and guts" and scandal stories.

80

HENRIK D. PANKIN
25 Farmhouse La.
Philadelphia, PA 18925

As we move into our second ten years as Princeton alumni, congratulations to everyone who contributed on a record-breaking tenth-year Annual Giving campaign. The final tally was a University record of $281,616, surpassing the previous high by over $20,000. The 503 classmate donations (47% participation) mark the second time that the donor level has exceeded 500. Special thanks go to Class Agent Jim Tausche, Special Gifts Chairman Jim Shapiro, and the 40 people working on the Special Gifts Committee for all their hard work. Let's keep the contributions coming!

Apologies are due both Dave Schechter and Dave Schultz for an error in the Feb. 7 column. It seems that it is Dave Schechter who is into beach volleyball and visited Gary Gruber last summer, not Dave Schultz as earlier reported.

Although the 1990 Class of '80 survey found that only 35% of us have children, the past year seems to have been a prolific one for CLASS ISSUE. I hope to get to everybody in time. Robert Samuels and his wife, Sandra, had a son, Aaron Levy, May 7, 1989. Robert has been licensed in clinical psychology since 1988. Rhoda Jaffin Murphy and her husband, Mike, welcomed their first child, Charles Raymond, on June 23, 1989. Rhoda is a freelance writer and contributing editor to HOUSE BEAUTIFUL magazine. Craig and Lydia Hood Holley had a daughter, Lucy Angela, Aug. 12, 1989. Lucy is kept entertained by her brother, Russell (3). Cindy King Vance and husband, Lee, were joined by daughter Zoe Katherine, on Sept. 14, 1989. Jamie Clements and wife, Diana, had their third daughter, Austen, Oct. 3, 1989. Michele Hamilton and husband, Joshua Goldhaber (Harvard '80), had a daughter, Nicole, Oct. 11, 1989. They are both cardiologists at U.C.L.A. med. center.

81

JEAN ANABELE TELLJONAHN
50 Riverside Dr., #9F
New York, NY 10024

Celebrating the Sept. 16, 1989 marriage of Kathy Dougherty and Jamer Boozan in Spring Lake, N.J., are (l-r): Chris and Rich Alito '82, Chuck Allen, Katie and Doug Aymong, Ginny and Dan Irwin, Kathy and Jamer, Jack Blair '82, Carrie Pritsch, and Charlie Stillitano. Other alumni in attendance were the bridegroom's father, Dr. Charles Boozan '40, friend George Cadgene '40, brother Dr. Bill Boozan '77, and cousin Anne Marie Belli '84. After honeymooning in Bermuda, the newlyweds have settled in St. Louis where Jamer is a third-year resident in otolaryngology (head and neck surgery). Kathy worked for Aramis, Inc., before leaving N.Y.C.

Arnim and Kristi Frank Holzer sent this picture of Mary Gilman Holzer, born Oct. 12, 1989, at 6 lbs., 10 ozs. Arnim is a V.P. at Bankers Trust and Kristi is a regional sales manager for Prescriptives Cosmetics, both in N.Y.C. The Franks live in Chatham, N.J.

82

TERI DOOLEY KOGUT
12409 Sadler Lane
Bowie, MD 20715

More than 45 '82ers made their way back to the best old place of all. They were: Harry Aldrich, Jennifer Dyckman Aldrich, Rich Bagger, Phil Baldwin, Jordan Becker, Jack Blair, Katherine Brokaw, Tom Brobertson, Maria G. Campana-Perez, Ian A. Cook, Cindy Crowley, Nick Donatiello, Robert N. Ellsworth, Howard Fiderer, Rich Gorelick, Joe Harvey, Ginny "Zig" Brown Holly, J. Anne Howell, Catherine McVay Hughes, Tom Hughes, Najib Khuri, Teri Dooley Kogut, Sue Kolin, Stephen Loughran, Bruce Meberg, Mike Miller, Jim Murphy, Vincent Naman, Howard Nelson, Silda Palerm, Rich Pennenga, Marguerite Purnell, Julia Herndon Reynolds, Laine Friedman Ross, Mike Salmanson, Tony Santullo, Kurt Schulte, Michael Sparks, Daniel Sylvas, Steve Teager, Fred Ulsbager, Molly Grotton Urban, Noel Valero, Barbara Vaughn, and Christa Well. The long-distance award goes to Tom Brotherton and Joe Harvey, who traveled from Boulder, Colo., and Basalt, Colo., respectively. The youngest '82er award goes to Adam Swibold Becker (pictured), who was born April 30 to Jordan and Katherine Swibold.

On the Friday of Reunions, Kurt graciously accepted the 1932 Trophy for our Class. This award goes to the class less than ten years out which has demonstrated a complete program of communications, activities, and dues participation. So many thanks go to all the '82ers whose Class dues help pay for Class activities, mailings, and the '82 Diversity Project, and whose envelope flaps and letters help us write Class Notes and newsletters.

83 GAIL FRANZ
345 West 87th St., Apt. 3F
New York, NY 10024

Here is the last wrap-up from the 1990 Annual Giving flaps, just in time for the 1991's tremendous deluge: Michelle Weekes married J. Alexander Green (Reading '78, U.C.D. '82) in July 1989 in the Chapel. Attendees were Kay Bolden, best woman, Rosemarie Burnett, and Joseph '81 and Aquila Washington Galgon '82. Alex and Michele live in San Diego, where he works for a mortgage brokerage and she is a production manager for H.B.J. Publishers.

Steve Silverman is working as a trial attorney at the Environmental Enforcement Section of the U.S. Dept. of Justice in D.C.

A quick correction is necessary to the most recent edition of '83 TODAY. Barbara Talcott and her husband, Doug Borchard '82, do live outside of Boston, in Winchester, but Barbara works at the Harvard Community Health Plan, an H.M.O., in the management of specialty physicians. Barbara writes that "she and Doug are happy, but very busy, with two jobs and one two-and-a-half-year-old." Also, Lisa Fernandez writes that she works for the N.Y.C. Dept. of Sanitation in the recycling division as a waste-prevention planner and policy analyst.

Here is the first feedback from that newsletter: Sally Anderson writes that Page Pulver married John Gaison in June 1990 at Blueberry Hill Inn near Middlebury, Vt. "Fastest ceremony yet, just under six minutes, homemade vows and all. Katharyn Mitchell and Sally were bridesmaids. It was a lovely ceremony and a rockin' reception."

84 TIMOTHY C. WU
Beacon Court, 175 Beacon St., Apt. 413
Somerville, MA 02143

"WHAT I DID ON MY SUMMER VACATION," by... Michelle Harvey writes that she spent the last year scuba-diving in Belize, and plans to do the same this year in Cozumel, Mexico. When not exploring the wonders of the deep, Michelle can be found roller-blading with Jackie Hata Alexander near Jackie's home in New Canaan, Conn., or checking in with Alan Mendelsohn, who is currently working on his residency at N.Y.U. Hospital. Also in N.Y.C. this summer was H. L. Silets, who went to the Big Apple in search of research material for his Ph.D. dissertation, which he is pursuing at Cambridge Univ. in England. While in N.Y., H. L. saw Charles Pardue and his wife, Louisa, and spoke to John Few, who was about to embark on a ten-week trip around the world after graduating from the business school at U.N.C.-Chapel Hill. Another '84er at U.N.C. is Homer White, who is finishing up his Ph.D. in mathematics. Homer and his wife, Mary

Georgetown

MBA

Preparing management students today to lead the global business world tomorrow.

Excellence in general management education
Individual Growth in a diverse educational community
Leadership in international business environments

For additional information and an opportunity to become part of tomorrow's exciting and challenging business world, write or call:

Graduate Business Admissions
Georgetown University
101 Old North, School of Business
Washington, DC 20057
202/687-3854

Accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB)

Lou, moved to Chapel Hill after spending several years in Washington, D.C., working with the homeless and engaging in protests against the proliferation of the arms race. Also on the move is Andrew Ketchum, who will be heading off to Baltimore to do post-doctoral work at Johns Hopkins Univ., after completing his Ph.D. in cell biology at Harvard this fall. Slightly closer to Old Nassau is Jordan Corn, who is living in Hamilton, N.J., and working for Rohm and Haas Corporate Engineering.

85 ROB JEWANK
1578 Oak Ave., Apt. 1
Evanston, IL 60201

WEDDING BELLS AND LOUNGE LIZARDS: On June 23 one of 1985's greatest thirsts and honorary 21 Club member, Risa Williams, tied the knot with Southern gentleman Mark P. McMillan (Emory '83) in Buffalo, N.Y. Beaming above are (sitting, l-r): Helen Strate, John D. Williams '84, Mark and Risa, Reginald V. Williams Jr. '53, and Martha Russo; (wobbling, l-r): Lizy Paradis, Alesia Lx Klein, Jim Wadsworth '61, Kicker Mishousky, Jon "Observe My Mustache" Lurie, Sue Mack McCarter, Drew Moran, Kinsey "Two Tall Boys" Dyckman, J. D. Schnatz '53, "Le Grand" Hoddy Klein, Suzy Q. Preston, Rob Hill '84, Martha Ebmann, Sue "Moons" Mooney, and Liz Hackle.

Risa and Mark's nuptials flared with all the spice of original-recipe buffalo wings. Ms. Russo honored the reception with her own catering on the side, the buffet table, and the dance floor. It is told that Drew Drew Drew Drew Moran actually waltzed while wearing a toga, and Lixy and Sue Mack encircled him in rhythmic, ritualistic reverence. At the bar, Kinsey and Kicker eclipsed local records by ordering 43 lethal shots and commanding Hoddy swiftly to dispense of them, which obligingly he did while stapled to the corner and garbling something about the grandeur of Tiger Inn.

Finally, rave commendations are overdue for our fifth-reunion legion, who so admirably arranged the Cool Cat Pete. Thanks especially to Lisa Micou and Guy Kinley, who insist the 2 A.M. keg curfew was not their idea. Bon soir.

86 SALLIE KIM
2645 California St., #303
Mountain View, CA 94040

Welcome back to the paw! This year is a banner year for the Class of 1986 because our fifth-year reunion is coming up. Reunions chairman Doug Boothe is gearing up for a big celebration in June.

Nils Mutzenieks says that he is "the same as at Princeton, only a little bit balder, but I've compensated by growing a beard." Chris King went on a six-month "walkabout" of Australia last year with Don Phillips (now at U.C.L.A. business school). Chris and Don planted a Princeton '86 sign atop Ayer's Rock in the Australian outback. Dave Rosenberg has been in Costa Rica since September, where he is leading rafting and sea kayaking trips.

Adam Frankl works for the Rand Corp. in Santa Monica, Calif., a private, nonprofit think tank. Tom Urgubart is a technical writer for WordPerfect, a software program. Tom and his wife, Linda, have two sons—Daniel (2), and Jackson (3 months). Peter Corsi describes himself "by weekday a dollar/yen trader at Citibank, and by most weekends, a vacationer in Newport, R.I." Warrington Parker spent the last year clerking for a federal appeals court judge Justice Poole in San Francisco, after graduating from Harvard Law School, and plans to begin work for a law firm in L.A. this year.

A photograph of David Robinson was recently published in TIME Magazine in connection with an article on the twenty-something generation. David has been working for ACT-UP, an organization to protest the lack of government action in fighting AIDS, and is starting graduate school at Berkeley.

87

MARY TAYLOR DENICO
1935 Seville St.
Santa Rosa, CA 95403

This little girl, born Feb. 24, 1989, is Ellen Stuart, daughter of Lynn (Oberlin '86) and Nathan Stuart. The family is in Cambridge, where Nathan is a "professional student," in a master's program in engineering and business administration at M.I.T. Nathan reports that Brad Kostyle is a year ahead in the same program and that "being a dad is wonderful!"

Sean Fitzpatrick moved to Lexington, Ky., where he works for VISTA at a food bank.

Sheila Hallsted spent last year in Paris working on her Ph.D. in European history from N.Y.U. A highlight of Sheila's year was playing violin for the U.S. Consulate at a March concert in the Hotel Tallyrand.

HAPPY HOUR NEWS: '87's national happy hour is on Oct. 18, 6-9 p.m., at these locations ('87ers locally in charge are in parentheses): ANN ARBOR: Dominick's (Joe Atkinson, 313-930-6296); BOSTON: The Border Cafe, Harvard Square (Helen Amick, 617-438-7000); CHICAGO: Glascott's, corner of Halstead and Webster (Cindy Enger, 312-281-6187); D.C.: Black Rooster Pub, 1919 L St. (Jim Friedel, 202-778-7343); PALO ALTO: 42nd Street, 518 Bryant, off Univ. Ave. (Bill Grandall, 415-857-4361); L.A.: Stratton's Grill, Westwood, 1037 Brixton Ave. (Lance Ketterer, 213-837-8266); N.Y.C.: The Peculiar Pub, 145 Bleeker (Becky Clement, 212-580-5870); Hanover, N.H.: (Call Greg Berzolla at Dartmouth B-School). Be there, Tiger!

88

CHRISTOPHER LU
208E Holden Green
Cambridge, MA 02138

Sharon Hammes married Peter Schiffer (Yale '88) April 1, 1990, in Santa Barbara, Calif. Pictured are: (bottom row) Gordon Hammes '56, Sharon, Peter; (second row) Claire Kaufman, Tyra Wolfberg, Debby Veis '87, Nancy Fisher Hansen '87; (third row) Tom Parks '87, Beth Lampert Parks, Caroline Kilbourne Stahle '85, Kurt Hansen '87, Holly Goodson; (fourth row) Ken Shepard '87, Mike Hildreth.

Sharon and Peter are grad students at Stanford. One other wedding announcement: Andi Suess married Jonathon Taylor '86, June 16 in Chagrin Falls, Oh.

After a hot and sticky summer, I thought everyone would appreciate this photo of Saul Perloff, Bill Aberon, and David Proshan, who were skiing last Christmas Eve in Kitzbuhel, Austria. At the time, Saul was studying in France on a Rotary, and David was at Oxford. Bill is in the Army, stationed in West Germany.

Watch your mailboxes for a letter from President Karen Bowdre and the Class newsletter. Dues are still $20 this year—the best bargain in town.

89

DAVID MILLER
2806 N. Pershing Dr., Apt. 2
Arlington, VA 22201

As promised last spring, the first column of the year belongs to Bryan Winter, who wrote in with news of a bunch of '89ers.

Carla Garofalo works at Viking Books in Manhattan. Jane Lytle and Matt Cicero are reaching out at A.T.&T. Terry Campbell is headed for law school this fall, and was reportedly leaning towards Columbia over Notre Dame—so he can get football tickets more easily. Tommy Villante is a "blossoming venture capitalist" at William E. Simon and Sons. John Connolly is earning a Ph.D. in psychology at the Univ. of Pittsburgh. Andrea Watson and Sandra Tsang are working at law firms in N.Y.C. Russ Warren is at Ann Taylor in their real estate section. Bob Reif is employed at the Waldorf-Astoria in N.Y. Adam Posnack and Dennis Heldt are working at the United Bank of Switzerland.

Jerry Reen and Mark Rockefeller have returned from Australia, where they were working on a sheep ranch. They both started work in N.Y.C. this summer. Frank Crow is "working his way into the entertainment industry" in N.Y. Pat Wach works at G.E. Capital Investments in Stamford, Conn. Greg DiFelice is driving his way to medical school by working as an ambulance driver in Colorado. Billy DeFrancesco is working at Panasophic in Chicago. Derek Busch is an education consultant.

90

BRYANT GOODMAN
22 Berkeley Terrace
Livingston, NJ 07039

In the news this summer has been Teach for America, described by Newsweek as a sort of "peace corps" for teachers. The brainchild of Wendy Kopp '89, Teach for America has attracted several members from the Class of '90, who will teach in school districts throughout the country. Those beginning their assignments this month include: Hilary Abell, Amparo Gonzalez, Mia Lipner, Gerone Lockhart, Andrew Mayo, and Eric Wallach in N.Y.C.; David Cox, Juan Pantoja, and Pamela Weymoutb in L.A.; and Maria Adams in New Orleans.

Besides traveling, sleeping, and MTV-watching, perhaps the most-popular Class activity this summer has been getting married. Congratulations to Yael Aronoff and Eric Wallach, who will reside in N.Y., where Yael will attend Columbia's School of International Relations and Public Affairs; to Jessica Printz and Cliff Ando, who will be graduate students at the Univ. of Michigan; to Amalia Bachman and Anand Gnanadesikan '88, who will attend U.Mass-Amherst; and to Tracy Leonardo and Ted O'Neil '89, who live in Dallas, where Tracy is in public relations and Ted is at S.M.U. law school.

Finally, congratulations to Adam Aston, the winner of the Class of '90's first-ever "What I did this Summer" contest. Adam sold Häagen-Daz ice cream from a cart on a streetcorner in N.Y.C.

Remember to send all address changes to Alumni Records, P.O. Box 34, Princeton, NJ 08544.

GS

C. ROSEN DAVIS '73
28 Crescent St.
Northampton, MA 01060

60-*75

Welcome back and thanks for your interest in Princeton. Thanks to the Princeton Club of Washington for doubling its contributions to A.P.G.A.'s summer travel and research grant program.

ARCHITECTURE: Diane Legge '75 (pictured here) was advanced to the College of Fellows of the American Inst. of Architects in May 1990. She has left S.O.M. to form her own architecture and landscape consulting practice. Her practice concentrates on large-scale projects. Diane now has two children under two years old; presumably these are her small-scale projects.

BIOCHEMISTRY: Paul Shapsbak '69 and his family moved from Santa Monica, Calif., to North Miami Beach, Fla. two years ago. He writes: "Our oldest son graduated from U.C.-Berkeley in astrophysics and is now a graduate student at the Royal Physics Inst. in Stockholm.

The other kids seem talented in math, physics, and psychology. Time will tell. Good luck to friends et al. and hoping that all is well."

CHEMICAL ENGINEERING: T. F. Edgar '71 reports that he and Dale Seborg '68 have received the 1990 A.S.E.E. Merriam-Wiley Distinguished Author award for their textbook, PROCESS DYNAMICS AND CONTROL (Wiley, 1989). The book was the result of a prolonged long-distance collaboration between Dale (now at U.C.-Santa Barbara) and Tom; their labor has been rewarded with at least forty adoptions.

POLITICS: Joel Kassiola '74 reports likely August publication of his book, THE DEATH OF INDUSTRIAL CIVILIZATION (S.U.N.Y. Press). It addresses the limits to economic growth and attempts to explain the underlying values of societies like the U.S., and what must be done to make these social orders sustainable. David Vogel '74 is the author of FLUCTUATING FORTUNES: THE POLITICAL POWER OF BUSINESS IN AMERICA (Basic Books, 1989). Bill Cibes '75 (as of last April) was running for the Democratic nomination for governor of Connecticut.

PSYCHOLOGY: Howard Wainer '68 published COMPUTERIZED ADAPTIVE TESTING: A PRIMER in 1990 and TEST VALIDITY in 1988, both with Lawrence Erlbaum Associates. He also received the senior scientist award for 1990-1993 at Educational Testing Service. In Apr. 1989 he was married to Linda Steinberg (Barnard '67). From Mississippi, Stephen C. Fowler '70 notes that "news from nowhere is not newsworthy," adding: "Things in Faulkner land are status quo." Neil Goodman '70 completed, with honors, a certificate of special studies in administration and management at Harvard in June 1989. Your concerned secretary visited Neil and his family for a small gathering marking the 25th anniversary of Pres. Kennedy's death and found they had survived the culture shock (of Harvard) remarkably well. Neil and his wife Gurjivan Kaur returned to Australia, where, by late 1989, he had secured a position as lecturer in psychology at the relatively new Northern Territory Univ., the 22nd in Australia. Neil also continues his private practice.

RELIGION: Thomas E. Leavey '68 reports from Virginia that he is currently U.S. postmaster general for international postal affairs. George W. Ramsey '68 wrote last November that the forthcoming ANCHOR BIBLE DICTIONARY would include articles he had written on Joshua, Samuel, and Zadok. Also, George's article on a literary study of the Prodigal Son parable was expected to appear soon in the journal PERSPECTIVES IN RELIGIOUS STUDIES.

WOODROW WILSON SCHOOL: In July 1989, David S. Kessler '65 was appointed director of transportation for Atlantic Express, the largest contract school bus carrier in N.Y.C., with 1,300 buses transporting 60,000 children daily. David had been chief of service review and analysis with New York's M.T.A. In Nov. 1989, Mariana Abrantes '75 of the European Investment Bank wrote: "Not much sign of Princeton in the European community! Only the fall foliage has the same color." Enjoy it, we say.

Harold R. Medina '09

FEDERAL JUDGE Harold R. Medina, the University's oldest alumnus and one of its most distinguished graduates, died on March 14, 1990. A man of enormous energy, humor, and ability, Harold Medina had a love affair with life for 102 years. We shall miss him.

Born in Brooklyn in 1888, Judge Medina graduated from Princeton Phi Beta Kappa in 1909 and from Columbia Law School in 1912. Harold then embarked on an extraordinary, multi-faceted career, during which he was a successful trial attorney, a member of the Columbia Law School faculty, and the author of many law treatises.

Medina was appointed to the federal bench in 1947 by President Truman. He became a national folk hero in 1949 after presiding over a nine-month trial of 11 Communist leaders charged under the Smith Act with conspiring to overthrow the U.S. by force. He succeeded Learned Hand on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. After becoming a Senior Judge in 1958, he remained a busy, productive member of his court for another 22 years, until his retirement in 1980 at age 92.

Judge Medina loved Princeton as fiercely as it loved him. He served as a trustee, was a Class officer for almost five decades (during most of which he was '09's "permanent president"), and received an honorary degree from the University. The Archivist's Room in Mudd Library is named in his honor.

Harold's beloved Ethel, whom he married in 1911, died in 1971. He is survived by his sons Harold Jr. '34 and Standish '37; his six grandchildren, Harold III '60, Standish Forde Jr. '62, Robert '62, Jeremy '64, Meredith Medina Murray and Ann Medina; and by 10 great-grandchildren, including Tracy Medina '90, to all of whom the wonderful Class of 1909 extends its most sincere and heartfelt sympathy. The Class is no more.

The Class of 1909

Frank G. Darlington '14

FRANK G. DARLINGTON of the Class of 1914 died March 3, 1990 at his home in Leetsdale, Penn. He majored in civil engineering at Princeton, was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Ivy Club, and the Princeton Yacht Club. He later received a joint degree from M.I.T. and Harvard.

He entered the engineering department of Standard Steel Spring Co., which built leaf springs for automobiles. Retiring from that field of service, he served as an assistant trust officer in the Peoples Savings and Trust Co. of Pittsburgh. He later retired in 1930 to look after his family interests.

In 1935 he joined the New York Power Squadron of the U.S. Power Squadron, an organization dedicated to safety on the rivers and seas. From 1935 to 1954 he covered approximately 5,000 miles along the Maine coast in his motor cruiser and schooner-yacht, MAUMON.

Mr. Darlington was one of the founders of the Hyannis Port Yacht Club, and served the club in various capacities until his death.

Mr. Darlington married Jessica Raymond in April 1922. Mrs. Darlington predeceased her husband, as did also their son, Edward Raymond Darlington.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Douglas W. Lefferts, and three grandchildren, Jessica Raymond Williamson, Frank Darlington Guinan, and Carolyn G. Guinan.

To them the Class of 1914 extends its kind respects and deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1914

Reece B. Oberteuffer '17

REECE OBETERUFFER died at Grosse Pointe Shores, Mich., on Apr. 23, 1990, after a short illness. He was born in Detroit on Sept. 26, 1893, and lived in or near Detroit all his life. He attended Detroit Central High School. At Princeton he roomed in Patton Hall with Sam Bryan. At the end of freshman year he transferred to the Univ. of Michigan and received his A.B. degree in 1917. In WWI he was a second lieutenant in the Quartermaster Corps. After the war he became a construction and real estate appraiser for insurance companies and for the City of Detroit for many years.

He is survived by his wife of 66 years, Margaret Dewar Oberteuffer; two daughters, Frances McDonnell and Marjorie McClure; ten grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren. Among the survivors are his son-in-law, Douglas McClure '45; and grandson, Peter McClure '87. To all of them, his classmates send their sincere sympathy.

The Class of 1917

Robert Hardin Jordan '23

BOB, LATE Willa Cather's Archbishop, died of having lived, when he left us on Aug. 17, 1989. He was born in Savannah, Tenn. on Jan. 17, 1901. Bob prepared for college at the Memphis University School and at Lawrenceville. On the Princeton campus he managed the lacrosse team, was on the staff of the PRINCETONIAN all four years, was active in Clio Hall, and belonged to Terrace Club.

After graduation Bob returned to Memphis to enter the investment business. His career was with Mid-South Securities Co. of Nashville. He represented the Memphis area for three years on the board of governors of the National Assn. of Securities Dealers.

Our Bob devoted his energy and superior talents to public service, earning many civic honors. He served the Memphis Cotton Carnival for many years and was president in 1956. The 1979 Carnival was dedicated to Bob. He served three terms as president of the University Club, and over the years was active on behalf of the Community Chest, the War and Welfare Fund, the Memphis Brooks Museum of Art, and the Southern College of Optometry. Bob still had time to serve Princeton University early and late as president of our active Alumni Association of Memphis.

Bob leaves his widow, Cornelia Ennis Jordan; two sons, John '63 and William '71; a sister, Mrs. Frank Gilliland; and a stepson, Robert Williams. Bob's classmates share the family's loss and their pride in the life of a truly great man of his years and generation.

The Class of 1923

Edmund Grindal Rawson Jr. '23

WE LOST OUR classmate Ned on Jan. 5, 1990, the son of Edmund G. Rawson, Princeton Class of 1890, who was a minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Ardmore, Penn. His brother Charles Bartlett Rawson is a member of the Class of 1932. His business career was with Luckey, Platt & Co. at Poughkeepsie, N.Y., where he was the V.P. of this well-known department store. Ned and Frances Taylor were married on July 16, 1929. Their son E.G.R. III, known as Terry, was born May 29, 1931, and is now retired from Pepperidge Farm and living in St. Thomas, V.I. and Martha's Vineyard, Mass. A daughter, Constance, born April 14, 1934, is married to William B. Zboray. She is a school teacher in Stamford, Conn., and lives at 65 Tomac Ave., Old Greenwich, CT 06870. Ned also leaves five grandchildren. His wife Frances died in 1982.

The Class of 1923

Richard Edie '26

DICK EDIE, longtime resident of Yonkers, N.Y., died on Dec. 27, 1989 at Devon Manor, a retirement community in Devon, Penn., a victim for more than six years of Alzheimer's Disease. Dick came to Princeton from Mercburg, was a member of Charter, and after graduation took his law degree at Columbia. Following several years with a law firm in Yonkers, Dick hung out his shingle, and for more than 25 years was a solo practitioner and later counsel to several shopping centers. He gave untold hours to St. John's Riverside Hospital in Yonkers. He served in various offices until 1972 when he became president, a position held with distinction until 1978. Dick had other outside interests including golf, which he loved.

In 1936 Dick and Izme Newbery were married, but this marriage was terminated by her death in 1954. In 1966 Dick married Lola Sigafos, who died in 1980.

Dick had numerous friends in the class, who joined his family in grieving his long illness. He was a fine person and we extend to his family our profound sympathy. Dick is survived by two sons, Dr. Richard '59 and Beverly; a daughter, Mary Smith; by brothers Robert and John '36; a sister, Mary Small; and by four grandchildren, including Richard Edie '85.

The Class of 1926

William J. Lonnquist '26

BILL LONNQUIST, of Northfield, Ill., died on March 11, 1990, after a long illness. Bill came to Princeton from Lake Forest Academy, was a member of Dial Lodge, and following graduation entered the real estate and construction business in the Chicago area. He was active as a general contractor for single and multi-family houses in the suburbs north and northwest of Chicago until illness forced his retirement several years ago. Bill was known to his many acquaintances as an avid and enthusiastic Princetonian. He often said that his years at Princeton and his friends there were one of the luckiest parts of his life. Knowing of his feeling for Princeton, his family felt it was quite fitting that Bill should be buried in his '26 Princeton blazer.

In 1931 Bill married Dorothy M. Gittere. In their married life of nearly 59 years, they were known as a devoted couple who enjoyed travel as a hobby, having visited nearly every country in Europe, and who were an awesome pair at the bridge table. Bill also enjoyed golf and fishing.

In Bill's death, we lost a loyal member of '26 and a real Tiger. Our sympathy goes out to Dorothy and to their daughters, Jeanne Repogle, Jill Davis, and Judith Lonnquist, and to 11 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

The Class of 1926

Robert O. Fulton '33

BOB FULTON died on March 5, 1990, in Los Angeles, where he had lived for many years, during the last of which he lived beside the fourth hole of the Los Angeles Country Club. Bob was born in Pittsburgh on Nov. 11, 1911. He prepared at Peabody High and Hun. In college he was a member of Key and Seal, and roomed with Clark Taylor.

After college Bob worked for the Union Trust Co. in Pittsburgh for three years, and then joined Allegheny Ludlum Steel in the sales department. He remained in the steel business until retirement, except for four years in the Navy in WWII. He became a Lt. commander.

After the war, Bob joined the Washington Steel Co. in Pittsburgh. In 1952 he moved to Los Angeles, forming a partnership, Wagner and Fulton, sales representatives for steel manufacturers. Later, after his partner's death, Bob became president of Calstrip Steel Corp., a subsidiary of Washington Steel, retiring in 1977.

On Oct. 13, 1939, Bob married Elizabeth Mechling in Pittsburgh. They had three daughters, Ann, Elizabeth, and Penelope. Bob's wife died in 1971. In 1977, Bob married Elizabeth De Kruij Moore, an old friend from the Pittsburgh days. She survives him. Bob is also survived by a nephew and namesake, Robert Fulton McCracken '60, of Hinsdale, Ill.

To all the family the Class of '33 extends its deep sympathy.

The Class of 1933

George Strawbridge Sr. '33

ALTHOUGH GEORGE STRAWBRIDGE was referred to by the PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER as stockbroker and golfer, most of us would probably have said steeplechase rider. George died April 3, 1990. A memorial service was held at St. David's Episcopal Church, Wayne, Penn.

George was born Sept. 21, 1909, in Philadelphia. He prepared at Hun. In college he was a member and president of Ivy, and roomed with Al Whitman.

Before and after WWII, George spent some years with Campbell Soup in public relations, and as assistant treasurer. Later he joined the firm of Janney Montgomery Scott, where, at the time of his death, he was a senior V.P. and director. During the war, he spent four years in the Army, emerging as a major.

George was widely known as a steeplechase rider, and had been president of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Assn. He was also a trustee and president of the Margaret Dorrance Strawbridge Foundation, and member of many clubs.

On March 29, 1937, George married Margaret Dorrance. She died in 1953. On Sept. 15, 1956, he married Bruner Hunneman, who survives him. He is also survived by two children, George Jr. and Diana Norris, a stepson, Edgar Owen, a sister, Louise Hunsicker, and six grandchildren. The Class of '33 expresses its deep sympathy to Bruner and all the family.

The Class of 1933

Thomas W. Goas '33

TOM GOAS, who lived in Livingston, N.J. for 51 years, died in the Mountainside Hospital, Glen Ridge, on April 20, 1990. Curly Marsh attended the funeral.

Tom was born March 9, 1911 in Orange, N.J. He prepared at Orange High School. In college he was a member of Cloister Inn.

After college Tom worked for Prudential Life. Later he joined Wah Chung Trading Corp., and then the Culson Corp., both in N.Y.C. Still later he changed careers, becoming an English teacher and chairman of the English department in the Livingston public school system. He earned a master's degree from Montclair State College. Tom was a founding member and a session member of the Presbyterian Church of Livingston.

On June 12, 1937, Tom married Elizabeth N. Swift, who died in 1966. They had two children, T. Barry and Mrs. Sally G. West. There are two grandchildren. Tom's father, the late Horace Goas, was in the Class of '06, and his late uncles, Harry and Howard Goas, were in '07 and '08, respectively.

To Tom's children, the Class extends its sympathy.

The Class of 1933

Perry Kimball Sellon '34

PERRY (PETE) SELLON died April 23, 1990, after a long and persistent illness. He had been associate director of the international staff at U.S. News & World Report, consultant to the World Bank and the I.M.F., board member of various charities and educational institutions, and a professional artist.

He studied Japanese and Chinese brush painting in the 1970s, and became so proficient he had shows from Boston to Florida and sold 250 paintings. In 1987 the Hun School, in recognition of his work as a trustee from 1964-1985, dedicated the Perry K. Sellon Information Center at the school. (He himself went to the Hill, but his son graduated from Hun.)

Perry was twice a member of our class executive committee. In 1963 he helped initiate our Award for Outstanding Achievement, first presented at our 30th the following June.

Perry and Louise Eagle, of Bronxville, N.Y., were married in 1941 ("We've danced up a storm ever since"), and she survives, as do their son, Charles H., a daughter, Louise (Kim), and three grandchildren. To them we offer our sincere sympathies.

The Class of 1934

Archibald Ross Lewis '36

ARCH DIED Feb. 4, 1990 of a heart attack in Tucson, Ariz.

He prepared at the Taft School. At Princeton he majored in history, was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and from there received his A.B., A.M., and Ph.D. In 1982 the French Univ. of Montpellier granted him an honorary degree. He served as president of the Princeton Alumni Assn. of Austin, Tex. He was proud to have never missed a year in Princeton's first 50 years of A.G.

Arch served five years in the field artillery in WWII, retiring as a lt. colonel. He saw action in Europe, receiving the French Croix de Guerre, bronze star, and five battle stars. Just before his death, he published a wonderful little book, WAR IN THE WEST, covering short stories of his experiences from Normandy to deep into Germany. After the war he served with distinction as a history professor at the Universities of South Carolina, Texas, and Massachusetts, from which he retired in 1985. During his teaching years, he was awarded two Fulbright and one Ford grant for study abroad. He became a leading medievalist scholar, and a well-known authority on maritime history. He published 14 books and over 100 articles.

Arch is survived by his wife, Elizabeth Cutler Lewis, a granddaughter, Ashley Rist, and a sister, Jane Dusenberry. His son, David A., daughter, Allyson Rist, brother, Burdette G. Lewis Jr. '34, and sister, Patricia Lewis, predeceased him. We will all miss this noted scholar and friend. He was one of the best.

The Class of 1936

Edward C. Oelsner '37

SQUASH RACQUETS champion and shipping expert Ed Oelsner died April 2, 1990, in North Palm Beach of leukemia, leaving his wife of 50 years, the former Hope Bryan, sons Edward III '64 and James, daughters Glenn and Lesley, and six grandchildren.

Ed prepared at schools in Switzerland and England, where he was active in many sports. At Princeton he majored in politics, was a member of Quad, and continued his illustrious athletic career on the soccer, squash racquets, tennis, and ski teams.

In 1942 he was commissioned ensign in the U.S. Navy and for the next four years served in convoy and port operations in U.S., England, and France, and left the service as lt. commander. In 1976 he was decorated with the Officers' Cross by the West German government for helping to re-establish shipping between the U.S. and Germany after the war.

From right after graduation he followed his ancestral line as president of U.S. Navigation Company, which represented steamship companies from around the world until it was sold prior to his retirement in 1979.

His outstanding squash racquets career included winning the New York State Championship in 1947. His career was terminated by a severe bout of rheumatoid arthritis in the 1950s. He completely recovered and wrote, "I have so much gold in me that I have to oppose the $35 per ounce limit."

To his family and many friends the Class sends its deepest condolences.

The Class of 1937

Francis Theodore Phillips Jr. '41

TED PHILLIPS had a brother in '43, a father in '13, and uncles in '17 and '22, all of whom have passed on. And now so has Ted, who, as a lt. col. (ret.), U.S.A.F., was laid to rest in Arlington National Cemetery with full military honors on Mar. 2, 1990. At his retirement in 1962 he had been atomic, biological, and chemical defense officer for the Air Force at the Pentagon.

At Princeton Ted left us after three years to join up, but completed his degree in his spare time at the Univ. of Nebraska in 1956. Much later he acquired an M.A. from the Univ. of Virginia and embarked on a second career. Working in the Virginia State Dept. of Education, he served as school principal, state supervisor of instruction, math supervisor, and director of programs. Most recently he was the volunteer manager of the Christian Broadcasting Network Counseling Center in Richmond, where he lived. He had been a deacon and elder of the Grace Covenant Presbyterian Church there.

Ted is survived by his wife, Elizabeth Ann Salter Phillips, who is a recognized artist in Virginia; two sons, Richard S. and Francis T. III; two daughters, Mrs. Robert (Sara) Heath and Mrs. Stephen (Barbara) Young; and a sister, Elizabeth P. Moore. We extend our sympathy to all of them.

The Class of 1941

J. Spencer Weed Jr. '41

SPENCE WEED died July 28, 1989, in Scottsdale, Ariz. He had lived in Paradise Valley, with his wife, Mabel Ruth Viney. She survived him until Aug. 23, 1989. There are three children from his first marriage: a son, J. Spencer Weed IV, daughters Sally Catherine and Melissa Anne, and two grandchildren.

Spence was a fine horseman who won riding ribbons in Arizona shows with some regularity. Perhaps it was this love which moved him to enlist in the U.S. Cavalry in WWII. For reasons which he has said he was never given, Spence was posted to the 92nd Division. In those segregated days the 92nd was known as an 'all black' division. With it he served with distinction in Italy and rose to the rank of first lieutenant.

Having grown up in Short Hills, N.J., Spence began his business career commuting from nearby Summit to Manhattan for a job with Standard Brands. But in 1950 his family bought a chain of grocery stores in El Paso, Tex., and he went out there to run them. The move to Arizona came in 1957. He had been an executive with Grand Union Stores at the time of his retirement several years ago. He was a past president of the Phoenix branch of the English Speaking Union. Our sympathy goes out to his family survivors and to his close friend, Bertram M. Moser of Scottsdale, from whom we learned of Spencer's death.

The Class of 1941

William Warren Davis '44

WILLIAM W. DAVIS died March 2, 1990, in Abilene, Tex., his home since 1952. Born in Baxter Springs, Ark., he moved to Tulsa, Okla., at age 12, and prepared for Princeton at Cascia Hall. Bill was graduated magna cum laude in 1948 following WWII service as a pilot in the Army Air Corps.

Without a doubt the first to be married in our class, Bill and Suzanne were wed in the Chapel in 1942. He roomed with Bob Thompson in Joline.

He had a very successful oil business and was known as "Dollar Bill" in Abilene. This nickname was given to him because of his legendary generosity to the community. Among others he founded Mend-A-Child, Y.M.C.A. programs, and Our House, a program for children with drug-related problems.

Bill received an honorary degree from McMurry College in 1988, was voted citizen of the year in 1977, received an award in the mental health field the same year, and received the Liberty Bell Award from the legal profession in 1978.

Bill did not come back to campus, but represented Princeton superbly in Texas. He is survived by Suzanne, five daughters, and six grandchildren, to all of whom the Class extends its deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1944

Paul Ozcar d'Esterhazy '46

PAUL DIED on Jan. 1, 1988, after an extremely long and gallant fight against cancer.

Paul joined in Sept. 1942, and several months later enlisted in the Army, being assigned to the engineers. He subsequently saw action on Leyte.

He did not return to Princeton after the war but joined his father's importing-exporting concern, B. C. Ritchie Co., of which he later became president.

During his stay at Princeton Paul made many friends, and his zest for living was contagious. He roomed with Fred Gordon.

Throughout a great part of his illness he still managed to go to his office, as well as continue his lifelong hobby of gardening. His other interests included sailing and paddle tennis. Everything Paul did was with great enthusiasm and he often said that there were not enough hours in the day.

We shall miss our "most happy fella" and extend our deepest sympathy to Jean; their daughter, Jeanne Anne; and sons Paul and Peter.

The Class of 1946

William Raac Mangum '46

RAAE, "THE SAGE of Rocky Mount, N.C.," died May 12, 1989, after battling throat cancer for a year.

Raace came to us from Rocky Mount High School in the summer of 1942. He managed to conceal the fact that he had a trick knee and joined the Army. After five months, however, he required a medical discharge and returned to Princeton, majoring in psychology and receiving his degree in 1946. Raace spent several years with the C.I.A., then joined a British firm, the Imperial Leaf Tobacco Co. He retired in 1955.

How many of us have sat on "Raace's Bench," facing Reunion Hall, chatting with the wise philosopher? We shall miss our genial companion and loyal friend.

We send out heartfelt condolences to his mother, Mrs. William W. Mangum, and his brother, Jennings '47.

The Class of 1946

A Look at Faculty Books

One of the great dividends of academic life is that "summer reading" lasts all year long. Each evening when I return to Lowrie House and select a book from our library, I enter a world of ideas, reflections, and inner conversations. Often, I turn to the work of Princeton faculty. I would again like to share some of my most recent readings with you.

Professor Amy Gutmann (new director of the Princeton University Center for Human Values) has written a provocative book, Democratic Education, that makes a number of insightful contributions to the discussion of how a pluralistic democracy should approach educational policy. How, for example, do we decide who has ultimate educational authority and responsibility—the family or the state? Who decides how to balance our commitment to freedom and equality in the area of education? One of the most rewarding aspects of the book is its dual concern with the informing principles of democracy and the needs and objectives of education itself.

Professor Gutmann has also edited an intriguing volume of essays entitled Democracy and the Welfare State. As Professor Gutmann points out in the introduction, all modern industrial states assume some welfare role, in that they are unwilling to leave everything to the operation of the market. The essays explore the moral and practical foundation for deciding how the state should protect citizens from the potentially de-humanizing effects of dependency, poverty, and disease. The volume includes contributions from other Princeton faculty members—Jennifer L. Hochschild (Politics and Woodrow Wilson School) and Stanley Kelley, Jr. (Politics)—as well as a provocative essay by Michael Walzer from the Institute for Advanced Study.

Dean Nancy Weiss Malkiel has written a marvelous biography of the late Whitney Young, Jr., who—as director of the National Urban League—played such a prominent role in the civil rights movement of the 1950s and 1960s. This book, Whitney M. Young, Jr., and the Struggle for Civil Rights, not only traces and interprets the personal and professional development of an important civil rights leader, but also engenders renewed understanding of how this struggle is transforming America.

Over the last few years, I have met a number of South American leaders of the Liberation Theology movement, which proposes a radical break in Catholic and Christian theology. Professor Paul E. Sigmund (Politics) has written a book, Liberation Theology at the Crossroads, that traces the development of this movement in a very systematic, sympathetic, but unbiased way. This is very helpful for those, like myself, who are eager to know more about a movement comprised of challenging and important ideas.

I found Professor Nell I. Painter's volume, Standing at Armageddon, a captivating study of America between 1877 and 1919. This is one of the most engaging history books I have read. I was alternatively appreciative, furious, laughing, disagreeing—but I was always learning something about America and

Harold T. Shapiro

Americans. I appreciated most this volume's point of view and the author's obvious concern for working people, Afro-American history, and women's history.

Between History and Literature by Professor Lionel Gossman (Romance Languages and Literatures) is a collection of his essays written over the last decade. Since I am not fully up to date on all the latest trends in literary and historical criticisms, I found this book quite bracing. The book deals with history (romances we believe in) as literature and literature (romances we do not believe in) as history. Essentially, these essays show that history is part literature (and we can, therefore, employ the techniques of literary criticism) and that literature is part history (and we can employ, therefore, the tools of historical criticism). Professor Gossman told me that the book was not important enough to be read by nonspecialists like myself. However, I found it quite rewarding and enjoyable, and Professor Gossman's honesty and rare modesty shine from every chapter.

In Communities of Discourse, Professor Robert Wuthnow (Sociology) confronts the principal underlying social currents that supported the Reformation, the Enlightenment, and European Socialism. It is quite a tour de force. When I first looked at the table of contents, I thought the entire project quite impossible, but Professor Wuthnow's analysis does bring considerable insight to each of those major developments in Western history. To quote from the author's introduction, "Its aim is to shed light on the ways in which ideas are shaped by their social situations yet manage to disengage from these situations." He brings the focus of a sociologist, one with a keen ear for ideology, to this analysis.

Professor Anthony Grafton's Forgers and Critics is a short book, and I enjoyed every page. It covers a narrow but captivating topic—how forgers of historical documents and/or literary texts have stimulated innovations in historical scholarship. Needless to say, these activities had less rewarding impacts as well—especially on their victims. In a peculiar way, Professor Grafton's fascinating case studies reminded me of the strategic games played by opposing sides in cryptography, where each side tries to construct unbreakable codes while its opponent is doing its best to expose the reality of the message.

Finally, there is a wonderful treat in store for those of you who have not read Theodore Weiss' From Princeton One Autumn Afternoon. (Professor Weiss is the Paton Foundation Professor of Ancient and Modern Literature and a fellow of the Institute for Advanced Study.) This is a spectacular collection of Weiss' poetry written over the last four decades. It would be presumptuous of me to comment on the nature of Weiss' poetry, but I cannot remember feeling so excited by any volume of verse. After every poem, indeed after many verses, I could hardly wait to share the experience with someone. For all lovers of poetry—and those still to be converted—I recommend this marvelous volume to you.

"Professor Gossman told me that the book was not important enough to be read by nonspecialists like myself. However, I found it quite rewarding and enjoyable. . . ."

B e y o n d
t h e
o b v i o u s.

P E U G E O T

1991 405 models from $15,300 to $21,700. †Call 1-800-447-2882. ‡MSRP. Excludes tax, title, options, registration and destination charges. *Based on R.L. Polk & Co. owner retention study of 'MY 1984-1986.

After more than a century of building fine automobiles, Peugeot creates cars so well-conceived that some of the best qualities of the car may not be apparent at a glance.

But those willing to take the time to look more closely will find themselves richly rewarded. With a distinctive European automobile whose rare combination of intelligent engineering, legendary driving comfort and enduring style has won the acclaim of automotive enthusiasts the world over.

All of which only begins to explain why people who own Peugeots keep them longer than most import cars on the road.*

Evidently, once you've looked beyond the obvious, it is difficult to see anything less.

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

OCTOBER 10, 1990

THE GUPPY HAS a rather unique way of handling the problems of parenthood.

And while we would never adopt this method, there are times when we can't help admiring its simplicity. Like when we're faced with the prospect of planning for a child's education.

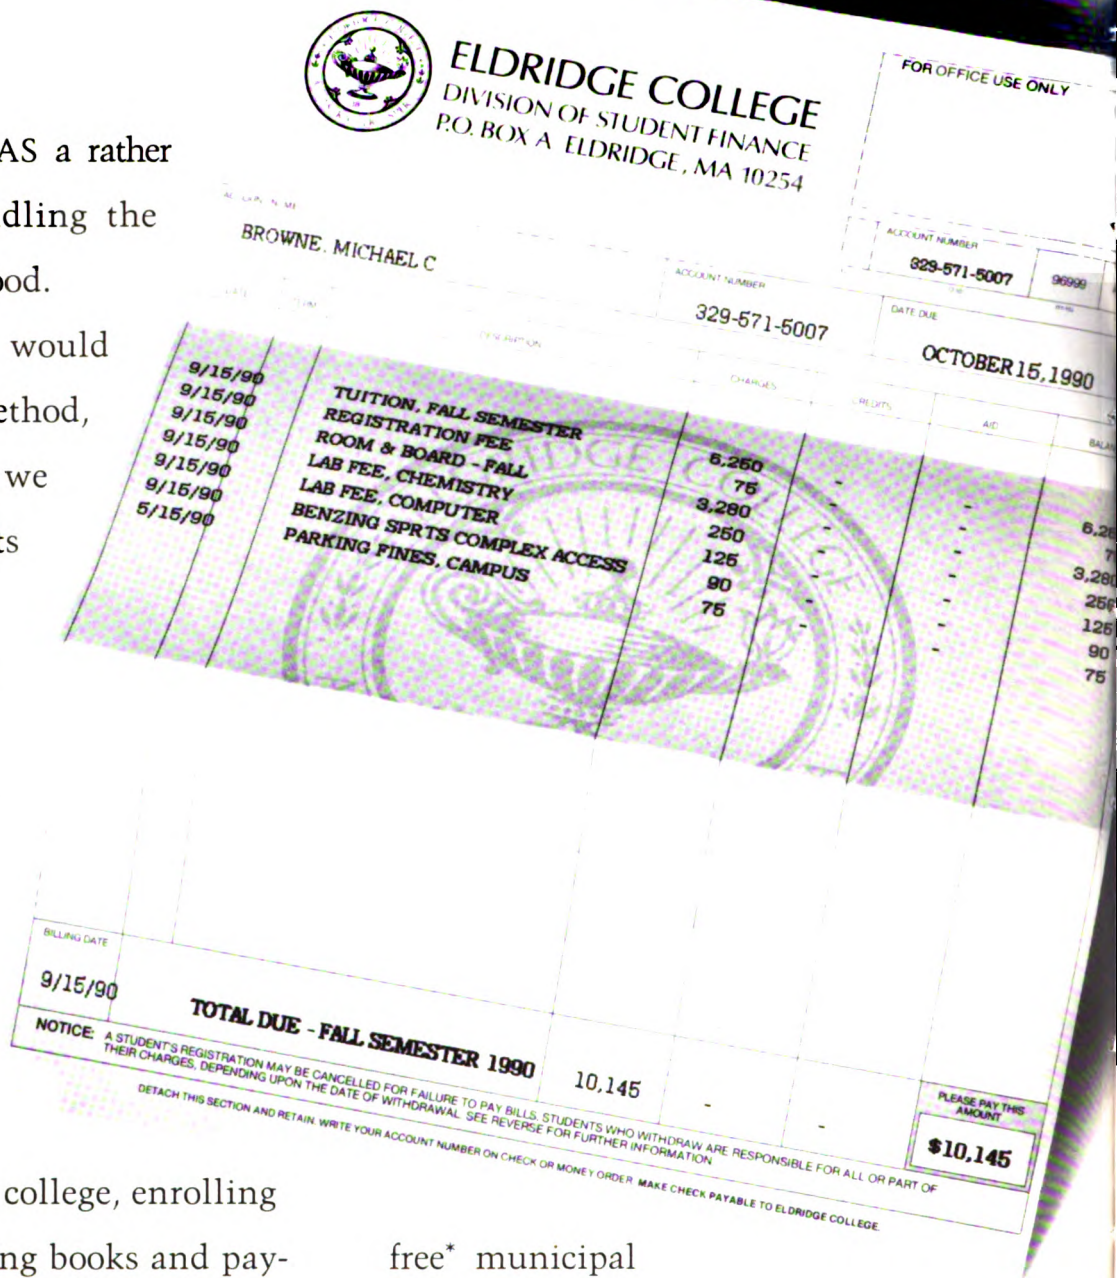

For as young as your little one may be, it won't be long before the little beezer is off to college, enrolling in Rhetoric 101, buying books and paying lab fees. (Not to mention making a request or two for spending money.)

Of course, there are a number of ways to handle this impending financial dilemma, but none, perhaps, more comforting than the College Investment Program from John Nuveen & Company.

Nuveen deals exclusively in tax-free* municipal bonds. So we can offer investors the relative security of a conservative portfolio (particularly relevant for something as important as your child's future), as well as tax-free income (so more of the money you earn goes towards your child's education).

Yet, it isn't just the tax-free nature

ELDRIDGE COLLEGE
DIVISION OF STUDENT FINANCE
P.O. BOX A ELDRIDGE, MA 10254

FOR OFFICE USE ONLY

ACCOUNT NUMBER: 829-571-5007
DATE DUE: OCTOBER 15, 1990

STUDENT NAME: BROWNE, MICHAEL C

DATE	DESCRIPTION	CHARGES	CREDITS	AID	BALANCE
9/15/90	TUITION, FALL SEMESTER	6,260			6,260
9/15/90	REGISTRATION FEE	75			7
9/15/90	ROOM & BOARD - FALL	3,280			3,280
9/15/90	LAB FEE, CHEMISTRY	250			250
9/15/90	LAB FEE, COMPUTER	125			125
9/15/90	BENZING SPRTS COMPLEX ACCESS	90			90
5/15/90	PARKING FINES, CAMPUS	75			75
TOTAL DUE - FALL SEMESTER 1990		10,145

NOTICE: A STUDENT'S REGISTRATION MAY BE CANCELLED FOR FAILURE TO PAY BILLS. STUDENTS WHO WITHDRAW ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR ALL OR PART OF THEIR CHARGES, DEPENDING UPON THE DATE OF WITHDRAWAL. SEE REVERSE FOR FURTHER INFORMATION.

DETACH THIS SECTION AND RETAIN. WRITE YOUR ACCOUNT NUMBER ON CHECK OR MONEY ORDER. MAKE CHECK PAYABLE TO ELDRIDGE COLLEGE.

PLEASE PAY THIS AMOUNT
$10,145

of the bonds that makes Nuveen investments so ideally suited to college funding. It has more to do with the way we select them.

NOW we know why GUPPIES eat their young.

We start by reviewing billions of dollars worth of municipal bonds each year. Only then do we finally invest in a select few (including some that other investment firms have overlooked).

The performance of these bonds is then scrupulously monitored over the long-term, with one goal in mind: to provide a high level of tax-free income over time, while still protecting our

A FREE OPPORTUNITY FOR PARENTS TO BECOME COLLEGE EDUCATED.

Have you wondered what tuition fees will be like 5, 10 or even 50 years from now? Then call us toll-free at 1-800-524-6500. We'll prepare a personalized tuition projection that will illustrate the cost of sending your child to any four year college in the country. And we'll send it to you free of charge.

client's initial investment.

And should you decide to choose
Nuveen for your child's college fund, you'll find your choice isn't limited to a particular University. (What if your child doesn't want to attend your old alma mater?) And the money that you invest with Nuveen is always yours to do with as you wish. In fact, you don't even have to use it for college.

To find out more about the ways you can finance your child's future without mortgaging your own, ask your personal banker, broker or financial adviser about the Nuveen Tax-Free College Investment Program.

For more complete information on Nuveen tax-free open end mutual funds or unit trusts, including charges and expenses, call for a prospectus. Read it carefully before you invest or send money.

*Income may be subject to state and local taxes. Capital gains, if any, will be subject to capital gains taxes.

NUVEEN

Specialists In Tax-Free
Investments Since 1898.

Alumni Expeditions '91

co-sponsored by the Alumni Council

Caribbean Oceanography & Sailing Program January 26 - February 3, 1991

Beneath the hull, crystal blue waters sparkle over the coral reefs of the Bahamas. On deck, some of the crew hoist sails, while others take water samples with marine scientists. You can be a working crew member on board the Research Vessel Westward, a 125 foot staysail schooner operating from St. Thomas, Virgin Islands. In a unique educational experience offered by Outdoor Action in cooperation with the Sea Education Association (SEA). We are repeating this unique and extremely popular program which brings Princeton alumni together with current Princeton students in a fascinating exploration of the marine world.

The program of oceanographic research focuses on specific scientific objectives relating to the Caribbean. As a participant you have an active role in all phases of the ship's research. Daily lectures and watch-standing, introduce you to basic ocean sampling techniques. Working hand-in-hand with the ship's crew and scientific staff you will deploy and retrieve oceanographic gear, collect samples, process and analyze data and report results. Learn to sail by setting and striking sails, taking the helm, navigating, piloting, and monitoring the engine room. During the week you will be taught and given increasing responsibility for Westward's handling and the daily operations of sailing this magnificent vessel.

The Virgin Islands offers a rare opportunity to combine learning about the sea, sailing a research vessel, and exploration of the Caribbean culture with the fun of snorkling in protected reefs, and getting to know other alumni and Princeton students. Keep in mind that this is a research voyage, not a charter cruise. You will be an integral part of a hard working crew. You may bring children 16 and over.

The cost for the program will be $875.00 per person which will cover all ocean expenses for the week (excluding travel costs to and from St. Thomas). To register please return the enclosed registration form with a $200.00 deposit per person.

Westward is U.S. registered and is inspected and certified by the U.S. Coast Guard as a Sailing School Vessel. She is required to meet safety standards that differ from those of a passenger vessel on a comparable route. Westward meets or exceeds all safety requirements for her class.

Alumni Expeditions '91

Name(s) _____ Class _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Telephone _____ Check for $ _____ enclosed.

I cannot attend this program, but please send me information about Friends of Outdoor Action and future Alumni Programs.

Please return to Outdoor Action, 315 West College, Princeton, NJ 08544

Digitized by Google

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

CONTINUING THE ALUMNI PRINCETONIAN, FOUNDED IN 1894

FEATURES

18 THE MAN WHO NEVER STOPS

Robert Caro '57 Redefines

Political Biography

by Stephen Harrigan

24 BREAKING THE SIGHT BARRIER

Recording for the Blind Gives

Eyes to Thousands

*by Peter B. Putnam '42 50

DEPARTMENTS

5 LETTERS

8 BOOKS

13 PRINCETON NOTEBOOK

University Opens 245th Year;

Annual Giving Raises $18.6 Million

17 ON THE CAMPUS

The Costs of Preprofessionalism

by Matthew T. Henshon '91

27 SPORTS

Football Bows to Cornell in Opener;

Men's Basketball to Face National Champion

36 CLASS NOTES

52 MEMORIALS

57 FIRST PERSON

Reading the Moscow Press

by Deborah Kaple GS

On The Cover

With assistance from dad, a member of the Class of 1994 moves into his new quarters in Rockefeller College.

Photo by Larry French.

FROM THE ARCHIVES

Fashions and haircuts change, but the scene—reminiscent of our cover shot—remains the same. The Princeton Packet of September 15, 1955, captioned this photograph "Moving In Day for Princeton Frosh." It shows Robert Schanzer '59 (left) and classmate Ben Harbin carrying their belongings into Henry Hall. Looking on is Martha Dix, the daughter of then University Librarian William S. Dix.

PHOTO COURTESY OF PRINCETON PACKET

J. I. MERRITT '66, Editor

ANDREW C. MYTELKA '85, Managing Editor

DAVID WILLIAMSON III '84, Staff Writer

NUALA O'CONNOR '89, Assistant Editor

STACY M. WZOLA, Art Director

NANCY S. MACMILLAN, Business Manager

LOLLY O'BRIEN, Advertising Director

R. T. HOWELL, Production Manager

LORRAINE DONEKER, Graphic Assistant

BOARD OF EDITORIAL DIRECTION

EDWARD R. WEIDLEN '68, Chairman

LEA B. BELKIN GELB '82 • LONDON Y. JONES '66

JAMES P. KELLY, Jr. '76 • ELLIOTT D. LEE '74

PATRICIA H. MARKS '72 • JOHN A. MCPHEE '53

PUBLICATION BOARD

DOROTHY L. BEDFORD '78, Chairman

ROBERT K. DURKEE '69 • ROBY HARRINGTON III '51

WALTER H. LIPPINCOTT, Jr. '60 • PETER O. PRICE '62

PETER G. SMITH '46 • DANIEL N. WHITE '65

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE

ROBERT F. SENNOTT, JR.

Ivy League Magazine Network

254 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001 • (212) 684-5603

LOCAL ADVERTISING/PRINCETON EXCHANGE

LOLLY O'BRIEN (609) 258-4886

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is an independent magazine supported by alumni class subscriptions and by paid advertising. Its purpose is to record news of the alumni and at the same time to review without partiality the achievements and problems of the administration, the faculty, and the student body of Princeton University. The views expressed in the Alumni Weekly are those of signed contributors or the editor and do not necessarily represent official positions of the university.

PUBLISHED BY

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS

41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540

Telephone (609) 258-4885

TWX 510-685-2306 UNIV PRESS PRIN • Fax (609) 258-6305

ELECTRONIC PAW BBS: (609) 258-3602

Materials can be transmitted to our offices via telecommunications, using the upload facility in the file-transfer section of the Electronic PAW computer bulletin board system. Its protocols are 300/1200/2400 baud, eight data bits, one stop bit, and no parity. It is online 24 hours a day.

PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY (ISSN 0149-9270)

Vol. 91, No. 2, October 10, 1990

Printed by William Byrd Press, Richmond, Va. Annual subscription $19.50 (foreign postage $5 extra); single copies $1.50. All orders must be paid in advance. Copyright © 1990 Princeton University Press. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Second-class postage paid at Richmond, Va., and at additional mailing office.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to PAW Address Changes, 3175 Princeton Pike, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

Third class matter enclosed.

WATCH THIS SPACE..

As a regular feature in the PAW, the Alumni Council has reserved this inside front cover to:

- bring you notice of upcoming events
- recognize volunteers and distinguished alumni
- ask for nominations for offices and awards
- discuss issues important to alumni

We hope that you will watch this space each issue and participate fully in the programs and privileges of membership in the Alumni Association of Princeton University.

What is the Alumni Council? What does it do for YOU?

The Alumni Council is the governing body for the more than 65,000 members of the Princeton University Alumni Association. It's also the name used for the Maclean House staff and offices. The 300+ volunteers — including all class and club presidents, standing committee chairs, and designated members — are led by Poss Parham '52, chair; Dorothy Bedford '78, vice chair; Ginny Corson '74, treasurer; and Al Olenzak '62 ChemE, assistant treasurer.

Providing leadership for and representing alumni interests to the University, the Alumni Council works with the staff to plan and coordinate the many programs for alumni, parents, and students — the Honor Assembly, Maclean Fellowship, Alumni Day, Princeton Today, Alumni Colleges, Regional Conferences, Seminars, Club Speaker programs, Alumni Trustee elections, and wonderful Reunions with the P-rade, Old Guard luncheon, and Alumni Forums.

Who is an alumnus?

Any person who has officially matriculated at Princeton as an undergraduate becomes an alumnus upon the graduation of that person's class, and any person who has been enrolled as a regular or visiting student in the Graduate School, and has completed at least one term of full-time work, or the equivalent, becomes an alumnus upon that person's departure...the Constitution of the Alumni Association, 1985.

Key Alumni Council Events 1990-91

Oct. 4 - 6	Princeton Today
Oct. 5 - 8	Alumni College Martha's Vineyard
Oct. 25 - Nov. 4	Alumni College: Soviet Union
Nov. 5	Maclean Fellow Public Lecture
Feb. 16	Alumni Day & Service of Remembrance
Mar. 14 - 24	Alumni College: Eastern Europe
April 4 - 6	Princeton Today
May 2 - 4	Princeton Today
June 6 - 9	Reunions
June 7	Meeting of the Alumni Council
June 8	Annual Meeting of the Alumni Association
June	Alumni College on Campus: Dates TBA
June 29 - July 6	Alumni College: Grand Canyon Rafting
July 16 - 25	Alumni College: Alaska

For additional information about class, club or group activities, continuing education, and alumni mailing and reporting services, call 609-258-1900 or fax 258-1281...or stop by Maclean House to visit.

Alumni
Princeton

Council
University

Digitized by Google

Why Greeks Flourish

As the president of one of Princeton's eight undergraduate fraternities (D.K.E.), I would like to comment on the letter in the June 13 PAW assailing the campus's fledgling Greek organizations.

It shouldn't surprise anyone that the Greeks are flourishing at Princeton. In the case of sororities, women arriving on the campus find themselves a minority; yet, unless they are politically motivated, they have no female forum to join. For many women, sororities fill this void. Princeton's sororities claim a total of roughly 150 members and are swamped with prospective pledges. Obviously, these organizations are providing a service to women that is sorely lacking at Princeton.

Fraternities are beginning to serve a similar purpose. After an absence of more than a century, fraternities returned to the campus shortly after Sally Frank '80 filed suit against the all-male eating clubs, when it became clear that the university would no longer support all-male forums on the campus. As the tide has swung against the all-male clubs, the fraternity population has boomed to some 300 members. This number will surely increase if the last two all-male clubs become coeducational, as the N.J. Supreme Court has ordered.

Why should a majority need a support system? When I arrived on the campus as a freshman, I felt threatened by the more political women's group, whose members labeled me a sexist pig because I didn't support coeducation in the eating clubs. As a male, I was also targeted as a potential rapist, on the assertion that seven out of ten men will rape or attempt to rape a woman while at college. One radical brochure handed to me during Freshman Week even called for the selective castration of men to control the world's problems!

These are the reasons why the Greek system is growing at Princeton. Both sexes are beginning to realize that, in the fight to eliminate sexism in society, we can't deny that differences exist between men and women. Our generation has grown up in an era of radical "neuterization," when the emphasis has been on becoming "people" as opposed to men and women. It's good for society to judge us on our individual merits, but to deny our sexuality is wrong. Fraternities and sororities allow us to identify with peers of our own sex and to develop our maleness and femaleness.

TALBOT LOGAN '91
Princeton, N.J.

Support for SHARE

As a member of the Class of 1989 who spent last year working on the campus, I feel that I can add some perspective on Matt Henshon '91's article about the Nassau Hall sit-in supporting another full-time position for the SHARE office (On the Campus, June 13).

The most interesting part of the story took place after the occupation ended. Students, most of whom had never previously engaged in political action on the campus, staged a twelve-day vigil on Cannon Green under President Shapiro's window. They set up an information table, distributed literature, and educated hundreds about sexual harassment and assault. Nearly four hundred seniors wore armbands at graduation to show their support for a strong SHARE program. A petition requesting a second full-time position for SHARE was signed by well over four thousand people, unequivocally demonstrating that the university community cares about survivors and potential survivors of sexual harassment and assault.

Unfortunately, in spite of such support, the administration has yet to demonstrate a desire to fulfill the needs of survivors. Two months ago, the university's continued refusal to provide a second full-time position led to the loss of the entire professional staff of SHARE. Despite a meeting at which a broad section of the community emphasized the absolute need for openness, an interim director of SHARE was hired with such paternalistic secrecy that the university refuses even to disclose who was consulted in the decision-making process.

Such secrecy undermines the position of the new SHARE director. It prevents the entire university from working together to deal with sexual violence, and it inevitably erodes the trust necessary for the survival of a community. It is time for the university to begin behaving responsibly and to provide the support, services, and education its community requires.

MARSHALL GENE FLAX '89
Princeton, N.J.

Two Princetons?

After years of complaining about how Princeton's admission policies had alienated the Princeton family, I began searching for a solution while trying to understand what went wrong. I believe that the root of the problem is the wealth accumulated by the university since World War II.

When I attended Princeton, the university was a financial orphan compared to Harvard and Yale. A preponderance of paying prep-school kids were necessary to meet the annual budget. Then came Perry Hall '17's money machine, primed to advantageously gobble up wartime savings. Confiscatory income and estate tax rates made fundraising all the easier. Need-blind admissions followed—a democratic meritocracy. Who could argue with these noble intentions?

Unfortunately, an examination of the Princeton alumni directory discloses huge concentrations of graduates in the affluent suburbs of Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and other northeastern (as well as southern) states. In order for the university to go national—let alone international—and achieve real meritocracy, places in each freshman class had to be taken away from those families that had traditionally sent their kids to Princeton.

In the decade prior to coeducation, Princeton's undergraduate classes had about 800 members. Today, Princeton's classes number about 1,200 boys and girls. While the size of classes has increased almost 50 percent, the percentage of alumni legacies in a typical class has declined from Exceptional Experiences for Selective Travelers.

Egypt	Ancient.
Greece
Asia Minor
the Aegean	Classical.
Carthage
Central Asia
the Kyber Pass	Mysterious.
India
Nepal
the Himalayas	Oriental.
Japan
Southeast Asia
Java	Enigmatic.
Borneo
Ceylon
Sumatra
South America	Primitive.
the Galapagos
the Amazon
Ancient Civilizations	Vibrant.
the Andes
Australia
New Zealand	Compelling.
New Guinea
Kenya
Tanzania	Exciting.
the Seychelles
Northern Italy
Burgundy	Artistic.
Southwest France
Alsace-Lorraine
the Rhine
the Moselle	Cultural.
Flanders
Scotland
Wales	Historic.

Highly acclaimed itineraries, especially designed for alumni of Princeton, Harvard, Yale, and other distinguished universities. For further information, please contact:

 Alumni Flights Abroad
Department PR 168
A.F.A. Plaza
425 Cherry Street
Bedford Hills, New York 10507
TOLL FREE 1-800-AFA-8700
N.Y. State (914) 241-0111

STEWARTSON-DOUGHERTY
Real Estate Associates
366 Nassau Street
Princeton, N.J. 08540
PHONE: 609-921-7784

HISTORIC MT. ROSE

This charming late 18th century two-story salt box house is in Mt. Rose Village, Hopewell Township. It is light, airy and in excellent condition. The country setting is only two miles from Hopewell Borough, four miles from Pennington and five miles from Princeton Borough. It has eight rooms, including four bedrooms, two baths, and a barn-garage with a woodshed. $228,000

Robert Dougherty '50 Julie Douglas w/'41
Paul Douglas '41 Betsy Stewardson Ford w/'54
Georgia Graham w/'52 J. B. Smith '45
Diane Unruh w/'70 Barbara Broad w/'38
Betty McClelland w/'50 Judy Perrine s/'69
For no obligation—Information about real estate in the Princeton area call (609) 921-7784 or Outside of New Jersey 1-800-542-0067.

REALTORS

Representing Princeton Executive HomeSearch

A Perfect Place For A ...

Weekend Escape

Imagine... THE RESIDENCE INN*

$79.00*

- Studio Suites with Queen Sized Beds.
- Separate Living Room, many with Fireplaces.
- Fully Equipped Kitchens.
- Complimentary Continental Breakfast.
- Heated Pool, Whirlpool and Sport Court.

*Rates valid Friday and Saturday nights only based upon availability. Rates are subject to 6% New Jersey State Sales Tax. Escape Rates not valid in conjunction with other discounts.

THE RESIDENCE INN PRINCETON
4225 Route One • Princeton, NJ 08540
(201) 329-9600

40 percent to less than 15 percent.

This decline in legacies, plus changes in the tax laws and the effects of inflation, have made alumni less inclined to support Princeton financially. As a result, the university is finding it increasingly difficult to support its expensive policy of need-blind admissions. As a solution, I propose that the university expand its physical plant in order to enlarge the size of the classes to approximately 2,000. This in turn would enable a class to accommodate between 250 and 300 alumni sons and daughters, or about double the number in a typical class now. Such an increase would make alumni more inclined to give, thus easing Princeton's budget.

As a Harvard contemporary recently told me, "There have always been two Harvards. Why do you think we never have alumni problems? You Princeton fellows are so unsophisticated." I guess we are!

CHARLES F. HUBER '51
New York, N.Y.

Disease of Addiction

Your article on drinking at Princeton (PAW, March 21) underscores the fact that alcohol is an addictive substance. Whatever the alcoholic's initial reasons for drinking may have been, once the disease of addiction takes over, it becomes its own reason for drinking. In this regard, no one—movie stars, politicians' wives, businessmen, students, or dervicts—is any different. Alcoholism is an insidious leveler, and the frequency and intensity of drinking increase the risk of becoming an alcoholic.

With many others, I believe there exists a genetic predisposition toward alcoholism. When the craving is biological, it is not amenable to logical, intellectual, or emotional appeals. It should not be viewed as a moral problem but must be treated as a disease. And it cannot be fought alone. For the progressing alcoholic, there are only three choices: death, insanity, or Alcoholics Anonymous.

Recovering alcoholics merit respect, for they are fighting heroic personal battles with an ever-present deadly enemy as they learn to face life as it is, without a crutch, and to find joy in living.

GEORGE S. WEBER '53, M.D.
Woodbury, N.J.

Tiger Football

Your article on N.F.L. draftees (PAW, July 18) states that twelfth-round pick Judd Garrett '90 was the first Princetonian to be selected since Bob Holly '82 was picked in the eleventh round. You overlooked Princeton's best player of the decade. Jonathan Schultheis '83, a three-year starter at offensive tackle for the Tigers, was taken in the seventh round by the Philadelphia Eagles.

JOHN T. HOMPE '83
London, England

A friend who is an alumnus of Columbia had several of the many extra tickets available for last fall's Columbia-Yale football game and invited me, my brother (a Yale graduate from the sixties), and his teenage son to the game. When we sat down, my brother confessed that, because Yale's style of play was so dull, he hadn't seen an Eli game in ten years—but that he would kill to see the Princeton single wing just one more time. His son said, "The what?"—a remark that left me and my brother shaking our heads. Visions flashed through my mind of Weightman Conner, Greg Riley, Ivory Jim Hunter, and other members of Cannon Club who played the single wing in my senior year.

Our host refused any consideration for the tickets, and I wondered what to do with the $36 I should have owed him. The solution came after I read in your letters section (PAW, October 25, 1989) that Art Pitts '54 was reviving the single wing at Pretty Eagle Catholic School, in St. Xavier, Montana. So I sent the $36 to Pretty Eagle in the name of our Columbia benefactor.

MICHAEL C. DEVINE '62
New York, N.Y.

Gays Lived in Fear

In regard to the letters about homosexuality (PAW, April 18): homophobia drove me out of Princeton—twice. When I was an undergraduate in 1953, fear of discovery paralyzed me and many others, both students and professors, some of whom were expelled or fired for their sexual orientation.

As a graduate student in the history department, I declined an assistantship that would have allowed me to stay at Princeton to teach while I finished my dissertation. I did so out of fear that I might be expelled, as had a graduate student the year before, after proctors apprehended him propositioning an undergraduate in Firestone Library. That was before the now defunct Concerned Alumni of Princeton began its anti-gay campaign in the 1970s! Since then, I wonder how many undergraduates, graduate students, and faculty members have been expelled or forced to resign for homosexual conduct. What policy does the university now follow, and when was it adopted?

WILLIAM A. PERCY '55 '64
Boston, Mass.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The university's Rights, Rules, and Responsibilities booklet has for many years called for respect for individuals and prohibited actions that threaten or intimidate people. About five years ago, the booklet was revised to specify that the university would not tolerate abusive behavior based on sexual orientation. In 1985, the university amended its equal-opportunity policy to forbid discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation.

Remembering Ella

I was gladdened—along, I'm sure, with many other Princetonians—to read in the July 18 PAW that Ella Fitzgerald attended commencement this year to receive a richly deserved honorary degree.

I wonder how many of your readers can recall an earlier visit by Ella to Princeton. This occurred on Friday evening, November 20, 1936, when she sang with Chick Webb's band in the old gym. The band members took a night off from their regular job at the Savoy Ballroom to play a one-nighter at Princeton on the final weekend of the football season. (I have verified the date from a diary I kept during that fall of my freshman year.)

Ella was eighteen years old at the time. She sparkled—and the band was tremendous. The soloists included Taft Jordan on trumpet, Sandy Williams on trombone, the great unsung tenor saxophonist Teddy McRae—and of course, the incomparable little Chick himself on drums. Golden memories!

HERB SHULTZ '40
Kingston, N.Y.

The people who drive one are very secure.

P E U G E O T
Beyond the obvious. SM

1991 505 models from $18,590 to $26,100.* Call 1-800-447-2882. *MSRP. Excludes tax, title, options, registration and destination charges.

Do you feel secure in your automobile?

Addressing this concern has been a Peugeot goal for 100 years. And nowhere is that better demonstrated than in the 8-passenger 505 SW8 and SW8 Turbo wagons.

Within a sleek, graceful body, Peugeot has amassed one of the industry's longest lists of features to help you avoid danger. In the event of the unforeseen, however, front and rear crumple zones will collapse at a controlled rate, dissipating the force of an impact.

But the most dramatic safety feature is that, unlike all other wagons, the SW8 has its third seat facing forward. Children love to sit in the back, and in a Peugeot, they face away from the crumple zone, and potential harm. It just seemed the obvious thing to do.

Clash on the Academic Front Lines

TENURED RADICALS: HOW POLITICS HAS CORRUPTED OUR HIGHER EDUCATION

Roger Kimball • Harper & Row, $18.95

WELCOME TO THE ideological battlefields of contemporary academia. Roger Kimball, a former college teacher who is now managing editor of the journal New Criterion, provides a point of view for some of the most controversial recent developments in American colleges and universities. Although Princeton is not one of Kimball's primary targets, it is the first university cited in his book, and several of its best-known professors—Elaine Showalter, Michael Graves, and Cornel West '80, among others—come in for criticism.

Kimball's view is clear throughout: proponents of new methods of literary criticism, of feminist studies, of African-American, Chicano, and other ethnic studies "have become the dominant voice[s] in the humanities departments of many of our best colleges and universities." They have abandoned the goal of "preserving and transmitting our intellectual and cultural heritage," "installed the entire radical menu" in the curriculum, and politicized the appointment and tenure process. The result is the "triumph of ideologically motivated assaults on the intellectual and moral substance of our culture" and the corruption referred to in the book's subtitle. His primary targets are what he sometimes calls "Oppression Studies"—the courses and programs in African-American studies, women's studies, Chicano and Latino studies, gay and lesbian studies, and so on that have proliferated on American campuses in recent years. But he also deplores the attention currently being given to contemporary popular culture—courses in film studies, TV, MTV, Hollywood, pulp novels, etc.

Here Kimball is slightly more equivocal. He allows, briefly, that there may be some legitimacy in the serious study of mass culture but moves quickly to argue that "the study of popular culture has been pursued primarily as a means of attacking the traditional academic concern with high culture." He is content to assert the mala fides of those works in these areas and to move on to other targets.

Kimball carries on his polemics with an ear well-attuned to the most extreme claims and arguments and to the often prolix and jargon-filled language with which members of the intellectual left identify one another—and sometimes exclude or dismiss colleagues of more conventional disposition. He has attended professional meetings and weekend conferences at which some of the more outlandish rhetoric is to be heard. He has read the pamphlets through which the guerrilla warfare in the humanities is carried on, and followed ate the situation—to conclude, for example, that the teaching of literature has been totally taken over by structuralist, post-structuralist, deconstructionist, Lacanian, radical feminist, New Historicist, and other approaches, or that texts by contemporary black, Asian, Hispanic, and Third World writers have displaced those by "dead white European males."

Yet this is simply not the case. Instruction at Princeton and at almost all other high-quality institutions still gives substantial attention to the grand tradition that reaches back to Homer and the Hebrew scriptures and through classical antiquity, the Middle Ages, and the Renaissance to modern times. Most literary departments have maintained diverse approaches, sometimes achieving beneficial educational effects by the interplay of differing methods and perspectives. The high culture of the West has not been expelled from college for bad behavior. Kimball is so busy collecting examples of demands for radical change or of pretentious or silly language that he fails to address a more central issue.

In recent years, the concepts of "quality," "clarity," and "objectivity" have been repeatedly attacked and in some cases replaced by the criterion of political correctness. As a result, students sometimes fear that their grades or recommendations will depend on whether they appear "P.C." (politically correct). Senior faculty members sometimes suspect that they will not be taken seriously unless they, too, are P.C. "Politically correct" does not refer primarily to electoral politics, or simply to a receptivity to insights based on feminism or Marxism, or to a sympathy for the situation of the poor, minorities, and those who have sometimes been excluded from American colleges and universities. It implies specific attitudes about the control of cultural production within a society, about the position of women, minorities, and others within it, and about related cultural and ecological issues. These attitudes are signaled by an elaborate and some episodes (the discovery that the late Paul de Man, a noted literary theoretician at Yale, once collaborated with the Nazis) with acerbic glee.

GRAPHIC BY STACY M. WSZOLA

He has a keen eye for the hypocrisy of academics from affluent universities who argue that "in liberal bourgeois society teaching must be seen primarily as a means by which the ruling class perpetuates or 'reproduces' inequitable class relations." He is alert to the irony that the criticisms of elitism are often expressed in a vocabulary accessible only to a very narrow elite. All this gives the book a distinctive flavor, which will seem witty and thought provoking to some and, to borrow Kimball's favorite word, rebarbative to others.

But has he established his case, and has he contributed usefully to the hard decisions that need to be made? Has politics corrupted American higher education, and if so, is there any way out?

It is easy for an observer, especially one who relies primarily on academic conferences and pamphlets, to exagger-

HERE'S WHY THE SMART MONEY IS GOING WITH TIAA-CREF AS IF THE FUTURE DEPENDDED ON IT

© 1990 TIAA-CREF

Because it does.

Smart investors know retirement planning is a specialized skill—and your future depends on how well your retirement system performs.

TIAA-CREF has been the premier retirement system for people in education and research for over 70 years. We believe that steady incremental growth is the most effective way to build retirement income. This investment philosophy has enabled hundreds of thousands of people like you to enjoy a comfortable retirement. And over a million more are now planning for the future with TIAA-CREF.

SMART MONEY LOOKS FOR SECURITY, GROWTH AND DIVERSITY FOR RETIREMENT SAVINGS.

Security—so the resources are sure to be there when the time for retirement arrives. Growth—so your retirement income will be sufficient for the kind of retirement you want. And diversity—to help protect you against volatility in any particular market and let you benefit from the strengths of several types of investments.

THAT'S EXACTLY WHAT YOU GET WITH TIAA-CREF.

TIAA's traditional annuity gives you maximum safety, guaranteeing your principal and a specified rate of interest. And TIAA offers you the opportunity for additional growth through dividends—which we've declared every year for 41 years. In fact, TIAA's net earned rate has exceeded the industry average for every one of those years.¹

CREF's variable annuity offers opportunities for growth through four different investment accounts,² each managed with the long-term perspective essential to sound retirement planning:

The CREF Stock Account—a diversified portfolio of domestic and international stocks, which has outperformed the S&P 500 Index and the mutual fund industry averages for the last 5- and 10-year periods.³

The CREF Money Market Account—a top performer that has beaten the industry average virtually since its inception.⁴

The new CREF Bond Market Account—an actively traded portfolio of fixed-income securities and money market instruments.

The new CREF Social Choice Account—a balanced portfolio of bonds, money market instruments, and common stocks that enables participants to avoid investments in firms whose activities they do not wish to support.

CALL 1 800 842-2776 TO FIND OUT MORE.

Our experienced retirement counselors will be happy to answer your questions and tell you more about retirement annuities from TIAA-CREF.

Experience. Performance. Strength. Qualities that make TIAA-CREF the retirement system against which others are measured.

Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

PRINCETON'S PREMIER ESTATE

TWIN ELMS...thirty acres with every possible amenity, including, of course, pool, tennis court, riding ring, barn, caretaker's cottage, guest house, lilac grove, pond...and over ten thousand square feet of pre-Revolutionary appointments.

JOHN T.
HENDERSON INC.

REALTORS
33 WITHERSPOON ST.
PRINCETON, N.J.
(609)921-9300

constantly changing vocabulary and by positions so precisely defined that even those deeply sympathetic to a cause may find themselves labeled opponents of it. The pressure to be P.C. may be more intense on junior professors than on students. A natural anxiety about their prospects for appointment and advancement makes them vulnerable to the implicit demand by some colleagues that they show the "correct" attitudes and commitments.

These pressures are serious and demand serious analysis and response. Yet Kimball's book does little to distinguish intellectual coercion from his examples of rhetorical fluff or hostility to traditional ideas about culture. Indeed, by basing his argument on the claim that "tenured radicals" and their sheeplike followers have abandoned their responsibility to "pursue and transmit our cultural heritage," he plays into the hands of those who claim that any deviation from their views is sexist or racist. Kimball seems content to oppose all efforts to admit into the curriculum new works, neglected writings by women and minorities, and the important emerging literature of the Third World, not to mention the issues and attitudes that shape the actions of large portions of the world's population. Nor does he seem receptive to any new approaches or methods or to flexibility in pedagogical tactics. If he had been in control of the curriculum for the last fifty years, could we study Virginia Woolf, James Joyce, Pablo Picasso, Igor Stravinsky, and Mary Cassatt, let alone Langston Hughes or Toni Morrison?

While Kimball is busy slamming the door on the authors and subjects he deplores, the forces of "political correctness" crawl in through the windows. The problems they pose require a totally different strategy from that advocated in Tenured Radicals. Our institutions must show that they are determined to incorporate the concerns and perceptions of women, minorities, and Third World thinkers and writers and to foster the serious study of contemporary society; but they must be equally determined to resist all tendencies to intimidate and obfuscate. To date, American colleges and universities have most often looked the other way, hoped the problem would disappear, or tried with as much money as needed to negotiate a way out. These strategies put a premium on managerial and fundraising skills and leave intellectual courage and conviction out of the picture.

The faculties of American colleges and universities have large numbers of teachers and scholars who are alert to the changing needs of students and who want to help them study both new authors and texts of perennial interest and significance. They want to maintain openness, fairness, and high standards. But they are rarely on the conference circuit and are often undervalued (and undercompensated) at their home institutions. These colleagues need to be supported and encouraged to speak frankly and without fear of misrepresentation or intimidation from either side in today's ideological battles, for on them depends much of the learning that goes on in our colleges and universities—learning on which so much of our future depends.

—W. Robert Connor *61

Bob Connor taught in the classics department at Princeton for twenty-five years, served as chairman of the Humanities Council from 1982 to 1989, and is now director of the National Humanities Center, in North Carolina.

The Other Side Of Paradise

THE FINAL CLUB

Geoffrey Wolff '60 • Alfred A. Knopf, $19.95

SOCIAL SNOBBERY has always been perceived as a peculiarly Princetonian pastime. Perhaps this image originated in the eighteenth century, when Princeton was known as the most "Southern" of the elite Northern schools—the place where scions of the Southern elite came to finish their education. Throughout the twentieth century, certainly, the university has had the reputation of being a country club for the rich—a tweedy, genteel, faintly anti-intellectual place.

Whatever its genesis, this perception of elitism was codified forever in This Side of Paradise, the first (and not very good) novel of F. Scott Fitzgerald '17. Through the ambitions and musings of his protagonist, Amory Blaine, Fitzgerald glorified Princeton and its many discriminatory institutions. To Blaine, the only thing that matters is social standing, as determined on the football field, in the competitions for the board of the Daily Princetonian, and, most of all, at the eating clubs. (One wonders how many Princeton students have been moved to bicker at Ivy Club because Fitzgerald described it as "detached and breathlessly aristocratic.")

Geoffrey Wolff '60

PHOTO BY JUSTIN WOLFF

Geoffrey Wolff launches a head-on assault on these cherished, if somewhat romanticized, Princeton myths in his new novel, The Final Club. Not since Fitzgerald has an author-alumnus focused so intently on Princeton—albeit on a much different Princeton from Fitzgerald's. Indeed, this novel could well have been titled The Flip Side of Paradise, because it attacks many of the icons of Princeton so lovingly burnished by Fitzgerald. Not surprisingly, Wolff takes aim at the club system.

The clubs are logical targets. In essence, The Final Club serves as a vehicle to examine social class and elitism in the 1950s, and no institution at Princeton better illustrates these complex issues than the club system. The clubs were founded, as Wolff writes, by the "ten to exclude the two thousand." By the 1950s, however, the clubs had turned this principle of selectivity on its head: the two thousand were excluding the ten. What's more, the grounds for exclusion often had nasty ethnic or elitist undertones: more often than not, the "unchubbable" students were Jewish or were classified as social misfits.

In the years following World War II, the seventeen clubs that then existed managed to keep a lid on the problem by adopting the so-called "100 percent" system. Under this plan, students who completed the rigorous bicker process but didn't receive any bids were found places in the clubs—usually after much negotiation on the Inter-Club Council over how to allocate the undesirables. These few students became known, deprecatingly, as "100 percenters."

In 1958—Wolff's sophomore year, not incidentally—the 100 percent system broke down. Instead of a handful of 100 percenters, more than twenty students didn't get bids by the time bicker was over. Many of those without bids were Jews, and soon charges of discrimination appeared in the national press. So came about Princeton's infamous "Dirty Bicker." It wasn't one of Princeton's better moments, and it's a central episode in The Final Club. Wolff's protagonist,

Varsity Sweater

Celebrate your sport with our 100% wool bulky knit sweaters. Individually loomed, handfinished by Maine craftsmen and ideal for your own letter or as is. Available in black, white and black with orange "P" woven into design. Letters sewn free of charge. Sizes: 38-52; Solids: $110.00; Woven "P" design $120.00 (Add $3.00 shipping and handling)

Mail & Phone Orders Welcome

Use your H. Gross Charge, Visa, MasterCard or American Express

Store Hours

Mon-Wed	9:30-6:00
Thurs-Fri	9:30-9:00
Saturday	9:30-6:00
Sunday	12:00-5:00

One Palmer Square
Princeton, NJ 08542
609-924-6088

At the sign of the goose...®

This holiday - give a classic . . .

A COLLEGE CLASSIC by Masterworks

Windsor Rocker
$225.00*

Captain's Chair
$215.00*

Windsor Arm Chair
$215.00*

Each Masterworks chair is individually handcrafted from selected cherry and maple hardwoods, tastefully accented in gold and emblazoned with your college insignia.

Your College Classic may be personalized for an additional $15.00 with an engraved brass plaque affixed to the back header bearing the recipient's name and year of graduation.

Reserve your College Classic today by calling

Toll Free: 1-800-443-9649

Visa and Mastercard accepted

* Shipping and handling, $35.00. For Massachusetts deliveries, please add 5% tax. Please allow 4-6 weeks for delivery.

Masterworks, Thirty Downing Street, Hingham, MA 02043

COME HOME TO THE JOHN O'HARA HOUSE!

An understated residence with an immortalized terrace! 2½ acres of woods and gardens in Princeton Twp. $975,000.

JOHN T.
HENDERSON INC.

REALTORS
33 WITHERSPOON ST.
PRINCETON, N.J.
(609)921-9300

IN HISTORIC PRINCETON

If you like friendly country inns where a full course breakfast is served every morning, late night snacks are served every evening, cocktails are served in the living room, where you can relax, even work out... you will love the Compri Club.

All is inclusive... you don't have to worry about a thing, we've combined it into one great club package

$59.00 Per Night *

For reservations
call (609) 520-1200

(Compri) Hotel

Route 1 and Ridge Road
100 Independence Way Princeton, N.J. 08540

*Subject To Availability

Nathaniel Clay, a half-Jewish graduate of a public school, is one of the 100 percenters of 1958.

One of Wolff's earlier books, a memoir about his father called The Duke of Deception, provides some interesting insights into Dirty Bicker. Reading it, we see that many of the incidents he describes in The Final Club were lifted, almost verbatim, from his personal experience. (There's a great story, for instance, in both books about a sophomore visiting Cottage Club and asking to see the boiler room. "It's sound," he tells the club president. "I'll buy it.") But there's more in The Duke of Deception. We discover that Wolff himself is half-Jewish (a fact his own father continually denied) and that he dropped out of Princeton in the middle of Dirty Bicker. (He returned to graduate with the Class of '61.)

Given these circumstances, it might be tempting to dismiss The Final Club as a bitter, self-indulgent diatribe. But that attitude would do a grave disservice to Wolff and this book. The issues he discusses are important, and the pain experienced by those who were excluded runs deep and is slow to heal. Further, the social system he describes helped shape the way that generations of Princetonians approached the world. There are illuminating passages, for example, about the relationships between women and men in the fifties: what was considered important, what was not, who was desirable, who was not. The alcoholism of that era and that social class finds its way into every chapter. Even the book's later sections, which deal with Clay's life after (but never away from) Princeton, accentuate the class-related dimensions of marital fidelity and parenthood.

Even the most ardent defenders of bicker, however, will find The Final Club an absorbing read. It's not often that an entire novel occurs in such familiar surroundings, and every Princetonian will find resonances of his or her experiences on the campus in this book. For Princeton graduates of the 1950s, more than just architectural memories will be aroused; many of Wolff's characters are either real people (R. P. Blackmur, Harold Dodds) or immediately identifiable types: the socialite, the jock, the bird-dogger, the drunk. Wolff also borrows liberally from Princeton lore. One of the main characters, for instance, revels in the name of Booth Tarkington Griggs III. And the Fitzgerald references are everywhere.

All this Fitzgerald, though, can be unnerving. The references are so prevalent that, after a while, the power of ironic comparison is lost; one suspects that Wolff harbors more ambivalent feelings about Fitzgerald, and Fitzgerald's Princeton, than he'd like to admit. In places, it's even hard to tell these two books apart. (At one point, Wolff lists the various prep schools and, from a 1950s perspective, the attributes of their graduates; Fitzgerald wrote such an analysis forty years earlier.) Could it be that Wolff envies, or even admires, the easily clubbable Fitzgerald? Could this novel say as much about the desire for inclusion as it does about the evils of exclusion?

—David Williamson '84

Books Received

PASSAGES TO FREEDOM: A STORY OF ESCAPE AND CAPTURE (WWII memoir)
Joseph S. Freilighuysen '34
Sunflower University Press, $17.95 paper

SINCE OWEN: A PARENT-TO-PARENT GUIDE FOR CARE OF THE DISABLED CHILD
Charles R. Callanan '47
Johns Hopkins University Press
$39.95 cloth, $16.95 paper

BIRD WATCH (photography)
Bates Littlehales '48
Starwood, Box 40503, 5230 MacArthur Blvd., N.W., Washington, DC 20016. $36.00

THE WORLD'S MOST VALUABLE INVESTMENT STRATEGY: POWER-METHODS TO SAFELY MULTIPLY YOUR MONEY (EVEN IN VOLATILE MARKETS)!
B. Beck Fisher, Jr. '55
Windsor Books
Box 280, Brightwaters, NY 11718
$24.95 postpaid

IN DANGER UNDAUNTED: THE ANTI-INTERVENTIONIST MOVEMENT OF 1940-1941 AS REVEALED IN THE PAPERS OF THE AMERICA FIRST COMMITTEE
Justus D. Doenecke '66, ed.
Hoover Institution Press
$35.95 cloth, $25.95 paper

THE OLD COLLEGE TRY: BALANCING ACADEMICS AND ATHLETICS IN HIGHER EDUCATION
Lawrence L. Wiseman '70 and John R. Thelin
George Washington University
School of Education and Human Development
1 Dupont Cir., Ste. 630, Washington, DC 20036-1183. $15.00 paper

THE INDIVIDUAL INVESTOR'S GUIDE TO LOW-LOAD INSURANCE PRODUCTS: HOW, WHAT, WHERE TO BUY INSURANCE WHOLESALE
Glenn S. Daily '74
International, $22.50 paper

LIFECANGES: HOW WOMEN CAN MAKE COURAGEOUS CHOICES
Judith Hatch Shapiro '75 and Joan Hatch Lennox
Crown, $17.95

Class of 1994 Arrives on Campus as Princeton Begins 245th Academic Year

In an annual autumn ritual, a Princeton freshman, accompanied by her father, picks up the key to her dormitory room during registration.

PHOTO BY JOHN W. H. SIMPSON '86

AFTER A Freshman Week crammed with lectures, meetings, and the exigencies of moving in (but no swimming tests), the 1,175 members of the Class of 1994 were feeling a little rambunctious by the time they got to the annual Honor Assembly, the last gathering of the entire class until June 1994. The noise was considerable; frisbees and paper airplanes flew from the balcony of Alexander Hall. Perhaps sensing the elevated hormonal state of his audience, the guest speaker, Dr. Karl E. Hammonds '73, kept his remarks short and simple.

He recalled his own experience as a freshman in 1969, the first year of coeducation and the first year that sizable numbers of black students were admitted. Hammonds said that he was heartened to look out at the Class of '94 and see an even more diverse group of people: more minorities and, especially, more women. "Enjoy the diversity," he said with a wink, "if you know what I mean." Hammonds received a standing ovation.

Whatever its latent talents, the Class of '94 is certainly a diverse group. With 501 female members (43 percent), the freshman class trails only the Class of '93 in its number and percentage of women. Among minority groups, the class boasts 110 Asian-Americans, 81 African-Americans, 80 Hispanics, and 10 Native Americans; another 79 freshmen are foreign nationals. The freshmen attended almost 860 different secondary schools and represent forty-seven of the fifty states.

Students admitted to the freshman class matriculated at one of the highest rates in recent years. Some 55 percent of those accepted chose to attend the university, and so the class is forty-five students larger than intended. As usual, the sons and daughters of Princeton alumni matriculated at the highest rate: some 77 percent (157 of 204) accepted offers of admission. As a result, children of alumni will account for 13 percent of the class.

The Graduate School, meanwhile, welcomed 486 new students, 119 fewer than last year's record-breaking crop—which reflected an unusually high rate of matriculation. The lower number this year was a result of last year's "high yield." Although the group includes relatively few women (35 percent) or minorities (4 percent Asian, 3 percent black, and 2 percent Hispanic), these numbers are higher than in previous years. Continuing a recent pattern, foreign nationals account for 36 percent of the incoming graduate students.

In his address at Princeton's 245th Opening Exercises, President Shapiro reiterated his commitment to diversity, the theme of his opening-day speech last year. Academics, however, were the primary focus of this year's remarks. "We will remain above all else a serious community of learning, with a physical and intellectual environment conducive to reflection, discovery, and growth," Shapiro said. He also emphasized Princeton's strong commitment to teaching and announced several new multidisciplinary academic initiatives, including the creation of a program in environmental issues.

1990 Annual Giving Raises $18.6 Million, Setting New Record, but Falls Short of Goal

PRINCETON'S Annual Giving program set another all-time record in 1990, collecting $18.6 million from nearly thirty-five thousand alumni, parents, and friends. These totals represent an increase of more than $344,000 from last year's record donations and reflect the participation of 55.4 percent of Princeton alumni.

Leading the way was the Class of 1965, which raised the remarkable sum of $3,085,101 to celebrate its twenty-fifth reunion. Only the second class to break the $3 million mark, 1965 squeaked by the all-time Princeton record, which the Class of 1964 set last year. Three other classes—1925, 1970, and 1980—set new major-reunion records, and five classes topped the $1 million mark.

According to Joseph L. Bolster, Jr. '52, the director of Annual Giving, alumni of the Graduate School and non-alumni parents posted perhaps the most encouraging numbers in this year's drive. Graduate alumni gave the university almost $325,000, while parents contributed more than $1 million—some of them adding to tuition payments. In all, nearly half the non-alumni parents contributed to Annual Giving.

Despite these record-setting performances, total donations to Annual Giving fell short of the university's target, $19 million. (In general, the university hopes to achieve a 5 percent increase in Annual Giving each year.) The number of individual donors declined slightly from last year as well, and the percentage of alumni participating decreased by almost 2 percent. The drop in participation continues a trend that dates to the end of the Campaign for Princeton, in the mid-1980s, when Annual Giving achieved participation rates of almost 60 percent.

Bolster said that the gradual decline in participation was cause for some concern,

"CASA BELLA"

Sophisticated...serene...situated on a private road in Lawrence Township on six acres of gardens and woods! Please call for particulars.

JOHN T.
HENDERSON /INC.

REALTORS
33 WITHERSPOON ST.
PRINCETON, N.J.
(609)-921-9300

Discover the Duncaster Lifestyle.

... people who plan ahead are very glad they did.

Become a Duncaster Associate and preview our non-profit life care retirement community in a personal way. Attend events and seminars and be guided through your decision-making process. Enjoy community privileges, including help with your health insurance claims at a preferred rate. All this before you make a commitment.

For the facts, write or call Mrs. Patricia B. Copp, Director of Resident Services, Duncaster, 40 Loeffler Road, Bloomfield, CT 06002 (203) 726-2000 but he stressed the continuing strength of the program. "When you do better than you've ever done before, it's hard to get too upset if you come in under the stated goal," Bolster said. "Remember, Annual Giving starts at zero every year. From the university's point of view, the goal is a target, a challenge."

Duncaster

Annual Giving's Bolster to Retire

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

JOSEPH L. BOLSTER, JR. '52, the director of Princeton's Annual Giving program for the last twenty-three years, has announced that he will retire at the end of January 1991. Bolster (left) will be succeeded by William M. Hardt '63 (right), the associate director of Annual Giving and a nineteen-year veteran of the office.

With the exception of one year he spent selling insurance, Bolster has been working at Princeton in one capacity or another ever since he graduated. During his tenure at A.G., the amount raised in this yearly campaign has grown steadily, and almost every year has been a record-setting one. In 1990, A.G. collected $18.6 million (see story in this issue). Bolster was also responsible for initiating a number of fundraising traditions at A.G., including regular telethons and, starting with "Project '79," the annual giving program of the senior class.

Alumni Who Died in Vietnam War to Be Honored with Dormitory Stars

MOUNTED BENEATH many of the windows of Princeton's older dormitories are more than five hundred small bronze stars that memorialize alumni who died during the First and Second World Wars. By the end of the year, twenty-two more stars will be added to honor alumni who died during the Vietnam War.

The twenty-two alumni who will be commemorated range in age from the Class of 1931 to the Class of 1969; the Class of 1966, which lost five members, suffered most heavily during the Vietnam era. The individual classes will pay approximately $200 for each new star, which will carry the name and class of the alumnus, the year of his death, and the words "S.E. Asia."

Following a tradition begun with the World War I and World War II memorials, each Vietnam star will be placed under the window of the dorm room in which the alumnus lived as a senior or in his last term at the university. Also in accord with tradition, stars will be installed for any Princetonian on active duty in the military who died during the conflict in Vietnam—not just combat fatalities, but also deaths resulting from accidents, sickness, or other causes. (Relatively few Princetonians who died in uniform during the Vietnam War were killed in action. Several were Air Force pilots killed in training accidents, and two were crew members of the U.S.S. Scorpion, a nuclear-powered submarine that sank in the Atlantic Ocean in May 1968.)

According to Carl E. Eastwick '66, a Vietnam veteran who's been active in the memorial project, the idea to erect stars for Vietnam-era dead was first advanced four years ago by his classmate Landon Y. Jones. "Given the domestic controversy surrounding the war, we were a little concerned about stirring up old animosities," Eastwick said. "But as we've gone along, we've gotten nothing but unanimous support."

Princeton's first tribute to its war dead was in Nassau Hall's foyer, which was converted into a memorial hall in 1919. Carved into its marble walls are the names and classes of all alumni and faculty members who were killed during the War of Independence, the War of 1812, the Mexican-American War, the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, and World War I. Later, the names of fatalities from World War II, Korea, and Vietnam were added.

The dormitory stars came later. Although records are scarce, it is believed that the memorial stars for the dead of the First World War went up on dormitories in the early 1920s, stars for the Second World War dead in the late 1940s. And they have been carefully preserved: when Reunion Hall was razed in 1965, for example, all its stars were removed and reinstalled on the north wall of West College.

In Brief: New Trustees; E-Quad Zoning Compromise; Thomas Sweet To Return

• The board of trustees welcomed seven new members at its year-end meeting in June. The trustees elected a pair of investment counselors, John H. Scully '66, of Ross, California, and John J. F. Sherrerd '52, of Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, to ten-year terms as charter trustees, and Patricia L. Irvin '76, an attorney from New York City, and John W. Rogers, Jr. '80, the president of a money-management firm in Chicago, to four-year terms as term trustees.

Alumni elected two trustees to serve four-year terms: Philip C. Bobbitt '71, a law professor at the University of Texas at Austin, recently joined the legal adviser's office at the Department of State, and Daniel R. Toll '49, of Kenilworth, Illinois, is the chairman of Corona Corporation, a management consulting group. The newest young alumni trustee, elected from the most recent graduating class by mem-

LUCE SCHOLARS PROGRAM

Alumni not yet 30 years of age on September 1, 1991 are eligible to apply for a Henry Luce Foundation professional apprenticeship to work in the Far East for a year (August 1991-July 1992) in fields ranging from architecture to zoology. There are no language requirements, and specialists in Asian studies are specifically excluded from the program. Successful candidates are frequently graduate and professional school students or recent alumni as well as graduating seniors.

Luce Scholars are placed in internships and jobs based on their individual career interests, experience, training and general background. Recent recipients have been attached to an architectural firm in Tokyo, a forestry project in Indonesia, a newspaper in Hong Kong, a training facility for public administration in Malaysia, a program in community medicine in the Philippines, the banking authority in Singapore, and a family planning center in Taipei. The basic stipend is sufficient to live at the level of a junior faculty member at a local university, exclusive of costs for language instruction and travel, which are paid by the Luce Foundation.

Candidates are chosen without regard to sex, race, religion, marital status or need, and Asian-Americans are eligible unless already exposed to Asian language or travel. Selections are made on the basis of a clearly defined career interest in a specific field, strong academic records (particularly in the field of specialized interest), and evidence of potential leadership and accomplishment. Applications must be submitted by November 9. For further information, contact Dean Diane Balestri, Room 408, West College, Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 08544, telephone (609) 258-5524.

Children's Photographs from $75.00

Bachrach

Photographers since 1868

We're Now in Greenwich

Boston 617-536-4730 Chicago 312-642-5500
Greenwich 203-869-6922 Morristown 201-267-2006
New York 212-755-6233 Philadelphia 215-563-0551
Washington, D.C. 703-548-2111

The New Princeton Club of New York

Opening floor-by-floor
throughout 1990

- Attractive, "clubbier" entrance lobby.
- 3 new dining rooms, each one unique.
- 9 restyled private dining rooms.
- 48 newly decorated bedrooms.
- Women's rooms added on all floors.
- Expanded alumni activities
- Plus: squash courts, fitness center, library, lounge, varied member events.

Join during our major renovation:

- save $250 entrance fee (will not be waived again),
- and get a free $100 dinner in the new Woodrow Wilson Room.

Call or write: Membership Secretary
The Princeton Club of New York
15 West 43rd Street, NY NY 10036
212-840-6400

IN THE ENGLISH MANNER...

Enchanted country home in Princeton Township...5.5 acres. Award-winning addition. $985,000.

JOHN T.
HENDERSON INC.

REALTORS
33 WITHERSPOON ST.
PRINCETON, N.J.
(609)921-9300

Crapp Family Lodge

The flavor of Austria on a mountainside in Vermont

For information about one of America's most distinguished resorts, please call 1-800-826-7000
in Vermont 802-253-8511
or write Stowe, Vermont 05672

Celie's

Waterfront Bed & Breakfast

On Baltimore's Inner Harbor

In Historic Fell's Point

A 7 room Bed & Breakfast overlooking the water in a maritime community minutes to Harbor Place & the central business district.

Celie Ives, Innkeeper • 301-522-2323
1714 Thames St. • Baltimore, Md. 21231

bers of the classes of 1988 to 1991, is Michele N. Parris '90, of Central Islip, New York. She plans to pursue graduate studies in Chinese history.

- The longstanding dispute between town and gown over the university's proposed expansion of the Engineering Quadrangle was resolved over the summer, when the Princeton Borough Council voted to allow the university to build a multilevel parking garage and two new laboratories behind the E-Quad. People who live near the E-Quad had opposed the expansion project, arguing that it would increase traffic problems and overdevelop an area that lies next to a residential neighborhood.

Under the conditions of a new Borough zoning ordinance, however, these three structures will be the last that the university can build in the E-Quad area. In addition, the two laboratories—intended for use by Princeton's new programs in materials science and photo-optics—have been approved only for "conditional use." This limited approval gives the community planning board the authority to scrutinize the two laboratory buildings on a series of environmental and other grounds before construction can begin. The garage is not affected by these conditional-use strictures.

- Ice-cream lovers on the campus mourned back in February, when a deliberately set fire swept through a pair of buildings on Nassau Street occupied by Thomas Sweet and three other eateries.

But by next fall, Princetonians should be back in blend-in heaven: the university, which owns the gutted buildings, has announced plans to renovate them and allow the burned-out businesses to reopen.

The university's plan for the site, which is adjacent to the visual-arts building at 185 Nassau Street, will restore the impressive Victorian façades of the buildings. A less-fortunate fate awaits the American Diner, where the fire is believed to have been set. By far the most seriously damaged of the structures, the diner will be razed and another restaurant erected on the spot. The plan also calls for a common terrace with outdoor seating for all the restaurants in the complex. Six suites of offices will replace the four apartments that previously occupied the upper floors of the buildings.

University officials estimated that the cost of the restoration and improvements will be in excess of $1 million, much of which will be offset by the $650,000 the university received from its insurance company.

- Required to make budget cuts this year like any other division of the university, the Art Museum adopted a novel solution to the problem: it simply shut down its galleries and public spaces during the month of August. According to museum officials, with school out and many employees on vacation in August, the month-long shutdown would not interfere with the museum's teaching and research functions.

New Group Courts Foreign Alumni

IN AN EFFORT to strengthen the ties between Princeton and its foreign graduates, a group called the International Alumni of Princeton (I.A.P.) has embarked on a campaign to expand its membership and encourage more foreign alumni to get involved in university activities. Chartered during Reunions last year, the I.A.P. hopes to complement the work of Princeton clubs and associations around the world by assisting the admission office with recruiting, helping foreign students find jobs after they graduate, and promoting the general interests of foreigners at Princeton.

The group's first challenge will be just to locate all the foreign alumni of Princeton. Foreign students have been flocking to Princeton in ever-increasing numbers during the last couple of decades, and more than six hundred graduate students—about a third of the Graduate School—hold foreign passports. There are also 211 foreign undergraduates, and almost an equal number of visiting scholars and professors from abroad. A quarter of Princeton's foreigners are Canadian (including President Shapiro, who has dual citizenship); the remainder are scattered among sixty-seven countries and six continents.

Keeping track of these people after they graduate has proved difficult, especially for those who have returned to their native lands. What's more, detailed records of foreigners at Princeton have been available only since the International Center was established thirteen years ago. "We simply have no way to spot the older foreign alumni," says Paula K. Chow, the director of the International Center and a moving force in the I.A.P. "We'd like them to contact us. All we need is the name, address, occupation, and country." Foreign alumni may write to the I.A.P. at 11 Murray-Dodge Hall, Princeton University Campus, Princeton, NJ 08544. □

The Costs of Preprofessionalism

THE PREVALENCE OF preprofessionalism among Princeton's undergraduates has reached historic proportions. Why is this so, and what distinguishes today's situation from yesterday's? The key word here is competition, eagerly trumpeted by advocates of a reborn economy but frequently rued by students seeking jobs. We face a glut of attorneys, yet applications to law schools have never been higher. Meanwhile, bucking a national trend, Princetonians have continued to apply to medical schools at a steady rate. The crux of this competition lies in the undergraduates' applications to the professional schools.

Students who seek to become lawyers seem to face the greatest challenges. More and more Princeton undergraduates, like their peers across the country, are hoping to practice law. According to the university's career-services office, sixty-eight students out of the Class of 1989's eleven hundred or so members went directly from Princeton to law school. For the Class of '90, which is similar in size to '89, the number of prospective attorneys rose to ninety-two.

Meanwhile, obtaining admission to law schools—especially the "top ten," to which, it seems, all Princeton candidates apply—has become progressively more difficult. But unlike undergraduate institutions like Princeton, whose admission office balances test scores, high-school grades, extracurricular activities, recommendations, written essays, and interviews, most law schools rely heavily on just two criteria: undergraduate grades and the score on the multiple-choice Law School Admission Test (L.S.A.T.). Even though a Princeton student's grade-point average can change during senior year, law schools generally make their admission decisions before final grades are known, so a lot rides on a senior's performance on the L.S.A.T.

Performing well on the test usually requires heavy preparation. Because the L.S.A.T. tests a student's reading comprehension and logical reasoning under the unforgiving gaze of a clock, many students find that L.S.A.T. preparation is essentially a search for shortcuts. "If you had ten minutes to think through and answer each question," says Lou Willhoit '91, "you could probably get each one right. But with thirty-five questions in each forty-five-minute section, a lot of times you have to guess between two or three reasonable answers."

In search of ways of saving time, students can spend a small fortune. Some rely on $20 guidebooks; others shell out $600 or $700 for extensive L.S.A.T.-prep courses, which include lectures, practice questions and examinations, and audiotapes that explain correct answers and proper reasoning. One senior told me that he planned to prepare by working through old copies of Games magazine. He conceded that Games has a different

*One survivor of the M.C.A.T. called it
"scientific word-problems from hell."*

format from the L.S.A.T., but claimed that both require similar kinds of thinking.

A number of Princeton students say that they apply to law school even though they are not certain they want to become attorneys. In contrast, almost all undergraduates who apply to medical school want to practice medicine. Perhaps reflecting this difference, the number of students from Princeton who go on to medical school has remained relatively constant. Jane Sharaf, Princeton's director of health-profession advising, says that for most of the last decade, about 120 students applied to and were accepted by medical schools each year.

Like the law schools, medical schools demand a standardized test as part of the admission process. But while the L.S.A.T. is not supposed to require students to memorize facts, the M.C.A.T. is, in effect, a test of the sum of one's scientific knowledge. A grueling, twelve-hour ordeal, the test includes sections on biology, chemistry, physics, mathematics, and reading comprehension. The final part combines all the preceding sections in what one survivor of the test called "scientific word-problems from hell."

Needless to say, almost everyone who takes the M.C.A.T. spends a great deal of time preparing for it, but most Princeton students seem to do so on their own, avoiding prep courses. Kevin Freedman '91, a biology major, studied for up to eight hours a day in the final few days before the test. He reviewed notes from classes with an M.C.A.T.-prep book and spent almost no time thinking about the test's format. "Knowing the information," he says, "is much more important than knowing how to take the test."

Although the M.C.A.T. is more than twice as long as the L.S.A.T., medical schools seem to place less weight on it than law schools place on their test. A more significant difference, one that makes the L.S.A.T. even more important, is that only a handful of law schools require (or even suggest) an interview. Medical schools admit almost no candidates who have not spent a day at the school, talking with members of the admission committee. Only applicants with sufficient academic credentials get interviewed, but a poor interview can hurt an otherwise strong candidate. To avoid poor interviews, premed students run through a series of mock interviews with Sharaf in the fall. "Correcting body language and helping to overcome nervousness" are her two most common missions, she says.

Prelaw and premed students might not have much in common in the ways they prepare for their professional training, but they do share one complaint: the high cost of simply applying to the various schools. A student who takes the L.S.A.T. or the M.C.A.T. and applies to eight schools (a typical number) will spend close to $750 in test-taking and application fees; include the cost of a test-prep course, and this figure rises to nearly $1,500. A premed candidate must also pay the costs associated with travel to interviews (sometimes several), and this expense does not take into account the missed classes at Princeton on those days. But all these fees should come as no shock to Princeton students or their parents: a year at a typical private professional school costs even more than a year at Old Nassau.

—Matthew T. Henshon '91

Matt Henshon, a senior from Wilbraham, Massachusetts, is majoring in the Woodrow Wilson School and plays on the varsity basketball team.

THE MAN WHO NEVER STOPS

*Robert Caro '57
Has Focused
the Last Fifteen Years on Lyndon Johnson and Changed the Nature of Political Biography*

By Stephen Harrigan

“SEEM TO REMEMBER SHAKING HIS hand.” Robert A. Caro '57 spoke in a voice so suddenly soft and musing that he appeared to have gone into a trance. “That’s really strange,” he said, sitting back on the couch and thoughtfully stroking his necktie. “Until you asked me that just now, I’d totally forgotten. But I think I may have shaken his hand.”

It was during the 1964 presidential campaign that Caro saw with his own eyes the smothering, grasping, gigantic figure who would ultimately, from beyond the grave, commandeer decades of Caro’s life and thought. Lyndon Johnson was campaigning in New England, and Robert Caro, a young Newsday reporter on urban politics, had been reassigned to cover him.

“I was a substitute,” Caro recalled. “I was nothing. I was never part of the pool. I was never on the plane. I could only see him from a distance. But what got me was this colossal energy. It was an endlessly long day—he was always jumping out of the car, constantly shaking hands.

“We were in New Hampshire. During that day or the day before, Teddy Kennedy had been in a plane crash and hurt his back. In my memory, it was midnight when Johnson decided to go to Boston and visit him. So a few hours later, we were Right: Robert Caro '57 in 1975. On the wall behind him is the outline for The Path to Power, volume one of the Johnson biography.

PHOTO © ARNOLD NEWMAN

Top: Rep. Johnson, as posed by a Hollywood photographer in 1942. Bottom: Hot and dirty in the senatorial campaign of 1948.

TOP: PHOTO COURTESY WILTON WOODS
BOTTOM: LYNDON B. JOHNSON LIBRARY

standing outside the hospital in the dark. There were people in hospital uniforms standing over on this side waiting to shake his hand, and the press was lined up over here. Then he came out, looming, untired. I remember seeing his hands. They were scratched and bleeding! Whether I just saw him shaking hands with the nurses or whether he actually came over to me, I can't tell you. But I was close enough to see his hands bleeding."

Caro was silent for a moment, then snapped out of it. The man who has tirelessly invaded Lyndon Johnson's secret motivations for fifteen years is himself cunningly private, and such moods of introspection are rare. He talks with passion and an undisguised sense of achievement about his vivid, ongoing biography of L.B.J., but you can't get him to brood on it. His life of Johnson, he says, began as an exploration of "how political power works in a democracy on a national scale," but the work thus far is so personal, so full of awe and outrage toward its main character, that its origins might lie not just in intellectual curiosity but in the faint memory of a bloody handshake.

On the February morning I sat talking with Caro in his apartment on Central Park West, Means of Ascent, the second of a projected four volumes of The Years of Lyndon Johnson, was nearing publication. Caro, at fifty-three, was halfway through. Over the previous few months, The New Yorker had published six excerpts, and Alfred A. Knopf, Caro's publisher, had just sent out bound sets of galley proofs to reviewers, along with a publicity sheet that reminded them of the lavish praise they had bestowed on volume one ("Stands at the pinnacle of the biographer's art"; "By every measure . . . a masterpiece").

Caro, already well into volume three, appeared bright-eyed and eager, neither exhausted by his labors nor haunted by the ghost of his spectacular subject. I looked in vain for the usual fetishes with which writers surround themselves, but there were no photographs or hokey plaster busts of L.B.J. anywhere. Indeed, except for the framed awards hung discreetly in a back hallway—the Pulitzer Prize for Biography, the National Book Critics Circle Award—there was no visible reference to Caro's obsessive occupation. The apartment's décor was elegantly spare. On the walls were nineteenth-century French landscapes that Caro and his wife, Ina, had collected on their annual vacations in France. The uncluttered bookshelves held leatherbound sets of the works of Tolstoy, Gibbon, and James Fenimore Cooper.

Caro himself, standing now with his elbows propped on the marble mantelpiece, was no disheveled bookworm. He was trim and donnish, with dark brown hair and dark brown tortoiseshell glasses, but the classy exterior did not conceal his revving energy. More eager to ask questions than to answer them, he appeared both gregarious and secretive.

When I asked him why his biography of Johnson—originally planned for only three volumes—was taking so long, he said in a genteel Manhattan accent, "I believe that time equals truth.

"I like being a reporter," he explained, "but there was one aspect of it that I truly hated. I never had enough time to really find out everything I thought I should know. I wanted to explore something all the way to the end."

One of the reasons for Caro's success is his inspired distaste for deadlines. He works seemingly without regard for the ticking of the clock or the passing of the years, and his relentless research into the life and times of Lyndon Johnson has generated its own legend. Already enshrined in Texas literary folklore is the image of Bob Caro, in his blazer and regimental tie, arriving at the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library, in Austin, and gazing upward with epic resolve at a four-story display of red archive boxes containing thirty-four million documents. Or Caro spreading his sleeping bag under the Hill Country sky to better understand the frontier isolation of Johnson's background ("You'd wake up in the morning," he said, "and there was still nobody there!").

Caro and Ina, a medieval historian who aided him greatly in his research, spent a total of more than four years in Texas, poring over the documents in the L.B.J. Library, interviewing hundreds of Johnson's contemporaries, and aggressively absorbing the landscape. In volume one, Caro's dogged methodology resulted not only in an unforgettably caustic portrait of Lyndon Johnson but also in set pieces of startling clarity and surprise. He took, for instance, what should have been the most boring subject on earth—the advent of rural electrification—and turned it into a chapter called "The Sad Irons," which may be the most brilliant single passage of prose ever written about Texas.

"What's most remarkable about Bob Caro," says Robert Gottlieb, who edited Caro's books at Knopf and continues to do so even though he is now editor of The New Yorker, "is the depth, the obsessiveness, the accuracy of his research. The totalness of it. He simply never stops. He simply finds out more than anybody else finds out about anything. And then, out of the infinite detail he accumulates, he creates real drama."

It was not only Caro's research that made his first volume on Johnson, The Path to Power, such a success when it was published in 1982. It was also the furrowed-brow grandeur of his prose, his gift for making the sluggish currents of modern political history roar along like a flash flood. His portrait of Johnson is meticulous but hardly temperate. This is not just a biography but a seething, emotional story about a man who, in Caro's words, had "a seemingly bottomless capacity for deceit, deception, and betrayal."

Johnson loyalists greeted Caro's depiction with a collective howl of outrage; and academic historians, while as agog as everyone else at Caro's narrative power, tsk-tsked what they perceived as the book's distortions and pumped-up drama.

But 450,000 readers bought The Path to Power. Its aims were clearly so mighty, its scope so audacious, that it became, if not the last word on Johnson, certainly the most compelling. For Texans, especially, The Path to Power filled a void in a notoriously spotty historical record. This was not just the story of the rise of Lyndon Johnson; it was by default the basic text of the history of modern Texas.

The second volume of The Years of Lyndon Johnson is a hefty monument itself, though it is shorter than the first volume by about four hundred pages. Whereas The Path to Power is a panoramic survey of Johnson's life from his birth to his defeat by W. Lee "Pappy" O'Daniel for the U.S. Senate in 1941, Means of Ascent is a concentrated study of "a seven-year period in the life of Lyndon Johnson in which his headlong race for power was halted."

Caro warns in his introduction that there were two "threads," one bright and one dark, running through the fabric of Johnson's personality, and that in this volume, "the bright one is missing." Here L.B.J. is depicted as a villain of almost Shakespearean dimensions: weaseling out of active service in World War II and then shamelessly inflating his one combat experience; abusing his congressional power to acquire a marginal radio station and turn it into a major source of enrichment and influence peddling; and then finally—in a sustained narrative, told with the bold, sweeping strokes of a novel—stealing the 1948 Senate election from Coke R. Stevenson, a former governor of Texas and "old-style cowboy knight of the frontier" whose own threads, as Caro portrays him, were blindingly bright.

"It's not a question of liking him or hating him," Caro said of Johnson. "What I meant to do was understand him. People are going to say when the third volume comes out, 'Caro's view changed. Lyndon Johnson is now a hero.' Well, that's not the case. The case is, he's going to do heroic things. We wouldn't have a substantial amount of the civil-rights legislation we have today, for instance, if it hadn't been for Lyndon Johnson. But the personality does not basically change. Anyone who expects a great personality change in Lyndon Johnson from volume to volume is going to be sadly disappointed."

THE WEATHER OUTSIDE, as we walked along the margins of Central Park, was clear and bracing. Caro mentioned that he had been born a few blocks to the north, back in the days when this part of the Upper West Side was still more of a family neighborhood than an urban fortress for the well-to-do. His father, a Polish immigrant, was in real estate. "He was a man who found it difficult to express emotion," Caro once told Leo Seligsohn, of Newsday—which was more than I could get him to tell me. His mother died of cancer when he was a child.

"She took sick when I was very young," he said hurriedly, anxious to change the subject. "I remember that she loved to read. But I was very young, and she was very sick for a long time."

Caro attended Horace Mann, a private high school whose students came largely from a middle- or upper-class Jewish background, and then he went on to Princeton, where he wrote short stories of such length that one of them took up a whole issue of The Princeton Tiger.

After college, Caro worked as a reporter for the New Brunswick Daily Home News, in New Jersey, and served a brief stint as a speechwriter and campaign director for a local political boss.

"I was making something like $52.50 a week as a reporter, and then I'd go in and write a press release for this guy, and he'd hand me a wad of fifty-dollar bills. On Election Day, I rode with him in his car, and at each polling place, a policeman would come up and report through the window about how they were doing and how they were keeping the other side—the reformers—from really supervising the election. I remember thinking, 'I don't want to be in here with you. I want to be out there with the reformers.' And so I just got out of the car. That was the moment when I began to realize who I really was."

It was at Newsday that Caro began to fully deploy his talents as a reporter and to sense their limitations. "Political power influences everybody's life," he told me. "I was writing about it every day, but I didn't really understand the truth about it. What I began to notice was that no matter what lines of investigation I chose to pursue, they all led to this guy Robert Moses. But nobody knew, including me, who the hell Robert Moses really was, where he got his power or authority from."

Pressing the flesh during the 1948 campaign. One of the challenges of Texas politics before TV and widespread air travel was reaching the voters in this vast state.

LYNDON B. JOHNSON LIBRARY

Johnson and the "Flying Windmill," his campaign helicopter. The first candidate to use a copter in a campaign, L.B.J. crisscrossed Texas in the machine, drawing crowds of curious voters.

LYNDON B. JOHNSON LIBRARY

Caro decided to find out. From 1967 to 1974, he labored on his Pulitzer Prize-winning study of a New York City parks commissioner who, through political genius and the abuse of public authority, became the most powerful figure in the state. If Robert Caro today is the very embodiment of writerly success—with a house in East Hampton, his own table at the Café des Artistes, and a comfortable income that is the product of hard-won literary prestige—during the years he was writing The Power Broker he was an impoverished former newspaper reporter with a tiny advance on the book, writing about a subject that every day grew more massive and uncontrollable. To help finance the book, he and Ina ("My beloved idealist," he calls her in the acknowledgments to Means of Ascent) sold their house on Long Island and moved to Riverdale. When he finally finished The Power Broker, it was so long that 300,000 words (approximately twelve hundred manuscript pages, or three regular-sized books) had to be cut out of it.

"I really wanted to do a biography next about someone I thought I could love," Caro told me. "I was so angry at Robert Moses. He dispossessed five thousand people from one block—elderly Jewish people—to build the Cross-Bronx Expressway. When I interviewed these people, I'd ask them, 'What is your life like now?,' and they'd say, 'Lonely.' And in my experience, that's a word people don't say unless it comes from deep inside. One evening I went to interview Moses and asked him if he thought these people were upset. He said, 'No, there's very little discomfort. It was a political thing that stirred up the animals there.' I wanted to punch him in the teeth."

Caro thought he would love Lyndon Johnson. He thought Johnson would turn out to be a shrewd, ruthless, but ultimately engaging populist like Al Smith. But that was before he found the dark thread.

Caro maintains that his portrait of Johnson is untainted by animosity, and it's true that no other writer has chronicled L.B.J.'s admirable traits—his devotion as a schoolteacher to his dirt-poor Hispanic students, his almost maniacal responsiveness to his congressional constituents, his truly heroic indifference to exhaustion and physical pain in the 1948 campaign—with anything approaching Caro's precision and fervor. But it would be pointless to pretend that Caro is a cool scholar. He reports on Johnson's villainy with an undertone of personal offense.

"When I found out how he betrayed Sam Rayburn, I was almost indescribably sad," he told me, referring to the way Johnson had cruelly usurped Rayburn's role as President Roosevelt's most-favored Texan. "Part of my feeling about Rayburn was how lonely he was, and how much he needed Lyndon and Lady Bird. I was sitting there in the Lyndon Johnson Library, reading these telegrams and memos back and forth to Washington. And I suddenly began to see what was happening. I remember I got up from the desk with a horrible feeling. I'm sitting there taking notes, and it's about to happen. Johnson is about to betray this man who loved him. I went outside the library and walked around it several times and thought, 'God, don't let this mean what I think it means.' I didn't want this to happen to Rayburn."

But if Caro was outraged by Johnson, he found a hero in Coke Stevenson. In Means of Ascent, Caro introduces the cowboy governor in a long chapter entitled, with the simplicity of a children's fairytale, "The Story of Coke Stevenson." What follows is a beguiling but controversial portrait in which Stevenson, in contrast to Johnson's Black Bart, is presented as the last great hero of the Old West. A check of the book's index reveals in a glance how the author has set the stage. Under "Johnson, character of," there is a preponderance of such entries as "aggressiveness," "ambition," "cruelty," "cynicism," and "flattery and obsequiousness." Under "Stevenson, character of," one finds "dignity," "fairness," "frugality," "honesty and integrity," "sense of humor," and "sincerity."

"All I knew about Coke Stevenson," Caro said, "was that he was the guy who lost in 1948. I had no intention of writing about him in detail. Then one day I was interviewing a congressman named Wingate Lewis who had been in Fort Worth in the forties and fifties. He was an extremely pragmatic, cynical politician. He was explaining to me that he had been afraid of Johnson's power because Johnson was so close to his principal supporters. He said something to the effect of 'I even had to support Lyndon against Coke Stevenson in 1948.' Then he said—and remember that this was a very pragmatic man—I knew Coke Stevenson, and I thought a lot of him. He lived by the code of honesty.' Well, to have come out of his mouth words like that about a governor who lived by the 'code of honesty' sunk into my consciousness. And I heard the same thing from other people—and I realized they were speaking of Stevenson in tones of reverence."

Not everyone, though, speaks of Stevenson in those tones, and Caro's portrait has drawn fire from critics who remember Stevenson as much for his racial bigotry (a topic that Caro mentions only glancingly) as for his political integrity. ("The problem with Caro's method," says Lewis Gould, a historian at the University of Texas, "is that the same standard that is so rigorous and difficult for Johnson to meet is sort of put aside for someone Caro admires.")

If Stevenson was so great, I asked Caro, why do so few contemporary Texans seem to be aware of it?

"It's totally lost! The last guys who knew him are dying as I write. Texas is a state with a history that's not only truly glorious but truly significant in understanding America. And I think Texas is losing that history. For instance, Stevenson was a conservative, and we've forgotten what that meant. We see conservatism today in a form in which one of its original, motivating, particularly American impulses has just about totally vanished. What's vanished is the spirit of the frontier individualism and self-reliance that imbued conservatism with something noble and heroic.

"The most amazing thing that's happened to me in my writing career is the reaction to Coke

Stevenson. Not in Texas, but in New York. After The New Yorker excerpt came out, one of New York's most glamorous hostesses called me and said, 'My God, I gave a dinner party Saturday night, and all I heard about was Coke Stevenson. The literary world in New York is all talking about Coke Stevenson!'

I was beginning to sense that Caro was going to catch some flak in Texas over this one. Part of it, of course, had to do with sheer provincial envy, the realization that it had taken a Yankee from Central Park West to render Texan culture with such enduring authority. And part of it was the uneasy and wary feeling that New York was now the arbiter of Texas's heroes. Lyndon Johnson, whom Texans used to rather like, had been expertly dismantled before our eyes, and now in the salons of Manhattan the latest intellectual fashion threatened to be frontier conservatism.

ROBERT CARO WRITES his books on the tenth floor of an office building near Columbus Circle. As a point of discipline, he works in a coat and tie, even though he is there all alone, the telephone turned off, the mail slot closed—nothing to distract him from the daily task of reconstituting the life of Lyndon Johnson.

When I walked up to his office, I noticed that Caro has a gold-colored nameplate on his door, just like those of the dentists and talent agents in the other offices. Inside, Caro's workplace was a model of idiosyncratic organization. Instead of the unruly pile of notes and books one would expect of a biographer, there was a big, clean desk without a sheet of paper on it, just a portable electric typewriter and a lamp whose base was a bronze statuette of Apollo in a horse-drawn chariot. One wall of the room was lined with bookshelves and files, and just above the desk hung a large corkboard displaying the twenty or thirty sheets of paper that form his outline.

The outline is the key to Caro's working method. "I'm determined to think through the book from beginning to end before I start it," he told me. "First I make a very short outline, just a page or two. Then I start filling it in with transitional sentences and key thoughts. You're really writing the book without the details at that stage. Then what I do is I go through the notes and fill in the details. Let's say I have a hundred and fifty pages of notes dealing with a particular incident—but of course I don't; I have nearly a thousand. Anyway, you give a number to each interview. You go through all your file folders, and you index everything in it to that outline. And the outline keeps growing until you've got the entire book—an entire wall, twenty or thirty feet long, covered with paper. There it is. And then you come in one day, and you look at it, and you have to start writing."

But between the sheets of paper on the wall and the actual writing is an even more detailed outline, one chapter at a time, that he keeps in a three-ring binder. This outline has notations indexed in red markers to corresponding numbers in the file cabinets. The other tools of his trade are black ballpoint pens and white—not yellow—narrow-lined legal pads, a product, he notes with some alarm, that is being discontinued. Caro doesn't use a computer, or even, for the first few drafts, his typewriter. He writes in longhand to slow himself down.

"I don't know how good a writer I am," he confided as he leafed through a stack of notes that he had transcribed from his sui generis shorthand. (He almost never uses a tape recorder.) "But I'm a very good interviewer. I tried to learn how to interview from two characters in fiction. One is Inspector Maigret and one is George Smiley. When I was a reporter, I felt I was too aggressive in asking questions. The thing about both of them is that they're quiet and patient. They let the other person talk and really listen to what he's saying. Maigret takes out his pipe and refills it and taps it on the table. Smiley takes his glasses off and wipes them on his necktie. It's a way of keeping themselves quiet. I write 'shut up' in my notebook a lot. Or just 's.u.' If you looked through my notebooks, you'd see a lot of s.u.s."

Coke Stevenson, L.B.J.'s opponent, campaigning in the old style.

PORT WORTH STAR-TELEGRAM

Caro picked up a neatly folded sweater and slipped it on. For the first time, I thought I could detect a trace of weariness in him, and I thought of the twenty-five remaining years of Johnson's life that still faced him—the rise to power in the Senate, civil rights, the Kennedys, the vice presidency, the assassination, Vietnam, the brief twilight years at his ranch on the Pedernales River. It seemed more than two volumes of narrative, and it seemed a bit more than one biographer's lifetime.

Did he ever worry, I asked, that he would grow old and die before it was finished?

"I try not to think about that," Caro said. "I don't like to feel rushed."

Stephen Harrigan, a senior editor at Texas Monthly magazine, is the author of two novels and a book of essays. This article is adapted from a story that appeared in the April 1990 issue of Texas Monthly. Reprinted with permission. © 1990 by Texas Monthly.

BREAKING THE SIGHT BARRIER

Alumni Have Played Key Roles at Recording for the Blind, a Princeton-Based Organization That Gives "Earsight" to the Blind

Peter B. Putnam '42 '50

R.F.B. translates books that borrowers cannot read with their eyes into recordings they can read with their ears.

ONE AFTERNOON LAST SPRING, JAMES McPherson, a professor in Princeton's history department, settled himself inside a soundproof booth, took a deep breath, and burst into song. Outside the booth, studio director Anne Young monitored the sound levels while McPherson sang the Union and then the Confederate versions of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." When he had finished, Hank van Oss '39 entered the booth to begin the formidable task of recording McPherson's Pulitzer Prize-winning history of the Civil War, Battle Cry of Freedom.

It required more than fifty hours of tape to accommodate all 862 pages of McPherson's book. Altogether, eleven people with Princeton connections participated in the recording project, one of thousands conducted annually by the Princeton-based Recording for the Blind, Inc. (R.F.B.). These eleven, in turn, are but a tiny fraction of an army of four thousand volunteers in thirty-two recording studios from coast to coast.

When I became blind as a junior at Princeton in 1941, there was no Recording for the Blind. I depended on fellow students who were taking the same courses to read the assignments aloud to me. Later, in graduate school, my wife often spent ten, twelve, and even fourteen hours a day reading to me. I did not learn of R.F.B. until 1955, when I was asked to write an article about it for The New York Times Magazine.

The most difficult problem young blind people face is not blindness itself but what may be called the sight barrier. This is the artificial barrier that well-meaning but uninformed sighted people put in the path of the blind by deciding what they can—or cannot—do. Before World War II, the sight barrier kept all but a handful of blind students out of college. I believe I was the first blind undergraduate at Princeton. Today, R.F.B. provides recorded texts for nearly nine thousand college and graduate students across the United States and Canada, but before the war, deans of admission steered blind applicants away from higher education.

The sight barrier to higher education was toppled after World War II, when hundreds of blind veterans returned home to attend college under the G.I. Bill. No dean could deny admission to a veteran who had lost his sight in combat. The same war that blinded soldiers also produced technology that made it possible to record books quickly and inexpensively. In 1948, the Ladies Auxiliary of the New York Public Library began to record texts for blind college students, and in 1951, this program was incorporated as Recording for the Blind, the only national organization that loans recorded books for educational purposes for free.

By today's standards, the technology of the forties and fifties was primitive. SoundScriber machines produced thin vinyl discs that played at 33½ r.p.m. The discs did not produce high-fidelity sound and held only twelve minutes on a side, but they were compact and could easily be mailed in installments to waiting students. The volunteer readers even recorded page numbers and footnotes. From the students' point of view, these discs offered other advantages. Unlike live readers, the discs could be used at any time and as often and for as long as a student wished. Discs did not miss appointments, did not get sick or become tired or bored. Recognizing all these advantages, I wrote such an enthusiastic article that I was elected to the national board of R.F.B., on which I have served ever since.

As an undergraduate, I had scorned what were sometimes touted as the social advantages of attending Princeton—I would not need an old-boy network of well-placed alumni to help me climb the ladder of success. As a board member of R.F.B., however, I changed my tune. I shamelessly worked the old-boy network for all it was worth. And it has been worth a good deal.

My first venture on behalf of R.F.B. was in fundraising. I consulted with Edgar Gemmell '34, the architect of Princeton's first Annual Giving program, and in 1957 sent out a one-page appeal for money to several thousand Princeton alumni. It was addressed simply as "A Memorandum to Princeton Alumni," and to my delight it brought in more than $10,000. That was a lot more money in 1957 than it is today. Even more impressive was the 7 percent response, an extraordinary return for mailings of this kind and convincing evidence of R.F.B.'s fundraising potential. This success persuaded the board to hire a direct-mail expert, and today mail appeals bring in more than $1 million annually.

Of course, R.F.B. has not been built entirely on the backs of Princeton alumni. Its founding genius, Anne T. Macdonald, was the wife of an Eli, and graduates of many universities have contributed their talents, but Princetonians have played crucial roles in R.F.B.'s development. It is impossible to list all the graduates who have been involved, but three of four C.E.O.s, including the current president, Ritchie Geisel '67, have been alumni. The first of these was Burnham Carter '22.

By the time of Carter's arrival, in 1959, R.F.B. had already grown spectacularly. Among the borrowers were professionals as well as students in elementary and high school, college, and graduate school. New recording studios, including one on the campus of the Princeton Theological Seminary, had been added. R.F.B. had moved its national headquarters from a two-room Manhattan office with one full-time staff member to a remodeled basement in Midtown, where a growing staff embossed multiple copies of books onto discs from master tapes.

Author Peter Putnam '42 *50 and Vanessa, his guide dog.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

In 1964, the year before Carter retired, R.F.B. purchased a six-story building on East 58th Street large enough to house a twelve-booth recording studio, a master tape library, high-speed duplicating machinery, and administrative offices. In these quarters, R.F.B. continued to upgrade its technology, switching first to reel-to-reel tapes and ultimately to four-track cassette tapes, each capable of holding four hours of recording. And while technological progress was improving the product, R.F.B. was expanding its clientele. In 1970, it began to serve borrowers who could see but could not read print because of dyslexia or some other perceptual disability. Today, these borrowers amount to nearly half the total.

In 1975, when Stuart Carothers '45 became the president of R.F.B., it was processing and mailing 48,000 recordings of books a year. A lawyer who had formerly worked for McDonnell Douglas and Princeton University, Carothers soon realized that an aging, six-story building in New York City was not an ideal place in which to operate a small light industry and conduct a mail-order business. Principally owing to his vision, R.F.B. constructed and equipped a specially designed and highly automated one-story building on an eight-acre lot at 20 Roszel Road, adjacent to a branch of the Princeton post office. The sale of the Manhattan building covered the cost of the Princeton office, with half a million dollars to spare. The new building was designed by William Wolfe '65 *67, and the move was completed in July 1983.

The new national headquarters houses a master tape library of 76,000 titles. R.F.B. duplicates and mails out better than one recording every minute of every working day, while its thirty-two studios add nearly 3,000 new titles every year. Last year, R.F.B. loaned, free of charge, more than 140,000 recorded books to 24,000 blind and other print-handicapped students and professionals, but these statistics are far less impressive than the achievements of the borrowers themselves.

And here we come to a major paradox. Admirable as are the labors of R.F.B.'s volunteers, the Ritchie Geisel '67, R.F.B.'s current president, stands in the Princeton facility's huge master tape library, which houses some 76,000 titles. Three of R.F.B.'s four presidents have been Princeton alumni.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

The works in progress at R.F.B.'s Princeton studio range from ponderous textbooks in economics, biology, and accounting to the latest consumer buying guide.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

effectiveness of its staff, and the marvels of its automation, the service all three provide is really minimal. All they do is translate books that borrowers cannot read with their eyes into recordings they can read with their ears. Recorded books provide eyes for their minds, but it is their minds that create meaning and value from the tapes. It is their minds that process the raw materials of thought into knowledge, wisdom, and understanding. It is their hearts that have helped them break through the sight barrier by demonstrating convincingly what they can do.

In forty years, R.F.B. has served thousands of people, of whom perhaps two or three dozen have attended Princeton. Here are a few.

Oral Miller '55, who rowed as an undergraduate, went on to receive a law degree and is now executive director of the American Council of the Blind. Jim Elston '67, who took his A.M. in politics, now teaches at the University of Arkansas and continues to rely on R.F.B. to record texts he must read. Dick Nenno '73, who borrowed 276

At the studio, a reader (in the soundproof booth) makes his way through a mathematics textbook while a monitor checks the accuracy of his work and the quality of the sound.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

recordings as an undergraduate, attended Harvard Law School and is currently an assistant vice-president and trust counsel at the Wilmington Trust Company. Charles Guttman '78 is doing graduate work in philosophy at Brown and may hold the record for R.F.B. tapes borrowed—a total of 946 to date. Peter Altschul '79, the winner of an R.F.B. Scholastic Achievement Award, majored in music and composed a Mass as his honors thesis. After stints with the I.R.S. and the Bank of New York, he is now enrolled in graduate studies at the Columbia School of Social Work.

In my undergraduate years, both her sex and her race would have excluded Cheryl Cameron '88 from Princeton. Another Scholastic Achievement Award-winner, Cameron borrowed 205 recordings while at Princeton, spent a semester at the University of Aberdeen, and graduated with honors from the Woodrow Wilson School. She is now attending the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts. Mia Lipner '90 used some 250 R.F.B. tapes to graduate with an A.B. in English last June. After completing a highly original junior paper that traces the influence of the Welsh dialect on the rhythms of Dylan Thomas, she took a year off from college to work as assistant director of Doin' the Reality Rag, a comedy review produced in Des Moines, Iowa. The show's focus was on society's perceptions of, and misconceptions about, people with disabilities.

One of the most impressive stories is that of Jamal Mazrui '86. Mazrui was born in Uganda of a Kenyan father and an English mother. (His father is on the faculty of the University of Michigan.) Mazrui graduated with honors in a double major that combined engineering and the Wilson School. In order to learn the Braille symbols in mathematics, he took a short sabbatical that was financially assisted by the Class of 1942's Jerry Horton Fund. After graduating from Princeton, he took his A.M. and is currently a doctoral candidate at the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard. I have written of R.F.B.'s providing eyes for the minds of our borrowers, but they have more than minds. They have hearts and guts, too.

Peter Putnam is a freelance writer based in Princeton.

Tigers Taste Own Medicine in Season-Opening Loss to Cornell

COACH STEVE TOSCHES and the Princeton offense got a bitter dose of their own medicine on September 15, when the football team opened its season at Cornell. For the last three years, Princeton's offensive scheme has emphasized ball control, relying on the running skills of Judd Garrett '90 to grind down the opposition and eat away at the clock. This year, without Garrett to shoulder his customary workload, it was Cornell that controlled the ball and Cornell that came away with a 17-14 victory.

To be sure, the Tigers almost pulled this one out in the game's final seconds. Quarterback Joel Sharp '91 completed a 43-yard "Hail Mary" pass to wide receiver Joe Baker '91 with no time left, but Baker was forced out of bounds two yards shy of the goal line. Even so, these fourth-quarter heroics should not detract from the obvious: the Big Red dominated the line of scrimmage and pushed Princeton all over the field all day.

Perhaps the best indication of this dominance is how long each team possessed the football: Cornell had it for more than forty-one minutes, Princeton less than nineteen. Given this disparity, one might well wonder why the game was so close. (Last year, the Tigers enjoyed a similar time-of-possession during their 30-8 drubbing of Penn.) As is often the case in football, turnovers account for some of the answer; excellent play by Princeton's special teams explains the rest.

A blocked punt, for example, gave the Tigers the ball on the Cornell 9-yard line only three minutes into the game and led to an easy touchdown. Later, after Princeton fumbled deep in its own territory and then allowed the Big Red to score, linebacker Aaron Harris '93 blocked the extra-point attempt. These big plays by the special teams, together with solid downfield coverage on kickoffs and punts, are encouraging signs from a traditionally weak unit of Tiger football.

In addition, despite having to be on the field for more than two-thirds of the game, the Tigers' defense showed promise, bending but not breaking. Cornell's huge offensive line had its way with the smaller Princeton line, and the Big Red rushed for more than two hundred yards in all, but these were hard-earned gains: no big breakaways, but four-yard plunges between the left and right tackles. Clearly, Cornell's game plan was to attack the middle of the Tiger defense, where Princeton started two untested defensive Defensive back Wade Wilson '92 returns a kickoff against Cornell. He also intercepted a pass and made two tackles against the Big Red.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

tackles and two sophomores at interior linebacker (Harris and Gene DeMorat). As the season progresses, however, these players are bound to improve.

More troubling for Coach Tosches is the offense, which sputtered most of the day. Going into the game, a number of questions about the offense still clouded the picture: Who would replace Judd Garrett at tailback? Who would start at wide receiver? Would an inexperienced offensive line be able to protect Joel Sharp? Unfortunately, the Cornell game did little to answer these questions.

At running back, no one looked ready to assume Judd's role. Sophomore Erick Hamilton scored a touchdown but also fumbled to set up a Cornell score. Dan Bents '91, who took two years off from football, looked good on a second-quarter drive but only carried the ball nine times. (In all, the Tigers rushed for only sixty-eight yards—about half Judd's per-game average last year.) The receivers, Baker and Matt Tarkenton '92 (the son of the former N.F.L. star), were invisible in the first half; in the fourth quarter, they emerged somewhat, along with tight end Marin Gjaja '91. The offensive line was missing in action most of the day.

Without much of a supporting cast, Sharp appeared far less poised than he did last year. His passes seemed forced and were frequently off the mark; even a 53-yard bomb to Baker for Princeton's second touchdown was underthrown. (Baker made a spectacular catch.) And Sharp didn't have much luck carrying the ball on option plays, either.

Perhaps these judgments are unfair to Sharp and the rest of the offense. Because of Cornell's successful rushing attack, the Tigers had few opportunities on offense. Although their ground game was stymied most of the afternoon, they moved the ball effectively in the fourth quarter. Princeton's next two games, nonleague contests against Fordham and Colgate, should test whether this late-game success was merely a passing fancy.

—David Williamson '84

Carril, Tigers to Face U.N.L.V. And Loyola-Marymount in Televised Contests

ALTHOUGH THERE'S an entire fall of football to enjoy first, now's the time to mark your calendar and hook up your cable television for one of the most exciting basketball matchups in Princeton history. In a game to be televised nationally on ESPN on December 19, Pete Carril and his Tigers will take on the Runnin' Rebels of the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, the defending national champions.

But wait, there's more: the Tigers have also scheduled a season-ending game against Loyola-Marymount University, to be played in Jadwin Gym on March 10. This contest, a publicist's dream, will feature the highest-scoring team in college basketball (Loyola-Marymount) and the team with the stingiest defense in Division I (Princeton). CBS will televise this game nationally, using it as the lead-in for the network's enormously popular show that unveils the pairings for the N.C.A.A. tournament. This scheduling virtually guarantees the contest a huge television audience.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

With these two games, the Tigers' schedule for 1990-91 leaps from the ordinary to the exceptional. Not since the late 1960s, when Princeton routinely played such national powers as U.C.L.A. and North Carolina, have two such prominent opponents been found on the Tigers' regular-season schedule. Together with the Rutgers game, on December 15 (also to be broadcast on ESPN), the Loyola-Marymount and U.N.L.V. games will give Princeton unparalleled exposure on television—not only a boon for alumni fans but also an important factor in recruiting future players.

Why are the networks so interested in Princeton basketball? Because from their point of view, it's a wise business decision to put the Tigers on the tube. Of all the college basketball games broadcast by ESPN, the two with the highest ratings were Princeton vs. Georgetown in the 1989 N.C.A.A. tournament and Princeton vs. Arkansas in the 1990 tournament.

Left: Kit Mueller '91 battles Arkansas' Mario Credit in the 1990 N.C.A.A. tournament. Mueller and the Tigers will face the defending national champion in December.

In Brief: N.F.L. Cuts Garretts; Princeton Coaching Changes

LABOR DAY, 1990, was a grim one for the GARRETT clan, Princeton's foremost gridiron family since the Poes at the turn of the century. All three Garrett brothers—John '88, Jason '89, and Judd '90—were cut by their respective National Football League teams when N.F.L. rosters were trimmed from sixty to forty-seven players, the teams' regular-season strength.

Perhaps the cruelest of these cuts was Judd, the Tigers' all-time leading rusher and scorer. Drafted in the twelfth round by the Philadelphia Eagles, Judd displayed considerable promise in the pre-season, running the ball well and returning kickoffs. His only weakness, which Eagles' coach Buddy Ryan was fond of pointing out, was blocking. (Ryan, who is given to hyperbole, once called Judd "the worst blocker I've ever seen.") Nonetheless, Judd appeared to have won a spot on team when he survived the final cut, to forty-seven, on the morning of Labor Day. Then the ax fell: that same afternoon, the Eagles traded for another running back and waived Judd.

Judd was unemployed, however, for only a couple of weeks. He recently signed a contract with the Dallas Cowboys, for which his father works as a scout, and was immediately put on the injured-reserve list, suffering from a sore shoulder. The injury is not believed to be serious, but it will keep Judd out of action until mid-October.

Neither of Judd's brothers have been picked up yet by other teams. John, a wide receiver, was dropped by the Cincinnati Bengals, and Jason, a quarterback, was waived by the New Orleans Saints. Both spent last year on the now defunct "developmental" squads of these teams. Of the two, Jason seemed to have a better chance: the Saints didn't sign one of their top two quarterbacks, leaving Jason to battle—unsuccessfully—veteran Tommy Kramer for the backup job.

Princeton made several coaching changes over the summer. Gary Kilpatrick, the head of the men's heavyweight CREW program for the last two years, resigned after a disappointing season.

Kilpatrick was never able to bring the same high degree of success to the heavies that he had achieved with Princeton's lightweight program. Replacing Kilpatrick is Curtis Jordan, the head coach of the Princeton women's crew. Last year, Jordan's varsity eight was undefeated and won the national championship. Dan Roock '81, a former varsity oarsman and, more recently, an assistant coach at Princeton and Syracuse, takes over the women's varsity.

The WOMEN'S SOCCER team also has a new coach, as April Heinrichs replaces Tom Griffith, who resigned last fall after leading his squad to a 12-3 record and a national ranking. In Heinrichs, Princeton has one of the legendary figures in women's soccer: a first-team all-American at North Carolina four times, the twenty-six-year-old Heinrichs was twice named the national player of the year and is a member of the U.S. national team. She inherits a team with a solid nucleus of returning talent and the potential to win the Ivy League championship for the first time since 1982.

As reported in the July 18 issue of PAW, Bill Tierney, the MEN'S LACROSSE head coach, was offered the head coaching job at Johns Hopkins—the plum of the profession. (The Blue Jays have won more national championships in lacrosse than all other schools combined.) But miracle of miracles, Tierney turned down Hopkins's lucrative offer in order to stay at Princeton, where he has resuscitated a moribund program and turned it into a power in its own right. And the team will only get better: with nine blue-chip freshmen (five of them high-school all-Americans) arriving on the campus this fall, the Tigers have legitimate hopes of improving on their national ranking in the top ten a year ago.

The Ivy League has announced a new service for Tiger FOOTBALL FANS who can't make it to Palmer Stadium during the season or who live outside the range of radio coverage. By telephoning 1-800-225-5671 at game time from anywhere in the country, fans can be connected to the WPRB radio broadcast of that day's contest. The charge for this service is fifty cents for the first minute; thereafter, the rate drops, and the longer you listen, the lower it goes—to a minimum of twenty cents a minute. The charge will not appear on your telephone bill but on your Visa or MasterCard account. Because the cost of listening to an entire game might run as much as $40 or $50, interested alumni may want to get together and place the call on a telephone equipped with a speaker. □

FOR RENT

ENJOY THE LUXURY of your own villa, private pool overlooking the Caribbean, and staff of five to serve you. 3 BRs, 3 baths; exquisitely furnished; on one acre with terraced gardens in most exclusive residential neighborhood in Ocho Rios, Jamaica. Everyone should try this kind of living at least once. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70 (owner), 1165 Churchill Downs Rd., Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR waterfront beachhouse amid tropical gardens. Spectacular view, excellent snorkeling. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70, 1165 Churchill Downs, Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

PARIS: Elegant small studio for two just off the Seine in the 6th. 2 min. walk to the Louvre, Notre Dame. 609-924-4332.

BARBADOS: Home of the late John L. Roe Jr. '34. West Coast on bluff overlooking Caribbean. Three air-conditioned BRs, cook, maid, gardener, laundress, swimming pool. 215-527-0585.

PARIS: Rue de la Paix, elegant apartment. Suitable for 2 or 3. 7-days preferred. $200/night. 212-838-1731.

STOCKING ISLAND, Exuma, Bahamas: Octagonal wood and glass home, spectacular 360-degree sea view. All modern conveniences. $1000 weekly for two with boat. Sam Burns '46, 407-231-2822. Brochure avail.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FLA.: Delightful beachfront condominium. Magnificent gulf view. Spacious 2 BR, 2 baths, loft. Pool. Tennis. Will Smith '63. 908-842-2096.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS (Virgin Gorda): Elegant new villa directly on own private snorkeling beach. Spectacular, panoramic view of North Sound including Bitter-End (dive school, etc.) Perfect weather year round. 3 BR, 2 bath, magnificent LR, wrap-around deck, full mod. kit., microwave, dishwasher, marina, fishing, pool, tennis. (Restaurant, provisioning, staff, car, available extra.) $2,500/wk. 609-921-7872.

EXCLUSIVE LUXURY 4 BR, 4 bath villa at private Tryall Club in Montego, Jamaica. Private pool, staff of four, gorgeous grounds overlook Caribbean and championship golf course. Also private tennis, scuba, beach and club house. Available at 2 or 3 BR rate off-season. 203-254-0228(h) or Carol Shaw at 203-929-6391.

LONDON LUXURY FLATS: In Knightsbridge, Mayfair, Chelsea, Kensington, Whitehall Court. One, two, three bedrooms. Furnished and decorated by owners. Rented by day, seven day minimum; reduced rates when exceeding six months. Call during office hours: 518-686-7841.

KAUAI, HAWAII: 4 BR, NaPali Coast beach house. $650-850/wk. 703-560-7900.

ITALY: Renting delightful holiday accommodations, each personally selected. Tuscan castles, Umbrian farmhouses. Seaside villas, lakeview cottages. Centrally-located apartments Venice, Rome, Florence. Week/month. 415-821-9345.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant villa on blue Caribbean. Breathtaking views. Daily maid. All amenities. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

ST. THOMAS: 2 or 3 BRs on the water, spectacular downisland view. H. Macaleer. 919-942-8439.

SANIBEL ISLAND: Gulffront condominium, 2 BR with pool and tennis. Weekly/Monthly. Boozan '79, 201-522-8219

CENTURIES OLD FARMHOUSE at edge of Sabine hill town. Easy reach of Orvieto, Perugia, Assisi, Spoleto, Florence, Rome. Magnificent setting on 4 acres. Restored recently. Architect Ellen Jawdat of Washington, D.C., M.Arch. Harvard. Work executed by Valentini Ristauo of Rome. All modern comforts. C. Joseph, 1 Lincoln Plaza, New York, NY 10023, 212-873-5104.

PORT ANTONIO, JAMAICA: "Nirvana:" Fully equipped, staffed, 3 bedroom, 2 bath, beachfront villa on mile-long, mostly deserted beach. Surf, few tourists. $800/wk. in season. 207-359-4447.

ST. JOHN: Off-season rates. 2 bedroom villa, pool, spectacular view. 508-668-2078.

LONDON RENTALS: Privately owned flats and houses in London's best areas offering comprehensive personal service at attractive prices. One week minimum stay. Call: A Place Like Home, London. 800-526-0215.

MAINE: Tenants Harbor and Port Clyde. Wonderful homes, fully furnished, immaculate and comfortable. $200-$2,000 per week, year round. C. Lang, POB 282, Tenants Harbor, ME 04860. 207-372-8906.

ST. BART'S, FRENCH WEST INDIES: Luxurious seaside villa surrounded by privacy, beautiful beaches and French restaurants. 412-687-2061.

PARIS. LEFT BANK APARTMENT: St. Germain, close to D'Orsay, Louvre, Rodin. Sunny. Fireplaces. Antiques. Luxuriously furnished. Memorable! 412-687-2061.

BEQUIA, GRENADINES: For rent charming beach house on Friendship Bay Beach. Sleeps four. Excellent cook/housekeeper provided. Phone 514-935-6444.

MAD RIVER SUGARBUSH AREA: Comfortable farmhouse for up to 20 skiers. $350 per day. William Iler '51, 508-922-0010.

SKI VERMONT: Spacious 4 bedroom house near Stratton/Mt. Snow. 703-522-5454.

GREAT CAMANO, BVI: Secluded home, magnificent view on private island. 2 BR, baths. Land Rover and Whaler. $900/week. Doug Martin '54. 203-426-2928.

SAIL THE VIRGINS: The best beaches, best views, best of everything. Fully equipped 40' O'Day. 2 cabins, salon, galley, 2 heads, shower, sleeps 7. Captain, provisioning available. 201-747-3976.

VAIL, CO: 3 BR plus loft. 5 min. from gondola and great skiing. $225/night. $275 during Christmas and spring break. Bruce Brookens '67; 303-761-8815.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK: Rocky Mountain seclusion, minutes from skiing. Creek-side home sleeps six. No X-mas. 303-926-3907.

ST. JOHN: Fabulous private home near beach. Peaceful. Furnished. Box 12287, St. Thomas, VI 00801. 809-775-4266.

SUN VALLEY, ID: Luxurious, spacious, ski condo at base of Mt. Baldy in Warm Springs. 3 BRs, 3 baths, fireplace. Walk one block to lifts, restaurants, shops, apres ski. Bill Travers '71, 607-257-7322.

CARIBBEAN, VIRGIN GORDA, B.V.I.: Leverick Bay. Three bedroom villa directly on water. Private grotto and dock for swimming, snorkeling, boating. Low $1,500. High $2,000/week. Owner 813-395-2985. Jack Zwick, 17080 Captiva Dr. S.W., P.O. Box 207, Captiva, FL 33924.

EXUMA, BAHAMAS: Magnificent hilltop view. Fully equipped, 4 bedrooms, van, private beach, housekeeper available. $1,000 weekly in season. 302-428-1455, evenings.

BEQUIA: Jewel of the Grenadines. Quiet. Beautiful. Friendly. Stone house overlooking the sea. Three bedrooms with baths. Pool. Beach. Housekeeper-cook. Three-week rental $5,250. 914-763-8030.

LUQUILLO, P.R.: Newly refurbished completely equipped 2 bedrm. 1 ba. apts. Beach 1 block, stores nearby. Special alumni rate. Beautiful beach and views. E. Pinney '47, P.O. Box 2210, Martinsburg, WV 25401. 304-263-4660.

FLORENCE ESTATE: Monthly or yearly. $1,500/month. 219-874-8740.

CARMEL, CALIFORNIA: Cute two bedroom, two bath home close to town. Weekly or longer-term rentals. Rosemarie Carter, 408-624-2930.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FL. CONDOMINIUM: 2 bedrooms, 2 baths. Pool, tennis, sauna. 3 minutes to unspoiled beach. Near bird sanctuary, golf. Also off-season rates. 216-721-2322, 216-721-2370.

PROVIDENCIALES, Turks and Caicos, B.W.I. Luxury "Villa Camilla" offers beauty and serenity on undiscovered tropical island 90 minutes from Miami. 3 bedroom/3 bath-house fronts pristine 12-mile beach with virgin snorkeling, diving; bill, bone fishing. Sleeps 6-8. $2,000/wk. high; $1,500/wk. low. Guesthouse apartments sleep 2-4. $750/wk. high; $500/wk. low. '71. 617-731-2194.

SEABROOK ISLAND, S.C.: Near historic Charleston, oceanfront 1 BR condo, 2 baths. Sleeps 4; great golf, tennis, restaurants, pelicans. Hugh Hanson '47. 215-649-7335. Princeton discounts!

TORTOLA, BVI: 6 acres, 4 BR, 3 bath, noted architect-designed villa with pool on spectacular promontory jutting over sea and own beach on undeveloped N.E. coast. Two-week rental minimum. Charles Sommer, 11 Upper Ladue Rd., St. Louis, MO 63124; 314-982-2690(w), 314-991-5527(h).

TAOS, NM: 2 BR, 2 bath condominium overlooking Kit Carson Park. $400/week, April 15-Nov. $575/week, Dec.-April 15. Charley Brooks, ERA Taos Realtors, 13 Paseo del Pueblo Norte, Taos, NM 87571; 505-758-0112.

SOUTH CENTRAL FRANCE. AUVERGNE near Romanesque Conques. Stone farmhouse: modern kitchen, sleeps 6. $900/mo. 703-960-6425.

ENGLAND, COTSWOLDS: Thatched cottage. Near Stratford, Oxford, London, 3 sitting, 3 bedrooms, 1½ baths. Central heat. Oscarsson, Rockport, ME 04856.

VIEQUES, PUERTO RICO: 4 bedroom, 3 bath villa. Pool. 360 degree views. Beautiful beaches. Amherst '58.

What's happening on campus?

If you subscribe to the Princeton Weekly Bulletin you won't have to ask!

News and feature stories keep you up to date on University events and people, developments in research and teaching, and student activities and perspectives. The Weekly Calendar lists campus events: lectures, concerts, athletic contests, exhibits, movies.

A subscription for 30 issues covering the academic year 1990-91 is just $18 from Communications/Publications, Stanhope Hall, Princeton University, Princeton NJ 08544.

A very private island.....

850 acre unique resort on nature sanctuary. 7 soft, white sand beaches, water sports, nature trails, Candlelit terrace dining. Only 15 rooms, quiet elegance.

Reservations and information:
GUANA ISLAND CLUB
800-54GUANA or 914-967-6050

SUNNY, EXECUTIVE OFFICE available in the Rockefeller Center area, with additional space for a secretary and/or assistant if wanted, in a suite presently occupied by one executive. Six month lease or longer. Please contact: Wm. McCrea 212-459-0090.

3 BR, 2 BA CONDO overlooking Lido Beach, Sarasota. Beautiful view of gulf, walk to St. Armand's Circle, fine shops and great restaurants. Nov. Dec. Jan. $2,000/mo. 215-644-1296.

SPAIN: Lovely 4 BR villa (pool) overlooking Mediterranean/village. Hess '64. 203-688-9333.

PROVIDENCIALES, BWI: 3 BRs, 3 baths on private beach. $1,500/wk. 216-229-2978.

VERMONT, MORETOWN: Remodeled farmhouse sleeps 10. 15 minutes to Mad River Glen, 20 mins. to Sugarbush, 40 mins. to Stowe. For rent week, week-end, month. 802-229-0051.

HILTON HEAD: 2 BR, den, across from beach, near golf, tennis. Weekly rentals (seasonal rates). Phone 914-359-8623.

FOR SALE

MANHATTAN: If selling a co-op, condominium, or townhouse, call about our unique 200 brokerage firm multi-list program. Sharon Baum w/62, S.W. Bird & Co., 331 Madison Ave., New York, NY; 212-599-8450 ext. 272.

MANHATTAN: East 74th Street. Huge alcove studio. Luxury doorman building. $110,000. 212-628-6782.

PROVENCE, FRANCE: Authentic 18th century farmhouse restored and modernized. In medieval perched village 2 minutes down cobblestones from chateau. Terraced garden, pool, view of Lubéron mountains. Available after July. Asking $550,000. Mills '39, rue Tracapelle, 84220 Gordes, France.

EASTERN SHORE OF MD: Seeking residential property in waterfront mid-shore area, convenient to Washington, Baltimore and Phila.? Call Juana Mestres w/57, Clare Hughes Real Estate, Cambridge, MD 21613. 301-228-4236(o), 301-228-4787(h).

ISLAND HOUSE: See "For Rent, Stocking Island."

CIRCA 1760 SALTBOX FARMHOUSE: Original fireplace and baking oven. Baking for soldiers encamped for the Battle of Bennington done here. Plank floors with roe head nails; Christian Doors and "Morning Staircase"; 5 bedrooms, 8 rooms, 2 baths. Apartment over garage, grounds include perennials, stone walls, birch cluster, apple orchard, views. 9.94 acres. $375,000. Coldwell Banker Hoisington Realty, P.O. Box 87, Bennington, Vermont 05201. 802-442-8337.

BIDDEFORD POOL, MAINE: Unique 1 BR + den condominium in quiet, charming summer community 30 minutes south of Portland. Prime location. Harbor + ocean views from large deck. Walk to wonderful sand beach, $160,000. Owner '54, 212-258-6510 or 207-282-6010.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK, COLORADO: Unique properties. 10% of commission proceeds donated, in your name, to the Yellowstone Bighorn Research Association in memory of my father, Professor Erling Dorf, Hon. '33. Bob Dorf 303-476-2421.

MANHATTAN, CPW: One bedroom, two bathroom. Luxury doorman building. $165,000. Must sell. 212-522-2532 or 203-329-1872.

ST. JOHN, U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS: Luxury loft suite condominium at Gallows Point, Cruz Bay. Sleeps 4, fully equipped kitchen, tastefully furnished. On site pool, rental management, maid service and Ellington's Restaurant. 5 minute walk to town and ferry, panoramic harbor view, cooled by prevailing trade winds. $275,000. Charles Detwiller day 617-246-7400, evening 617-237-3026.

EXCEPTIONAL HISTORIC, fully and authentically restored Colonial on secluded waterfront point, near the Chesapeake Bay. Elegant primary home or weekend retreat has random width pine floors, three fireplaces, three or four bedrooms, 3½ baths, two car garage, porches, mature landscaping. Marketing video available. Call Juana Mestres w/57 at Clare Hughes Real Estate, Cambridge, MD 21613, member of "Employee Relocation Council". 301-228-4236/301-228-4787.

SHORT HILLS: Magnificently and completely restored 1880's Victorian. Unbelievable craftsmanship. Brick walls surround lush trees and formal gardens. Walk to village and NYC commute. Helen Hagerman w/30, Raymond Connolly, Realtors. 201-376-5323.

ATTENTION SAILORS AND GOLFERS: Grand Bahama Island corner lot directly on Grand Lucayan Waterway. 250 feet of waterfront on 0.8 acre zoned for single family or multi-family dwelling. 6 championship golf courses on island. Write Richard Smith '87, Leopoldsweg 18, 6380 Bad Homburg v.d.H., W-Germany.

EASTERN SHORE OF VA: New Chesapeake Bay waterfront home on 2 acres. Deep water. All rooms water view. $280,000. Call owner 804-787-4280. Lynn Conson '53.

FOR SALE/FOR RENT

NANTUCKET—Come join the 400 happy Princeton families. We have large and small rentals, investment opportunities, estates and commercial enterprises. And we give your investments TENDER, LOVING CARE—PREFERRED PROPERTIES. Nancie B. Taylor, w/43, Lucy T. Eaton, d/43. 508-228-2320, 800-338-7715.

WASHINGTON, DC, METROPOLITAN area, Northern Virginia, Maryland. Sales, rentals, land, property management. Colleen Finks w/61, associate broker, Pardoe & Graham, 6729 Curran St., McLean, VA 22101; 703-734-7020; eves., 703-821-2850.

FLORIDA GULF COAST: Sun, surf, sport, culture, amazing realty values below national average. For homes, condos, investment and business opportunities call Margaret Sherman, Centruy Americana Properties, St. Petersburg, 800-421-9591, 813-821-3829(h).

FOR EXCHANGE

MONTEREY BAY, CALIFORNIA: Beach front luxury condo in exchange for like: Italy, Switzerland, France. Duke Slichter '54. 415-941-3244.

WANTED TO RENT

MANHATTAN sublet, studio, East side. Oct.-Nov. 15. Carson '54. 202-244-6679.

RESORTS & TRAVEL

ENJOY THE REAL NEW ZEALAND interestingly and comfortably guided by knowledgeable New Zealanders. Write: Grant Simpson, Whitianga, New Zealand.

LONDON, ENGLAND: Luxury self-catering apartments in the heart of Mayfair. We offer you the comfort and privacy of a recently converted period Georgian town house. British Breaks, Ltd., P.O. Box 1176, Middleburg, Virginia 22117. Telephone 703-687-6971. Fax 703-687-6291.

PARIS MONTPARNASSE Vith: Your plaid à terre for three nights to three weeks. LR, BR, bath and kitchenette, fully equipped, Métros close-by, elevator, cable TV (CNN & BBC) clean and quiet building (Cézanne lived here, Hemingway around corner) on a calm, safe street. Ideal for two. $140 per night- cheaper, more comfortable than hotels. Color photos and brochure $5. Montelius (Dartmouth '56), Brié et Angonnes, 38320 France. Tel. 011-33-76736918.

"NOT ONCE did I feel like a tourist; I felt an Italian friend was showing me bis ITALY, his favorite spots." La Pergola, Tours, Inc.: A special company for the special traveler. Call for 1991 tour schedule. 914-358-6035.

EXPEDITIONS & OUTINGS

HUNTING: Deer and elk. Magnificent mountain ranch. Photographic paradise bordering wilderness area. Tom Turnbull '59, Four Bar Ranch, Box 686, Carbondale, CO 81623.

BED & BREAKFAST

PRINCETON AREA: Alternative lodging in comfortable private homes. Bed & Breakfast of Princeton, P.O. Box 571, Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3189.

MANHATTAN B & Bs and private apartments. Prime locations, attractive rates. AT HOME IN NEW YORK, P.O. Box 407, NYC 10185. Lois Rooks, Director. 212-956-3125; fax 212-247-3294.

WANTED TO BUY

OLD BANJOS, MADOLINS, GUITARS: Any condition, for cash. Vic Williams '53, The Banjo Den, 95 Hallam Road, Buffalo, NY 14216. 716-873-9797.

BUSINESS SERVICES

EUROPE 1992! Doing business in Germany? Princeton grad provides full range of information engineering, personnel and management consulting services. David T. Fisher '69, Personatec GmbH, Wilhelmstrasse 16, 6200 Wiesbaden, W. Germany. Tel. 011-49-6121-305-005. Fax. 011-49-6121-305-006.

PROFESSIONAL TAX PLANNING, ACCOUNTING, AUDIT REPRESENTATION. Personal and business. Enrolled to practice before IRS. By appointment. 212-947-6031. Virgil M. Cummins '67 (EA), 430 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10001.

GOODS & SERVICES

PERSONALIZED TICKET SERVICE: Broadway, concerts, opera, sports. Entertainment, Inc! 609-799-7077.

CRAYFISH: Shipped live. Write for prices. Pyramid Farms Crayfish, 4340 Egypt Rd., Cambridge, MD 21613.

JOHN LENNON 1970 Bag One lithographs, signed, numbered. Buy/sell. Dorothy Rogers Art Search, Boston. 617-267-6040.

RARE IRISH WILD SMOKED SALMON: Delivery worldwide. 800-688-6275 Giftmark (Ireland). $70/2 pound side. (Spectacular 2 ft. long fish, serves 20) Free recipes.

UNUSUAL ANTIQUE PRINT COLLECTION: Turkish, North African, others. W. Spencer 904-371-8344.

TIGER FOOTBALL: Original game programs from the 1940s, fifties and sixties available. Other football publications. College Football, 1550 Larimer, Suite 180, Denver, Colo. 80202. 303-534-2000.

PRINCETON WEDGWOOD PLATES: Blue/white 1930's. Newton Williams 1928. 503-359-9250.

NANNY TRAINING: Keeping Kids, an in-home, OTJ resource/training guide for babysitters/nannies/au pairs. Unique format; up-to-date, 1990 pediatrician edited. $19.95. By Barbara A. Cunningham, Ed.D., '73. Call 703-536-3937.

OPPORTUNITIES

YOUNG MD with great idea seeks capital partner(s). R. Austin '84, 54 Mendosa Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94116. 415-759-6389.

En Route

@ Princeton Jct. Train Station

Pick up your Tailgate party En Route to the game

- Cheeses & Pates
- Gourmet Sandwiches & Salads
- Fresh Fruit Tarts & Desserts
- Baguettes and other breads

Monday - Friday 5:30 AM - 8:15 PM

Saturdays 8 AM - 3 PM

Call 609.799.8844

Place An Ad With Us Because Classified Ads Work Better For You In the PRINCETON EXCHANGE

AIRPORT LIMO

Newark
$18

609-587-6600
Hourly Service

JFK
$27

PRINCETON AIRPORTER

PLACE YOUR AD IN THE PRINCETON EXCHANGE

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____ State: _____ Zip: _____

Telephone, Work: _____ Home: _____

My ad should run _____ time(s), beginning the month of _____

Classification: _____

Text: _____

Payment for all insertions must accompany initial request. My check for $ _____ is enclosed. Rates per insertion: 1-4 insertions, $1.20 per word; 5-9 insertions, $1.15 per word; 10-17 insertions, $1.10 per word. Send to: Princeton Exchange, Princeton Alumni Weekly, 41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540 (609)258-4886. No phone orders please. Issues are published 17 times from September through July. Ads will appear five-six weeks after receipt. When calculating payment, multiply number of words X number of insertions X rate per word to arrive at total price. P.O. Box number counts as two words, phone number as one word. No charge for zip code or class numerals. We cannot accept PAW box numbers. Please make checks payable to Princeton Alumni Weekly.

What Should We Expect?

The following is a text of the Opening Exercises address given September 16, 1990.

I take great pleasure in welcoming each of you as we begin together this 245th academic year for Princeton. To those who are returning, welcome back; I hope your summer was restorative, or productive, or perhaps even both. To those who are arriving for the first time—whether students, faculty, or staff—a special word of greeting. Universities, like most living organisms, require constant replenishment and rejuvenation, and we look forward to your ideas, your energies, and the challenges and accomplishments of your days here.

At the same time, it is also important to acknowledge the many before you whose dedication established and nourished the distinction of this institution. Now you join us for our continuing journey, and I hope this is a moment of great celebration for you. It certainly is for us. We are proud you have chosen Princeton, and we look forward to our years together.

Today I would like to discuss certain aspects of the exciting academic community of which you are now a part. The questions I would like us to explore are, now that we are here, what should you expect of us? and what should we expect of you?

Let me suggest five things that I believe you should expect of us.

First, that we will remain, above all else, a serious community of learning, with a physical and intellectual environment conducive to reflection, discovery, and growth.

You are entering a community where education—at both the undergraduate and graduate level—is our first priority. We are also a community with an unshakeable determination to remain a center of distinguished scholarship. To fulfill these objectives, we continue to be committed—above all else—to recruiting the highest quality faculty and student body.

As a serious community of learning we have high expectations for all of our members, and we place a high premium on new and challenging ideas that grow out of deep and reflective analysis. For us, even good intentions do not substitute for careful thought. Indeed, it is my view that reflective thought is a requirement of purposive moral action of any kind.

This is also a community where faculty and staff will do all they can to help, to guide, and to provide you with many new opportunities for learning, but where ultimately each of you must take responsibility for your own continued growth.

Although there are and ought to be lighter moments in any collegiate experience, our principal purpose here is the serious pursuit of education and the advancement of knowledge and understanding, in an atmosphere of openness and of demanding intellectual and ethical standards. Other things are important, but primarily to the extent that they support this fundamental mission.

Continuing to be a vital educational community is a constant challenge. Universities, like other complex organizations, can be distracted from their core activities and are frequently pressed—by their students, parents, faculty, staff, alumni, and the society at large—to take on an ever-expanding portfolio of roles and responsibilities. We have both ardent supporters and critics who believe that we should behave more like municipalities, or investment houses, or social service centers, or entertainment conglomerates. I believe our primary obligation is to focus our energies and resources on our academic programs, and thus to advance the essential activity for which universities exist. Colleges and universities—public or private—can only serve their public purposes if their highest priorities are their central roles of education and scholarship.

Harold T. Shapiro

At an alumni gathering last year I was asked how I would feel if another university had better cafeterias than Princeton. My reply was that, while I certainly wanted to be sure that we were serving good food at a good price, beyond that I would not be greatly concerned; I did not aspire to have the best collegiate cafeteria. If, however, another university was doing a better job of teaching introductory economics, then I would be very concerned. In such a core area, I did aspire to be among the very best.

I believe that Princeton has done a better job than most in focusing—and occasionally refocusing—its energies and its resources on its core activities. In a world of finite resources and rapid change in all realms of knowledge and human experience, this challenge is more difficult, but more compelling than ever. Like any vibrant academic community, we will always generate more excellent opportunities than we can effectively pursue. To continue to preserve our capacity for effective adaptation and change, we have long accepted the requirement to prune as well as to grow. We intend to continue Princeton's tradition of selective growth, now made possible by the creativity of our faculty and students, the support of our alumni, and the budgetary adjustments completed over the last two years.

Indeed, as we enter the 1990s and head toward the next millennium, the pace of change is quickening once again. In this country, for example, we began this decade imperiled not so much by the export of Soviet power as by the import of drugs, damage to our environment, an increasingly precarious ability to compete effectively in world economic markets, a growing gap between rich and poor, a failure to sustain an adequate level of investment in human and physical capital, and a set of social arrangements in which too many Americans feel disconnected from our nation's future. If we value our nation's ability to control its own destiny and to play a significant role in defining and enlarging democracy's influence and meaning, then we need a set of cultural commitments and associated economic objectives and policies that reflect the emerging realities of this new decade. This in turn requires fresh thinking across a broad range of disciplines, the kind of thinking that excites a healthy academic community and provides it with renewed vitality.

“Although there are and ought to be lighter moments in any collegiate experience, our principal purpose here is the serious pursuit of education and the advancement of knowledge and understanding, in an atmosphere of openness and of demanding intellectual and ethical standards.”

I hope you will join with others on this campus in exploring ways in which we as a university can more effectively respond to the urgent needs of our times. One intriguing proposal that is being developed by a group of Princeton faculty would create a new undergraduate certificate program in environmental studies. There is no question that the world faces an urgent agenda of environmental issues, ranging from erosion of the ozone layer and global warming to acid rain and toxic waste disposal. There is also no question that to address these issues we will have to mobilize the talents and commitments of scientists and engineers as well as specialists in human behavior, public policy, and other areas.

The goal of this proposal is to create just such a broadly interdisciplinary program; to attract students in nonscience departments as well as students in the sciences and engineering; and to build on the existing array of student initiatives, departmental offerings, and scholarly activities in this area. The proposal still must be reviewed by the appropriate faculty committees, and resources need to be identified. I am, however, quite optimistic. I also have asked Professor Thomas Spiro and the other faculty members composing the Council on Energy and Environmental Studies—together with other interested faculty—to suggest ways to strengthen our scholarly efforts in this area, for there remains much that we do not understand.

The second thing you should expect of us is that, in our teaching and scholarly activity, we will speak to questions of values.

In Alice in Wonderland, Lewis Carroll's mock turtle defines education as "reeling and rithing, of course, and the different branches of arithmetic—ambition, distraction, legalfication, and derision." Other, less caustic definitions frequently emphasize the conveyance of information as the measure of learning. Our ambitions, however, extend well beyond conveying information. As two-time presidential candidate and Princeton graduate Adlai Stevenson '22 observed, the purpose of universities is to make us wiser as well as smarter.

For me, wisdom emerges out of a determined effort to grapple with deep and complex questions that matter. It can often emerge from our struggle to grasp the meaning and value of human life. My hope is that you will develop at least some wisdom here at Princeton and that you will explore the questions that underlie our humanity in life outside as well as in the classroom.

This past June we were able to announce that, as the result of a gift in excess of $20 million from Laurance Rockefeller '32, Princeton would be able to create an exciting new Center for Human Values to support teaching, research, and public discussion about moral, political, social, and spiritual aims and aspirations, and their influence on human character, conduct, and communal life. Under the leadership of its first director, Professor Amy Gutmann, and a faculty executive committee, the center will cross the bounds of philosophy, politics, art, religion, and science to offer undergraduate courses and graduate seminars in such areas as: religion, culture, and morality; environmental ethics; philosophy and public affairs; moral dimensions of literature; theories of power; ethics and international politics; ethics and the life sciences; and ethics and the professions. The center will sponsor collaborative teaching and research, the development of new courses and seminars, fellowship awards for graduate students, research grants for undergraduates, and colloquiums and conferences that bring together creative thinkers from across the academic and non-academic worlds.

In making his gift, Laurance Rockefeller recalled puzzling over questions about ethical and spiritual ideas as an undergraduate philosophy major and writing his thesis on "The Concept of Value—and its Relation to Ethics." Our hope is that, through this Center and in other ways, each of you also will puzzle over some of the difficult moral issues of our time, issues such as: Should our societal arrangements focus on the fullest realization of the individual or on the community obligations that bind us together? What kind of equality, what kind of pluralism, should we seek? What moral obligations, if any, do we have to other individuals? How do we adjudicate competing moral claims in a manner that respects differences, rejects domination, and accepts community? These are questions that go to the very core of our civilization, and I hope that by the time you leave Princeton you will have grappled with at least some of them.

"As two-time presidential candidate and Princeton graduate Adlai Stevenson '22 observed, the purpose of universities is to make us wiser as well as smarter."

The third thing you should expect of us is that we will remain a university with a special commitment to teaching and to the education of undergraduates.

There is no question that Princeton attracts faculty who care deeply about teaching and who teach exceedingly well—who remember, in the words of one faculty member, their own debt "to those who gave me some sense of the poetry of learning; who gave me some sense of academic integrity—that you couldn't say this without evidence." Another faculty member has said: "I like to turn the lamps on in their heads—the 'aha!' phenomenon. I like the silence that proceeds in a seminar, even in a lecture, when something sinks in that wasn't familiar. There is a wave of silence that means you have reached the depth in some way."

There also is no question that Princeton attracts students who are determined to take full advantage of the teaching resources that are available to them. In preparation for an annual report this year on the topic of teaching, we have been reviewing survey data and interviewing both students and faculty, and, what we find are extraordinary levels of dedication, creativity, and satisfaction.

As those of you who are new to campus will soon discover, teaching and learning take various forms. For seniors, it includes a thesis or some other independent project. Last year these projects ranged from an assessment of the need for a federal policy to protect Civil War battlefields, to the development of a computer graphics program to help trucking companies decide when and where to send their vehicles, to a study of the defection of Hispanics from the Catholic church to the Pentecostal movement, to a proposal for reducing infant mortality among nonwhite children, to the design and construction of an all-terrain amphibious vehicle that competed in a three-day race in Florida. For most seniors the thesis is an opportunity not only to do original research, but also to work closely with a faculty member who shares and supports their interests.

Undergraduates also enjoy unusual opportunities to work closely with members of the faculty in two relatively new programs at Princeton. One is the program of freshman seminars in the residential colleges that enters its fifth year this fall with topics ranging from women's autobiographies and William Faulkner's South to the Zen way of seeing and the Islamic Near East. One faculty member who taught a freshman seminar last year said that students seem to find the seminars to be "an unexpected intellectual experience—interacting with each other, being asked to think out loud in front of others, getting to know each other intellectually on a topic they all care about but have little knowledge of."

Another is the program of senior seminars in the social sciences that was introduced for the first time this past year. These seminars provide an opportunity for upperclass students to cross disciplinary boundaries, to synthesize their learning, and to explore questions of values. They also provide faculty members with what the director of the program described as "a certain esprit de corps, a sense that others share their sentiments that quality of teaching is as important as quality of research." This year's topics include the recent transformations of dictatorships into democracies, the socio-political impact of World War II, the culture of corporate leadership, and genetics and politics in a "Brave New World."

Other innovations of recent years include initiatives coordinated through our science and technology council to improve the teaching of science to nonscience majors. One tangible result is a new course, Chemistry 112, "From Ozone to Oil Spills: A Chemical Perspective on the Environment." Designed for nonscientists, the course introduces students to the basic principles of chemistry in the context of issues such as radon, ozone, nuclear energy, the greenhouse effect, water quality, agriculture and nutrition, toxic chemicals, and drugs.

We do take justifiable pride in the quality of teaching at Princeton. But for any institution of learning it is imperative periodically to review how we are teaching and learning, and to ask how we might do better. In recent years faculty members, the deans, and many departments have been working to strengthen important aspects of our teaching program. In addition to the two seminar programs and the science council, they also have focused on questions such as: are we taking full advantage of the opportunities presented by advances in technology; can we better integrate new perspectives into the curriculum; can we improve our teaching of writing and our foreign language instruction; should we redesign junior independent work; and so on. These efforts have complemented many departmental initiatives to reassess and enhance the curriculum and a broad range of new interdepartmental opportunities organized through the humanities council, the Afro-American studies program, and many others.

"Since teaching is at the very core of what we do, we want to be sure that we do it as well as we possibly can, and I will be asking the department chairs and the faculty this fall to advise us on how best to focus our attention on these issues."

This summer, Dean Malkiel and her colleagues have spent a great deal of time gathering information that will begin to provide an updated and comprehensive picture of the undergraduate academic experience. They have been investigating questions such as who teaches whom and in what settings; which courses are undergraduates actually selecting, especially in the first two years; and what has been the effect on the curriculum of the increased number of specialized courses. Our hope is that all this activity will help the faculty identify areas for possible improvement. Since teaching is at the very core of what we do, we want to be sure that we do it as well as we possibly can, and I will be asking the department chairs and the faculty this fall to advise us on how best to focus our attention on these issues.

I also want to be sure that we are appropriately recognizing those among the faculty who make an exceptional commitment to teaching and enjoy unusual success. Toward this end, I will be recommending the establishment of a new award program for distinguished teaching that would recognize two junior and two senior faculty members each year. We expect that selections would be made by a committee of undergraduates, graduate students, faculty and deans, and we hope to present the first awards next fall at these Opening Exercises ceremonies.

This fall we will appoint the first [Lloyd E.] Cotsen ['50] Faculty Fellow, a new award for a faculty member, principally in the humanities and social sciences, who is an outstanding teacher of undergraduates. The three-year fellowship is intended to assist the faculty member in developing new undergraduate courses or making other distinctive contributions to the undergraduate teaching program. Two graduate students in the department of the Cotsen Fellow who show particular promise as teachers will be appointed each year to work with the faculty member as Cotsen Junior Fellows.

Through the Association of Princeton Graduate Alumni we already recognize exceptional teaching by graduate students who are involved in undergraduate instruction. The teaching done by graduate students is an important element of our overall program—we know from student and faculty evaluations that many of our graduate students provide excellent classroom experiences—and teaching provides important preparation for the faculty careers that many graduate students will pursue.

Questions about how well we prepare and support our graduate students for their teaching are among the topics to be examined by a special visiting committee that will review our graduate school this fall. Graduate education is undergoing major rethinking nationally as we prepare for an era of projected faculty shortages in many fields, and Princeton wants to take this opportunity to review the graduate experience on this campus and the administrative support that we provide to our graduate students and programs.

The fourth thing that I believe you should expect of us is that we will continue to make every effort to attract and support a diverse community of students, faculty, and staff.

Our goal is two-fold. On the one hand, we learn much from our diversity—about ourselves and about others. At the same time, as one student expressed it, "Celebrating our diversity is not enough. We must also find ways to build bridges across our various differences so we can live together in peace and harmony." As in past years, the dean of the chapel is sponsoring a series of programs this year on issues of Peace and Justice, focusing on topics such as intolerance and prejudice and on building respect and community among all who share in the life of this University. I hope many of you will participate.

On this occasion last year I suggested that as a community we needed to increase the participation of women and minority individuals as students, faculty, staff, and alumni; to improve the quality of life on this campus; and to increase campus awareness, understanding, and appreciation of minority cultures.

Over the intervening twelve months we have taken a number of steps toward these objectives:

- We have continued our special efforts to attract greater numbers of undergraduates, graduate students, and faculty from minority communities. A University-wide initiative over the last two years has resulted in ten new women and minority faculty in the professorial ranks and ten more as visitors and postdoctoral fellows than otherwise would have been possible.

- Our recent faculty appointments in Afro-American studies have made Princeton one of the national leaders in this field, a position that we hope to enhance through additional appointments and the creation of a new program of postdoctoral fellowships.

- We completed a very informative women's needs assessment, and a Standing Committee on the Status of Women, an advisory panel to the president that was established last year, is about to issue its first annual report. I have seen a draft and found it an extremely thoughtful compilation of recommendations for improving the status of women throughout the University.

- Our affirmative action officer, Associate Provost Maryann Coffey, spent much of this past year gathering information on the needs of minority individuals at Princeton. Following broad consultation, she expects to complete her assessment this year, and to bring forth recommendations for addressing the needs she has identified.

- In my remarks last September, I proposed a special allocation of funding to increase programming by minority organizations that enhances cultural awareness on campus or speaks to the cultural or social needs of minority students as they see them. This funding subsequently was made permanent by the Priorities Committee.

- Last September I also asked a committee of students, faculty, and staff to plan the first of what would become an annual University-wide day of remembrance to commemorate the birthday of Martin Luther King, Jr. Those who participated in that day will remember it as a moving experience, and I hope that as many of you as possible will participate in this year's program, scheduled for January 15.

As a result of last year's activities, many students became aware for the first time that Dr. King had preached in this chapel thirty years ago. At the initiative of the Undergraduate Student Government, a plaque commemorating that sermon and honoring the legacy of Dr. King has been commissioned for installation later this year on the rear side wall of the chapel. You will be able to see a representation of the plaque to your left as you leave the Chapel this afternoon.

While there are many other items that I could add to my list of things you should expect of us, I am going to limit myself to five, and the fifth is that we will care about your personal as well as your intellectual development.

We cannot, of course, meet every need of every student. But we are a community of learning where intellectual growth is complemented—to some extent—by important opportunities to test ourselves physically and artistically; to develop talents outside of the classroom; to explore questions of spirituality and faith; to form friendships and have fun. I do not want in any way to dilute my first observation about the centrality of your academic experiences, but we are here to grow in more ways than one and to take pleasure from our associations as well as to learn from them.

I would like to conclude these remarks with some thoughts about what we expect of you.

First, the same hard work we expect from ourselves. Our academic program is designed to be both vigorous and demanding. While we certainly hope you will find time for recreation and reflection, we also hope that you will take full advantage of the resources and the opportunities for discovery and growth that are available to you.

Second, an eagerness to ask hard and thoughtful questions and to take appropriate risks. One of the undergraduates who was interviewed for this year's annual report said: "This place is full of people who like to challenge professors. For instance, in Italian there are two words for 'wood,' one for the wood you burn in a fireplace, and one for the wood you use to build houses. So we asked, what word do you use when a house is on fire? People here are like that." We want people here to be like that; to exercise their minds, not just to fill them; and to take the risks of unfamiliar courses, of unconventional ideas, of unexpected friendships.

Third, civility, tolerance, and openness—a generosity of spirit—in the ways you relate to each other. We are a human community, and we all have our difficult days. In my experience, we work best as a community when we give each other the benefit of the doubt; when we resist impugning the motives of those with whom we disagree—however passionate the disagreement; when we recognize and respect the fundamental humanity that in fact makes us all brothers and sisters of one human family.

Fourth, an active commitment to the service and well-being of others. This can take many forms. It can involve participation in community service activities sponsored by the Student Volunteers Council, Community House, or the Project 55 program of internships and service opportunities developed this past year by the Class of 1955. It can involve a heightened environmental consciousness that leads to faithful participation in recycling programs. It can involve something as simple as helping a classmate who needs assistance, or turning down a stereo when others may be trying to study or sleep.

Fifth, and finally, we hope that you will find meaning in your personal and intellectual accomplishments here at Princeton. You are here not only because of what you have done in the past, but because of what you are capable of doing in the future—in the careers that you pursue, in the families that you form, in the communities that you serve. I hope that your days here will open you to life's possibilities, and will provide you with some of the tools necessary to convert possibility into reality—not to your benefit alone, but to the benefit of us all.

I wish each of you a year filled with discovery and growth; with learning and friendship; with meaning and service. The academic engine is ready to be shifted into high gear, and I wish you a successful journey.

12 ARTHUR C. HOLDEN
Box 182
Washington, CT 06793; 203-868-7063

Just as I was wondering what the WEEKLY expected of me for next season, I happened, for another reason, to refer to that epic-making book, ONLY YESTERDAY, written in 1931 by Frederick Lewis Allen, editor of HARPER's magazine. The first chapter dealt with the significance of a penciled memorandum by Woodrow Wilson saying that in Nov. 1918 the peace treaty had finally been signed. Each of the chapters reveals a particular matter upon which the public attention had become briefly focused. The title of the second chapter is especially significant—"Back to Normalcy." Another is titled "Coolidge Prosperity," and still another, "The Big Bull Market." A second volume entitled SINCE YESTERDAY came out in 1940. In it are chapters on the Depression as well as the Natl. Recovery Administration. On the staff of the N.R.A., L'il Arthur was to learn of the futility of attempts to deal with the Great Depression with too little understanding of causes. It is to be regretted that Frederick Allen did not live as long as his friend, L'il Arthur. Otherwise, he might have written best sellers for the "yesterday" of our present problems. Princeton, perhaps, has taught us the difference between "knowing" and "understanding." We cannot do better today than to patiently reread these two volumes on the problems of yesterday.

13 ALISON R. BRYAN
Box F
Frenchtown, NJ 08825

More of our 19 undergraduate scholarship recipients have expressed their appreciation to the Class of 1913. Michael J. Kotin '93 has written several times and came with a classmate to call on us in Frenchtown. He held the William Moyer Landis Memorial Scholarship. Michael is from Massapequa, N.Y., and went to Farmingdale High School.

Diane L. Benfer '90, has sent her thanks as a recipient of the Percy Fraser Burrage '13 Scholarship. She will soon begin a two-year analyst program with Alex. Brown, an investment bank in Baltimore, Md.

Laurance S. Rockefeller '32, has donated $21 million to create a Center for Human Values at Princeton. The purpose of the center is to promote the study of issues that cross the boundaries of philosophy, politics, art, religion, and science. It will support teaching, research, and public discussion concerning moral, political, social, and spiritual aims, and their influence on human character, conduct, and life. He says, "I greatly appreciate President Harold T. Shapiro's view of the Princeton Univ. Center for Human Values. It seems to me that the challenges we face as a pluralistic global society will best be served by individuals whose training embraces an understanding of the relationship of mind, body, and spirit to their own basic values and sense of well-being."

17 ICE GRAMMER, c/o Chemical Bank
30 Rockefeller Plaza, Ste. 6100
New York, NY 10112

The final report for 1990 Annual Giving showed that the total amount donated by the Class of 1917 amounted to $30,267. For the years 1912 through 1921, '17 had the highest total. Heartiest congratulations to Class Agent Doug Nichols for his stellar work.

Jack Warfield's widow, Lucille, has made a most generous gift to Princeton in memory of our beloved classmate. We are indeed grateful to her. She writes of her desire to attend a reunion luncheon, but her interest lies with her family who are all in the West.

We have received word from Mrs. Philip Holcombe of the death of her father, Stacy Fine. He was a devoted member of our Class, and our sympathies are extended to Mrs. Holcombe and Stacy's son, Robert.

19 GEORGE B. LARKIN
14 Lake Forest Dr.
Charlottesville, VA 22901

George Larkin was laid up for a little over a month in mid-summer. While quite restricted in activity, has improved enough to do this and the previous PAW 1919 notes. Please send in news about yourself or others. We can always use it.

We have memorials in this issue.

20 SALLY S. McALPIN W'20
Box 670
Princeton, NJ 08542

It is time to make my usual plea for notes on your personal doings: trips, exciting moments, even activities that seem dull to you. All of you who read the Class notes of 1920 enjoy sharing the lives of your friends. The notes are not world-shaking, never were intended to be, and they succeed or fail according to the input from each Class.

Personal summer gleanings are scarce but we have good letters from Eva Tounley and Walt Morgan. Walt deplores his not attending his 70th reunion. He didn't realize that the Saturday luncheon was our chief event. Why not aim for the same turn out in 1991, plus the Morgans? That might be a record for a 71st reunion. Eva's letter suggests that there is fun in life for an octogenarian. Her life has fallen into a busy pattern: summer in Winterport, Me., in a house next to daughter Sue, winters in Monmouth next to son Phil. In this way she crowds in innumerable town fairs, both the Penobscot and Monmouth Theatre, local music, and the Bangor Symphony. It does one good to hear of so many exciting activities.

We have sad news to impart. Irving Harris died quietly on July 24 at his home. Your secretary represented the Class at the memorial service.

21 A. EDWARD CONOVER
331 Lower Dolington Rd., Apt. C-4
Newtown, PA 18940

Writing this column in early September, the Harvard football game lunch seems like a long way off. But the clock keeps ticking, and by now you have probably heard that this year '21 will join the other members of the Old, Old Guard at special tables in Jadwin Gym. There will be set-ups, ice, and potato chips. Lunch will start at 10:00. Game time is 1 P.M. I hope to see some familiar faces.

On sending greetings from the Class to Allan Wilcox on his becoming a nonagenarian, I realized that he was the last hold-out. We are now all "over ninety." I hope we can start another series to congratulate the centenarians.

Ham Morris lost his wife of 65 years, Dorothy, on July 4 after a short illness. The Class extends to him deepest sympathy. We have memorials in this issue.

23 LARRY GOOD
201 W. Evergreen Ave., Apt. 716
Philadelphia, PA 19118

H. Gates Lloyd has made a most extraordinary gift to the Art Museum in honor of the Class of 1923. The gift is "Black Friday" 1948, a painting by Willem de Kooning (American, b. 1904), whose stature as one of the leading abstract expressionists has secured his position as one of the most important painters of our time. According to Museum Director Allen Rosenbaum, "Black Friday" is "not only a magnificent work of art, but also a key work in de Koonings' oeuvre, as within the single work, one can compare and see the transition from his earlier figurative style, painted on the back of the masonite support, to the fully abstract imagery of the principal image. The painting is not only a great treasure, one of the most significant works of art ever presented to the museum, but also a very rich subject for teaching. The University has been greatly enriched by Gates's gift."

We regret to report the death of Marian Prout Snoble.

24 RICHARD H. HOBBS
862 Prospect Ave.
Winnetka, IL 60093

Jim Cutting is enthusiastic about a recent trip to Ireland and about Asford Castle, County Mayo, where they stayed. Winnie and Jim took their daughter Weesie and granddaughter Frosty with them. They are now back at Annapolis making arrangements to attend our 67th reunion next June 7-8. Hopefully others will make note of these dates and plan to be with us. Irma and Fred Moble are in Highlands, N.C. for the summer. They will return to Ponte Vedra, Fla. in Oct. They had a most enjoyable visit with Kel and MacKinnon Ellis in Gray, Tenn. a short while ago. Both Ellises are fine, although Kin has trouble walking because of a disc problem. Fred plays golf whenever he can. He and his former roommate Howie Sadler keep in close touch. Sunny and Henry Gubrie spent June and part of July salmon fishing in Canada, Aug. sailing in Maine, and the rest of the time loafing at their home in Bedford, N.Y. We should all be reminded that the cost of the ALUMNI WEEKLY for each of us and for our Class widows, which together total over two hundred, is traditionally met by Class dues. With some twenty of us failing to pay dues and an assessment of $15.00 per each PAW mailing, a computer is hardly needed to calculate the limited life of our treasury. Readers who have not paid the $20.00 annual dues, please send your check to Paul.

We have memorials in this issue.

25 JOHN L. K. JENNEY
Box 123
Montchanin, DE 19710

Class Picnic before Harvard Game
Jadwin Gym, Oct. 20

Katy and Al Gross stayed on after reunions with Jean Smyth, Prof. Osgood's daughter and widow of Al's lifetime friend, Rev. Robert Smyth. "On Sunday we attended the dedication of a stained glass window given in his memory at the little church in Rocky Hill, N.J., where he preached for 25 years."

We regretted that Virginia and George Derby were among those who did not feel up to making the journey to reunions. A fellow Princetonian in Naples, Fla., who sent a clipping from the May 5 Naples Daily News, writes, "Your classmate, George Derby, is active here in Princeton affairs and is a pillar of the community. As past chairman of the

Naples Civic Assn., he announced this year's recipients of the Outstanding Teachers awards, which he originated, stating, "Next to the ministry I consider teaching the highest calling there is."

Len Draper writes, "I sure missed not being on hand at the big hurrah. I have just passed the 89 mark, and it is increasingly evident that your correspondent is the oldest person present at social gatherings here in Duluth."

The photo shows Taylor, Stevenson, and Dill at the P-rade, with Bob MacMillan's daughter behind Dill.

The will of Bill Stalher included a gift of $25,000 to the Class Scholarship Fund.

We have memorials in this issue.

26 ROBERT WOODFORTH
57 Rockwell Rd.
Ridgefield, CT 06877

A salute to our Class Agent Guy Dove for producing a neat 73.4% Class participation in the final reckoning of Annual Giving in June, 1990, up four points over 1989.

A report from Barbara (Bobby) and Bill Moore, who, this past winter, voyaged down the east coast of South America and back to N.Y. for 46 days on the large container carrier AMERICANA. This ship can carry 1,100 20-ft. containers as well as 90 passengers with deluxe accommodations, such as a swimming pool, sun deck, and beauty shop, even a staff doctor on board. Bill reports not only plenty of shore excursions and a cheerful Norwegian crew, but other Princetonians on board as well.

Al Liskens has moved to Calif. to be near his daughter Jane, who writes that he is in a nursing home, and next to seeing his family, he appreciates reading the ALUMNI WEEKLY. Unfortunately, Al's new address is missing and we await this news when Al and Jane read this column.

Carroll Long has had a chair in surgery named in his honor at the Univ. of East Tenn., where he taught for many years.

Len Hanan celebrated his 87th birthday in San Francisco, according to a note from Dorothy, who writes that Len is not in good health, but appreciates very much the Class birthday greetings.

Charlie Hemmingsley, who has lived in Upper Montclair for more than half a century, has taken Associate Member Rose Rufford's advice about living in a lifetime care community (see the 1988 "Summer Summary"), and has moved to Meadow Lakes, near Princeton, in Hightstown, N.J. There he joins Della Sue and Jim Newman, Patty and Bill Nevius, and Nadine and Dave Rubidge.

We record with much sadness the death, on Aug. 26, of classmate George Beach, a former Class president and longtime Class officer, and a leader in Class affairs. We have memorials in this issue.

27 NELSON R. BURN
36 Lexington Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06119

Blown by his perennial curiosity and love of adventure, Don Kemmerer has sailed where the storm wind blew the Ancient Mariner, and "The ice was here, the ice was there / The ice was all around." Under the auspices of Travel Dynamics of N.Y., he joined a company of 127 on the good ship LUMINA for a trip to the Antarctic Peninsula, in the first week of Feb. "For recreation," he reports, "we donned heavy bright red parkas, added life jackets, and boarded 'zodiacs' (rubber boats, capacity 15, with outboard motors) and went ashore to see first-hand how penguins live and stink up their rookeries, or we might poke about abandoned research stations or whalers' huts. The most exciting things we did were threading our way through fields of apartment-sized icebergs and reminding each other that only one eighth of the berg is visible above water; watching about 100 whales one day spouting and disporting themselves; and approaching smaller icebergs inhabited by the resident sea lion smaller himself." Don rates this among the top five of his many trips.

Don reached home at Champaign, Ill., "Just in time for a devastating ice storm that did immense damage to most of the trees in town," cut off his power for nearly a week, and "made our Antarctic trip seem like a week on the Riviera by comparison." With his vivid letter Don sent a handsome black and white map of the tour area, with title and key adorned by tiny strutting penguins. It makes one want to take the trip.

We have memorials in this issue.

28 R. PARK JOHNSON
Box 28
Penney Farms, FL 32079; 904-284-8698

The history of friendship experiences of the Class of 1928 comprises not just reunions, dinners, luncheons, and picnics, but some historic informal gatherings, such as an annual Fourth of July celebration at the summer home of Mildred and Sherb Becker in Mill Neck, L.I. The picture, somewhat delayed in transmission and publication, is of the 1989 gathering, showing Sherb, Bill Rencbard, Don Agnew, present for the first time, and Sinc Hatch (just a few days before his death on July 12, 1989). Wendy Hatch, who is a first cousin of Sherb's, took the picture. The participants are always appropriately garbed in patriotic red, white, and blue costumes. I hope we will hear something soon about the 1990 celebration.

Ritter Shumway, and his skating partner Harlene Lee, skated in the Exhibition of Champions on Feb. 11 in Salt Lake City, following the U.S. Figure Skating Championships. They received a huge standing ovation with arms of the crowd waving to and fro in unison. As Ritter comments, "The music? Of course, 'New York, New York.'"

Jane and Don Liddell were honored at a 50th wedding anniversary reception on Sept. 26 at the Union Club on East 69th St. in N.Y. Their children Jane and Roger shared in sponsoring the festive occasion.

29 LOUIS F. KEMP
12 Winthrop Rd.
Guilford, CT 06437; 203-453-4646

Class Luncheon Harvard Game, Oct. 20

Do meet your classmates before the Harvard game at Jadwin Gym. Lunch starts at 10:30 A.M. at our own table. Look for the 1929 banner. Free setups, but B.Y.O.L. Sandwiches will be available. Game starts at 1:00 P.M. Plan now on coming.

In our nomadic society, past statistics reveal that the average family moves about once every five years. Benson Blake has the distinction of living in the same residence in Nyack, N.Y., for well over 40 years. After a successful career with Morgan Guaranty, he retired in 1971. He writes, "Mary and I are well, keep busy with a variety of interests in local matters, have done no traveling in recent years, enjoy our ever-diminishing friendships and, of course, our widely scattered offspring."

Mary and Maxey Morrison still spend their summers in Vermont, leaving their Life Care Community, Kendal at Longwood, in Kennett Square, Penn., until the fall foliage puts on its autumnal color. Their son Bill '62 comes over from London with his family to Nantucket for a month—Maxey and Mary spend a week with them. Maxey is still an avid bird watcher. He was rewarded when he watched a Great Horned Owl chase a hawk out of its nest, so the owl could raise two of its owlets.

With much sorrow I report the death of Charlie Arnt in early Aug. Our deep sympathy to Pat and family. A memorial will follow. We have memorials in this issue.

30 HUBERT A. "Red" SCHREIBER
8008 Westover Rd.
Bethesda, MD 20814

A recent issue of the Triangle Club house organ included a previously unpublished article written by Roe Wade prior to his death. In it, Roe reminisced on his association with Jimmy Stewart during their Triangle days. Speaking of Triangle, F. E. Smith's granddaughter is a current member, following in her grandfather's footsteps.

Last June the local Colorado Springs newspaper carried a feature article on Marsh Sprague's 1931 Model A Ford, which Marsh still owns and operates. He bought it in Apr. 1931. A gift from his mother in honor of his graduation, it cost the huge sum of $679. Perhaps we can persuade Marsh to drive it back for our 65th in 1995.

George Immerwahr, who had to miss our 60th because of scheduling problems, is already making plans to come back in 1992, when his son John celebrates his 25th reunion.

Tom Moore blames his absence from our 60th in June on his daughter Marianne, who, according to Tom, was delivering Tom's first grandson just about the time the P-rade was forming up in front of Nassau Hall. Tom expects this newborn to grow up to be a star fullback along the lines of Mike Miles '29. It appears that John Pool is not only a distinguished son of medicine, but also an orator of some renown. Last Memorial Day he led the town parade in Wilton, Conn., following which he delivered the principal speech of the day extolling heroes of various American wars.

On Oct. 20 prior to the Harvard game there will be a Class gathering for lunch in Jadwin Gym. Details will be spelled out in a separate notice.

We have memorials in this issue.

31 HUGH T. KERN
15-01-U Meadow Lakes
Hightstown, NJ 08520; 609-448-4100

Taking the high hurdles as he did in college, Dave Watt still keeps his eye on what's ahead. Specifically, Dave and Marjorie Clark were married last June at the H.F. Bar Ranch, Sheridan, Wyo. Dave's far-flung tribe, 27 in number, gathered there for a round-up and, greatly daring, Marge decided to face the whole family all at once. Welcome to the '31 tribe, Marge, we hope to see you at our 60th round-up.

Dusty Farnum, as is his custom, spent the summer

Happy Hundredth

VINCENT R. GREGG had much to smile about last August 28, when the former research assistant in the biology department celebrated his one hundredth birthday. A university employee from 1906 to 1959, Gregg was a laboratory technician for professors Ulric Dahlgren 1894, Edwin Grant Conklin, and Elmer Grimshaw Butler '26, and over the years, he worked with many undergraduates. "Lots of students became doctors, surgeons," he told a reporter for the Princeton Packet. "One became the president of Johns Hopkins." Gregg lives in Princeton with his daughter Lillian and remains active in the United Methodist Church. His only regret about growing old, he said, is that he can no longer take daily walks.

PHOTO BY ROBERT P. MATTHEWS

in Florida, but his step-granddaughter Charlotte, named for her grandmother, whom we all remember with affection, was in Princeton on a visit. She had her picture taken beside the '31 ivy stone in Nassau Hall to prove it. "Junior" Charlotte is an honor student at Wakefield High School, Arlington, Va.

Now that the kids have returned to school here and there, a story told by Lon Hocker, which appeared in an earlier issue of "The Flap," bears repeating. A college sophomore wrote her parents: "Dear Mom and Dad, Sorry I haven't written sooner, but since our dormitory burned down in the student protest, I haven't been able to see very well. While in the hospital, I met a wonderful man who works as an orderly. He is a Muslim and has convinced me to convert to the religion of Islam. We're moving to Africa and expect to be married there. You'll soon have your wish of becoming grandparents. Love, Mary. P.S. There was no student protest or fire. I can see fine. I wasn't in the hospital. I'm not pregnant. I don't even have a boyfriend. But I did flunk chemistry and wanted you to keep things in perspective."

We regret to report the deaths of John W. Clingerman, Ludlow Elliman, Charles J. Lipscomb, Charles H. Wheeler, and Leonard A. Yerkes Jr.

32 MATLAND A. EDEY
Seven Gates Farm
Vineyard Haven, MA 02568

Rut Howard, one of our distinguished physicians, did not send in the following information about himself because of failing eyesight (he is no longer able to write). But his wife Eileen did. Late last spring Rut was honored by the Congress of Continuing Medical Education for his work in developing ongoing education programs within the medical societies of all 50 states, plus D.C., the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, and Guam. This is not the red-hot medical news that makes headlines, but it should, for it is critical to the coherent practice of medicine and the maintenance of medical standards within this vast area. Rut started his work in the 1960s, realizing, as a country practitioner in eastern Long Island, that most doctors were unable to afford the time and travel to keep up with developments. Ten years later, after getting literally hundreds of medical associations to develop and offer their own accredited programs, Rut had created a powerful organization, and was named its first secretary. He is now honored as the primary force behind this enormously important movement in the medical profession.

Of the more than 75 films made by Jimmy Stewart, 45 of them are now available on video cassette. You can get such splendid movies as THE PHILADELPHIA STORY, IT'S A WONDERFUL LIFE, and REAR WINDOW for $19.95 each. The more forgettable TWO RODE TOGETHER will cost you $69.95. Don't ask why.

We report with sorrow the deaths of two classmates on the same day, Aug. 10, 1990: Bill Grier in Vero Beach, Fla., and Bill Parker in Greenwich, Conn. Class memorials will follow.

We have memorials in this issue.

33 ARTHUR MOODY
600 E. Cathedral Rd., Apt. A314
Philadelphia, PA 19128

Dept. of Omission: In the Reunions issue of PAW (July 18), two names of classmates were omitted, viz. Ernie Chamberlin and Curly Marsb. Ernie was back from Antigua. Curly was busy taking pictures for the Summer Newsletter. He really has his hands full these days with '33 affairs. In addition to his brilliant performance as Class agent, he served the newsletter as co-editor (with Bob Keidel), as poetry editor (and poet), and as photographer.

Bob Pasley has sent us a newspaper clipping: a column by Georgie Anne Geyer about her heroes. One of them is Northwestern professor Richard Leopold, "who could stretch our minds and souls and center us in the truths of our culture." Dick has also been honored with an award from the Society for Historians of American Foreign Relations. It may also be noted that the Assn. of American Historians awards annually a Richard W. Leopold Prize.

We have reported on Paul Campbell's interest in and support of Princeton's program in linguistics. A recent note from Paul tells of the remarkable growth of the program in the last six years, from 30 students and 1½ professors (one shared with psychology) to 100 students and three professors.

34 RALPH K. FITCHE
4347 Province Line Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Roger Kirkpatrick (shown here in front of Nassau Hall), a former Class president, Class agent, special-gifts chairman, and first administrator of our Special Assistance Fund (SAF), died Aug. 22 at home in Princeton. His special aptitude for making people laugh won him a host of friends and admirers. His wife, Nancy, and three sons survive. A memorial will appear in a future issue.

SPECIAL NOTICE. The Class executive committee will hold a brief but important meeting at 10 sharp on the morning of the Harvard game, Oct. 20. All classmates and wives are invited and urged to attend. Time will be allowed to get to Jadwin for refreshments before our picnic lunch there, arranged for our enjoyment by Events Chairman Alex Keer.

A YEAR OF RECORDS. Treasurer Fred Hamilton and Class Agent Hank Thielbar have reason to be proud, as do we all, of the records set in their respective fields. In dues-paying last year 229 of 277 Class members on the University's "active mail roll," 83%—a record for us—paid their $34 dues, which cover, principally, subscriptions for all to the PAW. And in Annual Giving last year we contributed a total of $110,000—the first time we have broken the $100,000 mark in an off-year.

Some class!

We have a memorial in this issue.

35 JOSEPH C. HAZEN JR.
94 Essex Rd.
Summit, NJ 07901

HOME AGAIN. After spending most of ten years living in Germany and teaching at the Univ. of Munich, Prof. Bill Moulton is coming home to Rhode Island, where he was born. He and Jenni have bought a condominium unit in Bristol, on the shore of Narragansett Bay, and plan to move in this fall, as soon as Bill finishes a book he is writing for a German publisher. Although they hate to give up the physical beauties of southern Bavaria, they won't be sorry to leave behind "a country where everything—but everything—is totally regulated. In the long run this becomes depressing."

SICK CALL. Gil Garretson of Brielle, N.J., is recovering from glaucoma surgery, but is having trouble seeing well enough to walk, read, and write. He wonders "who said these are the golden years." Fred Owens of St. Paul, Minn., one of the flag bearers in "The Spirit of '35" reunion picture, went home from the 55th to succumb to major prostate surgery, but says he is already looking forward to the P-rade at the 60th. Ralph Osborne of Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla. is tooling around in his wheelchair, after back surgery and two months in and out of the hospital.

BIG SPLASH. Remembering the half-pint size of Brookaw Pool, which served Princeton swimmers between 1904 and 1944, the half-dozen '35 swimmers who attended the dedication of the new DeNunzio Pool during reunions were awed by its out-size dimensions: 50 meters long, eight 9-ft. lanes wide, 17 feet deep at the deep end, nine feet deep at the "shallow" end, a 10-meter high diving tower, 1.3 million gallons of water, 1,300 seats, and 12 million dollars. Among the 24 individual contributors listed in the program was Balky Gramis, three-letter swimmer and team captain during senior year.

IN MEMORIAM. Ewing H. Buysse of Windsor, Vt., Nov. 21, 1911—June 26, 1990. We have a memorial in this issue.

36

JAMES G. BENSON
24 Aylesbury Cir., Windermere
Madison, CT 06443

Bill Wright sent us the above photo taken last March of a mini-reunion at Abu Simbel in the south of Egypt. He, George Brown, and Norm Donald all happened to be on the same tour.

Announcement: Howard and Lucy Menand invite us to their Princeton home at 140 Hodge Road for cocktails after the Harvard Game Oct. 20.

For the year ending last June 30, Class Agent Ned Williams and Class Treasurer Larry Ryan report as follows: some 235 classmates (66.7%) and friends, in an off-year effort, gave $106,177 to the University through Annual Giving, and 259 (74.2%) of us paid Class dues.

Jack Morris attended his 50th reunion last June at Harvard Medical School. Other Princeton classmates also attending were Addison Brentner, David Greene, Hugh MacMillan, and Wiser Meigs.

Keene Mitchell Jr., our 31st-youngest living classmate, celebrated his 75th birthday last July at his cottage at Cape May Point, N.J. He was surrounded by his wife, Molly, daughters Polly and Martha, sons Sam '68 and Brew '74, sons-in-law, daughter-in-law, and two granddaughters.

We very much regret to report that Rev. Roger E. Kellogg died July 12, 1990. A memorial is being prepared. We have memorials in this issue.

37

STANDEEN F. MEDINA
250 Broadway, Rm. 2104
New York, NY 10007

Another 50th wedding anniversary was that of Betty and Lew Marks, last April 25, attended by four children and wives/ husbands, five grandchildren, peripatetic Nora and Don Kerr, and with a nice letter from Fred Parkin, now recovering from a laminectomy, realigning five lower vertebrae. Granddaughter Lauren Mae Armstrong was born May 1 in Covina, Calif. to Alex Armstrong Jr. The eldest daughter, Laurie A. Blalcher, of Liz and Fred's Tim, was married Sept. 22 to John Kenrick. And speaking of marriages, Gloria and Lang Van Norden gave a beautiful pre-nuptial party in Decatur, Ill., last June for their niece, who happens to be Boardy Jones "great niece." You figure it out. After traveling northern Spain and Portugal, Dorothy and Edgar Smith stayed with their daughter, son-in-law, and three grandchildren in Surrey, England. "They love it and we do too." Other travelers were Evie and Percy Pyme, who attended the College of Mississippi on the Delta Queen, sponsored by Princeton and Stanford, and must have met Dave Foster. They journeyed up the river from New Orleans to Memphis, stopping at Baton Rouge, Natchez, and Vicksburg, listening to Princeton's Edwards American History Professor Jim McPherson. Another alumni tour was by Jean and Jack Ward, last Aug. and early Sept., to Alsace.

Max Krebs joined the triple heart by-pass club at Duke Hospital in Durham, N.C. While he had to scrub his annual beach outing at Semalt (?) Beach, N.C. in July, he expected to be up for a two-week European tour, including Oberammergau. His daughter Marlynn and family also passed up the outing and entertained dear old Dad when not on the tennis courts, in the pool, and jogging on golf paths and roads. She is a senior foundation consultant with the Northeast Foundation for Children and the Greenfield Center School in Maine. Max says, "See you in '92!"

We have a memorial in this issue.

38

WILLIAM P. TAMS
Box 167
Moran, WY 83013; 307-543-2396

The coming winter's Alumni Day will be celebrated on Feb. 24, 1991. The Woodrow Wilson, James Madison, and Pyne awards will be presented, along with several undergraduate awards, at a luncheon at which alumni and guests will be seated by class.

The Service of Remembrance, which honors alumni who have died during 1990, follows in the University Chapel. Those who attended this ceremony last February included Berry Hubbard and her son and daughter; Tania Komoski; Yvonne McNichol and daughter Elizabeth '76; Gladys Rogers; Will Trueblood's daughter Suzanne; and Marion Wells with the Val Fitches. Classmates included Barbara and Henry Broad, official Class representative; Carolyn and Ray Emrich; Dan Lieblich; Jean and Andy McLeod; Barbara and Jack Platten; Lois and Charlie Reed; and Clarice and Jim Simpson. As always, many favorable comments on the dignity of this service have been received. Plan to attend if you can.

Newsweek of Jan. 1, 1990 had a page by Rufus King concerning our terrible drug problem, which is bound to stir up more controversy regarding this dreadful situation. Rufe has served on several congressional committees over the years, and has written extensively on drug law reform. He makes a strong case for legalization and is sure to receive much comment and a lot of rocks, too.

George Ross writes: "Trying to remain young enough to live with teenage stepsons." Jack Holton: "'Stebbins' and I are still practicing law in N.H."

Charlie Powers, president of the P.C. of Vero Beach, Fla., boasts that 11 of his 110 members are members of the Class: Cissel, Cropper, Dater, John Hardy, Kraemer, Laurence, McCracken, McLeod, Richardson, Ringuall, and Way. Powers and Kraemer are full-timers, the others snowbirds.

We have memorials in this issue.

39

RICHARD R. UHL
12 Charlotte Ct.
Briarcliff Manor, NY 10510

From Nat Boynton came this photo along with his report of what he termed "a flurry of '39 activity this summer in this Hudson River outpost." In mid-July Butts Hansl flew to Boston to pick up old friend Grandy Wise in order to drive Grandy over to Cape Vincent, N.Y., above Watertown. It was a sentimental journey for Grandy to a place where he had spent many happy hours in summertimes of yore. On the way west they stopped in Pittsfield briefly to visit Harry Mabnken h39, Grandy's old track coach. Alerted that they would then spend the night near Albany, Nat rounded up '39ers in the area, Carl Touhey and Don Richards. Touhey invited them all for drinks at his beautiful and historic (c. 1710) estate before they all went out for a reunion dinner in a local restaurant. And next morning Barbara Boynton gave the travelers a proper send-off, a hearty breakfast, featuring fresh blueberry muffins.

Meanwhile, out in Ohio, Ron Sheppard was competing in the state Senior Olympics. In tennis he was eliminated early by the eventual winner. But he won second-place medals in javelin and softball throw. He threw the softball 150 feet, 8 inches, the gold medalist a mere 150 feet, nine inches.

A record of another kind was set by Emlen Roosevelt. At his retirement party in June after 40 years with the Natl. State Bank, Elizabeth, N.J., Monk told Bud Wynne that he had never had a promotion in all those years. He joined Jan. 1, 1950, as president and retired 40 years later, still president.

40

BENJAMIN FULLER
6119 Vernon Terr.
Alexandria, VA 22307; 703-329-1961

Harvard Game and Luncheon at Princeton Oct. 20

So far in 1990 the Class has encountered an unusual degree of bittersweet experiences that inevitably rise up as life goes on. Fond remembrances of our 50th reunion represent the sweet. Also the news that 1940 has won the Class of 1901 Cup for the largest percentage of attendance at a major reunion—59% of the Class. The trophy will be presented to a Class representative at next June's meeting of the Alumni Council. Now, the bitter is the loss of eight classmates since May—Duke Davies, Pax Laird, Scott Lytle, Don Mulford, Paul Parker, Bob Piper, Harry Sohmer, and Henry Thomas. We are grateful for having had these gentlemen as friends and classmates, and firmly pledge that the Class will continue FOREVER FORWARD as they would have wanted.

This picture of that cheerful Connecticut Yankee, Wes Wesley, surrounded by smiling members of his immediate family, demonstrates the magnificent spirit and good times that were so evident at our 50th. The small photo on the front of their specially designed reunion caps is that of Wes as he appeared in our Freshman Herald. We believe only Johnny Yates mustered more family than Wes.

Dick Wells advises our annual Class dinner at the Princeton Club of N.Y. will be Dec. 6. Details will be in the mail to you. Let's have a real fine turn-out.

We have a memorial in this issue.

41

BILL WILSON
Box 1420
Bridgehampton, NY 11932; 516-537-2458

Snapshots usually come in. Here is a formal picture, posed in Charleston's Hibernian Hall, of the ladies and gentlemen who gave us April's party: Al and Sally Fleming, Charlie and Norma Barton, Bill and Avis Smart. Our 1941 banner would have served as backdrop had not some discriminating Carolinian stolen it.

Our experts on India, Ed and Erica Harper, have written a book on teaching there. Ted Black has stepped down from ten years of presiding over Nassau Cty.'s G.O.P. Chairmen's Club and has opened a consulting office in Port Washington, N.Y. Shorty and Betty Longcope have abandoned Beaufort, S.C., to the Rebs, and are back in Yankeeland in Essex, Conn. Bob Henderson retired this spring as professor emeritus of religion at the Univ. of Tulsa. Tiff Jones reports "a balanced year—sort of"—four weeks of complications from open-heart surgery then four weeks of fun in Bermuda and Virginia Beach.

Tony Duke skipped an L.S.T. in the WWII invasions of Normandy and Okinawa. This past May he threw a weekend party for 120 of his 240-man crew in East Hampton at his Boys Harbor camp. Tony founded the Boys Harbor charity in 1937 on 180 acres of land that his mother gave him, and he has been running it ever since. The camp serves some 2,500 disadvantaged children every year.

There is sad word that Jim Green died on June 9, 1990. And Tal Anderson, for whom the Class has had no address since 1972, is now said to have passed away on May 27, 1968.

42

ARMSTRONG HUNTIN
R.R. 1, Box 250
Perkinsville, VT 05151; 802-263-5361

The picture is of Dick Pate (Colo.) and Ward Dunn (R.I.), in Colmar, France (Alsace Lorraine), in June 1990, taken during an alumni-college-type trip arranged by the Princeton Club of N.Y., which Dick and Patty Lou and Ward and Mary took this summer, in company with Fred and Betty Ken (Conn.), Tom and Marge Dickson (N.J.) and Don and Ginger McClure (Tenn.).

Mac and Jane Asbills grandson Brandon Asbill '88 (son of their son Richard '65) was left off list of '42's Princetonian grandchildren in last newsletter. Stupid omission, as Brandon was the first '42 grandchild on campus; so far he's the only one whose father was a '42 son. Interestingly, he's also the lone male, the Burwell, McCoy, and Priester grandchildren all being women.

Also for the record, Joan Bent's impressive credentials, in full: two Princetonian brothers, David '45 and Herb Owen '52; two Princetonian husbands, David Betts '45, Gordy; two Princetonian children: Marie Betts Bartlett '79, Elizabeth Betts '81.

Some now-aging notes: Bill Bingham sends a clipping from the N.Y. TIMES, which explains why Hank Trimble did not make the 48th reunion: H.W.T.III was married in Maine that weekend. A May envelope flap from Twink Davis (Penn.): "Trout fishing with Bob Thompson [also Penn.] for a few days. Just returned from Bruce Wilson's hunting and fishing camp on Upper Delaware. Tough life, but somebody has to do it."

43

JACK LAPLIN
10 Vardon Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06117; 203-523-8929

Jim Mason writes: "Four years after having left medical practice, I am enjoying studying art in two colleges, doing volunteer work, and 'living it up' while I am still able to. I find less enjoyable another vocation, i.e., paying steadily increasing taxes with steadily decreasing funds."

Tom Barbour is still active in the theater and other performing arts. He's presently in THE TAMING OF THE SHREW at the N.Y. Shakespeare Festival in Central Park.

In a letter to Hank (The Panda) Canda last April, Josh Miner spoke of some travel plans: "Phebe and I are about to leave for the Shetland Islands, where we'll be holed up in a two-room stone cottage until the end of May. A wonderful opportunity to do the reading we have wanted to do, listen to the music we wanted to hear, a little watercoloring, some birding, and a little fishing. We'll be out of touch with the world for six weeks." Earlier, Josh took a trip to the middle South African country, Lesotho.

From Ted Van Buren: "Our Florida 'mini-reunion' was pretty 'mini'! The only '43ers at the P.C. of S.W. Florida cocktail party in March were Headley, Oakleaf, El Carter, Peasley, and yours truly. Hope we can work one of these out next year, perhaps closer to Princeton."

Acting as an advance agent for warm-weather ambiances, Jack Reynolds advises: "Classmates who haven't yet retired to Florida, or other sunny climes, don't know how charming life can be!"

Gene Taylor says he sold his business, which he started in 1986, to A.O.N. Corp. The deal included a four-year consultancy contract; so, says Gene, "The Good Lord willing, I plan to retire permanently Nov. 1, 1993."

We regret to inform you of the death, in May, of Don Ford, and of Irwin A. Lewis on Aug. 18. Memorials will follow. We have a memorial in this issue.

44

HARVEY S. STOCKMAN
1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

Beat Harvard! Join '44 pre-game at Jadwin; Maclean for Cocktails and Dinner Oct. 20

Charlie Willis wrote of Taft School's 100th anniversary, and Taft '40's 50th: tigers Bigbie, Bigler, Butenbeim, Dick Davis, Linc Johnson, and Ned Kelley made these festivities, and the curtain-ringer, a sit-down dinner for 3,400, count 'em, under a huge tent with memorable music by Lester Lanin's big band. Linc, Taft '40's class agent, broke every record in the book, raising $106,284, with 77% of the class giving.

Bob Carlisle had a chance to pump our highly respected author, Bill Zinsser, at their Deerfield 50th, on what he had in the works this summer. Bill's done a number of pieces, some for a Conde Nast travel magazine on Mt. Rushmore, Niagara Falls; Chataugua, N.Y.; the celebration of Ike's birthday in Abilene; and the Gettysburg battlefield. In 3D Z works religiously at his jazz piano practice, under the watchful eye of one of the black jazz pianists he traveled with and wrote on during their tour of Red China. More of far-flung alumni: Marius Jansen, last Nov., while conferring at the Natl. Univ. of Singapore, joined Diana and Dick Eu for a delightful family evening. Marius caught up with Barbara and Dick Christensen back East from Hawaii for their Pingry 50th. Bob Deming is in his sixth year as minister of the Presbyterian Church in Fredericksburg, Tex., a beautiful Hill Country county seat. Bob and Alice are blessed with five children and five grandchildren.

Retirement envy brief: Bob Miller, back from a month in England and Scotland, littered his Hawaiian condo in July, then in Aug., his fishing lodge in Canada. Expects a tenth grandchild this fall, while his first, Christine Sperry (20), is a senior at Skidmore. Windy Strawbridge, still swinging, has a rank of number 22 in Fla. 65-70 Super Seniors tennis. Covered much of the Mediterranean aboard the Golden Odyssey before the Kuwait swipe.

Sadly we inform you that Brooks Hall died on Sept. 5, 1990. A memorial will follow. We have a memorial in this issue.

45

WARREN W. HANSTON
U.S. Courthouse, 915 Lafayette Blvd.
Bridgeport, CT 06604

A final reunion report: the long-distance reunion trophy goes to Dr. Hugh Ogburn, who made the trip all the way from Honolulu. Signing the book as present for all or part of the weekend were: Abbotts, Acaster, Charlie Allen, Asbley, Asbmun, Azoy, Dave Baird, Baldwin, Ballantyne, Barnhart, Barringer, Bebrer, Boblen, Bolling, Bonsall, Borden, Britten, Bill Burnet, Burns, Caldwell, Jim Calvert, Cameron, Campbell, Carothers, Dave Carter, Norm Carter, Frank Clowney, Bill Clowney, Crane, Crosbie, Cunningham, Dexter, Dave Dodge, Durgin, Eginton, Farmer, Piles, Forsyth, Frank, Punkbouser, Galagher, Hagendorn, Haley, Harding, Hartmann, Herbert, Hochwald, Hodges, Hubbell, Hunter, Huston, Jessup, Julier, Kali, Kelsey, Kerrigan, Reunion Chairman Shep Kimberly, (to whom, and to whose staff, go the heartfelt thanks of the Class), Kinder, King, Knigh, Don Lambert, Bill Lambert, Bob Leuten, (thanks for your hard work on the smooth arrangements) Ley, Lippincott, Lowe, Ludington, Maddox, Marshall, Maynard, McCawley, McConney, McCormick, McCoy, McKenney, McShane, Mesrobian, Messinger, Metcalf, Ken Mills, Bob Mills, Jim Mills, Moffitt, Monroe, Moore, Mosser, Noyes, Marty Ochs, O'Neill, Steve Palmer, Pearson, Peers, Preyer, Quay, Rand, Rees, Reeves, Reidinger, Reppert, Robinson, Roche, Root, Rugart, Schaffer, Scheerer, Schill, Schofield, Seymour, Silver, Simsarian, Holly Smith, J. B. Smith, Bob Smith, Speers, St. John, H. B. "Stew" Stewart, Wai Stewart, Suearingen, Jack Taylor, Teaze, Throop, Towers, Travell, Turino, Valdes, van Breda Kolff, Vieth, Waltman, Walters, Wigton, (the unbroken record continues), Wiley, Williams, John Winant, Wolf, Marshall Wood, Woodson, and of course our devoted Betty Sanford, along with Mr. Secretary's widow, Pat Littell.

Turning to future reunion plans, Bud Rose is organizing a ski-week reunion for Colorado in early Dec. Those interested should contact Homer Rose, 806 Weldon St., Latrobe, PA 15650, or phone him at 412-539-2758.

We have a memorial in this issue.

46

ROBERT CAMPBELL JR.
Investors Security Services
636 Morris Tpk., Short Hills, NJ 07078

Art Whitcomb, retired some while ago, writes that wife, Meg, toils 1-4 A.M. five days a week on NBC radio, "The Dear Meg Show," and he feels compelled to live in the city. Mary and Jim Shenfield spent six weeks in France last fall "including two fantastic weeks at a French language school in Provence. Semi-retirement appears both time-consuming and stressful." Sandy Smythe reports he had a visit from Cynthia and Dick Sayre. "Sayre's real estate business stretches from Rancho Mirage to Maui." Chuck Schibener says his employer of 27 years went bankrupt, so Chuck started his own business. "No loafing for me." Mew Good retired to Martha's Vineyard a year ago. His daughter Amanda graduated this May from Wheaton, magna cum laude; daughter Christy Moore is engaged to a chap from Melbourne, Fla.; Samantha completed her sophomore year at Martha's Vineyard High; son, Locke, is trying to break into acting. Ralph Munyan reports he has lived 17 years in Naples, Fla., "the gulf coast paradise and fastest-growing city in the U.S." Russ Pellet reminds me in a Fortune magazine issue not long ago there was a feature on the Harvard Business School Class of '49, populated by Tom Murphy, Jack Muller, and Jay Nichols, to mention a few. Jac Curran is now working as director of development with Environmental Concern, which is "nationally known for wetlands restoration." Dick Mattheus retired from American Home Products a year ago and has joined R/P Ufer, investment banker, as advisory managing director. Sue and Dick have also been spending time at Nantucket, Florida, and Stowe. Pete Gardner retired from Dartmouth College and lives about five miles north of Hanover. He is still involved with U.S. rowing; and between that, traveling, and working on the house, he is as busy as ever. Sandy Brown retired from Exxon and has embarked on a freelance writing career. He saw Dick Rolle a year ago for the first time in four decades.

47 ASA BUSHNELL
Box 7034
Tucson, AZ 85725; 602-741-4715

Party with Harvard '47 at Charter Before and After Game Oct. 20

After leading Goldman, Sachs & Co. through one of the greatest and most profitable periods of expansion in the investment firm's 121-year history, John Weinberg will retire next month as senior partner and chairman. John, who takes the position of senior chairman (and frees up more time for '47 involvement), will show impressive stats for 14 years at the helm: earnings have multiplied ten times, and the firm's equity capital has increased from $60 million to $2.3 billion.

We had hoped to lure Katharine and Bob Bepier to our 43rd P-rade for a look-see at Class Baby Alex Bepier (born Aug. 27, 1987). No such luck—so here's the next best thing, a nifty photo of the prospective tiger, taken by his proud parents last spring.

Graeme Whytlaw and Neil Haslett "join in all the events" of the active Southwest Florida Princeton Club, thus displaying their loyal support for classmate Dick Miller, who not only is a board member, but also serves as acting secretary and head of Annual Giving. Dick's only son, Geoff, has collaborated with wife, Betsy, to produce their first son—"to carry on the family name" and bring Dick's total grandchildren to nine, in three families.

For a crafter of "unpublishable (so far) novels," Don Lourie sounds happy as a clam, which seems appropriate for a fairly recent groom residing in Siasconset, Mass. The lucky bride is Selma Rayfiel (also a writer), and together they often get the creative juices flowing by spending several months in a remote part of France, populated mainly by a "variety of wild boar." Don's youngest offspring, Catherine, has just graduated from Old Nassau.

48 DAVID K. FARRIS
106 Snowden Ln.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3340

Our Cantab friends will be here any day now, Oct. 20 to be precise, to do amicable battle in Palmer

Scholarships Honor '55ers

Among the celebrants at '55's thirty-fifth reunion last June were (left to right) Steve Boyd, Tom Boyatt, Alan Willemsen, President Shapiro, Paul Wythes, Hilary Lipsitz, and Bill Ruckelshaus.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

THREE MEMBERS of the Class of 1955 have been honored with the establishment of undergraduate scholarships in their names. The three are Thomas D. Boyatt, William D. Ruckelshaus, and Paul M. Wythes. The scholarships were made possible by an anonymous gift from a member of the class.

Boyatt is a retired Foreign Service officer and a former U.S. ambassador to Upper Volta and Colombia. He served as a Princeton trustee from 1984 to 1988 and is currently president of Rodevco Trading Company, of Washington, D.C. Ruckelshaus, chairman and C.E.O. of Browning-Ferris Industries, of Houston, is a former director of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. He received the Woodrow Wilson Award in 1984, was the university's first Maclean Fellow two years later, and currently is a university trustee. Wythes is a founding general partner of Sutter Hill Ventures, a Palo Alto-based investment firm; director of the Princeton Club of Northern California; and a member of the advisory council of the Department of Astrophysical Sciences. He just completed a term on the board of trustees.

Stadium. We will fore-gather at Jadwin under the '48 banner (bring your own or sample food services' fine offerings) for lunch. After the game it's only a short shot to Springdale Golf Club (in the shadow of the Graduate College tower) for liquid refreshments and things to nibble on. It is the sole Class festivity this autumn. Bring along better half, munchkins, friends, associates, and whomsoever will add to the gaiety of nations. Dutch-treat, modest fee to liquidate expenses.

Errata: Bob Helmann was chairman (and founder) of the Nassau Sovereign, and not the Prince, as pointed out by Graham Shanley '50 and other accuracy-nut readers of memorials. Sorry about that, Don Sterling, who was Prince chairman and one of two princely classmates who sent in memorials to be kept on file against the day when it would be appropriate to print them. The other and he a sometime journalist, too, was Jake Underhill. While on the subject, memorials are needed for David Clark, who died May 22, and for Philip Miele, who died May 13. Please let D. Reeves, Class secretary, know of willingness to write either or both memorials. Neither Jake nor Don evidence any eagerness to have their memorials in print.

49 ALVIN R. KNACHT
Limerick Lane Poetryworks®, 5 Birch Ln.
Chappaqua, NY 10514; 914-238-0352

Former N.J. Gov. Brendan Byrne serves as honorary chairman, and Mike Huber, C.E.O. of Huber Corp., as chairman of the Pinelands Preservation Alliance, a private, nonprofit group formed to protect the natural resources of the million-acre Pinelands region of southern N.J. At its annual meeting in June, the Council on Crime and Delinquency (N.C.C.D.) honored Bill Renschler, editor and publisher of the News/Voice newspapers of Chicago's North Shore, "for consistent high-quality reporting and editorial writing on problems of crime and delinquency."

We received the adjoining photo of Sen. Ted Kennedy meeting with (l) Hank Durell, executive director of the Private Industry Council of Southern Conn., and (r) Lew Miller, member and past chairman of this PIC, and couldn't help noticing the Senator looks a bit tense bracketed by our "friendly" tigers. The occasion was a job-training conference held in Hyannis, Mass., in July. PICs nationwide provide training and employment for the economically disadvantaged, and the PIC of Southern Conn., which trained nearly 3000 people in its most recent program year—was chosen "PIC of the Year" by the Natl. Alliance of Business.

"Free" Mattheus tells us: "Had a severe scare back in March—lung cancer! Fortunately the tumor was discovered in time for surgical removal, and all other tests are negative. So I'm half a lung lighter with a charming lung scar, but recuperating nicely and feeling very lucky. The cancer was due entirely to smoking, 30+ pack years, though I quit four years ago and had a clear chest X-ray three years ago. So, smokers beware—stop now!"

50

PETE BUCHANAN

151 West St.
Beverly Farms, MA 01915; 508-922-1650

Julie Buxton, our University trustee, was undoubtedly the one classmate most disappointed to miss the 40th. He and Anne were on hand Wed. evening, but had to leave early Thurs. to go to North Carolina to officiate over the Southern Surgical Assn., of which Julie is president. He tried every conceivable means to avoid the conflict, but to no avail. Son Eddie is now at the Medical Univ. of South Carolina, following in dad's footsteps, while Bill is moving from Woodberry Forest to the Univ. of Mississippi.

Nine of the Class left directly from Reunions for a People-to-People tennis trip to Germany, Czechoslovakia, and Italy. In addition to organizer Steve Zimmerman, others were Lew Bancroft, Jack Borden, Bob Brown, Charlie Gulenkunst, Hugh Morgan, Tom Raleigh, Jack Robinson, and Dave Wilson, together with their ladies. Among the many highlights, they were impressed, in Prague, with the beauty of the city and the industry of the people. In fact, the club where they played had been built entirely by its members, with some 22,000 hours of labor. After Venice, they flew to London and were joined by Al Loeb, plus locals John Scott (recently retired from Prudential Bache) and John Yardley. They managed some grass court tennis in Wexford and a spectator day at Wimbledon.

Reunions also provided some enticing advance information on the Montreal mini, a Bob Schelling production. Much more on this later, but block out May 15-19 on your 1991 calendar.

Final count on Annual Giving shows 67% of the Class gave $1,269,000, 27% higher than we've ever given in one year previously. Only the 25th and the 50th topped our total, and over 100 classmates gave $1,000 or more. A nifty production by Rod Edwards, Bob Smith, Tom Raleigh, and many other helpers.

Tom Raleigh, our beloved, most recent Class president, died Sept. 16, 1990. A memorial will follow.

51

RICHARD K. PAYNTER

49 Wilson Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-921-6720

From Scott Dowling: "I am editing two books, THE PSYCHOANALYTIC STUDY OF THE CHILD ("the premier annual review of child psychoanalysis") and a series of monographs from the American Psychoanalytic Assn. So there's a whole new life of scholarship opening up, and I love it!"

An interesting column last spring in the WALL STREET JOURNAL reports on the travails of the U.S. Boat Owners' Assn., headed by Dick Schwartz. It seems that many members have been hassled with impunity by the Coast Guard and Customs Service in their boarding and searching for drugs. Private boats are boarded—legally—by the feds and, in many cases, damaged by the searchers. Recompense is frequently unsatisfactory and by no means automatic.

The Dave Klipsteins have temporarily left their digs in Calif. to live in the Princeton area, in order to be near his father, Ken '21, who is at the Meadow Lakes retirement community in Hightstown. Cissy and Bob Jr's daughter, Alesia '85, married Hoddy Klein '85 in June. They are now up in Hanover, where Hoddy is an M.B.A. candidate at Dartmouth's Tuck School.

Rollo White writes nostalgically: "You will remember that [Annie and I] were married senior year, when Dean Godolphin let down the bars and allowed 10 non-veteran undergraduates to get married because of the Korean War. All 10 wives got pregnant and the dean angrily reinstated the ban."

Bob Pickett writes that he and Martha O'Neill were married last St. Patrick's Day. Number three for Bob; he finds it a challenge to keep up with a wife of 43.

When you come back for the Dartmouth game, Nov. 17, be advised that Stuart Johnson, D'51 and a Princeton area resident, invites you to his house for a post-game buffet. Please call him (609-448-3170) or me (609-921-6720) to R.S.V.P. and get directions.

We have a memorial in this issue.

52

Don Ombrower

4630 30th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20008

Bill Gough has been busy in his capacity as president of the Foundation for Mind-Being Research in Northern Calif. The 10-year-old foundation assists in scientific inquiry into consciousness. Among the topics of papers Bill has recently presented to conferences are "On Knowing," and "Relationships Between Science and Ritual."

Bill Seavey has installed the pressing machinery, tanks, and other apparatus at his Napa Valley vineyard, and he and Mary are preparing for their first vintage of entirely home-produced wine. Until now, the Seaveys sent their grapes, Chardonnay and Cabernet Sauvignon, to other wineries in the area.

The annual report of Chairman Dick Flynn's N.Y. Power Authority explored the theme of risk, as seen by distinguished scholars and other thinkers. The authority recently completed the longest transmission line in the state, more than 200 miles, and is building one of the largest underwater transmission projects in the world. The annual report's cover includes a quote from Woodrow Wilson: "If you want to make enemies, try to change something." From Chairman Dick: "We avert risk at our own peril."

Vic Hall has started a part-time retirement by spending two workdays a week at his cottage on a lake. "So far, it's great," he reports.

Mike Ely returns from Brussels, where he was deputy chief of the U.S. mission to the European Community. He and Helen will live in Washington, where Mike will be a senior fellow at the Strategic Concepts Development Center.

53

PIERCE J. LOHMEYER

Box 18
Blawenurg, NJ 08504

As of this writing, we have just witnessed the startling and exciting finale of the U.S. Open tennis tournament, won by Pete Sampras. It now seems appropriate to relate the exploits of our own Dr. Bob Leach. In Aug., Bob and son Mike won the U.S. Tennis Assn.'s Father and Son grass court championship, over 47 other teams. The tournament was held at the Longwood Cricket Club in Chestnut Hill, Mass. The Leaches, seeded fifth, beat the third-seeded team in the final, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5.

Mike was the 1982 national collegiate champion from the Univ. of Michigan, and spent five years on the pro tour. When not on the courts, Bob practices orthopedics and is team physician to the Boston Celtics. Karl Velde called recently to say that he will be joining us at, and after, the Harvard game. He also sent along this picture of himself perched atop Mt. Princeton, which he claimed for '53. He tells us that Mt. Princeton, near Lathrop, Colo., is 14,197 feet, one foot taller than Mt. Yale.

Class Cocktail Party Oct. 20
Fine Tower after Harvard Game

54

DICK STRAVINS

1 Valley Sq., Ste. 101
Blue Bell, PA 19422

Don't forget to show up for the Haaavard game and come on out and cheer on those tigers. And bring your friends, wives, sweethearts, and significant others to the Class cocktail party at Tiger Inn. This event has become an institution.

Rock Jock Barnard's son Tom '90 is a chip off the old block. He co-captained P.U.'s highly successful lacrosse team, and played in the N/S All-Star game in Baltimore. Now, Tom is off to work for Alex Brown & Co., staying in Baltimore and probably hoping to play with the Mt. Washington Club in his spare time.

Art Pitts is a genuine American hero... selected as one of five out of 400 submissions, to receive the READERS' DIGEST Award. As everybody knows, Art runs Montana's Pretty Eagle Catholic School, which consists mainly of Crow Indians. When Art arrived, there was no wampum and too much fire water, and nobody cared. He gives everyone else credit, but it was Art who turned the school around. He has a cross country team that routinely goes to the national championships. Art is coaching, not running, and that's why they are winning. John Lutz also spends a lot of time in the big sky country. You can check him out south of Glacier Park in Paradise Valley.

Dave Powell had an unforgettable experience observing Czechoslovakia's first free election since the "velvet revolution," so named for the relatively non-violent nature of the Communist overthrow. David met with President Havel and the ambassador, Shirley Temple Black, but spent most of his time visiting polling places, talking to workers, and observing the process, which went off without a hitch. Dave, a product of Prof. Ira Wade's S.P.E.C. group, has long been interested in foreign service and international business, and has lived on all the continents. Previously with Exxon, Dave is presently senior V.P. of public affairs for Allied Signal.

We have a memorial in this issue.

55

MIKE ROSSINS

40 E. 88th St.
New York, NY 10128; 212-722-7447

Class Party after the Harvard Game
Sat., Oct. 20

Myrna and John Cruikshank are pictured presenting a check to Audrey Hepburn, UNICEF spokesperson, on behalf of the Million Dollar Roundtable Foundation. John is past president of the M.D.R.T. Foundation, and a recognized leader of the insurance industry. The grant will help fund UNICEF's safe water and sanitation program.

Users of the "A World of Difference" memo and date book will have the opportunity to share the wisdom of Jill Ruckelshaus when they arrive at the week of Nov. 26. Sandwiched between quotes from George Bernard Shaw and Anne Morrow Lindbergh is Jill's sagacity, "The best way to win an argument is to begin by being right." Louise and Bob Silverman's son Alex '80 is at Stanford law, while Jared '86 is completing his Ph.D. at Harvard in molecular biology. Their daughter, Jennifer (Smith '88), is working for Conde-Nast in N.Y. Bob Barnes, president and C.E.O. of Bay View Federal in San Mateo, is an oasis in the thrift desert. B.V.F. is well-capitalized, profitable, and buying cast-offs from the Resolution Trust Corp. Duke Habernicht's Haband Co. has a hit on its hands. Duke is hawking a red, white, and blue baseball cap, with an eagle on its crown and a slogan that says, "These colors don't run or burn." An original order for 2,000 hats has expanded to about 200,000.

Married: Priscilla Altmaier to Edward B. duPont; Natalie Predd to Scott Kuldell.

We have a memorial in this issue.

56 DAVID M. JORDAN
410 Rodman Ave.
Jenkintown, PA 19046

"60ERS IN THE NEWS: Henry Schuler was just waiting for the Iraq-Kuwait crisis. Henry, director of the energy program at the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, has been a fount of information to newsmen needing data and analysis of the newest Mideast blow-up. And Randy McAusland, as the newly appointed acting deputy chairman for programs at the Natl. Endowment for the Arts, has been on the hot seat, caught in the crossfire between those like Jesse Helms who want N.E.A. grants restricted because of controversial content, and those who view any such curtailment as a first amendment issue. Randy can't win.

Congratulations to Jeff von Koschembahr (and 438 of us) who gathered in over $139,000 in Annual Giving this past season. Jeff asks that you keep your checkbooks handy for a bigger push this year.

Craig McClelland, following a move last year to Saddle River, N.J., is now president and chief operating officer of Union Camp Corp. Before that, Craig was in Erie, Penn., as C.E.O. of Hammemill Paper, but he lost the company as a result of the activities of corporate raiders, who are now in jail. At least now Craig gets to Princeton more often.

After 16 years as lawyer and dealmaker for T.R.W. on the West Coast, Jim McKee took early retirement and is now in the mergers and acquisitions business on his own in Silicon Valley. Son Timothy is in P.U.'s Class of '92. And Bill Lange has just returned to academia, as a part-time instructor in "basic electricity" at a local junior college.

57 JACK SCHLESSEL
Box 6177, Yorkville Station
New York, NY 10128; 212-427-3575 (H)

John Ruwane: "Along with many other Princeton alumni, I'm singing with the University Glee Club of N.Y.C. Jeannette and Stu Pertz and Anne and Marv Zim attended our spring Carnegie Hall concert."

Bill Rust can take a bow for our Class's high level of support for Annual Giving. In the campaign just ended, 418 of our 674 members (60%) contributed more than $137,000. We joined 31 other off-year classes (those not having a major reunion) in raising a combined total of over $4 million!

As widely reported elsewhere, Walt Blankley has succeeded to the presidency of Ametek, the Fortune 500 manufacturer, after serving the company for almost 30 years, most recently as senior V.P.

George Oram: "Third daughter, Georgina Stuart, born last November. Now have Wendy (25), at U.C.—Berkeley; Thomas (22), working; Elizabeth (2), and Ginal Wife Mary and I working hard in our real estate company, E.R.I., in Berkeley, Calif."

Edward J. Nell: "Oldest son Adam finished at Oxford last June." John J. Aponich Jr.: "Our daughter, Heather Anne, entered the Class of '91 as a transferee from Wellesley. Charlie and I have thoroughly enjoyed watching the growth and maturity of Heather, John '93, and Douglas, a student at Wyoming Seminary, the Wilkes-Barre preparatory school."

The Princeton Club of N.Y. has completed its search for a marketing communications agency by selecting Collateral Plus, a division of Saatchi & Saatchi. Jack Schlegel, V.P./copywriter at the agency, is helping enhance the club's communications.

58 RALPH L. DUGROW
7 Grade Sq.
New York, NY 10028

Joe Nye challenges the thesis that the U.S. is in a state of decline in his newest book, BOUND TO LEAD: THE CHANGING NATURE OF AMERICAN POWER. Joe writes that the U.S.'s share of the world economy has held remarkably steady since the mid-1960s, and by some measurements even increased modestly since 1975. The U.S. is the only nation that is uniformly powerful. Japan is weak militarily and in its natural resources. The Soviet economy is in crisis. China is backward in science and technology. And Europe is only moderately strong militarily. Joe believes that we need to focus now on some domestic challenges such as our deteriorating infrastructure and social divisions, our low savings relative to the public deficit, a poor average educational performance and a shrinking technological lead. He is optimistic about our ability to meet these challenges.

Howard Vukob, in Hillsborough, Calif., reaffirmed his wedding vows last May after 25 years of marriage.

Duncan Smith checked his calendar and found it was time for a mid-life crisis. Left Chemical Bank; made the cover of a pull-out management report in the June issue of the AMERICAN LAWYER; published an article in the July/August issue of the American Bar Assn.'s magazine, LAW PRACTICE MANAGEMENT, entitled "The Role of the Executive Partner," and became a legal management consultant. Jack Whitacre and wife, Judy, are in their fifth year with Arrow Polychem and think they are going to make it.

The Class's Annual Giving effort, under the leadership of Bill Trimble, reached $186,486 with 61.4% of the Class contributing. Congratulations to all.

We have a memorial in this issue.

59 JAY M. SWORN
11321 Rolling House Rd.
Rockville, MD 20852

Harvard Game, Oct. 20
Pre-Game Class Meeting, W.W.S.
Post-Game Party, Terrace Club

We will hold a Class meeting prior to the Harvard game, at 10:15 A.M. in room 12 of the Woodrow Wilson School. All classmates are encouraged to attend. Following the game, the Class will host its traditional victory party in the "59 Room" at Terrace. Leo Hogan is practicing internal, occupational, and emergency medicine in Wilmington, Del. For diversion, he does research into un-marketed hypertensive medications. Larry Plumlee polices the medical marketplace for us, investigating false claims for tranquilizers as a member of the advisory board of the Center for the Study of Psychiatry.

Herm Belz tells us that his son, Aaron '87, is working for Ham Meserve's weekly newspaper chain in Millbrook, N.Y. Herm also passed along the news that Rod Heller has joined him as a member of Princeton's history dept. advisory council. Rod is chairman and C.E.O. of Natl. Housing Partnership, Inc., a Congressionally created corporation engaged in the production, preservation, and management of affordable housing. Mike Kelly writes that his son, Sean '92, "is getting a real education for both his left and right brain—I am most impressed with the place."

Jim Robertson is president-elect of the D.C. Bar Assn., Alan Pogarsky is president of the N.J. State Bar Assn., and John Binger is president of the Allegheny Cty. (Pittsburgh) Bar Assn. John's experiences as a civil rights attorney in the 1960s were chronicled in a feature article in the Pittsburgh Business Times. Dick Bodman has been named senior V.P. for strategic planning and corporate development of A.T.&T.

Regretfully, we close on a tragic note. Jim Worthington, taken hostage during the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, died of a heart attack on Aug. 27, 1990. A memorial will appear in a later issue.

60 MASON LOWANCE
100 Lincoln Ave.
Amherst, MA 01002

Ted Monica has recently become partner in the law firm on Wallack and Masanoff, where he will concentrate in litigation. He joins the firm after 23 years of practice in Lambertville, N.J. Jim Pollack writes "I just finished a delightful and stimulating visit to Cal.Tech., as a Sherman Fairchild Distinguished Scholar. I organized a lecture series, "Present and Past Climates on Mars." Dan Kevles, a historian of science and member of the humanities faculty at Cal.Tech., was recently elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, one of the most distinguished honors that can be bestowed on a college teacher. Walt Pyper writes "1990 has been a banner year in my life. After 53 years of bachelorhood, I finally found the perfect partner and was married on April 21 to Kathleen Doak. Then on May 1, after eight years as manager of the local cable television system, I left to accept the position as general manager of Bluffs Run Greyhound Track in Council Bluffs, Ia. I've also served as chairman of the board for the Council Bluffs Chamber of Commerce and president of the local Rotary Club. It's been quite a year!" Another full note came from Stephen Jackson: "I've just finished my tenure as president of the Calif. Society of Anesthesiologists, and just published my section of the third edition of the most widely used textbook on anesthesia. Still writing and lecturing mainly on the humanistic aspects of the practice of medicine. With the graduation of my daughter from Harvard and son from Columbia College, this leaves only my thirteen-year-old daughter to carry on the Princeton tradition, and I'm working on that even now." Tex Harris missed the reunion in June, but in Sept., he'll be returning from Durban to Washington where he will attend the State Department's senior seminar for the next nine months. Dave Douglas has been appointed V.P./operations, for the C. & P. telephone companies.

61 GEORGE BRACKLEY III
98 Winfield Ln.
New Canaan, CT 06840

Page one of the Sunday N.Y. TIMES of July 15 featured a major article headlined "Tuberculosis Germ

Grant A. Peacock '46
Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased

Suite 2600
450 Park Avenue-at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022 (212) 753-4640

AUTHORS WANTED BY N.Y. PUBLISHER

A well-known New York subsidy book publisher is searching for manuscripts worthy of publication. Fiction, non-fiction, poetry, juveniles, travel, scientific, specialized and even controversial subjects will be considered. If you have a book-length manuscript ready for publication (or are still working on it), and would like more information and a free booklet, please write:

VANTAGE PRESS, DEPT. A-81
516 W. 34th St., New York, N.Y. 10001

Wanted to Buy

Highest prices paid
for American and European Art,
including paintings, watercolors
and drawings, sculpture and prints
from 18th century to present.
Please contact Stuart P. Feld, '57

Hirsch & Adler
GALLERIES INC.

21 E. 70th St. NY 10021 (212) 535-8810
Fax: (212) 772-7237

"The finest achievement in quality retirement living"

Center
City
Philadelphia (215) 557-0640

Resurges as Peril to Public Health" and describes the reemergence of T.B. because of AIDS, homelessness, and drug and alcohol abuse. Pictured and quoted is tuberculosis expert Dr. Mike Iseman of the Natl. Jewish Center for Immunology and Respiratory Medicine in Denver. "We have to educate health professionals and patients that tuberculosis is still a problem," says Mike, who cites AIDS in particular because its victims are so susceptible to infection. (We thank the several classmates and other class secretaries who forwarded copies of the article.)

Last fall we reported that Alan MacKenzie and a partner had acquired the Hitchcock Chair Company, a 163-year old, Riverton, Conn.-based furniture manufacturer. "Mr. MacKenzie fell in love with Riverton and the company's heritage," the N.Y. TIMES of last July 1 reported, "but the company's financial problems were worse than the partners realized." In May, Hitchcock shut down production and ten days later went into chapter 11. But by June 11, the company was back in limited production and emerged from bankruptcy on Aug. 1. We wish Alan well (and suggest that he confer with Charlie Rentschler, who has pulled his own outfit back from chapter 11 to relative prosperity over the past decade).

Oct. 20—Harvard game—Class reception at Jadwin before the game. Look for the '61 banner. B.Y.O.B., but set-ups will be available. Bring a picnic lunch or take advantage of the hot lunch the University will have on hand (for a fee, of course). Let Ken Scasserra know at 609-577-0128.

62 ERIC W. JOHNSON
2221 Craig O.
Vienna, VA 22182; 703-280-9080

The photo, taken last Nov. in Cairo, shows three Princetonians with Gov. William Schaefer of Maryland. Pictured (l-r): J. Randall Evans '69, Dept. of Employment and Economic Development for the State of Maryland, Gov. Schaefer, Frank Wisner '61, ambassador to Egypt, and Jim Zug. Jim was leader of the private sector delegation on a trade and economic mission to the Middle East, traveling as chairman of the Private Sector Advisory Council to the Maryland Intl. Division. "The trip was fascinating from an economic development standpoint and very interesting to visit as a tourist."

Clifford Keenan is now world-wide advertising manager for construction products at Rohm and Haas Co., the world's eighth largest manufacturer of chemicals and plastics. Bob (Swampy) Van Dervoort moved last year to Fort Worth "and a fantastic job." His wife, Ann, is working to become an Episcopal priest. Both daughters were in college and doing well. Just before leaving Tucson Bob and Ann met with Jon Wang and Bill Jarman and wives at Jon's. "I hadn't seen Bill since '62."

Egbert Leigh, who had been wondering where the standoff between the U.S. and Panama would lead, reports that the tropical forest is as beautiful as ever. Send that news! The storehouse is nearly empty.

63 SELDEN S. EDWARDS
Elgin Academy, 350 Park St.
Elgin, IL 60120

In something of an understatement, Jon Abrahamson reports, "Some overdue news! I was remarried nine years ago at Pemaquid Lighthouse on the Maine coast. Susan and I run a gallery of handcrafted jewelry in Newton Center, Mass., called Paccetto. I'm also teaching English again at the junior high level, despite a Ph.D. in English from Univ. of Chicago in 1974. I like the kids. I'm also the girls' high school soccer coach." Pagean and Bob Soare returned in Aug. 1989 from a one-year visiting professorship in Heidelberg, to Northfield, Ill., where Bob is a math professor at Univ. of Chicago. Their son Greg (20) is a junior at Univ. of Illinois and son James (17), a New Trier senior, finished sixth in Illinois in diving.

Mike Otten's son Daniel is a freshman at Princeton. Joel Rosenman has been elected as board member of the N.Y. Eye and Ear Infirmary, adding to his already full plate as chairman of the Woodstock Festival Foundation, director of Adirondack Life Insurance Co., and member of various ad hoc committees at Trinity School, where his children Molly and Ned attend. When working to pay the bills, Joel is chairman of J. R. Capital Corp., involved in corporate start-ups and acquisitions.

Send news!

It is with the greatest sadness that I report two deaths in the Class. Frank Engle, who was a C.P.A. in New York, died of cancer on May 27. And Frank Nesbitt, an Emmy Award-winning filmmaker for PBS, died at home in Upper Marlboro, Md., on July 15, also of cancer. Frank's critically acclaimed documentary on statesman Harry Hopkins aired last Oct., and his last work, a Natl. Geographic special on coastal pollution, narrated by Ted Danson, will appear this fall. Memorials will follow. We have memorials in this issue.

64 JOTHAM JOHNSON
Box 12
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

The Colorado River raft trip in August was great fun and DeeDee and Yan Ross earned a long L-O-C-O-M-O-T-I-V-E for their yeoman efforts. From the opening reception at their foothills-hugging homestead overlooking Salt Lake City, through each evening's riverside happy hour, to Friday's concluding dinner at the wonderful Road Creek Inn in Loa (known world-wide for its trout), DeeDee and Yan doled out generous amounts of their special UTAH hospitality and helped make this a 1964 pilgrimage to remember.

Among the 34 members of the 1964 party, in addition to DeeDee and Yan, were Pat and Dave Driscoll, Gracie and Jo Johnson, Grazina and Fred Pearson, Joan and Mal Sterrett, Tom Vockrodt, Margot and Bill Walker, Pam and Dave Weiberill, Diane and Rob White, and numerous offspring and friends. Karen and Henry Whiteside attended the kick-off dinner and confided later that they wished they, too, had signed on. Whitey is a development officer at the Univ. of Utah, has a getaway cabin at Alta, and seems to be enjoying life in the West. He's still raving about the 25th! It was good to see Tom Vockrodt, who is in private practice in Denver after years combating organized crime as a justice dept. attorney.

Class party after the Harvard game on Oct. 20 at Cap and Gown. Coming up in 1991, a long weekend in New Orleans, April 11-14.

65

J. MICHAEL PAREN
Wishrop, Stinson, Putnam & Roberts
1 Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004

Joel Rudell has joined the N.Y. law firm of Kavanagh, Peters, Powell & Osnato, at 415 Madison Ave., just down the road from Sam Abernethy, who just became counsel to the firm of Menaker & Hermann at 444 Madison, after having been general counsel of Commodity Exchange, Inc., and of the Coffee, Sugar, and Cocoa Exchange.

Jan Vitek will have his hands full in the nation's service, it would appear, based on his recently receiving a presidential appointment to be the federal representative of the U.S. to the Western Interstate Nuclear Board. Jan continues to work full time in the energy law area of the Washington office of Sutherland, Asbill & Brennan.

Among the best excuses for having missed the 25th is that of Ints Silins, who now occupies the position of consul general in Strasbourg for the state dept., along with being the U.S. liaison with the Council of Europe. Ints expects to be over there at least through the summer of 1992.

Speaking of constructive behavior, Tod Williams recently produced a model house for a show at Walker Art Center in Minneapolis, using "cheap, unassuming materials ranging from paper product to wood pulp to wood chips," although the finished product was characterized by the N.Y. TIMES as being "like an exotic dish in which the original humble ingredients can no longer be detected, (and) the result is surprisingly smooth and polished." In the same vein, Tom Houghton has erected a 10,000-square-foot sound stage which also features the largest backdrop for shooting commercials and still photographs in the South. Tom is trying to build the motion picture and television commercial business in Houston while continuing to practice (what else!) law at Mayor, Day & Caldwell.

66

JARRETT M. MCCOLLUM, A.T.&T. Products
5 Wood Hollow Rd., Rm. 1J19
Parsippany, NJ 07054

25th Reunion June 6-9, 1991 Make your plans NOW

The 25th Reunion book is moving along—nearly 70 of us have now sent in our biographies. Keep them coming! Call Jim Merritt at 609-258-4931 if you have misplaced your biographical form and need another. Jim Parmentier needs volunteers to help him in keyboarding the biographies. If you have access to an I.B.M. computer and want to assist Jim, call him at 919-361-2286.

The book is an autobiographical collection of the lives of '66. But it will be more. It will include the results of a joint Princeton-Smith poll that promises to make a major contribution to gender studies. Lanny Jones and Nancy Kropp Grote (Smith '66), have organized the project. "Mid-life Patterns of Women and Men in the 1990s" is the subject of the questionnaire. How do women and men compare in terms of their family and work patterns? In their sense of well being? In their relationships with spouses/partners, children, parents and friends?

Those of us who graduated in the mid-1960s have a unique vantage point. We grew up in the "Eisenhower Era," when roles for men and women were more stereotyped and circumscribed. We were among the last single-sex classes. We graduated into the turbulence of the late 1960s.

By responding to the questionnaire when it arrives, you contribute to the Class, the reunion, and perhaps to a deeper understanding of ourselves. This focus on gender studies will be a prime theme of the Reunion. In addition to getting results from the poll, we will have an opportunity to participate in a colloquium addressing issues confronting men and women in their mid-40s. The Class executive committee plans for the Reunion to be a multi-faceted event, appealing to our developmental impulses in addition to our social ones.

67

PETER J. TUNICH
6503 Masefield St.
Worthington, OH 43085

HELP MAINTAIN PAW PRODUCTION VALUES. Send photos of yourselves, classmates, and family (with identities and news) to replenish our Class notes file.

"Just kicking back in one of these low pressure biotechnology start-ups," writes Bob Berkowitz, while "wife and kids immersed in weekend semi-professional soccer." Bob is also involved in schools committee activities. John Kerr, who is splitting time between San Diego and Atlanta for Delta Airlines, reports that John Porter and family returned to San Diego after two years in Washington, D.C. John (the latter) retired from the Navy two years earlier, and continues to work with a small construction firm "doing high-end residential work." Still in the Navy, Whit Turner is commanding the Naval Space Surveillance Center, Dahlgren, Va. While visiting one of his receiver sites in San Diego, Whit saw Nick Criss, and reports that Nick is "cornering all the commercial real estate activity in Mexico."

Ted Gallagher "had the good fortune to attend a dinner for Bill Bradley '65 in Boston. He also was able to visit with Gary Walters, John Bitner, Art Bowen, and Barbara and Steve Grossman. All are doing well, especially Gary and wife, Susan, with a brand-new baby boy.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO. Twelve Arab nations sign solidarity pact in Casablanca. L.B.J. meets with Ferdinand Marcos in Washington. South African Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd assassinated in Parliament by whites. Indian troops invade Lahore; Pakistani Paratroopers raid Punjab. Barry McGuire sings that the world is on the "Eve of Destruction"; Top Five chart agrees.

68

JOE KUMMER
Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour St.
Hartford, CT 06115; fax 203-524-7057

J. Todd Simonds doesn't like to think of himself as an entrepreneur, but he told PRR magazine (Apr. 1990, pgs. 36-37) that he's simply trying to run a business. Not just any business. Todd sits at the head of one of the world's most technologically advanced manufacturers: Red Zone, Inc., which makes sophisticated robots for the nuclear power and hazardous waste industries. The Pittsburgh company, spun off from the Field Robotics Center at Carnegie Mellon, has made a name for itself by building smart machines to do man's dirtiest work. "We make machines that will go where man can't go, or that will do what man can't do," says Todd, whose robotics have ventured into the basement of the damaged reactor at Three Mile Island and the Soviet reactor at Chernobyl. Red Zone engineers are also designing mechanical construction crews that will build habitats on other planets.

Phil Mengel, meanwhile, is building habitats on earth. Phil was an investment banker in N.Y. until recently, when he moved to Reading, Penn., where the company he will head makes concrete products, bricks, and other building materials. Glen-Gery Corp. recently provided 3,000,000 bricks to construct Worldwide Plaza, a 48-story Manhattan building that is the tallest brick-clad skyscraper built in N.Y. in the last decade. Although Phil is relishing the shift from investment adviser to C.E.O., he admits that leading a construction business in the current "down-cycle" won't be easy.

"Here's a way out of the investment jungle!"

Looking for a way to diversify your holdings? Get expert management? Are you hesitating to sell appreciated securities because of the capital gains tax?

Consider one of Princeton's life income trusts. You make a gift to the University and in return you and your spouse receive income for your lives. Because your gift is managed with Princeton's endowment, you get instant diversification and the expertise of our endowment managers.

Life income trusts also allow you to unlock highly appreciated, low yielding assets and convert them to a higher yield at no capital gains tax cost. Finally, you receive a current income tax deduction!

To learn more about how life income trusts can help Princeton and you, call the Planned Giving Office.

Planned Giving Program

Princeton University
Box 39
Princeton, NJ 08544-0039
(609) 258-6318 or (609) 258-6320

Director
Daniel H. Jamieson, Jr. '74

Associate Directors
Jane Rae Bradford
Robert B. Turner

69

PAUL GEORGE SUTTERFIELD
1854 Keys Crescent
Cincinnati, OH 45206

June 28 brought a very special addition to the Class family. It was then that Terry Wintroub married Carol Jacobs. Congratulations!

The Splendid Six pictured here were at their Hill School 25th reunion this past June. Back row: Cam Ferenbach, Walt Walne, and Bill Earle. Front: Clay McEldowney, Rick Gallup, and Lindsay

Holland. Thanks to Clay for sharing the picture and good wishes to him as he concludes his presidency of the Consulting Engineers Council of N.J. He was recently profiled in the alumni magazine of the N.J. Inst. of Technology, from which he received his master's in civil engineering in 1973. He also reports enjoying a presentation on college admissions last spring at daughter Erin's Blair Academy presented by Tim Zenker of Vassar. From there, he sustained the '69 link by staying the night with Anna-Marie and Frank Wilson at their Blairstown home.

Reginald Gibbons, editor of THE QUARTERLY at Northwestern Univ., had a thoughtful letter published in the Aug. 7 CHRONICLE OF PHILANTHROPY. In it, Reg articulates eloquently his concern about fundamentalist attacks on the autonomy of the National Endowment for the Arts.

70

JEAN KUMIK
113 Laurel Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08544

One of the highlights of our 20th reunion took place at the Class meeting, when former Princeton

President Robert Goheen '40 (pictured here with another former president) was named as an honorary member of the Great Class of 1970. Bogo seemed genuinely touched by this surprise honor—he thought we only wanted him to stop by to say a few words! He began his remarks by noting that "the spring of 1970 was a difficult time for those of us in higher education," and, blessed with hindsight, most of us laughingly agreed. He happily donned the Class pith helmet—highly appropriate for any future trips to tropical climes such as India or New Jersey. In addition, he also received a silver plate with an inscription taken from an entry in the Class Directory submitted by classmate Daniel Goldman. "Sed qui bene amat bene castigat." Those who know little Latin and less Greek are encouraged to see page 83 of the Class Directory for a translation (and thanks to Dan for well chosen words).

Another very moving part of Reunions occurred at our Service of Remembrance Saturday morning, capably orchestrated by the Rev. Bruce Schundler. While the weekend was filled with a great deal of frivolity, many were especially touched by this ceremony which honored the 14 members of our Class who are now deceased. The program began with readings in the Faculty Room of Nassau Hall and concluded with a silent procession to the Fitzran-dolph Gate, where a wreath was laid beneath our Class numeral.

71

STUART E. RICKINSON
Grace Station, P.O. Box 1142
New York, NY 10028

Until recently, no national prize for poetry was given in the U.S. since Ezra Pound caused a scandal when he won the last award in 1948. Phil Bobbitt has rectified this glaring omission, with his gift to the Library of Congress establishing a new prize for poetry and honoring his mother (and Lyndon Johnson's sister), Rebecca Johnson Bobbitt. Pound received the last official national prize, but the award caused a controversy over the government's recognition of a man who had been indicted for treason and detained for pro-Italian activities during WWII. As a result, Congress moved to forbid such awards. Now, with Bobbitt's contribution, and a 1988 rescission of the congressional prohibition, a national prize will be granted again this October. The prize will be selected by a four-member panel, which will include Princeton comparative literature professor Clarence Brown. Phil, a lawyer who teaches both at the Univ. of Texas and Oxford Univ., shares his mother's love of poetry, though their tastes differ. While she read "Elizabeth Barrett Browning and Keats and the other Romantic poets," Phil says he thinks "she especially liked the racy '20s stuff," including Dorothy Parker and Ogden Nash. He prefers modernists such as John Berryman and, ironically, Pound. The 1948 dispute seems comparable to the current controversy pitting Senator Jesse Helms against the National Endowment for the Arts and its financial support for avant garde art. Commenting in the press on the Pound episode (before the latest arts controversy), Phil observed that he hoped that poetry and politics can be separated. "I hope we're in a period now, having gone through the 1950s, when we can be more discriminating—'Yes, we admire you for your art. Your politics we can take or leave.'"

CLASS RECEPTION: Once again this year, Sandy McA-doo will host a Class of 1971 reception, immediately following the Harvard game, at Cottage. Classmates, their families and friends are welcome.

72

KIP HAWITT
21 Wildcat Rd.
Darien, CT 06820

GRANDIOSE PIANO: Pictured is Silas Kopy who appeared in a recent N.Y. TIMES Sunday magazine article about the inlaid pictures in wood he had made for a Steinway piano. Silas is a woodworker in Northampton, Mass., who specializes in marquetry. He worked intermittently on the piano for about a year and a half, starting with the design of all the non-acoustic parts. It will be shown at the Steinway showroom in Manhattan until Oct. 20, when it will be on display at Gallery Henoch in Soho, where Silas will be having a one-man show of furniture. Price of the Steinway piano? $125,000.

Ivy League Vacation Planning Guide

We think we can be of assistance to you in planning your next vacation. Listed at right are advertisers offering free booklets or brochures. All you need do to receive this material is circle the corresponding numbers on the coupon and return it to us. We'll do the rest!

Note: Offer expires
January 31, 1991

- 1. Alumni Flights Abroad—luxury travel program exclusively for alumni of Ivy League and certain other distinguished universities. Includes India, Nepal, Ceylon, Borneo, Sumatra, Southeast Asia and Japan, East Africa, Egypt, Asia Minor, Greece, the Galapagos, Australia/New Zealand, and New Guinea, plus a distinctive series to Europe. Circle No. 1.
- 2. Celie's Waterfront B&B—Baltimore Harbor. Ideal for business or pleasure. Relax in a 7 guest room Inn with the charm of an antique-filled home. Some with whirlpools, fireplaces, private balconies and harbor views. All with phones and refrigerators. Access to private garden and rooftop overlooking the harbor. For business retreat additional fireplace/harbor view conference room. Minutes to Harbor Place and central business district. Celie Ives, Innkeeper, (301) 522-2323. Circle No. 2.
- 3. Guana Island Club—British Virgin Islands. 850-acre unique resort on nature sanctuary: 7 soft, white sand beaches, water sports, nature trails, candlelit terrace dining. Only 15 rooms, quiet elegance. Reservations and information: 1-800-54GUANA or (914)-967-6050. Circle No. 3.
- 4. Trapp Family Lodge—a little of Austria, a lot of Vermont. X-Country at the nation's premier Touring Center on 1,700 spectacular acres. Alpine ski at Mt. Mansfield nearby. Balconied bedrooms and fireside livingroom lounges. Ski packages available. 1-800-826-7000. Trapp Family Lodge, Stowe, VT 05672. Circle No. 4.

Ivy League
Alumni Magazines
P.O. Box 5413
Boulder, CO 80329-5413

Please send the vacation/travel information corresponding to the numbers I have circled:

1 2 3 4

Name _____

Address _____

City _____

St. _____

Zip _____

Printed by

Also pictured (l-r) are John Kennedy, Janis Weiss, Brian McGiffert, and Brian's father Robert McGiffert at Janis and Brian's wedding on Nov. 4, 1989. Brian is the manager of testing and analysis at LanQuest Group, a local area network consulting and testing firm. Janis is an image consultant and an M.B.A. student at Golden Gate Univ. Writes Brian: "We're enjoying the amenities of California—great wine, terrific skiing, beautiful beaches—and we have one surrogate kid, Anastasia the Cat."

Post-Harvard Game Cocktail Party, Oct. 20, in lobby of Lewis Thomas Laboratory (across Washington Rd. from Jadwin). Harvard '72 cordially invited.

73

R. GIBSONY PLUMPTON
Box 14545
North Palm Beach, FL 33408

Not even impending middle age has slowed our propensity to procreate. This week's featured faces are David Alexander Powell and Lauren Gregory Walker. David is the son of Jan Hill Powell and was born May 18, 1989. He has already started earning toward his Princeton education by making a TV commercial for a local hospital last year. Lauren is Dick and Deb Walker's latest daughter, joining Matt (8), Brian (6), and Jessica (4). They live in Potomac, Md. Dick has been at the nearby Landon School since graduation.

Other proud parents include: Bruce Graham, who moved to L.A. last September and welcomed second child, Tom, on Jan. 28, 1990. Marion Freeman gave birth to Francis Corson Ellis, also a second son, in Mar. 1989. She has left J.P. Morgan to join her husband at Kessler-Ellis.

If anyone can make Pittsburgh a more attractive town, it's Stefani Ledewitz. She is the only architect on the city planning commission, and partner in Quick Ledewitz Architects in Shadyside. Stefani feels that the historical and friendly spirit of the city must be incorporated in redevelopment plans. She lives in Bloomfield, Penn., with husband Bruce, Anna (10), Ben (8), and Julia (3).

Bernardo Fort-Brescia and his Miami-based Arquitectonica have found themselves in the midst of a controversy in San Jose, Calif. Bernardo and his wife, Laurinda Spear, founded the firm which has become an international leader in the design world. They designed a landmark building for Santa Clara County which has become the center of a political squabble.

74

JOHN STANNUM
15 Woodbine Rd.
Kendall Park, NJ 08824

BIDES AND GROOMS: Pictured are Scott Cunningham and his bride, Angelique Beters. As the photo shows, their May 26, 1990 wedding was a formal Scottish one, complete with bagpipes and kilts. Among those in attendance were Kimberly and Bob Gynhar, Dave Smith '59, and Mara Smith '86. Following an extended honeymoon in Bermuda, Scott and Angelique returned to Houston, where Scott is a partner in the law firm of Brown & Fowler, specializing in civil litigation.

Beth Prishky married Tom Swann on Nov. 4, 1989.

The Swanns live in Evanston, Ill., and both work for the Alcar Group, a consulting/software firm founded by two of their Northwestern B-School professors.

Linda Frankenbach married Hendrik (Rik) Krannenburg '78 (Berkeley '76) on Sept. 22, 1989, in East Hampton, N.Y. Linda still works at Home Box Office, where she is a senior V.P. Rik is a managing director at Standard & Poor's.

75

MELISSA KIMM MISHKOWAN
940 Riverside Ave., Berkeley Square
Trenton, NJ 08618

Catching up on babies: Larry and Elizabeth Morrison Richie have a second son, Isaiah Morrison Richie, born Mar. 16, 1988. Elijah is now almost four. Thomas and Mary Hurley Begley had their first baby, Eileen, May 1, 1989. As Mary puts it, she is now a "full-time mom and part-time financial management consultant." A. William Stein reports the birth of Arthur Nathaniel Stein on July 2, 1989. Sister Meredith is now five. In Apr. 1989, William joined Westinghouse Credit Corp. in Pittsburgh as a V.P. in its real estate finance group.

Aminda and John Baird welcomed their second son, Jeffrey Winthrop, last Sept. 25. Matthew is now almost four. The Bairds live in Durham, N.C., where John is principal of the Carolina Friends School.

Born to Jay Powell and his wife, Elissa Leonard, is a daughter, Lucy Leonard Powell, Nov. 2, 1989. Their son, Samuel (3), is pictured with Lucy.

Carmen Plaza de Jennings and her husband, Dwight Jennings, baptized their first baby, Esteban, in San Sebastian, P.R., in Nov. 1989. Also present were Robin McKinney Martin and her husband, Meade, and their then-two-year-old daughter, Laura. Marilyn Robie, and her husband, Art Shechet, had a daughter, Eleanor Robie Shechet, on Jan. 16, 1990, joining Benjamin (3).

Please come to the HARVARD GAME CLASS PARTY under the '75 banner in Jadwin Gym, BE-PORE AND AFTER the game on Oct. 20.

We have a memorial in this issue.

76

JAMES L. MARICOTIS
Lane & Mitzendorf, 919 18th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20006

The Nov. 3, 1989 WALL STREET JOURNAL carried an op-ed piece called "Running the Marathon for Others." It movingly describes how 44 Wall Street types, housewives, physicians, and a rabbi dedicated themselves to running the 1988 N.Y.C. Marathon as a way of raising $200,000 in pledges for the Leukemia Society of America. The author, himself a member of the group, describes how, during low points in the six months of grueling training, the runners' spirits were sustained by their devotion to those for whom they ran, particularly a little girl named Tess, who suffered from a rare form of the disease and whose father was one of the runners: "As Tess's condition worsened, I cared less about how impressed friends and family would be to see me finish the race, and more about running for Tess and other leukemia victims... we became more aggressive fundraisers... with each additional pledge, our integrity was on the line... Despite the physical pain of those last 200 yards, all I could think of was Tess... and then my wife and my children, and how precious and delicate a thing life is." All but one of the group finished, and the pledge goal was surpassed by $100,000. Tess died slightly more than a week before the race, two months after her first birthday. The author, a father of three who said the experience transformed him, was Carlos Ferrer.

Congratulations go to our award-winning class mates in the Friends of Princeton Golf tournament held during Reunions last June. Scott Morrison took low net honors for best individual score for a four-some (with handicap), and Maryanne and Dan Cronheim won for their low net mixed score.

From Colorado, Charlie and Debbie Banning Martin report the birth of a son, Pierce Taylor, on Nov. 11, 1989. Nonnie Cooney Frélinghuysen and her husband George '73 have had a second son, Russell, born Apr. 8, 1990.

77

JAMES BARRON
15 W. 72nd St., Apt. 24-B
New York, NY 10023

TIGER FAMILY TREE—Christina Elizabeth Finch was born on April 26 to Mat Finch and wife, Carolyn Sedor (Holy Cross '77). "Please notify the admissions office of her pre-admission status for the Class of 2011," Mat writes from Wellesley, Mass. All right, here goes: In addition to being the daughter of a '77er, Christina is the granddaughter of Edward Finch '41, the great-granddaughter of Walter Johnson '97 (who was president of the Graduate Council) and the daughter of the godson of James McCosh Magee '01 (who was the grandson of James McCosh, the president of Princeton from 1868 to 1888 and namesake of the hall and the walk).

FACULTY WHOSE SUBJECTS BEGIN WITH A—Terri DeYoung has just begun her second year as an assist. prof. of Arabic in the Near Eastern languages and civilizations dept. at Yale. "While teaching at Yale is nice," she declares, "I'm glad I picked Princeton as the place to be a student." J. Scott Finn has been promoted to associate prof. of architecture and granted tenure at Auburn Univ. He continues to coordinate course work and design studio activities for second-year students in Auburn's bachelor of architecture and bachelor of landscape programs.

LAWYERS SAVING THE PLANET—David Carr works at the Southern Environmental Law Center in Charlottesville, Va. S.E.L.C. has grown from two attorneys to seven since 1986 and is, David reports, the leading nonprofit public-interest law firm in the South specializing in coastal wetlands, water quality, public lands, and billboard and sign control. Jon Elliott is busy with EPICS Intl., the environmental consulting firm that he helped start last year. He's been writing a toxics information manual, "translating legalese into English for nonlawyers." Also, under the sponsorship of the Calif. District Attorneys Assn., he has written a lawyer's manual covering state and federal laws in Calif.

78

BON PERRON
Box 886
Middlebury, VT 05753

In 1988, B. Kevin Gover started the firm of Gover, Stetson, Williams & West P.C. According to a Feb. 1990 article in the NATIONAL LAW JOURNAL, three of the four partners are Native Americans who left the Washington, D.C. office of N.Y.C.'s Fried Frank et al., "a firm in which partner departures are almost unknown, to start their own Indian law practice in Albuquerque, N.M." Richard West, one of the partners, "abandoned nine years of partnership at a firm with average per-partner profits in the six figures, to join Catherine Baker Stetson and B. Kevin Gover in a practice with annual profits of less than $100,000... 'Money is not all of life,' is how Mr. West explains his decision." Thanks to Matt Dallett, a high school classmate of Kevin's, for sending along the clipping.

Walter Anderson's wife, Marsha (Rabinowitz) '78 (civil e.), gave birth to their first daughter, Alexis Greenleaf Anderson, last Mar. 19. She joins older brothers Charles (7) and Ross (2½). Walter is president of Photon Software in Atlanta, while Marsha is

"The Melody of Orbits"

ALAN P. LIGHTMAN '70 is a scientist who values being creative as much as being analytical. An astrophysicist and science writer, he makes a routine out of doing "hard science" while turning out books and essays about the sciences. Lightman has spent his career in the two seemingly divergent worlds of science and the humanities. At the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he teaches two courses, one on the scientific essay and the other on high-energy astrophysics. They reflect the duality at the core of his work. "I've always been in conflict about balancing the humanities and science," he says. "I'm unwilling to shave off part of myself for the sake of symmetry—I'd rather be lopsided but complete."

In recent years, he has juggled research on such topics as the luminosity of quasars with writing science essays for Harper's, The New Yorker, Smithsonian, and The New York Times Magazine. Many of his essays have been collected in two books, Time Travel and Papa Joe's Pipe and A Modern Day Yankee in a Connecticut Court. In them, Lightman muses on such topics as relativity and probability with stories of his experiences as an undergraduate, a husband, and a father. His literary voice, wrote one reviewer, is as "lucid and friendly as your brother-in-law's... He is more than a science writer. He is a chamber musician who knows the melody of orbits, of atoms, of words."

Lightman's latest book is Origins: The Lives and Worlds of Modern Cosmologists (Harvard University Press, 1990), which he and coauthor Roberta Brawer, a colleague at M.I.T., based on interviews they conducted with twenty-seven of the world's leading cosmologists. They chose cosmologists for their subject because the field, which deals with the birth and evolution of the universe, has undergone great intellectual upheaval in the last fifteen years. "In such a period, the human side of science is easier to observe," Lightman says. "People's prejudices and other human factors that enter into the scientific process are closer to the surface and more easily probed."

Expository writing stimulates him in ways that practicing science does not. "The creativity in science," he says, quoting the late Richard Feynman '42, a Nobel laureate in physics, "is like being creative with a straitjacket on." You have to be in agreement with a huge body of fact and observation, which limits you and leaves very little room for creativity. The great scientists are comfortable in that straitjacket, but it's not so easy for the rest of us. For people who find pleasure in being creative and in leaving their individual stamp on something, science can be frustrating."

Lightman knew early on that he wanted to be involved in both science and the humanities. As a child, he was as fond of "building gadgets and scientific things" as he was of writing poems and short stories. At Princeton, he says, "I realized that I couldn't pursue both my interests at full steam and would have to choose one or the other. I decided that, in the long run, it would be easier to merge the two if I got my rigorous training in science first." After graduating magna cum laude from Princeton with an A.B. in physics, Lightman earned a Ph.D. from the California Institute of Technology. A series of positions at Cornell, Harvard, and the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory followed. In 1989, he went to M.I.T., where he has joint appointments in the writing program and the physics department.

Not surprisingly, Lightman is a champion of efforts to integrate science into humanities curricula, and vice versa. While a visiting professor at Princeton in 1988, he first taught a course he had developed on the great ideas of physics. Designed for humanities majors with minimal experience in physics, it explored landmark ideas in physics and their impact on the world at large. A textbook based on the course will be published next year by McGraw-Hill.

—Angelo John Lewis

Alan Lightman '70

PHOTO BY NICHOLAS ALTENBERND

president of Street Smarts in Duluth, Ga.

Another three-child family is that of Martha (Buttenheim) '81 and Vytas Kisielius, whose son Curtis Voorhees Kisielius was born last April 1.

By the time you read this, you should have received both the '78 summer newsletter and the Class dues solicitation. I hope you will take a moment to write a check to pay your Class dues and to support the '78 Foundation. Class dues help to offset the cost of sending you this magazine and our annual newsletters. The foundation provides stipends for Princeton students to volunteer in service projects around the world. Your help would be greatly appreciated.

79

MARTHA KRAMER
27 Northill St., Apt. 6-R
Stamford, CT 06907

Pictured is Class Secretary Martha Kramer's marriage to John Zimmerman. With Martha and John are P.C. Pitts, Lynn Olson '87, Rob Fairweather '75, Laura Mandeles '77, Mike Molyneux '76, Lisa Matthews '76, Bob Ruxin '76, and Rick Nash '81.

OH, BABIES! Pictured is Ariana Marjorie Vera, daughter of Fernando and Marguerite Hadley de Vera. Marguerite has taken time out of the work force to enjoy motherhood and life in Princeton Junction. Fernando is heading up private placements and leasing for Barclays Bank in N.Y. Fisher and her husband had their second son, Joshua, last spring. Mary Lane McNamara and her husband had their third child, Henry, this summer.

JOB CHANGES: Having received his Ph.D., Charles Riley has left magazine writing to be an art professor and teach English at Bernard Baruch College. He has not forsaken hockey at Beaver's Dam on Long Island, however, his note assures. Jeff Klopferstein moved to St. Louis, Mo., last year to be a quality manager for Monsanto's resin division. Soon thereafter, he and his wife, Susan, had their second son. Having relocated six times since 1985, Tim Weiman did it again. He moved to California with British Petroleum last year, but his time enjoying the Monterey Peninsula is periodically interrupted with trips to Europe and the Far East for business.

EUROPEAN FRONT: Mitchell Berger is a lecturer in mathematics at the Univ. of London, having moved there after three years in St. Andrews, Scotland. He and his wife, Sharon Sproat, are also the proud parents of an 18-month-old daughter. Alice Kipel, a lawyer in Washington, and Peter Krane, a lawyer in New York, took time out from a case they were both working (same side) in Germany for dinner.

80

HENRIK D. PARKER
25 Farnhouse La.
Philadelphia, PA 18925

While our Tenth Reunion Directory contains lots of juicy tidbits about most of your favorite classmates, it does not tell all. For example, Jeffrey LaBaw graduated from Georgetown law in May 1989, passed the Virginia bar in Oct., and works for I.B.M. in Bethesda, Md. He lives in Herndon, Va., with his wife, Joyce (Stanford '82), and cocker spaniels Rocky and Coco, enjoying being free of evening law classes. Anne-Marie Slaughter Burley reports that she is now an assist. prof. of law at the Univ. of Chicago law school, specializing in international law. Becky Beardslaw Torrey resides in Hanover, N.H., and splits time between being coordinator of gifted and talented programs at an elementary school in Thetford, Vt., and being the mother to John (2). Becky's husband, Will, is a psychiatrist in a Hanover community mental health agency. Congratulations to Robert Fletcher, made a partner in the Washington law firm of Hopkins & Sutter, in Oct. 1989.

More CLASS ISSUE: Jennifer Ware Parker's and Rik Parker's lives changed for the better when daughter Katherine Joyce was born on Dec. 4, 1989. Parenthood presents a whole new world of pleasures and challenges! Pictured is Oliver Anthony Rogers, an early Christmas present to Ieva Miesnieks Rogers and Philip Rogers '79. Oliver arrived Dec. 17, 1989. Nancy Howell Fletcher and Jim Fletcher bring their third son, Timothy, in January, joining brothers Matthew and Luke. Anne Holton and husband, Tim Kaine, had Nathaniel Colman Holton Kaine on Jan. 4, six weeks early, but big and healthy. Anne works half time as a staff attorney at the Central Va. Legal Aid Society in Richmond.

81 JUAN AMABLE TILLJOMANN
50 Riverside Dr., #9F
New York, NY 10024

Sharon Lane sends news of Gaby Simms-Greene and Cathy Washington. Gaby produced a new daughter, Savannah, in July. Cathy will be at U.Penn. this fall, studying for her master's in government.

A mini-reunion of alumni spanning 18 class years was held at the Regent Hotel in Bangkok in Apr. 1990, when Coudert Bros. attorneys held their 1990 East Asian regional meeting. The photo shows attorneys from various Coudert Bros. offices grouped around a Tiger, singing "Old Nassau." Pictured are (l-r): Owen Nee Jr. '65, Alex Sanford (Bangkok office), Charles Stevens '63, Barry Metzger '66, and Peter Cleary '74. Class year of the tiger could not be determined, writes Alex.

Susan Varrin recently relocated to J.P. Morgan's Geneva office. Terrence Ayala and his wife, Rochelle Knowles '83, recently relocated to Florida from Detroit, following Rochelle's graduation from Wayne State med. school. (with distinction) in June 1990. She will be a resident in internal medicine at Shands Hospital (Univ. Fla.-Gainesville), and Terrence will continue to practice public finance and municipal bond law as an associate with Steel Hector & Davis.

82 TIM DOOLEY KOEUT
12409 Sadler Lane
Bowie, MD 20715

REAL WORLD, HERE WE COME: Three '82ers have completed various degrees from Stanford. In June 1988 Steve Arnold received his M.B.A. and married Ann Maureen Leahy (which included adopting her two large dogs). They then moved to the Washington, D.C. area, where Steve is a management consultant for Strategic Planning Associates and Maureen is a C.P.A. completing her law degree. Bill Moore got his Ph.D. in electrical engineering and is a research scientist for Integrated Systems, a small Silicon Valley company. He's settled in Palo Alto and is enjoying the sunshine. David Smith got his Ph.D. in geology, while Jenni Levy finished her medical residency at Northern California D.M.G. Dave is working for a geology and engineering consulting firm in Palo Alto and Jenni is doing a fellowship in internal medicine at Kaiser Foundation Hospital in Santa Clara. Esther Gokhale, on the other hand, just couldn't leave Stanford. She's a settled "townie" with her husband, Brian White (math '82) and daughter, Maya (3). She's been practicing acupuncture for the last six years.

Pictured is the Mar. 18 wedding of Daniel Rosenbaum to Laureen Wu (Temple '85). '82ers in attendance included Jay Mendelson, Robert Pavlovich, and Laura Pope-Pavlovich. Laureen is a pharmacist at Temple Univ. Hospital (where they met during Daniel's residency). Daniel has a fellowship in diabetes and endocrinology at Mt. Sinai in N.Y.

83 GAIL FRANCK
345 West 87th St., Apt. 5F
New York, NY 10024

Julia Sensenbrenner writes that she was married on March 18, 1990, to Yanlei Wu. Julia is still at Johns Hopkins working on her Ph.D. in sociology and Yanlei is an attorney with Sidley and Austin in D.C. Princetonians in attendance included (front l-r): Missy Murdock Bauman, Katie Bauman '12, Tierney Boyd Remick, Mary Haven Stallings '84, Nan Gillespie O'Connell, Kristin Hayes, and (back) David Bauman, Todd Johnson '84, Lydia Moore '84, Robert Zauzmer, Walter Jones '85, Madelyn Ross '79, Skip Griffith (Madelyn's husband), John Walsh (former Baptist chaplain at P.U.), Yanlei, Julia, John Sensenbrenner '47, Clara Severiens Barrett, Jim O'Connell, and Chris Barrett '84. Julia reports that Nan and Jim live in Richmond, where Nan is starting her ob.-gyn. residency. Kristin has just moved to the Chicago office of McKinsey & Co. Clara and Chris welcomed a new son, Brendan, in January. They will be working on Ph.D.s in economics at the Univ. of Wisconsin. Tierney works for Russell Reynolds in Chicago. Jan and Bobby have a new house in near Philadelphia.

Quick quips from orange cards: Francis Freeman married Sue Copley (Michigan '83) in Buffalo June 9, 1990—"It was a major party." Joe Piropato is "taking stock of the West" as first V.P. at Bateman Eichler Hill Richards in L.A. Ed Ritter trades government bonds at Deutsche Bank, after finishing his M.B.A. at Univ. of Chicago. John Ross says "Hi."

84 TIMOTHY C. WU
Beacon Court, 175 Beacon St., Apt. 413
Somerville, MA 02143

ALL IN THE FAMILY... Four classes of Princetonians were represented in the wedding party when Katharine Hanna married Matthew Morgan '85 Aug. 28 in Lenox, Mass. In addition to the bride and

Princeton Clubs and Alumni Associations

PAA OF WESTERN PENN. (Pittsburgh):

Thurs., Oct. 11—President Harold T. Shapiro '64 will speak at the annual dinner. For further details, call Steve Olson '70 at 412-355-6496 (b).

PC OF PHILADELPHIA: Tues., Oct. 23—

President Shapiro will speak at the annual dinner. For further details, call Andrea Micek at 215-884-9288 (b).

PC OF CENTRAL FLORIDA (Orlando):

Fri., Nov. 2—Luncheon to honor President Shapiro at the Omni International Hotel in downtown Orlando. Reception at 11:30 A.M., followed by lunch. For info., call Richard Conner '82 at 407-422-8116.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN PC: Tues., Oct. 30—

Dinner with Professor of Biology Henry Horn. For details, call Michael Reidy '76 at 303-893-8100.

PC OF WESTERN WASHINGTON (Seattle):

Wed., Oct. 31—Luncheon with Professor of Biology Henry Horn. For details, call Richard Prentke '67 at 206-583-8888.

PC OF OREGON (Portland): Thurs.,

Nov. 1—Dinner with Professor of Biology Henry Horn. For info., call Kenneth Suid '62 at 503-626-1253.

PAA OF GREENWICH: Sat., Nov. 10—All tiger fans are invited to attend a reception prior to the Princeton-Yale football game in New Haven. For further info., call Tom Bennevil '77 at 212-850-2816 (b) or watch for details in this column.

Notices for this column should be submitted at least eight weeks prior to the event. Send info. to Elizabeth Hunt, Alumni Council, Maclean House, Princeton Univ., Princeton, NJ 08544-0291; 609-258-3351.

groom, the principals included Katharine's father, John Hanna Jr. '56, and Matthew's father, Alexander Morgan Jr. '46. Katharine and Matthew both graduated from Tuck B-School at Dartmouth in June.

SUMMER WEDDINGS, PART II... Another multi-Princetonian family wedding took place Aug. 4 in Greenwich, Conn., when Tom DeNunzio married Suzanne Thornton (Dartmouth '84). Tom's father, Ralph DeNunzio '53, is a University trustee. Suzanne and Tom both work for Morgan Stanley in N.Y.C.

SUMMER WEDDINGS III, THE SEQUEL... Amy Rosen (Drexel) married Chris Connolly Aug. 11 in Villanova, Penn. Amy is a sales manager at Bradlees department store in Middletown, N.J., while Chris graduated from the Darden School of Business at U.Va. in May, and is now working as a senior consultant at Price Waterhouse in N.Y.C.

AND NOW A WORD FROM THE OLD MARRIED COUPLES ASSOCIATION... David Blek writes that he has moved to Chicago with the law firm of Jones, Day, Reavis, and Pogue, where he is continuing to practice in intellectual property. He and his wife celebrated their first wedding anniversary in June by buying a house in Lake Forest. Ann Tasbi Davis Slater completed her first novel, and is now living in Tokyo, where she

STAFF WRITER- ASSOCIATE EDITOR

PAW seeks a staff writer-associate editor. Chief responsibilities are covering campus news and Princeton sports and writing occasional feature stories. Candidates should have two years' experience on the editorial staff of a newspaper or magazine. An excellent opportunity for a young alumnus/a in journalism. PAW is an equal-opportunity employer.

Send résumé to:
Andrew Mytelka '85
Managing Editor
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William Street
Princeton NJ 08540

HOW DO YOU GET THE PAW?

You get your PAW, year in and year out, thanks largely to class dues. If you haven't been paying your class dues, act now!
Call 609-258-5836

Dues make the difference!

THE ALUMNI
COUNCIL

plans to continue writing and working in publishing. Ann received her master's in writing from the Univ. of Michigan in June.

85

BOB JEWANK
1578 Oak Ave., Apt. 1
Evanston, IL 60201

CARD'S ON THE TABLE? A faithful but anonymous classmate recently wrote to report on '85's loosest cannon, Andy Card. He had this to say: "Andrew is no longer (intimate with beasts) as you probably recall he often was. We done broke him of the habit.

He's also landed a right good job. Seems Yale Univ., a four-year institution of higher learning in New Haven, Conn., has thought well enough of Andrew to offer him the head coaching position for lightweight crew this past year. And wouldn't you know? Andrew took them boys to an undefeated season on the way to Eastern Sprints and national titles. The good old boys in blue even kicked in enough dinero for Andrew and his white bucks to go to England for Henley and scotch. Or was that scotch and Henley?"

Land sakes! So impressive is Andy's rowing ability, that the People's Republic of China invited him to coach the Chinese national squad in Shanghai. Nonetheless, while we applaud Andy's phenomenal success, we quiver at his conversion of loyalties. Could it be that Andy has bulldogs on his boxers? Because of the unsettling nature of this prospect, a ballot is in order to determine the acceptability of his actions. Does Andy have his cards on the table, or is he dealing from the bottom of the deck? The entire Class is urged to participate by checking the appropriate line and returning your ballot to me at the listed address. Results will be reported in a subsequent column.

___Card's on the table.

___Card's dealing from the bottom of the deck.

86

SALLIE KIM
2645 California St., #303
Mountain View, CA 94040

Loretta Haggard is halfway through her joint law and social work program at Washington Univ. in St. Louis. Ed Loeb recently obtained his M.B.A. from the Kellogg School at Northwestern, and plans to work for Harris Associates, a Chicago investment firm. Ali Reza is working for Failure Analysis Associates, an engineering firm in Menlo Park, Calif., "which does exactly what its name suggests." Deborah Friedman is spending a year in Germany at the Univ. of Göttingen as part of her Ph.D. in linguistics at Cornell.

Ethan Rasiel graduated from Wharton with an M.B.A. and plans to work for McKinsey & Co. in N.Y. Paul Ouellet is still working at Sun Microsystems, but has switched departments and hopes to finish his exams in manufacturing management for his certification in production and inventory management. Dave Ackerman is in his second year at U.Va. studying for a master's degree in architecture, after spending the summer working in architecture and construction. Martha Atwater is working for a film and TV production company in Manhattan. Ned Cornman, Bill Segal, and Ariela Noy graduated from U.Penn. med. school. Osman Sawan and Tim Farrell have also graduated from med. school, the Robert Wood Johnson Medical School.

87

MARY TAYLOR DEMKO
711 Waters Edge
Racine, WI 53402

Andy Schneider married Nancy Rawls Cross (U.Va. '87) on Nov. 9, 1989. Present at the Richmond wedding were (l-r): Tracey Drake (Harvard '87), Tom Weber '89, Marshall Wishnack '68, Suzanne Wishnack '93, Lawrence Hooper, Nancy, Andy, Nancy Jeffrey, Elliot Robbins (who flew in from Tokyo!), and Lisa Eichborn. Andy is a third-year med. student at the Medical College of Va., and Nancy just completed law school at U.Va.; they live in Richmond. Lawrence is a writer for the WALL STREET JOURNAL.

Nancy Pisber and Kurt Hansen were married on July 1, 1989, in the Princeton Chapel. Present were (seated): Nina Prat '88, Ann Lin, Andrea Bertozzi, Karen Pleslak, Beth Lampert Parks '88, and Albert Hansen '76; (standing): Charlie Sullivan, Tom Parks, Pablo Gadenz '88, Brad Koetje, Joe Coresh '86, Nancy, Kurt, Rich Mandelbaum, and Dave Bordin '88. Nancy and Kurt live in Stanford, where Nancy is a chemistry grad student at the university, and Kurt is an electrical engineer in Santa Clara.

88

CHRISTOPHER LU
206E Holden Green
Cambridge, MA 02138

From the Pacific Northwest comes news from Linda Ferguson, who spent the summer crossing the Atlantic in a sailboat, and traveling in the British Isles. She is starting her first year of law school at the Univ. of Puget Sound. Also in the area is Jon Evans, who works for Pepsi in Seattle. He writes that Kathy White, Dave Merchant, and Scott Edwards are at the Univ. of Washington law school.

Lisa Herman married Richard Ganey last March 11 in Hackensack, N.J. Wendy Dreler was a bridesmaid at the wedding. The newlyweds are now in Israel, where they are studying on Yavneh Upan. Several other '88ers also were married recently: Mike Charles to Suzanne LeBeau '89, and Debbie McEvoy to Tim Herndon '89. And Mike Hildreth writes that he and Holly Goodson are engaged and will be married in Sept. 1991 near Boston.

Congratulations to our Class Agent Liz Duffy on another successful year of coordinating Annual Giving. Last year, 520 Class members or 45.9 percent of the Class gave a total of $64,834.

Finally, the Class of 1988 Sam Mitra Scholarship Fund recently made its first contribution of $500 to the University's financial aid fund. The money will go to a foreign student on financial aid, with preference given to a student from India. To permanently endow our scholarship, we need your support. Contributions can be sent to the address above.

89

DAVID MILLER
2606 N. Pershing Dr., Apt. 2
Arlington, VA 22201

Congratulations to Marc Michaelson, who married Jennifer Kosowsky '90 June 24. Andrew Vagelos, who has been a middle school teacher's aide, reports that Bob Scacheri and Jennifer Gillen will be married

Dec. 22, 1990. Breaking into the dog-eat-dog world of N.Y. publishing: Abigail Kamen, who works as an editor with St. Martin's Press and lives with Marcia Hack, working in sales at Bantam Books. Also in publishing are Will Weisser, who has completed a one-year internship at Simon and Schuster, and Eric Simonoff, an editor at Norton. Richard Schneer continues to enjoy life as a T.A. and grad student at U.C.-Santa Cruz (located in a national park and near an earthquake fault line on the California coast) but comes back East often. In true Princeton spirit, he has attended several mini-reunions with his roommates, including Tom Hagedorn, who has become engaged to Laura Landweber.

Holston B. Black III and Scott Ostrem are engineers at McDonnell-Douglas in St. Louis. As of last spring, Mark S. Reed was in his second year of the master of architecture program at Harvard's school of design.

Correction: Kalpana Shankar is indeed at Georgetown med. school, but she is working there in AIDS research, assisting "one of the best virus people in the country." She writes, "I'll be spoiled when I go back to grad school—we have so much money for equipment, we don't know how to spend it."

HARVARD GAME, OCT. 20: Look for the '89 banner and refreshments during the pre-game, post-game, and halftime activities in Jadwin Gym.

90 BRIETT GOODMAN
22 Berkeley Terrace
Livingston, NJ 07039

HARVARD 5—SI Yes, that was often the cry during our undergraduate days, but now that we're alumni, many of us are finding that the need to castigate the Crimson remains. If you are experiencing similar feelings, then why not join the Class at its first post-Princeton get-together, the Princeton-Harvard football game at good 'ole Palmer Stadium on Oct. 20. Festivities will begin at around noon in Fine Plaza, where we will be invited to crash a pre-game tailgate organized by the Class of '91. In addition, unless you truly miss the performances of the University band, you will want to attend a halftime happy hour (or 20 minutes) in the same location. All this is brought to you by your Class officers and Reunions co-chairwomen Kathy Fox and Lauren Siegler. Wear your '90 sweatshirts, dress in crazy orange and black, and come to have a great time. As a special treat, we will present one lucky classmate with a long-distance award, so even if you have to fly in from the far reaches of the planet, it may very well be worth it.

Despite the fact that Harvard is indeed pretty lame, many of our classmates began studying there in Sept. David Abrahams, Marisa Apostolidis, Steve Gubman, Doug Berman, Alexia Brown, Beverly Brown, Carl Dawson, DeAnn Fairfield, Barry Langman, Page Lichtenfeld, Demetrios Marantis, and Tom Souleles will ensure that the law school library is well populated, while Solange Brown and Michael Mitchell will work overtime in the dark laboratories of the med. school. Many others will pursue advanced degrees, including Rick Salvatore (comparative literature); David Grabner and Rabul Pandabarpande (math); Lauren Dustin and Larry Neuman (design architecture); Dan Cohen (religion); Harold Fuess (history); Bart Blaesser (dental medicine); Bill Bies (physics); Scott Alper (molecular biology); and Victoria Wu (politics).

GS VIVAN G. HENNING JR. '48
1573 Kirkley Rd.
Columbus, OH 43221
01-'59

ARCHITECTURE: From Guilford, Conn., George H. Dexter '49 writes, "Retired from everyday rat race, but practicing architecture and painting portraits in my own studio. Lucia also teaching French part-time to young children." And from Auburn, Ala., E. Keith McPheters '56 tells us, "I retired from Auburn Univ. and will continue part-time as professor emeritus. I was one of five recipients in 1989 designated as a distinguished professor by the Assn. of Collegiate Schools of Architecture." Our heartiest congratulations to Keith as well as to Stephen A. Kliment '57, who was recently appointed chief editor of ARCHITECTURAL RECORD. Meanwhile, William M. Thompson '59 writes from Walsasset, Me., "Still practicing country-wide, based in our new home in Maine. Also continuing my work as liaison officer for the Univ. of St. Andrews (Scotland)." This avocation includes enlisting Americans to study at St. Andrews where "we have a fine, but small graduate program."

BIOLOGY: Charles S. Shoup '29 writes us: "I am one of the two founding members, and the first president, of the International Rolls-Royce Owners' Club, with headquarters in Mechanicsburg, Penn. My book, written for the club, entitled ROLLS-ROYCE: FACT & LEGEND, has appeared this year (1989) in its third edition, and is distributed and sold by the club from its headquarters' shop in Mechanicsburg. I retired from the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, Oak Ridge Operations, in 1972, and part of my retirement activities revolve around the Rolls-Royce Owners' Club. But, alas, I sold my Bentley car that I have owned for more than 18 years, and now drive my Buick! 1926-29 was a glorious time to be a graduate student at Princeton, and especially to have the privilege of living at Graduate College. From 60 years ago, I look back at that experience as paramount." And from Fort Worth, Tex., Irvin M. Korr '35 reports: "Retired Sept. 1, 1989, at age 80, after 53 years in medical education and research, 44 of those years in osteopathic medical education and research. Author, editor, co-author of five books in neuroscience, many articles on my research, medical education, medical philosophy. Now completing book, FOUNDATIONS OF HEALTH." Irvin keeps busy lecturing in the U.S., Europe, the U.K., Australia, New Zealand, and China. He is also a consultant to the British Accreditation Council for osteopathic education in the U.K.

CLASSICS: Meanwhile, John W. Zarker '58 writes us, "After teaching at Tufts Univ. for 18 years (14 as chairman), I have taken early retirement and am now senior lecturing fellow in classics at Duke Univ."

GS CHRISTOPHER KLAUSE '86
31183 Lakemont Dr.
San Ramon, CA 94583
76-'89

This is my first column, and it seems most appropriate to start off my tenure in this position by thanking David Meyerbofer '87 for his service in writing this column over the past several years. By way of introduction, I am a graduate of the astrophysical sciences dept. and am currently involved in research in the area of x-ray lasers and fusion energy at Lawrence Livermore Natl. Laboratory, Livermore, Calif. I look forward to serving Princeton's graduate alumni and helping to keep us abreast of our colleagues and friends, and strongly encourage graduate alumni to send news of their activities and whereabouts to raw or directly to me at the above address.

ARCHITECTURE: Hamid Shrivani '80, dean of the school of architecture and planning at the Univ. of Colorado-Denver, received the faculty's honor award for outstanding leadership and contributions to the evolution of the school's programs. He has become a fellow of the Royal Society of Arts.

ASTROPHYSICAL SCIENCES: Glen Wurdun '82 writes that he returned earlier this year from a 16-month visit in West Germany, where he worked as an exchange scientist at the Max Planck Institut fur Plasma Physik. While visiting a cousin living in West Berlin, he recounts that he and his family (wife, Nancy; children, Alex and Katie) personally assisted in the tearing down of the Berlin Wall.

Young Alumni Activities

PC OF OREGON: Nov. 1—Dinner with biology professor Henry Horn. Nov. 10: Princeton-Yale game; watch the game and join us for brunch with local Yale alumni. Call Lori Irish Bauman '81, 503-226-1191, for details.

PC OF NEW YORK: Oct. 23—Movie, NUNS ON THE RUN, free. Oct. 29—Princetonians in the Arts. Nov. 1—Young Alumni Thursday Night Club. Nov. 3—Annual Halloween Ball. For reservations or questions, call the manager's office at 212-840-6400. All alumni are welcome.

PC OF WESTERN WASHINGTON: Oct. 31—Lunch with a visiting Princeton professor. Nov. 10—Football event—Princeton-Yale game. Call Jon Evans '88, 206-883-2410, for more info.

Young Alumni: Information for this column should be submitted at least six weeks prior to the event. Call or write Charlotte Cooney, Alumni Council, Princeton Univ., Princeton NJ 08544.

BIOCHEMICAL SCIENCES: Ralph Mostillo '78 has been elected president and C.E.O. of the American Cancer Assn. The organization is dedicated to curing cancer, primarily through genetic cancer research and genetic cancer therapy.

CHEMISTRY: Thomas P. Richards '85 received a law degree from Columbia Univ. in May, and shortly thereafter began a new job as exec. V.P. of Pharmacia Ophthalmics Inc. in Los Angeles.

CIVIL ENGINEERING: Richard M. Antush '83 has been working at Sea-Land Service since 1982. His current position is manager of new technology, and he is investigating how optical storage technologies and artificial intelligence may be used at Sea-Land.

EAST ASIAN STUDIES: Thomas C. Bartlett '85 has completed his first year as director of the Chinese Language Program at Harvard. He was married to Li Liu in Dec. 1989.

ECONOMICS: Since Dec. 1989 Jeff Carmichael '79 has been professor of finance and director of the Center for Banking and Finance at Bond Univ. Business School, Australia. He notes that this is Australia's first private university. His previous position was chief manager of the financial markets group at the Reserve Bank of Australia.

GEOLOGY AND GEOPHYSICS: On a sad note, Phyllis Hasson '83 of Fort Pierce, Fla., is temporarily retired following the death of her husband, Dick. We wish Phyllis the best during this difficult time.

HISTORY: Brian Greenberg '80, formerly an associate professor of history at the Univ. of Delaware, has accepted a tenured appointment to the Jules L. Plangere Jr. Chair in American Social History at Monmouth College effective July 1, 1990. John Fleming '88 has had a new book, METEOROLOGY IN AMERICA, 1800-1870, published by the Johns Hopkins Univ. Press. He has also taken on new responsibilities as history editor of EOS, TRANSACTIONS, AMERICAN GEO-PHYSICAL UNION.

WOODROW WILSON SCHOOL: William G. Schmitt '81 has joined the Kiplinger Washington Letter as an associate editor. He also reports that he is engaged to marry Eileen R. Schongar this fall.

Matthew Stanley Quay '19

STAN QUAY was born in Sewickley, Penn., on June 4, 1897. He prepared at Hill School, leaving Princeton on Apr. 1, 1917 to enter the Naval Reserve, as lieutenant, j.g., until Jan. 1919. He graduated from Princeton in Feb. 1920, and his business career carried him to many different companies, including a railway, bolt, and rivet business; stock brokerage; travel agency (foreign countries); Carnegie Hero Fund Commission; and others. In Feb. 1942, he was commissioned captain in the U.S. Air Corps, and retired in Feb. 1958 as a lt. colonel.

Stan married late in life. Mrs. Quay had a severe illness before her death. Stan attended reunions and always made the main ones.

Stan died on June 11, 1990, in Stanford, Fla. The Class extends its deep sympathy to his entire family.

The Class of 1919

Milton Herbert Robbins '19

MILTON HERBERT ROBBINS died Sept. 15, 1989, at Redlands, Calif. He was born in Hightstown, N.J., on Oct. 7, 1895, went to Peddic Inst., and then to Princeton, which he left on Dec. 14, 1917, to join the U.S. Navy. After graduation in 1920, he worked with Praxie Oil and Gas. In a short time he was back in N.J., where he built a home at Sea Girt in 1924. Next, he moved to Florida, but soon he was back to Sea Girt. After WWII, upon doctor's advice, he moved to Arizona and then to California at Banning. No information has been received since 1960. The Class of 1919 extends its sympathy to Milton's relatives.

The Class of 1919

Richard M. Ehret '21

RICHARD M. EHRET died April 10, 1990, in Haverford, Penn. Born in Edgewater Park, N.J., he prepared at DeLancy and St. Paul's Schools. At Princeton he was on the freshman baseball team and varsity hockey team, and was a member of Ivy.

After graduating Dick was associated with several companies in sales work. During the war he enlisted in the Navy as a lieutenant supply officer. After the war he changed careers, and ended his business life as an author and publisher of the successful book CREATIVE SELLING. Dick married Eloise Newlin, a Cornell alumna. He is survived by a daughter, Sandra, and a step-son, William Newlin. The Class extends sympathy to his family.

The Class of 1921

Edward Lawrence Keyes '21

LARRY KEYES died Feb. 11, 1990, at his home in St. Louis. He was 90 years old. In senior year he was voted "Best All-Around Man," which was prophetic of his entire career. He was a well known surgeon and cancer specialist, having practiced in St. Louis for over thirty years. He was a former president of the St. Louis Surgical Society and served on the staff of Barnes, Jewish, St. Luke's and St. John's Mercy Hospitals.

Larry prepared at Lawrenceville, and at Princeton was a star athlete on the baseball, hockey, and soccer teams. He was active in innumerable undergraduate activities, was a member of Cap and Gown, and was Class president during junior year.

A widower, Larry is survived by a brother, A. L. Keyes; two sisters, Emily Belt and Elizabeth Cook w'21; a son, E. L. Keyes Jr. '51; three daughters, Sally K. Hermann, Mary K. Otto, and Emily K. Barksdale; 11 grandchildren including L. Shapely Hermann '75, Mary C. Hermann '89, Elizabeth K. White '82; and nine great-grandchildren. The Class extends sincere sympathy to Larry's family.

The Class of 1921

William Rogers '21

WILLIAM ROGERS died in his sleep July 14, 1990, in Medford Lakes, N.J. He was born in Cheltenham, England, where he lived and prepared for college before moving to Philadelphia.

At Princeton he was on the track and cross country teams, and captain of the latter. Winning his varsity letter in track as well as a Phi Beta Kappa key, he was one of the few members of the class to win both honors. In senior year Bill was president of Gateway Club.

After graduation he took his M.A. and Ph.D. in chemistry at the Graduate School, and became professor of chemistry at Temple Univ. until his retirement as chairman of the department.

Bill married Doris Wright, who predeceased him. He is survived by a daughter, Doris Steel, a son, William Jr. '53, and six grandchildren to whom the Class extends sincere sympathy.

The Class of 1921

Leo August Jiranek '22

LEO AUGUST JIRANEK died of cancer Jan. 27, 1990. Jerry was born Aug. 30, 1900, in Grand Rapids, Mich. He prepared for college at Western Military Academy, and after two years at Norwich Univ., transferred to Princeton in Sept. 1920. After graduation in 1922, he went to work for Turner Construction Co. In 1924 Jerry's father died, and Jerry took over his furniture design business, where Jerry spent the rest of his career. He founded and was the first president of the American Designers Inst. and the Jiranek School of Furniture Design and Technology.

Jerry maintained an active interest in Princeton, having served as Class V.P. 1947-50, Class president 1953-57, and as chairman of a number of reunions.

Jerry is survived by his widow, the former Elaine Jennings Hoffman, whom he married in May 1954; four sons; two stepsons; ten grandchildren; and one great-grandchild. Three of his sons and four of his grandsons graduated from Princeton. The Class expresses the deepest sympathy to his survivors.

The Class of 1922

Lawrence Crane Woods Jr. '22

OUR CLASS suffered a real loss with the death of Pete Woods Apr. 25, 1990, in Newtown Square, Penn. Pete was born July 18, 1899, in Pittsburgh. When at Princeton, Pete intended to teach and did for a year, at the Haverford School, after graduation. But he was called to insurance, and by 1924 had joined Equitable Life Insurance Society, where he stayed until he headed the Pittsburgh office. Retiring in 1975, he stayed on at his farm in Ligonier and moved to his present residence in 1984. Pete was also trustee and officer of Carnegie Inst., and trustee and chairman of Carnegie Museum of Natural History. He was a participant in big-game hunting expeditions for the museum's collection.

Pete married Susan Breck Burlingham on June 10, 1944, in Winnetka, Ill. She survives, as does one of their two daughters. Pete had a real interest in people, and toward the end of his life started a program of inducing various vigorous classmates to write to less fortunate classmates. The program was a great success.

The Class of 1922

Ira Miles Appel '24

IRA APPEL died in Tucson May 1, 1990. He prepared at the Princeton Prep. He left Princeton in 1921 to engage in business. Ira was associated with the Farmers' Deposit Savings Bank of Pittsburgh until 1940, when he moved to Tucson because of his wife's ill health. He and his wife, who died in 1973, operated a dude ranch in the Catalina foothills. He was greatly interested in amateur radio broadcasting and operated his own station under the call letters of WJQB. We know of no relatives.

The Class of 1924

Edward Luis Crabbe '24

ED CRABBE died in Toms River, N.J., May 1, 1990. He joined the Farmers Loan & Trust Co. shortly after graduation. When that company was taken over by the First National City Bank of New York in 1929, he went along, and remained with them until he retired as a V.P. in 1962. He was also a director of the First National Bank of Toms River. His principal interest was boats and cruising. He was a member of the Cruising Club of America, the Toms River Yacht Club, and the Princeton and Racquet & Tennis Clubs of N.Y. He was a commander in the Navy during WWII. Ed never married. He is survived by his sister, Emily Crabbe Ballou, to whom we extend our sympathy.

The Class of 1924

Edward Korn Hessberg '24

EDDIE HESSBERG died June 18, 1990. He prepared for Princeton at the Columbia Grammar School. After graduation he received his J.D. from Columbia Univ. He was a counsel for Warner Bros. for over 30 years. When they moved their corporate headquarters to California in 1959, he opened a private practice in White Plains. In 1977 he moved his home and practice to Juno Beach, Fla., where he remained very active. He was always interested in civic and charitable affairs. Eddie was an avid coin collector and a life member of both the American Numismatic Assn. and the American Numismatic Society. He is survived by his wife, Margaret; a son, Edward S. '59; a daughter, Peggy H. Covell, and four grandchildren. To them we extend our sympathy.

The Class of 1924

William Werner Reidemeister '24

BILL REIDEMEISTER died May 23, 1990. He prepared at the Pawling School. Bill left Princeton in Nov. 1922 to join the Baumer Piano Co. He was then associated with Lord & Taylor, and finally with Yardley, with whom he remained until retired in 1961. He was a devotee of skiing and mountain climbing in the Adirondacks. He was past president of the Ausable Forks Rotary Club. He is survived by his wife, Joann, and his son, Anthony. To them we extend our sympathy.

The Class of 1924

David Merle Corcoran '25

DAVID CORCORAN, president and organizer of the international division of Sterling Products Co. for 40 years before his retirement in 1973, died in his sleep at his home in Waterville Valley, N.H., June 14, 1990, at age 86.

He was president of his class at Pawtucket, R.I. High School. At Princeton he was on the football and track squads in freshman and sophomore years, and was a member of Tower. After Harvard Business School, he began his career with General Motors, serving as manager of their Tokyo office. In the late 1930s he organized Chinese defense supplies to provide military equipment to the Chinese in their war with Japan. He also helped organize the American Volunteer Group, known as the Flying Tigers, under General Claire Chennault. Since 1965 he has been a director of the Waterville Valley, N.H., resort complex, created by his son Thomas.

Among his relatives was H. F. Corcoran '28, and a brother, Thomas. He is survived by his wife, the former Joan Wolman, three sons, two daughters, and eight grandchildren, to whom the Class extends sympathy.

The Class of 1925

Wheeler McDougal '25

"WHEE" McDOUGAL was born in Peoria, Ill., and died there at age 87 on Feb. 24, 1989.

He prepared at Lawrenceville and also attended Kenyon College. He was a member of Cottage.

He worked as a bank examiner for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. in Peoria, Chicago, and Washington. After WWII, in which he served in the Coast Guard, he served as an officer in banks in Washington and Peoria, retiring as a V.P. of Commercial Natl. Bank of Peoria.

He was active in many community organizations, including the Community Chest and two school boards, of which he was president. He was also president of the Peoria Country Club, and during his residence there he was V.P. of the Princeton Club of Chicago.

He married Kathleen Danford in Washington in 1934, who died Nov. 23, 1988. He is survived by a son, Wheeler Jr., a daughter, Kathleen (Robert) Stevenson, and five grandchildren. Among his Princeton relatives are his brother, the late R. D. McDougal Jr. '19; an uncle in the Class of 1886, and 14 cousins, including Robert McDougal Jr. '26, and Shelby Culom Davis '30.

The Class of 1925

Carl Philip Sahler '25

CARL SAHLER was born in Germantown, N.Y., in 1905, and graduated from Andover. At Princeton he won his letter in soccer and was a member of Terrace. He left us at the end of junior year, but maintained a keen interest in Princeton and the Class. He served on our 20th reunion committee. He lived in Basking Ridge, N.J., for 28 years, where he was prominent in community affairs: he was an elder and trustee of the Basking Ridge Presbyterian Church, president of Bernard Township Board of Education, chairman of Junior Achievement in Union Cty., and a member of the Broad Acres Tennis Club, the Essex Club of Newark, and the Princeton Club of N.Y. He retired as president of the Thatcher Furnace Co. of Garwood in 1960.

He and his wife, Beatrice, moved to Canandaigua, N.Y., in 1981 to be near their son, Dr. Carl Jr. '66. They celebrated their 58th wedding anniversary in June 1989. He died Jan. 17, 1990. The Class extends sympathy to Beatrice, sons Carl and Bruce, daughter Sandra Gregg, and six grandchildren.

The Class of 1925

Richard H. Bennett '26

DICK BENNETT died May 18, 1990, at the Community Hospital in Montclair, N.J., after a short illness. Dick was always a loyal member of '26, and will be remembered by the Class as editor of our 10th year book, as Class agent for Annual Giving during 1956-59, and for help in many other ways when help was needed.

Dick, whose father, Howard S. Bennett, was a member of the Class of 1890, was one of the large group from Lawrenceville that entered Princeton in the fall of 1922. He was a member of Gateway and majored in psychology. Dick went with the Bell system after graduation and worked in the personnel and safety departments of Western Electric for 37 years before retirement in 1966. During the war, Dick served in the N.J. Natl. Guard, first squadron cavalry. He also served as a member of the board of managers of the Montclair Community Hospital and as a deacon of the Central Presbyterian Church.

Dick is survived by his widow, the former Frances Reid, whom he married in 1959; by his son, James '59; two daughters, Phoebe Harris and Cynthia Hamilton; a sister, Adelaide Warrick; and by five grandchildren. To all of whom we express our deep sympathy.

The Class of 1926

Robert J. Smythe '26

BOB SMYTHE died in his home in Westfield, N.J., May 22, 1990, a victim of emphysema. Although very active in his career, Bob was always able to find time in support of Class affairs, whether the project was a major reunion or just a luncheon before a football game. In recognition of his contributions to '26, at our 62nd reunion in 1988, Bob received the 1926 Class Council Award.

Bob came to Princeton from Blair Academy, was a member of Arbor Inn, and an art major. After graduation he worked in fundraising and in time was recognized as an expert. During the war, as national director of fund raising for the American Red Cross, Bob raised over $200,000,000. Later, he became national director of the Arthritis Foundation, and in 1966 director of the National Kidney Foundation. After retirement in 1970, Bob saw service with International Executive Service Corps in Iran and Central America, and also helped many good causes with fundraising. In 1988 the New Jersey Chapter of the Natl. Society of Fund Raising Executives named an annual award for him.

In Class affairs, Bob was ably assisted by Kay, the former Catherine Duncan, whom he married in 1950. We will miss Bob and extend our deep sympathy to Kay, to Bob's sons, Robert and Duncan; to his sister, Virginia Skivington; to three grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

The Class of 1926

Kenneth Boyd Outerbridge '27

KEN DIED June 28, 1990, at Miriam Hospital in Providence, R.I. He was the son of Eugenius Harvey and Ethel Boyd Outerbridge, and was born in Cornwall, N.Y. He came to Princeton from the Berkshire School when his home was in N.Y.C., and left the campus in June 1924. He became a business executive of the Homasote Co. of Trenton, N.J., and served there for 40 years until his retirement in 1970. His wife, now deceased, was Florence Bayard Lockwood. Ken retired to his summer home at Saundertown in North Kingston Twp., R.I., where he had vacationed since 1955.

The Class extends its sympathy to Ken's son, David E. Outerbridge; and to his daughters, Judith B. Hughes and Claire Outerbridge; also to his sister, Ethel Harvey Outerbridge, and to his ten grandchildren.

The Class of 1927

Thomas Jeffries Rosengarten '27

JEFF MAY fairly be called a dyed-in-the-wool Princetonian, along with Rosengartens in several classes since the "Golden Nineties," including Adolf G. '27. He was also the Philadelphia "Mainliner" of popular legend. Before and after military service in WWII, he lived in retirement on his estate at Gladwyne and spent summers on a seaside estate, "Kantara Green," at Narragansett, R.I.

His life was dominated by several strong interests. Prep school love of athletics persisted in his devotion to golf and to the Princeton football teams. He was a devout Episcopalian, worshipping at the Church of Saint James the Less in Schuylkill. The Republican Party also claimed a large share of his loyalty. Jeff was a devoted, but critical Princetonian. When others only grumbled, he proclaimed his disapproval of "liberalizing" tendencies on the campus. He was an honest, conservative advocate of traditional values all around.

The Class sends its sympathy to his widow, Carolyn English Rosengarten, and to his stepson, Dwight English Chalker.

The Class of 1927

William M. Spackman '27

"SPACK" DIED Aug. 3, 1990, at his home in Princeton, after a career which made him one of our most distinguished literary alumni. Descended from Pennsylvania Quakers, he was an irreverent wit, whose editorship of the NASSAU LIT aroused the righteous wrath of prexy and many Princetonians. He called himself a "flaneur" (loafer), but was a real student who won a Rhodes. He returned to a varied American career as magazine editor, teacher of classical literature in universities, and media service in the U.S. Navy during WWII.

"Spack" married Mary Ann, daughter of Bishop Paul Matthews of the Episcopal Diocese of N.J. For years the Spackmans enjoyed spending several months of the year at a villa in Brittany, France. They eventually retired to an estate in Princeton. There his literary career showed renewed vigor in five novels, and a volume of essays which won an award from the Academy of Arts and Letters.

His first wife died in 1978, and in 1979 he married Laurie Khairallah. The Class extends its sympathy to her; his brother, Thomas Spackman II; his son, Peter; and his daughter, Harriet Newell; also to his eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

The Class of 1927

Thomas Watson Armitage '29

TOM DIED Apr. 13, 1990. He had prepared for college at Buckley and Hotchkiss. At Princeton he was an ardent oarsman, rowing with the freshman, 150-pound, and varsity crews, and was also a swimmer and wrestler. He was in the Glee Club and Quadrangle, and was secretary of Clio Hall.

Tom's business career began with Dominick & Dominick, then successively Fairfield Land Title Co., Slosson & Co., Grisworld & Co., and finally back to Fairfield Land Title. During the war he was in the Army Air Force, and was recalled in 1951. He retired as lieutenant colonel.

Princeton was always prominent in Tom's interests. He served as president of the Alumni Assn. of Eastern Conn., and was a member of the Schools Committee and regional chair for A.G.

His recreations included swimming, tennis, skating, and cruising in his sloop, as well as jogging and biking.

He belonged to the Downtown Assn. in N.Y. and was chair of the N.Y. Community Service Society.

In 1947 Tom married Emily G. Goodwin, and she survives, together with their son, Arthur; daughter, Alice A. Neff; and brother-in-law, Garret J. Garretson II '36. The Class extends its sincere sympathy to Tom's family.

The Class of 1929

James Thomas Emert '29

JIM DIED July 10, 1989. He prepared at Lawrenceville. At Princeton he played both freshman and varsity baseball, and was runner-up for the handball championship. He roomed with George Dodge, Bill Deknatel, and Jack Parrott, and was in Cottage.

In 1933 Jim received his M.D. from the College of P. & S. He served in the war in various Pacific posts and as C.O. of a 250-bed dispensary in Saigon. Retiring with the rank of commander, Jim moved to Phoenix. He joined with Phoenix doctors to build a medical office building and open an impressive clinic. Because of his golfing interest he found the Phoenix climate ideal.

Jim married Frederica Frelinghuysen and later Barbara Hatch and Ruth Ober. According to our last information he is survived by his sons, James T. Jr. and Blair B.; and his daughter, Helene Brown. The Class extends its sincere sympathy to Jim's family.

The Class of 1929

James Andrew Moffett II '29

JIM DIED Mar. 5, 1990. After graduation he worked for seven years with Standard Oil, and then went to Corn Products Refining Co. At his retirement from the company in 1959 he was president of Corn Products Intl. He then devoted his time to the presidency of the Whitehall Foundation in Palm Beach, his continuing association with the biology dept. at Princeton, and other good works.

From 1933 until the war, Jim was in an organized division of the U.S. Naval Reserve. He entered the Navy as an ensign and left as a Lt. commander. Besides biology, his hobbies included golf and sailing. He belonged to the Racquet & Tennis Club and Downtown Assn. in N.Y., and the Royal & Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews in Scotland.

Jim was married and divorced, and his three children survive: Holly (Mrs. Harry Brooks w'35), Melissa (Mrs. J. Wright Rumbough Jr.), and George M. II. One of his grandchildren is Howard B. Lowell '76. Jim's family has been very generous to Princeton. The estate of his father, George M. Moffett '04, was the donor of the professorship in the biology dept. bearing his name; and both Jim and the family-sponsored Whitehall Foundation were among the donors of the George M. Moffett Laboratories. The Class extends sincere sympathy to Jim's family.

The Class of 1929

George Guyton Carkener '30

GUYTON DIED unexpectedly at a Tampa, Fla. hospital on Mar. 10, 1990, after what had been classified as a minor surgical procedure. Kansas City was his hometown, but he and Laura spent many winters in their Saratoga, Fla. home, and in later, semi-retirement years they had a third domicile, a Hatteras Cruiser, which took them up and down the Intracoastal Waterway to New England, the Chesapeake Bay, Great Lakes, and Mississippi River. Guyton was very proud of his three daughters and six grandchildren. He was a successful man in his career as well as his family.

With his Princeton B.S. degree in economics, Guyton spent a brief two years in accounting, then turned to investments—eventually owning Drury Investment Corp. and G. Guyton Carkener Investment Co., where he was largely involved in portfolio management. As an R.O.T.C. "shave tail" he was called to active duty early and was discharged in 1946 as a major. A brother, Stuart Carkener II '19, and a cousin, Charles B. Buffum Jr. '26, are deceased. He married Laura Kemper Toll in 1937. She survives, as do his daughters and grandchildren. To these we extend our sympathy in the sudden loss of husband and father.

The Class of 1930

George Alonzo Foyé III '30

GEORGE DIED after a long illness at his home in Cocoa Beach, Fla. Mar. 3, 1990. He was born in Jersey City, N.J., and prepared at Lawrenceville. Junior and senior years he roomed with Paul Maloney, and graduated with an

A.B. in architecture. He spent the Depression years in real estate in N.Y.C., and eventually toured Europe for two years studying architecture in the third dimension. After two uneventful years in the Army, George went west to join Richard Crowther and Associates in Denver, Colo., and to look for a home site similar to an area he loved in his travels—Innsbruck and the Austrian Tyrol. He was successful, and in 1946 married Beatrice Jacobs.

His affiliation with Richard Crowther lasted until 1962 when George and the family moved to Cocoa Beach, Fla., where he was appointed staff architect of the Kennedy Space Center. In 1973 George retired and became an accomplished watercolorist.

George's family, all of whom survive him, consists of his wife, Beatrice; a son, George A. IV; and grandson, George A. V; and a daughter, Suzanne Kit Fields. George had a penchant for making people laugh and will be missed by all who knew him. Our sympathies go out to his family and friends.

The Class of 1930

John Oliver Nelson '30

THE CLASS of 1930 referred to the Rev. Doctor John O. Nelson as "Jack" and knew him to be a very friendly, cooperative person who had a large interest in the Class, individually and collectively, and in Princeton. Jack died of congestive heart failure with complications Apr. 9, 1990, at Brookline Village, State College, Penn.

Jack was born in Pittsburgh, attended Shadyside Academy, roomed four years with Doug Hannah, was a member of Tower Club, and was very active in Triangle, Tiger, Philadelphia Society, Univ. Orchestra (viola), and chapel choir. Post graduate study included Edinburgh Univ., McCormick Seminary, Yale (Ph.D.), and Westminster (Lit.D.). He was ordained in the Brentwood Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, in 1935. He led an exceptionally full life, albeit within the area of the Christian Church. He was a professor at Yale Divinity School, 1950-64. He left a monument to his memory in the Kierkegaard Retreat Center, a 400-acre campus in the Poconos at Bangor, Penn., which he founded, supported financially, and managed, until it became the model for hundreds of other centers.

In 1961 Jack married Jane Bone, who died in 1981. Survivors include: a son, Richard; a sister, Margaret Hanson; a brother, Wenly D. '28 P65; a sister-in-law, Maxine Nelson w'34; a nephew, John E. Nelson II '65. We share in the gratitude that Jack had a good life.

The Class of 1930

John Baker Welborn '30

JOHN, SOMETIMES KNOWN as "J.B." or "Jess," died after a brief illness in Woodside, Calif. John grew up in Denver, Colo., and spent much of his life there. At Hotchkiss School he was active in hockey, football, and baseball, but at Princeton it was water polo and 150-lb. crew, plus the Philadelphia Society, the Two Foot Club, and Ivy. He roomed four years with Dave Lowry and lesser terms with Fred Schoellkopf and Henry Reeder. He graduated with a B.S. degree in economics.

John intended to go to Harvard Business School, but the First National Bank of Denver grabbed him soon after graduation, and he stayed with them until 1962, when he retired as executive V.P. His war service was in the Air Force, reaching the rank of captain. As a Coloradoan his hobbies were naturally skiing and riding, with emphasis on the latter when he and his wife moved to a ranch in Cora, Wyo.

Mary Helen Warren became his bride in 1937 and she died in May 1982. His survivors include two daughters, Ann Danner and Linda Lohse; a brother, Robert F. Welborn; and six grandchildren. To them we extend our sympathy in the loss of this fine man.

The Class of 1930

James Wallace Ely '32

WALLY ELY, a distinguished upstate New York banker and public servant, died July 3, 1990, as a result of a crippling stroke.

Except for a short stint in N.Y.C., Wally's entire business life was spent in Rochester. He joined the Security Trust Co. in 1935, and became its president in 1960. In 1965 he formed the first bank holding company in N.Y. State. He retired in 1983. He was a director of many corporations, including Rochester Gas & Electric, Gould Pumps, Sybron, Commercial Controls, Rochester Telephone, Page Airways, Davenport Machine, and others.

Wally's pro bono activities were bewildering in their number and variety. He was at various times president of Highland Hospital, the Rochester Chamber of Commerce, the Y.M.C.A., and the Eastman Dental Center. He was a member of the Federal Reserve Bank, Buffalo branch. He was a trustee of the Univ. of Rochester, the Davenport Hatch Foundation, the Third Presbyterian Church, and Harley School. He was chairman of the Brighton Planning and Zoning Board and president of the Natl. Robert Morris Assn. Few people have devoted more energy and skill to their communities than Wally did. For all that, he found time to be an avid fisherman and grower of roses.

Surviving him are his wife of 57 years, the former Edythe Parnham; two sons, Dr. James W. Ely Jr., and William Ely; a daughter, Susanne McQuilkin; a sister, Mrs. Frederick Vichert; a brother, D. Raymond Ely; ten grandchildren and one great-grandchild. Our sympathies go out to them all.

The Class of 1932

Herbert Fairfax Leary Jr. '32

FAX LEARY, one of our most distinguished lawyers, died at his home in Villanova, Penn., May 17, 1990. He graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Princeton and from the Harvard Law School. He practiced briefly in N.Y. before WWII, and in 1941, went to Washington to serve on the legal staff of the War Production Board, and from there was commissioned a lieutenant in the Army. By war's end he had become 1st colonel.

In 1946 Fax began a long career that combined teaching and the practice of law in Philadelphia, retiring from active practice as a partner in the firm of Saul, Ewing, Remick, and Saul, where he specialized as bond counsel for schools, municipalities, banks, and other businesses. He was the legal counsel for the General State Authority in Harrisburg.

Fax's greatest achievement, however, was not in the practice of law, but in the shaping of the law itself. He became an authority on the Uniform Commercial Code, and over the years drafted many of the provisions in the code. Fax was also an inspiring teacher. At various times he taught at Penn, Temple, Delaware, and Widener. Along the way he found time to act with Ralph Nader's Public Research Group, and to become a trustee of the bankrupt Pennsylvania Railroad. He was a member of the D.C., New York, Pennsylvania, and American Bar assns., and a life member of the American Law Inst. He received the Pennsylvania Bar's Fidelity Award in 1971. Survivors are his wife, Sarah; a daughter, Sally Fairfax Englund; two sons, Michael and Brian; a sister, Neville C. Scull; and five grandchildren. We join them in mourning the loss of this brilliant and dedicated man.

The Class of 1932

John Keeling Mills Jr. '32

OUR FRIEND and loyal classmate Jack Mills died at the Greenwich, Conn. hospital, Mar. 31, 1990. He came to us from South Kent School, and at college roomed for two years with King Irwin, and two years with Jake Herzog. He was a member of Cannon.

Jack spent 32 years with the Pitney Bowes Co. in a wide variety of executive positions, retiring in 1974 as V.P. in charge of the mailing equipment division. He served in the Army in WWII and was discharged a 1st colonel. For much of his life Jack was a fixture in Darien, Conn. But after his retirement he moved to his "old homestead" in Greenwich. He also had a condominium in St. Petersburg, Fla., where he spent his winters.

In 1941 Jack was married to the former Alice Pask. They brought up two daughters and had a fine life together until Alice began to suffer from multiple sclerosis. After a long and courageous battle with that disease, she died in 1983. Surviving are his daughters, Marsha M. Savage of St. Petersburg, and Barbara M. Kennedy of Darien. Also surviving are two sisters, Anne M. Nielsen and Jeanne M. Frederick, and five grandchildren. To all of them we send deepest sympathy in their loss.

The Class of 1932

Alfred Leonard Florman '34

AL FLORMAN, a pediatrician and professor of pediatrics, honored for his contributions to the Academy of Pediatrics, the N.Y. Academy of Medicine, and the March of Dimes, died July 16, 1990. At his death, the N.Y.U. School of Medicine, where he taught from 1963-1981, said, "His broad experience as a physician, his particular skills in infectious diseases, and his gentle manner enriched the training of hundreds of medical students and house staff, and elicited respect and admiration from his colleagues on the faculty." The North Shore (L.I.) Univ. Hospital, where he was the first director of pediatrics and "an important part of our hospital from its earliest days," praised "his devotion to the practice of medicine, his love for children, and his conscientiousness."

Since 1981 Al and his wife, the former Ruth Ludeke, whom he met while he was a resident and she a student nurse at Mt. Sinai Hospital in N.Y.C., and whom he married in 1944, lived in Albuquerque, where he served part-time at the Univ. of New Mexico Medical School. Ruth survives, as do three daughters, Debbie, Sue, and Amy, and five grandchildren. To them we offer our sincere sympathies.

The Class of 1934

Paul Fitting '35

PAUL FITTING died April 3, 1990. He was born Aug. 6, 1913, in Nutley, N.J. Paul went to Newark Academy where he played on the football, basketball, and baseball teams, and graduated cum laude.

Majoring in politics at Princeton, Paul graduated with First Group Honors. He was a member of Cloister Inn, the Glee Club, the Varsity Club, the American Whig Society, and the lacrosse team. Paul graduated from Harvard Law School in 1938.

Paul married Elizabeth Baker of Montclair, N.J., on June 25, 1938. They had the largest family among our classmates with seven sons, four daughters, and 31 grandchildren.

Then a career change came. Paul tried the cattle business at Yerington, Nev. However, the need of better schooling now for ten children, he returned to Alhambra, Calif., and there in 1958 Paul became a founding law partner of McKenna & Fitting. That remained Paul's life and the firm eventually grew to about 250 members. Paul opened up a San Francisco office in 1968 and remained there.

Paul was active in the Catholic Church, a member of the Knights of Malta, a regent of St. Mary's College. Paul loved walking; he walked two miles to work every day. He enjoyed walking and hiking with Betty and family members, taking trips with them, or staying weekends at his Stinson Beach, Calif., home.

Paul is survived by his wife, Betty, 11 children, 31 grandchildren, two sisters, Margaret and Dorothy, and one brother, David Fitting Jr. '42. To them the Class extends its sympathy.

The Class of 1935

Lloyd Allen Wilbur '35

LOYD ALLEN WILBUR died Oct. 24, 1989, in Trenton, N.J., the city where he was born. He was 78 and had suffered from spinal arthritis and other maladies for over 30 years. Wilbur came to Princeton from Peddie School in nearby Hightstown, but left at mid-term of freshman year and was on our address missing list until 1984. After a visit by a classmate, he spontaneously sang the chorus of "Old Nassau" as a goodbye.

Lloyd Wilbur was named for his grandfather, Dr. Lloyd Wilbur, a former superintendent of Mercer County Schools, for whom a part of Trenton is still known as the Wilbur section. His father, Dr. William L. Wilbur, Class of 1885, was a county sheriff, state assemblyman, and senator who maintained a medical practice in Hightstown. His uncle was George F. Wilbur, Class of 1879. Lloyd never married, and is survived by a cousin, Dr. Franklin L. Wilbur '19, and a niece.

The Class of 1935

Harry F. Bliss Jr. '36

HARRY PASSED away June 9, 1990, at his home in Naples, Fla. The Mike Curtos represented the Class at his memorial service June 29.

Harry prepared at Lawrenceville. At Princeton he majored in politics, was elected Phi Beta Kappa, and was a member of Tower Club. He graduated with high honors in 1939 from Harvard Law School, where he was an editor of the HARVARD LAW REVIEW.

Just before he entered service in WWII, he was a member of the N.Y.C. law firm of Milbank, Tweed. During the war, Harry was assigned to the Office of the Under Secretary of the Navy. He received the Navy's Bronze Star for combat in the Philippines. He retired in 1976 as president of Cyanamid Intl. In 1973 he received the title of commander in the Order of Merit of the Republic of Italy. Harry was a member of the Baltusrol Golf Club, the Short Hills Club, the Princeton Club of N.Y., Royal Poinciana Golf Club, and the Wilderness of C. C. Living in N.J. most of his life, he was a member of the Community Congregational Church of Short Hills, where he served as a trustee, Sunday school teacher, and Boy Scout leader.

He is survived by his wife, the former Jennette A. Hunter, and a son, Harry F. III. Harry lived a full life and will be remembered for his friendly manner and outstanding abilities.

The Class of 1936

Angus Crawford Randolph '36

ANGUS DIED Jan. 31, 1990, after a brief illness.

He prepared at Virginia Episcopal School where he was class valedictorian and a three-sport letterman. At Princeton he majored in biology, was on the varsity swimming and lightweight football teams, and was undergraduate treasurer of Cloister Inn. He also graduated from the U.Va. School of Medicine.

He served with distinction in WWII in the medical corps as a bomber group's flight surgeon. Before he retired in 1946 as a major, he received the Croix de Guerre, and the soldiers' and air medals.

From 1946 until his retirement in 1987, he was a psychiatry professor at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine. He also had a general practice and was greatly appreciated by his patients for playing his guitar while singing troubadour-type songs in the psychiatric ward of the Baptist Hospital.

He liked sailing and for years was active in the Boy Scouts of America at the troop level. He also enjoyed touring his area on his English bicycle.

Angus was predeceased by his wife, Marjorie, whom he married in 1941. He is survived by a son, Angus M. C.; daughters Marjorie A. Randolph, Alice Laurie Randolph, Elizabeth R. McNamara, and Ann R. Sandburg; and three grandchildren. The Class recognizes and respects his meaningful life.

The Class of 1936

Martin Hetzel Rittenhouse Jr. '36

MARTY was born Nov. 19, 1913, and died Dec. 1, 1989, in Boca Raton, Fla. He graduated cum laude from Mercersburg Academy where he was on the tennis and track teams. At Princeton he majored in geology, was manager of the varsity tennis team, and a member of Colonial.

He served five years in WWII as an officer, transferring from field artillery to the U.S. Army Ordnance Dept. He retired in 1945 as a major.

After the war, Marty engaged in several professions, including estate management, plastics manufacturing, corporate purchasing, real estate sales, yacht brokerage, and insurance.

Before finally moving to Florida, he and his wife, Edith, also operated a ranch in Gravette, Ark., in the Ozarks. A political conservative, his hobbies were training and showing quarter horses, tennis, and coin collecting. He was a V.P. of the Princeton Club of Southern Fla., and a member of its schools committee. He served as secretary of the Coral Harbour Yacht Club in the Bahamas.

Marty is survived by his wife, Edith Leiper Rittenhouse; a son, Martin III; a daughter, Edith R. Rose; and two grandchildren.

The Class of 1936

Robert MacPherson Wood '36

ON Feb. 17, 1990, we lost one of our best, "MacPhere," who died at 75 of a stroke at home.

A graduate of the Los Alamos Ranch School, at Princeton he majored in politics with honors. He played freshman polo, was lightweight crew manager, a cheerleader, and a member of Tiger Inn. He enjoyed leading roles in the Triangle Club's huge successes STAGS AT BAY and WHAT A RELIEF. He earned his L.L.B. at Yale and proudly sang with the Whiffenpoofs. In 1964 the Class honored him as one of three "Men of '36."

Mac retired as an Air Corps Lt. colonel. During his almost five-year service, he served considerable time in India and the China-Burma theaters. He was awarded the Bronze Star, air medal with oak leaf cluster and the Order of the British Empire. He served as general counsel of Sears Roebuck's southern territory from 1946 until 1978, after which he practiced law for eight years.

He is survived by his widow, Peggy Beattie; sons, Robert and Marshall; daughters, Peggy B. Wood and G. Temple Dowdeswell; brother Arthur M. '34 and four grandchildren.

He was known for his thoughtfulness, tremendous ability, service to community, and boundless enthusiasm. He will always be remembered for his devotion to family, Princeton, and Class.

The Class of 1936

Frederick E. Winans '37

QUIET PRINCETONIAN Fred Winans died May 11, 1990, in a nursing home. He left second cousins and has to be classified as a war casualty.

Fred was basketball manager and on the football and wrestling teams at Central High School in Pennington, N.J. At Princeton he majored in chemistry and was a Class "B" Scholarship winner two years. He was on the rugby team and the 150-pound football team, and a member of the Young People's Society and Gateway.

He started off as a chemist with the Shell Oil Company, then was a chemist and material inspector for the State of New Jersey and supervisor of the Ravenna (Ohio) Ordnance Plant, an ammonia nitrate plant for boom loading, operated by the Atlas Powder Company.

He went into the war in 1942 with the 79th chemical warfare company as a private, and won three Bronze Stars in campaigns in Normandy, Northern France, and Germany, but developed combat fatigue in the Battle of the Bulge and was discharged in June 1945, after two months in the hospital in England, going into the Veterans Hospital in Lyons, N.J. He was in retirement for years in Ormond Beach, Fla., but along the way conscientiously paid Class dues and Annual Giving and attended our 25th reunion. "I certainly appreciated the ALUMNI WEEKLY."

The Class of 1937

Balpa Lonnie Noojin Jr. '38

AFTER A prolonged illness, Lonnie Noojin's heart gave out on June 26, 1990. He was a successful lawyer and businessman in his hometown of Gadsden, Ala., and will be missed in his community.

Lonnie joined us in Sept. 1936, after two years at the Univ. of Alabama. He majored in politics and joined Key and Seal Club. After graduation he returned to the Univ. of Alabama for his law degree, then joined the Air Force, leaving in 1945 as a captain. Settling in Gadsden, he established his law practice and quickly became immersed in civic activities and good works. Among these were the country's first United Givers Fund, the Boy Scouts, Little Theater, the Gadsden Rotary, Y.M.C.A., and the First Methodist Church. He held directorships of American Natl. Bank and Great Southern Financial Corp. He was an outdoorsman when time permitted. A classmate calls him the best freshwater bass fisherman he ever saw.

Lonnie is survived by his wife, the former Rebecca Beeland; two daughters, Rebecca N. Dill and Patricia N. Dudley; and a son, Balpa L. Noojin III. They have our condolences.

The Class of 1938

Stanley Jay Sarnoff '38

THE CLASS OF 1938 lost one of its truly outstanding members with the death of Stan Sarnoff May 23. How most unfortunate that a pioneer in cardiac research should succumb to heart failure. An eminent professor of medicine said, "All current concepts of the clinical physiology of circulation and the factors which control the work and the functional performance of the heart were the products of the experiments in Dr. Sarnoff's laboratories."

Stan came to us from Peddie. In addition to his strong interest in medicine as an undergraduate, he was captain of the fencing team. He obtained his M.D. at Johns Hopkins. After following in his father's footsteps in surgery, he switched to research, and ultimately became the first chief of the N.I.H. Laboratory of Cardiovascular Physiology. Subsequently, he founded a public company, Survival Technology, of which he was chairman and C.E.O.

Stan was widely admired and respected by his classmates. In 1957, when the Class originated its Distinguished Service Award, he became its first recipient. He was devoted to Class affairs, and in addition to his many philanthropies, he was always mindful of his commitment to the University.

We shall miss him very much. We extend to his wife, Lolo, and to his children, Daniela and Robert, our deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1938

Henry Moir Cathles '39

MOOSE DIED Mar. 21, 1990, at his home in West Simsbury, Conn., where he had lived ever since his marriage to Dorothy Bentley Boger in 1972. Before that his home was in Scarsdale and his business in New York with North American Reassurance Co., from which he retired as V.P. in 1957. In Simsbury he served on the finance committee of the Simsbury Visiting Nurse Assn., was a member of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, the Hopmeadow Country Club, and was on the board of the Princeton Alumni Assn. of Central Conn.

Always proud of his Scottish heritage, Moose once recalled, "Golf has been my lifelong love since age nine, when I started out in Scotland with my grandfather's mashie, midiron, and brassie. At that tender age I won a putting contest at St. Andrews."

Moose enjoyed having his brother Lawrence '35 living just up the road, and Doty's daughter Debra (Boger) McAlenney with her two children nearby. His own two daughters, Beverly and Sheridan Cathles, and two grandsons live in California. He is also survived by his sister, Dorothy Kenchington, and two stepsons, Willett and Bentley Boger. To Doty and all his family, we offer our sincere sympathy.

The Class of 1939

John Wellmer Hanson '39

JOHN DIED of lymphoma May 8, 1990, at his home in Huntington, L.I. At the time of his death he was still active in the companies he had founded or acquired over the years in the business of importing industrial oils. In 1948, after WWII Naval service in the Pacific and a short stint with W.R. Grace, he founded the J.W. Hanson Company. In 1974 he acquired the Industrial Oil Production Corp. and George Degen and Co. Finally in 1984 he also acquired A.C.T., a manufacturer of pollution control devices for the metal plating industry. Recently he wrote to us, "It seems natural to me to go on working. I am aware of retirement and do wonder if I'm missing something." John never did miss much. He took time out to travel with his children and stepchildren. He regularly played tennis four times a week and exercised to keep in what he called "wrestling trim."

John and his second wife, Virginia Ganly, were married in 1978. Gini had two daughters, Jennifer and Allyson Burian, whom John welcomed as his own family, with his daughter, Polly Greenberg, and son, Blake. All have lost a man of courage, good humor, and unbeatable spirit. We share that loss, and extend to Gini and John's family our deep sympathy.

The Class of 1939

Harry Joseph Sohmer Jr. '40

HARRY DIED from a heart attack May 23, 1990. Harry is survived by his widow, Anne; three children, Harry J. III, Anne D. Sohmer, and Robert H. J.; and a brother, Robert H. Sohmer.

Harry was born in N.Y.C., and his father was in the Class of 1907. He attended Hotchkiss and majored in modern languages at Princeton, where he played freshman soccer and squash, and was a member of Triangle and Charter Clubs. Throughout the Hotchkiss and Princeton years, he roomed with George Cowen.

During WWII, Harry was chief inspector of the W&J Sloane CG4 Glider Program. His remaining business career was devoted entirely to Sohmer & Co., the family piano manufacturing concern founded by his grandfather. Harry eventually became president of the company and was finally forced to sell in 1982. He had been director of the Natl. Piano Manufacturing Assn., trustee of the United Furniture Workers AFL/CIO Pension Fund, director of the Harrob Realty Co., as well as being associated with the Westchester Conservatory of Music.

Harry was a devoted family man who possessed a delightful, dry sense of humor, and was a loyal friend to many and to Princeton. How fitting that a Sohmer piano was used throughout for the musical entertainment at our recent 50th reunion. To his entire family, the Class sends its sympathy and condolences.

The Class of 1940

Alexander F. Shaw '43

SANDY PASSED away in his sleep June 14, 1990, a victim of cancer. He was 68. Mickey Howard, his Princeton roommate, who had known Sandy for over 60 years, said it all when he wrote, "The Class has lost a wonderful person."

Born in Providence, R.I., Sandy lived in Wellesley, Mass., Key Largo, Fla., and had a home on Cape Cod.

On campus Sandy belonged to Cottage Club, and served as its president during his senior year.

A Marine Corps veteran of WWII, he served in the Pacific and rose to the rank of major. Holder of three Purple Hearts, he was wounded on Kwajalein, Saipan, and two Jima.

An independent investment adviser before his retirement, Sandy was a member of the New York Stock Exchange from 1963-1965.

He leaves his wife, the former Gail Webster Dawley; three sons, Dr. Alexander F. Shaw IV, Dr. Jeffrey W. Shaw, and Dr. Eric D. Shaw; a daughter, Alison H. Shaw; and a brother, Robert Shaw. To all the survivors, the Class offers its most sincere condolences.

The Class of 1943

Simon John McPherson II '44

SANDY PASSED away May 22, 1990, after a six-year battle with cancer. He was 69. He never let it put him down. His faith in his Lord and his love of Grace and their family left him, as he reviewed his life, "with few regrets and thanks to our Lord too numerous to mention." He had an abiding sense of charity, giving generously of himself throughout his life. A member of the Presbyterian Church in Morristown, N.J., Sandy served in many capacities, including elder and Bethel leader. He was '44's Class agent for six years.

Born in Hartford, Conn., Sandy grew up in Canada. He came to Princeton with the wonderful gang from Lawrenceville. He roomed in Lockhart with John E. Lee those first two years. Sandy left Princeton to serve during WWII, and returned with Grace and a baby son to graduate. He worked for Shell Oil Co. for 35 years, retiring in Dec. 1981.

To Grace, his mate of 47 years; sons, John F. IV and James A.; daughters, Sandra Stout and Anne MacNeal; sisters, Martha Nunn and Joan Blankinship, 13 grandchildren and one great-grandchild, and all number of Princeton cousins; the Class extends its heartfelt sympathies. We mourn with them and may the good Lord see the name McPherson once again on Princeton rolls.

The Class of 1944

Peter deRopp Wood '45

PETER WOOD died at his residence in East Quogue, L.I., N.Y., Feb. 28, 1990. He was 67.

Woodie entered Princeton from Valley Forge Military Academy, Penn., following in the footsteps of his brother Eric '42, and roomed in 27 Edwards with Warren Fugitt, Ken Phillips, and Peyton Woodson. He was a member of Key and Seal.

Woodie's war service was with the First Armored Division and with the O.S.S. Following the war he organized his own construction firm in Wayne, Penn., but relocated to Sarasota, Fla., becoming active in real estate development. Woodie also worked for many years as an engineer in Brazil.

Woodie married Lenora Keir (Sarah Lawrence '45), and they had a son, W. Scott Robertson II. Woodie sold his construction and real estate operations in 1970 and enjoyed almost 20 years of retirement, as he and Lenora traveled extensively. Woodie developed both interest and activity in behalf of the Nature Conservancy.

In addition to Lenora and Dr. Robertson, Woodie is survived by two grandchildren, Andrew and Audrey Robertson; by a sister, Eleanor Wood Dye; and a brother, Alec Wood. To all of them the Class extends condolences.

The Class of 1945

Bruce Willis Nichols '51

BRUCE DIED May 17, 1990, at his home in N.Y.C. of prostate cancer.

To his classmates, Bruce was a genial friend, a brilliant lawyer, and an enthusiastic and generous member of '51, but one who chose quiet commitment.

Bruce was a senior partner in the N.Y. law firm of Davis, Polk, and Wardwell. He specialized in banking law and was instrumental in the 1958 merger of J.P. Morgan & Co. into the Guaranty Trust Co. He was the principal legal adviser to the merged Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. He was also involved in the protracted negotiations for the release of U.S. hostages from Iran in 1980.

Bruce came to Princeton from Manhasset High School in N.Y., where he was valedictorian. He roomed with Bob Eddy at Princeton, was a Phi Beta Kappa, a member of Whig-Clio, and a graduate of the School of Public and International Affairs. He also won the Milbank Prize.

He graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1954; he was articles editor of the HARVARD LAW REVIEW.

Bruce is survived by his mother, Marjorie, his brother, William, and two nieces. The Class salutes a quietly effective gentleman and a friend.

The Class of 1951

Arthur McCormack '54

ON MAY 9, 1990, in Sao Paulo, Arthur died as a result of a motor accident. He leaves a widow, Theresa, and three children, Arthur Malachi, Sarah Siobhan, and David Sean.

Arthur was born in Rio de Janeiro Mar. 15, 1932. In 1938, the family returned to the U.S., where Arthur studied at Swarthmore High and graduated from Princeton in 1954 with a B.A. in economics. He later received an M.B.A. from N.Y.U. He worked in the New York office of McCann-Erickson Advertising for six years, transferring to the London office in 1962. In 1977, he went to McCann's Sao Paulo office. Later he joined Heublein do Brasil, and in 1988, opened the first Brazil Office Center, with his wife and partner Theresa. Arthur also took an active interest in extracurricular activities and the P.T.A. at St. Paul's School, where his three children are currently students.

Arthur was a sensitive person with a keen mind. He is greatly missed by his wife, his children, and friends in many parts of the world.

The Class of 1954

Kent Hamilton Parker Jr. '55

KENT PARKER died Apr. 28, 1990 after a prolonged struggle with cancer. Kent arrived at Princeton from New Trier High School in Winnetka, Ill. While at Princeton, he joined Court Club and played French horn in the Triangle Club orchestra. Kent left in junior year to serve three years in the U.S. Army. He received his degree from the Univ. of Illinois and then earned his master's at Indiana Univ. Returning east to N.Y.C., Kent joined Citicorp and was employed there for 27 years. At the time of his death, he was a senior trust officer. Throughout his life, Kent had a great love for music—orchestral and operatic. We remember his reserved but great sense of humor, his brilliant but subtle mind. In N.Y. he was active at the Fifth Ave. Presbyterian Church.

Kent is survived by his parents, Kent and Margaret Parker; three brothers, David, Frederic, and Wesby; and four sisters, Sarah, Mary, Margaret, and Grace.

To all the family we share their loss and memory.

The Class of 1955

Herbert Jennings Proctor '58

OUR CLASSMATE Herb PROCTOR passed away May 12, 1990, after a long illness. At the time of his death Herb was professor of surgery at the U.N.C. School of Medicine.

At Princeton, Herb roomed with Don Alcock, Bob Bryer, and Phil Ambrose. Majoring in biology with an eye toward pre-med, Herb was also a member of Tower. After Princeton, Herb went directly to N.Y.U. College of Medicine, from which he graduated in 1962. At that time, he and Barbara moved to Chapel Hill, where Herb did his residency. Next Herb was called to Naval service during the Vietnam War. A year at the Division of Experimental Surgery at Bethesda Naval Hospital, and another year in charge of the Shock Research Unit at Danang shaped Herb's teaching and research interests for the rest of his life. Herb founded the trauma service at U.N.C. in 1972. Another of his accomplishments was to have founded the first air helicopter ambulance program in North Carolina, which he did by invoking the assistance of the Military Assisted Service Transport at Fort Bragg.

In 1989 Herb received the Best Teacher Award in the Dept. of Surgery. In March of this year, Herb received the medical school's alumni assn. Distinguished Professor Award.

Herb is survived by his wife, Barbara; his mother, Florence; his son, Chris; and his daughter, Julia. To them, the Class of 1958 extends its deepest sympathies.

The Class of 1958

Stephen C. Macaleer '63

THE CLASS of 1963 lost one of its most distinguished classmates when Steve Macaleer died of lymphoma Feb. 8, 1990, in Durham, N.C.

Steve, one of six brothers to attend Princeton, grew up in Landsdowne, Penn., and attended Landsdowne-Aldan High School, where he played varsity football and wrestled. At Princeton, he was a three-year varsity wrestler, an officer of Cannon, a chemical engineer, and an N.R.O.T.C. officer. In 1964, he married his college sweetheart Helen Lee Hunter. Immediately after graduation he became a Navy jet pilot and flew over 200 carrier-based missions over North Vietnam in an A-4 Skyhawk attack plane, winning numerous medals, including the Distinguished Flying Cross. In 1969 he joined his brother Jim '55 at fledgling Shared Medical Systems, which with his help became the largest company of its kind in the country. A specialist at sales, eventually Steve became V.P. of S.M.S.'s marketing.

Always humble about his many accomplishments and generosity, Steve was dynamic in Class affairs, serving as reunion chairman for our 20th reunion, and during the five years leading up to our record-breaking 25th, he led us as Class president.

In 1989, he moved his family to North Carolina, where he had begun the challenge of a new job. To his family, Helen Lee, and the children, Andy '88, Lee, Greg, and Carey, the Class extend sympathies for their and our deep loss.

The Class of 1963

Paul Lippincott '63

PAUL LIPPINCOTT died at his home Apr. 24, 1990. He came to Princeton from St. Paul's School, preceded at Princeton by his father, his brother Walter '61, and his uncle Bill Lippincott '41, who was the legendary dean of students during our tenure.

At Princeton, Paul majored in art and archaeology and was a member of Ivy. For four years after graduation he served in the Navy. After the service, he married Lisa Baker. They had two sons, William and Alexander. In 1968 Paul went to work at the Crown Non-Ferrous Foundry, a family business specializing in castings for ships, where he served as president from 1972 until the company was sold in 1985. Paul became sales manager for the newly formed company.

An enthusiast for family history and the restoration of old houses, Paul had a strong sense of tradition and place, and was a loyal supporter of both St. Paul's and Princeton. An extremely convivial man with a marvelous sense of humor, Paul enjoyed entertainment and keeping alive the bonds of school-day friendships. He was an extraordinary cook of gourmet cuisines, a talent he exercised as a member of the Rabbit Club in Philadelphia, where the membership is responsible for planning and preparing the weekly meals. He was also a member of the Philadelphia Club. Paul had a great fondness for his boyhood haunts of Northeast Harbor, Mount Desert Island, Me., where he is buried. To his family, the Class extends its deepest sympathies.

The Class of 1963

Lawrence O. Sneed III '75

LAWRENCE O. SNEED died Jan. 20, 1990, of brain cancer. An extraordinarily knowledgeable and wonderfully witty gentleman, Lawrence came to Princeton from St. Christopher's School in his boyhood hometown of Richmond, Va. While at Princeton, he majored in philosophy and was a devoted member of Ivy.

After graduating from U.Va. law school in 1979, he practiced law in Washington, D.C. In 1983 he joined Dowe, Lohnes, and Albertson, where, with David Bantleon, he founded the firm's banking and financial institutions practice. He was a partner at the time of his death. A connoisseur with many and varied interests, he possessed noteworthy collections of old silver, antique carpets, paintings, and rare books.

Lawrence maintained close friendships with many classmates after graduation, and, characteristically resplendent in starched shirt and bow tie, often returned to campus for Reunions. His classmates will miss his quiet and precise humor, and the twinkle in his eye.

To his father and mother, Dr. and Mrs. L. O. Sneed Jr., and to his brother, Charles, the Class extends its deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1975

Reading the Moscow Press

IT DOESN'T take a Westerner long to develop Soviet habits. For two months last year I lived in an apartment building in Moscow with a Russian family. Being integrated into their lives meant developing an endless curiosity about what people were lined up to buy and an overwhelming desire to purchase anything that was being sold, if only in a feeble attempt to contribute to the household. I have been developing these talents over the last thirteen years in my frequent travels to the U.S.S.R., but this was the first time I was allowed to stay with friends, rather than being restricted to a hotel. At the hotels, food and goods are much more readily available, so the tourists don't even have to go into the stores to see the empty shelves and surly clerks. They have no idea about real Soviet life.

The line psychology hit me early during this visit. I was in Moscow to do research at an institute, so every day I had to take a forty-minute subway ride across town. Like subway riders the world over, I wanted something to read. I remember well my pre-Gorbachev visits: reading any of the Soviet papers was a chore left to those who had made the luckless decision to major in Soviet studies in college. (I was one of them.) But glasnost has changed all that.

Today, Izvestiya, the official newspaper of the Soviet government, is actually difficult to find most mornings. It is in great demand and sells out quickly because it has become relatively "reformist." Pravda, the Communist Party's newspaper, however, remains rather stodgy, and has dropped in circulation, so if I arrived at the kiosk late in the morning, my choices would be Pravda and Pravda. It is clear that the ideological battle lines between publications have been drawn. Now, if I am in line at a kiosk and the woman in front of me asks for Pravda and Sovetskaya Rossiya, I immediately think, "Ah, not a reformer."

On those late mornings in line at the kiosk, faced with no copies of Izvestiya (not to mention the totally unobtainable Moscow News or the wildly popular Ogonyok, the most daring reformist magazine today), I took to buying and reading anything else that was available. I devoured copies of Rural Life, Gudok (the official newspaper of the U.S.S.R. railways), Socialist Industry, and even Soviet Sport (in desperate moments).

The most interesting publication turned out to be the advertising supplement to the newspaper Evening Moscow. For eight kopeks (about two cents), one can get a glimpse of real Moscow life. This supplement contains advertisements placed by official Soviet organizations, by regular people, and by the fledgling "co-operative" (meaning capitalist) movement. It addresses the needs and wants of a population living with a badly deteriorating economic system, but with a bitter flavor of the old "showboating" and the reality of creeping desperation.

"If I arrived at the kiosk late in the morning, my choices would be Pravda and Pravda."

The advertising supplement of December 16, 1989, has on its cover a lovely (deserted! impossible!) perfume store. The headline reads, "We Wish You Happy Shopping!" (Isn't that an oxymoron already?) It continues: "Magical New Year's Eve is approaching—a night of fun, wonder, and of course surprises! The gift your dear ones want so much will bring much happiness; they'll be expecting it to be under the festive, decorated tree. And are you prepared for this 'marvel'? If not, hurry! We've prepared this list of all Moscow's stores, where you can find your gifts. Look at their lighted and painted windows, how the popular trade centers in every region are simply bustling with activity!" Then, a dose of reality. In big letters, as if to assure shoppers that all this excitement is warranted and that these wonderful gifts actually exist, it says: "PRE-NEW YEAR'S COMMERCE HAS BEEN GREATLY EXPANDED." Really? Where?

Let's turn to reality: the want ads placed by Muscovites in the same issue. The column headings are typical: "Want to exchange," "Want to buy or sell," "I propose to," "I give lessons," "Services," "Medical help," and so on. What are people looking to purchase? Besides the inevitable wishes for a (cheap, convenient, comfortable) country home or apartment, their needs are somewhat unusual. One wants a portable television ("may be broken"). Another explicitly seeks a broken VCR or tape recorder. (My Soviet friends told me that such a request was the advertiser's only hope of getting one at all. Who would sell one in good repair? How could they ever replace it?) Another wishes to buy the body of a Zhiguli (a Soviet car). At least one-fourth of the ads are specific requests for "imported" goods: frames for ladies' glasses (size given), a sewing machine "zig zag," a "Roleks" watch.

What are they selling? Again, ladies' glasses (prescription given), a velvet tablecloth, a belt for a Tula-brand sewing machine. One person proposes to sell in the same ad a collection of Stalin's works as well as Ogonyok for the years 1988 and 1989. (The latter is so popular and so difficult to find that the seller probably figured that a group sale was the only way to rid himself of the former.) Many people are offering puppies; my favorite was the Saint Bernard "from imported sire, with a wonderful genealogy." God knows how that came about!

Some of the most interesting ads in this supplement are those placed by the cooperatives. For example, the Acquaintance cooperative will introduce you to other people in Moscow. Acquaintance presents a fantastic list of possibilities. They offer their services to individuals—both Soviets and foreigners—and can arrange introductions in any number of ways: they'll provide addresses and telephone numbers (useful, because there is no phone book in Moscow); they'll arrange meetings in cafés, at the theater, on a trip, in a study group, or at a concert, an exhibit, or a museum. The goals (you pick) are as follows: "joint realization of leisure; discussion of mutual interests; marriage." They'll also find you a business partner, help you find a job, and carry out psychological and medical diagnoses. All this for fifteen rubles ($2.55) per person.

—Deborah A. Kaple GS

A doctoral candidate in the Department of Sociology, Kaple lived in Moscow while doing research for her thesis on Soviet and Chinese industrial management.

TO SEND A GIFT OF ABSOLUT® VODKA (EXCEPT WHERE PROHIBITED BY LAW) CALL 1-800-243-3787
PRODUCT OF SWEDEN 40 AND 50% ALC/VOL (80 AND 100 PROOF). 100% GRAIN NEUTRAL SPIRITS. © 1990 CARILLON IMPORTERS, LTD., TEANECK, N.J.
BY PERMISSION FROM WEBSTER'S NINTH NEW COLLEGIATE DICTIONARY © 1989 BY MERRIAM-WEBSTER INC.

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

OCTOBER 24, 1990

TIGERS AT OXFORD

The Maclean Fellow Program

Michael E. Smith '65, writer, lawyer, and Director of the Vera Institute of Justice, has been named this year's Maclean Fellow, and will be on campus from November 4 to 8. The Maclean Fellow programs, sponsored in 1990 by the Alumni Council and Mathey College, bring to campus for several days alumni/alumnae who have made contributions of particular distinction in their career or in service to the community. While on campus, the Maclean Fellow immerses himself/herself in the life of the University — attending classes, giving formal and informal talks, and meeting with groups of faculty, staff, and students.

Past Maclean Fellows include: in 1986, William D. Ruckelshaus '55, former administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Federal Bureau of Investigation; 1987, Admiral William J. Crowe, Jr. *65, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; 1988, John Gregory Dunne '54, one of America's most prominent literary figures, and in 1989, Susan M. Wolf '75 teacher, writer, and lecturer on legal and ethical issues in medicine and biology.

The Maclean Fellowship honors the memory of John Maclean, Jr., Class of 1816, 10th President of the University and founder of Princeton's first alumni organization.

NOMINATIONS

We would like your nominations for next year's Maclean Fellow.

I nominate the following individual(s) for consideration by your committee as a Maclean Fellow:

Name _____ Class _____

Remarks _____

Submitted by _____ Date _____

Address _____

Telephone _____

RETURN TO:

Landon Jones '66, Chair
Maclean Fellow Program, P.O. Box 291, Princeton, New Jersey 08544

Alumni
Princeton

Council
University

Digitized by Google

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

CONTINUING THE ALUMNI PRINCETONIAN, FOUNDED IN 1894

FEATURE

- 7 PRINCETONIANS AT OXFORD
Postgraduate Study at the "World's Greatest University" Provides More Than an Education
by Carol Zall '88

DEPARTMENTS

- 2 LETTERS
- 4 PRINCETON NOTEBOOK
*Ivy Club Admits Women as Members;
Elm Club Merges with Dial and Cannon*
- 6 ON THE CAMPUS
Princeton's Other Brew
by Gayle Wald GS
- 11 BOOKS
- 13 SPORTS
Football Beats Brown and Fordham, Loses to Colgate; Field Hockey Deals with Inexperience
- 18 CLASS NOTES
- 35 MEMORIALS
- 40 FIRST PERSON
The Unspeakable in Pursuit of the Uneatable
by Carlo Cannell '85

On The Cover

Detail of the Mather Sun Dial, a replica of the Turnbull Sun Dial at Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The bird is a pelican, the religious symbol of Corpus Christi.
Photo by Stacy M. Wszola.

FROM THE ARCHIVES

Erected in 1907, the Mather Sun Dial was a gift from Sir William Mather, the governor of Victoria University, in Manchester, England, to "symbolize the connection between Oxford and Princeton" and between Great Britain and the United States. Our picture is undated, but from the dress of the students hurrying through McCosh Courtyard, it would appear to have been taken in the 1950s.

J. I. MERITT '66, Editor

ANDREW C. MYTELKA '85, Managing Editor
DAVID WILLIAMSON III '84, Staff Writer
NUALA O'CONNOR '89, Assistant Editor
STACY M. WSZOLA, Art Director
NANCY S. MACMILLAN, Business Manager
LOLLY O'BRIEN, Advertising Director
R. T. HOWELL, Production Manager
LORRAINE DONEKER, Graphic Assistant

BOARD OF EDITORIAL DIRECTION

EDWARD R. WEIDLEIN '68, Chairman
CHRISTOPHER V. CONNELL '71 • LISA B. BELKIN GELD '82
LONDON Y. JONES '66 • ELLIOTT D. LEE '74
PATRICIA H. MARKS '72 • JOHN A. MCPHIE '53

PUBLICATION BOARD

DOROTHY L. BEDFORD '78, Chairman
ROBERT K. DUNKER '69 • ROBY HARRINGTON III '51
WALTER H. LIPPINCOTT, JR. '60 • PETER O. PRICE '62
PETER G. SMITH '46 • DANIEL N. WHITE '65

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE

ROBERT F. SENNOTT, JR.
Ivy League Magazine Network
254 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001 • (212) 684-5603

LOCAL ADVERTISING/PRINCETON EXCHANGE

LOLLY O'BRIEN (609) 258-4886

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is an independent magazine supported by alumni class subscriptions and by paid advertising. Its purpose is to record news of the alumni and at the same time to review without partiality the achievements and problems of the administration, the faculty, and the student body of Princeton University. The views expressed in the Alumni Weekly are those of signed contributors or the editor and do not necessarily represent official positions of the university.

PUBLISHED BY

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540

Telephone (609) 258-4885

TWX 510-685-2306 UNIV PRESS PRIN • Fax (609) 258-6305

ELECTRONIC PAW BBS: (609) 258-3602

Materials can be transmitted to our offices via telecommunications, using the upload facility in the file-transfer section of the Electronic PAW computer bulletin board system. Its protocols are 300/1200/2400 baud, eight data bits, one stop bit, and no parity. It is online 24 hours a day.

PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY (ISSN 0148-8270)

Vol. 91, No. 3, October 24, 1990
Printed by William Byrd Press, Richmond, Va. Annual subscription $19.50 (foreign postage $5 extra); single copies $1.50. All orders must be paid in advance. Copyright © 1990 Princeton University Press. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Second-class postage paid at Richmond, Va., and at additional mailing office.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to PAW Address Changes, 3175 Princeton Pike, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

Moldy Figs, Young Turks

Three cheers for the Alumni Council! If it can provoke outrage in both the Moldy Figs and the Young Turks with its service awards to Sally Frank '80 and John Bitner '38, then it must be doing something right (Letters, September 12). I suspect the only thing that the objectors to these two awards have in common is their dislike of the council's decisions.

A great university should produce the kind of debate and controversy that was evident in the letters that appeared in PAW objecting to the awards. The conflict of ideas is an important part of the intellectual process, and it is heartening to know that the seeds planted during our undergraduate years produce such contentious blooms as we grow older.

It is distressing to note, however, that alumni continue to use threats to Annual Giving as a tool to stifle controversial actions by university administrators and fellow alumni. I'm particularly surprised that the award to Sally Frank should provoke a call for a boycott of Alumni Day. This sort of reaction indicates that some of our colleagues did not profit as greatly as one would have hoped from the intellectual ferment to which they were exposed as undergraduates. They would rather pick up their marbles and go home.

As long as the Princeton community provokes discussion and debate, we will know Old Nassau is alive and well. God help us if the Alumni Council as well as the university itself stop generating controversy.

THOMAS L. VAN DER VOORT '57
Alexandria, Va.

Having missed your July 18 issue, I was unaware that Sally Frank '80 had received an alumni service award. Fortunately, I was clued in by the raving letters written in response.

For every alumnus out there thinking of withdrawing his support for Princeton, there is someone like myself who can only now consider making gifts to the university. The true affront to the Princeton community is not what Sally Frank has done but rather that the finest university in the country continues to be a cozy home for institutionalized sexism. These people are shocked and offended? Funny, that's just how I felt several years ago, when I watched the then president of Tiger Inn explain on television his club's policy in the name of "freedom of association," apparently blind to the irony that, as an African-American, he would have been denied entrance to the very same club not so long ago. And I still remember the embarrassment of telling friends at other schools that, yes, nearly twenty years after the university had become coeducational, many of my classmates strongly resisted efforts to modify the school song in order to accommodate women as well as men. Tradition can be a fine thing. But there are plenty of us who love Princeton not for what it used to be but for what it has the potential to become. Thanks to those dreaded "Sally Franks of this world," Princeton has come a little bit closer. Go ahead and boycott Alumni Day—I won't miss you.

MARC J. FAGEL '88
Chicago, Ill.

I was saddened and disheartened to read the scathing criticisms of Sally Frank '80's alumni service award. In the ten years since she graduated, Sally Frank has generously given of her time and personal resources to change Princeton. When most of us who held controversial views about Princeton would have given up and gone on with the new priorities of our adult lives, Sally cared enough to continue fighting for what she believed would be a better institution. Her fight was not easy or popular or lucrative. Nor could it have been pleasant for her to be ostracized by people and an institution that she cared about deeply.

Whether or not one agrees with her views, no one can argue that Sally lacks integrity and a selfless spirit in the pursuit of an ideal. Such a pursuit does not come cheaply, and I hope that Princeton has not gotten to the point where alumni service awards are granted or withheld based upon promised Annual Giving dollars.

As an active alumna, I do not regard her award as a "slap in the face to the many women who have served the university," as one of your letter-writers put it. And as a parent, I hope that my child may someday show half the integrity and commitment to an ideal that Sally Frank has demonstrated. I laud the Alumni Council for choosing to honor her.

SALLY BLOUNT WHITE '83
Evanston, Ill.

Regarding the letters from alumni evincing various shades of disgust over the alumni service award presented to Sally Frank '80: For my part, Ms. Frank's efforts and the Alumni Council's decision to honor her represent an affirmation of Princeton's capacity to move beyond the inequities of the past and to embrace a fairer future. It is to that vision of Princeton, as well as its extraordinary history, that we owe our allegiance.

PIERRE M. GENTIN '89
New Haven, Conn.

The reaction to Sally Frank '80's alumni service award recalls the furor evoked by the announcement that Princeton was to become coeducational. Faithful alumni girded their loins and threatened to make no more contributions to their alma mater unless this heinous decision was rescinded. They also organized Concerned Alumni of Princeton, publisher of Prospect, a magazine that beseeched alumni to get on the bandwagon of opposition. Once the benefits of coeducation were understood, however, Prospect went to its well-deserved death.

The reactions to both coeducation and the award to Frank exemplify the eagerness of alumni to chastise Princeton for any decision with which they do not agree. I wish that more alumni would understand that Princeton is a great university, run by an outstanding administration and capable trustees. PAW's announcement in the September 12 issue of Laurance Rockefeller '32's gift of $21 million would seem to indicate that he, for one, has no qualms about the caliber of the university.

SYDNEY G. STEVENS '30
Hightstown, N.J.

On behalf of all alumni who have served in R.O.T.C., and especially those members who have died in our nation's wars, I would like to say that Robert Spencer '87's letter in the September 12 PAW turns my stomach.

Doesn't Mr. Spencer know that the U.S. Supreme Court has agreed that the armed services need not admit homosexuals? And that R.O.T.C. trains men and women so they can join those services in time of our nation's need? The decision to honor Jack Bitner '38 for his work in behalf of R.O.T.C. was overdue, and his alumni service award is richly deserved.

FRANK SCHAFFER '45
Greenwich, Conn.

The writer is a former chairman of the Alumni Council.—ED.

SHARE

We would like to address several points made in your September 12 Notebook about the resignation of SHARE director Myra Hindus.

First, S.O.S. (Supporters of SHARE) is a diverse group of undergraduates, graduate students, members of the faculty and staff, and administrators, not just the students who participated in last April's sit-in. We are all asking for a strong SHARE office with two full-time positions, not "counselors," a term you used that limits SHARE's crucial mission. In addition to confidential counseling, SHARE provides preventive education, legal advice to survivors of sexual violence, and suggestions to the administration about necessary revisions in the university's rules and regulations on these issues.

The article mentions "rumors" that Myra Hindus was involved in some way in the sit-in. The only people we know of who have heard these rumors are members of the administration. Myra Hindus did not know of the sit-in before it occurred. The sit-in was organized completely by students who felt that such action was necessary.

One final oversimplification in the article is that members of S.O.S. simply protested. Most supporters of SHARE did not take part in the sit-in; we try to be nonconfrontational and to work through established channels whenever possible, but at the time of the sit-in, all existing channels had been exhausted. For years, the administration had been unresponsive to testimony by survivors of sexual assaults, unanimous resolutions by the Undergraduate Student Government and the Graduate Student Union, and a petition signed by four thousand members of the university community. An alumnus even pledged half the needed funds for the second full-time position, but the administration refused the gift, declaring that the issue was not monetary. Since the sit-in, members of S.O.S. have continued to work through established channels, but to no avail.

The goal for students remains a second full-time position to insure the continuity and preservation of the SHARE program. For the last two years, the university has been attempting to reassign SHARE's responsibilities to other offices. S.O.S. will not allow the turnover of SHARE's staff to set the program back to where it was at the beginning, three years ago.

TARA S. CREAN '93 and BENJAMIN EDELMAN '93
Princeton, N.J.

For me, the pervasiveness of rape, assault, and other forms of sexual harassment at Princeton was a disturbing aspect of what was in many ways a rich and rewarding undergraduate experience. Any weekend evening spent on Prospect Avenue made it clear that my university had a particularly vicious problem with sexual harassment—one might even term it an epidemic.

I was pleased to see Princeton begin to come to terms with this distasteful heritage through the establishment of the SHARE program, but I was disappointed to learn that the university has now deprived SHARE of the resources it needs to accomplish its task. The problems of sexual harassment, sexual assault, and sexism are not marginal to Princeton. Rather, such ills have long been central to the culture of the university and must be faced directly. I urge the university to fund a second full-time position in the SHARE program.

JOEL M. SIPRESS '86
Carboro, N.C.

PRINCO

Your article on PRINCO, the university's endowment managers, in the September 12 PAW attempted to deal with an obviously complex subject in a short amount of space. The breezy, laudatory treatment, however, raised more questions than it answered.

To say that one man, essentially, handles $2.7 billion sounds very efficient, but the involvement of twenty-eight outside managers must make for a substantial added expense. PRINCO may not have the in-house bureaucracy that burdens other university investment companies, but that's because the bureaucracy is shifted elsewhere. In the trade-off, supervision and cohesion are bound to suffer. Also, given today's investment environment, PRINCO's diversification into foreign securities, real estate, and savings-and-loan institutions is not reassuring.

The performance chart you published suggests that Princeton's equity managers underperformed the indices in 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986, and 1987, with 1989 about a draw. Perhaps PAW will consider publishing a follow-up article showing how PRINCO did in fiscal year 1990 and how it is faring since the Middle East crisis began.

JONATHAN V. NORMAN III '59
Louisville, Ky.

BEAT PENN!

Remember the
Good Olde Days
When Sweatshirts Were
Really Thick and Warm?
Ours Are!

Extra heavy reverse weave Champion sweatshirt in silver grey (89% cotton/8% acrylic/3% rayon) with "Princeton" in orange and black lettering. Sizes M, L, XL, XXL. Crewnecks: Princeton - $39.00, Princeton with seal - $39.00, Princeton with back "P" - $42.00, Princeton with sewn-on orange/white letters - $55.00. Hooded: Princeton - $46.00, Princeton with back "P" - $49.00. (Shipping and handling $3.00)

Mail and phone orders welcome.
Use your H. Gross Charge, Visa, MasterCard
or American Express

STORE HOURS
Mon-Wed 9:30-6:00
Thur-Fri 9:30-9:00
Saturday 9:30-6:00
Sunday 12:00-5:00

One Palmer Square
Princeton, NJ 08542
609-924-6088

*At the sign of the goose...

The New Princeton Club of New York

Opening floor-by-floor throughout 1990

- Attractive, "clubbier" entrance lobby.
- 3 new dining rooms, each one unique.
- 9 restyled private dining rooms.
- 48 newly decorated bedrooms.
- Women's rooms added on all floors.
- Expanded alumni activities
- Plus: squash courts, fitness center, library, lounge, varied member events.

Join during our major renovation:

- save $250 entrance fee (will not be waived again).
- and get a free $100 dinner in the new Woodrow Wilson Room.

Call or write: Membership Secretary
The Princeton Club of New York
15 West 43rd Street, NY NY 10036
212-840-6400

A Perfect Place For A ...

Weekend Escape

Imagine... THE RESIDENCE INN®

$79.00*

- Studio Suites with Queen Sized Beds.
- Separate Living Room, many with Fireplaces.
- Fully Equipped Kitchens.
- Complimentary Continental Breakfast.
- Heated Pool, Whirlpool and Sport Court.

* Rates valid Friday and Saturday nights only based upon availability. Rates are subject to 6% New Jersey State Sales Tax. Escape Rates not valid in conjunction with other discounts.

THE RESIDENCE INN PRINCETON
4226 Route One • Princeton, NJ 08540
(801) 829-9640

FOR THE SERIOUS ATHLETE

Our ultra-heavyweight sweatshirt is built for hard workouts. 89% cotton for breathability, 8% acrylic and 3% rayon to control shape and fit. Grey with orange lettering. M, L, XL, $39. XXL, $44. Add $4.25 shipping and handling.

The
PRINCETON
University Store

36 University Place, Princeton, NJ 08540

Call toll-free: From N.J., 1-800-624-4236

Elsewhere in the U.S., 1-800-631-0137

☐ U-Store ☐ VISA ☐ MasterCard ☐ AmEx

Acct. # _____

Exp. Date _____

Qty _____ Size _____

Name _____

Address _____

City, State _____

ZIP _____

K.M. REAL ESTATE
LIGHT

BRAND NEW COLONIAL

on over 2½ acres in an estate area of Lawrence Township. Spacious rooms throughout, with 9-foot ceilings in the main section. Four bedrooms, 3½ baths—the master bath with both jacuzzi and tiled shower. State of the art kitchen. First class construction, over 3,800 sq. ft., with many added features. Choose your colors! An entrancing listing, an exciting home. $750,000

Karl Light '47—Broker

247 Nassau St.

609-924-3822

Princeton Notebook

Ivy Club Admits Its First Women Members

BOWING TO A combination of legal, social, and financial pressures, Princeton's oldest and best-known eating club, the Ivy Club, offered bids to fifteen women during its fall bicker, at the end of September. This decision ended Ivy's 111 years as a single-sex institution and leaves Tiger Inn as Princeton's only all-male club.

The fifteen were chosen from a pool of about forty women who completed the bicker process. Drawn from both the junior and senior classes, all fifteen accepted their bids and have already begun to take their meals at the club.

Given a pair of recent court decisions, Ivy had little choice but to open its doors to women. Over the summer, the New Jersey Supreme Court ruled on the clubs' eleven-year legal battle with Sally Frank '80, ordering both Tiger and Ivy to admit women (PAW, September 12). Ivy then petitioned the U.S. District Court to stay the state court's order, pending the resolution of a federal complaint that Ivy had filed against the state. This fall, a federal judge allowed the club to pursue its complaint, but ordered it to comply with the state Supreme Court's ruling in the meantime.

In practical terms, these two decisions meant that Ivy had to accept women the next time it admitted new members, or else face stern legal consequences. When the club held its fall bicker, therefore, women had to be included. And there was no question that the club needed to hold fall bicker, if only for reasons of solvency. Last spring, only about fifty students bickered at Ivy; thirty were accepted, giving the club far fewer members than it considers desirable, about ninety. With the fifteen women and fifteen men it accepted at fall bicker this year, Ivy now has ninety-three members.

Tiger, which claims to have a full complement of members, did not hold fall bicker this year. If the club had, it would have been held to the same legal standard as Ivy. Even so, Tiger's decision not to hold bicker may just delay the inevitable. Unless T.I. can get the state court's ruling overturned in federal court before January, when spring bicker is scheduled, it will be forced to admit women then.

Despite its decision to admit women, Ivy is still a party to Frank's lawsuit. The main thrust of the case—sex discrimination—has been adjudicated, but issues of damages and legal fees remain. These costs could run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars, so it seems unlikely that Ivy, which has already spent a considerable amount defending itself in the suit, will settle any time soon.

Elm Merges with Dial And Cannon to Create "D.E.C."

THE SOCIAL GEOGRAPHY of Prospect Avenue underwent another shift in September, as the graduate boards of Elm Club and the recently formed Dial and Cannon Club agreed to a merger of the clubs. The resulting club, known as "D.E.C.," has about 160 members, who will take their meals in the Elm clubhouse. Dial's undergraduate officers will live in their clubhouse this year, but its kitchen and other facilities are closed.

Dial and Cannon Club was formed last year, when a financially imperiled Dial Lodge agreed to a merger with the graduate board of the now defunct Cannon Club (PAW, November 8, 1989). This year, it was Elm that faced fiscal woes: only four juniors are members. With this situation in mind, the Dial and Cannon group approached Elm's graduate board, which agreed to join forces with them. According to Harry E. Knapp '76, the president of Dial's graduate board, the combined resources of the new club "are probably better than anyone on the Street."

In particular, D.E.C. controls two large properties on the north side of Prospect Avenue. The Dial lot, which features a very large parking area adjacent to university-owned land, is an especially attractive property—to the university, at least. And to the D.E.C. board, that's the vital issue, because its stated aim is to return to the old Cannon Club building, at 21 Prospect Avenue, and reopen the club. The university bought this landmark structure in the mid-1970s, after Cannon folded, and converted it into offices. Now known as Notestein Hall, it houses the Office of Population Research.

"As a practical matter, our objective remains to move into the old Cannon clubhouse," Knapp said. "The addition of Elm Club puts us in a better position to achieve that goal." University administrators, however, have repeatedly said that Princeton is not interested in giving up Notestein, which underwent extensive renovation after the demise of Cannon Club.

Yet with the addition of the Elm property, D.E.C. now has some leverage in negotiating a swap with the university. The parking lots behind Dial and the Colonial Club parking lot, which the university purchased two years ago, would provide more than enough space for a new academic building. And with Princeton running out of building sites in this part of the campus, a powerful incentive exists for some kind of deal. Furthermore, the combined square footage of the Elm and Dial buildings is about 25 percent larger than that of Notestein. An argument against such a deal would be the considerable expense involved in converting Dial and Elm to offices—and converting Notestein back into an eating club.

This isn't the first time that Elm has been in financial trouble. Founded in 1895—the same year as Cannon—Elm merged with Campus Club in 1973 because of its declining membership. Elm reopened in 1978, in part through the efforts of the current president of its graduate board, Kimberly J. Noble '80. Under the new arrangement, Noble, Knapp, and Warren R. Crane '62, Cannon's president, will rotate as chairmen of D.E.C.'s graduate board.

Lake Carnegie Added to National Historic Register

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

LAKE CARNEGIE, the man-made body of water that has been the home of Princeton's crew squads for eighty-four years, has been added to the National Register of Historic Places. The lake joins Nassau Hall, Cannon Green, the Joseph Henry House, Stanhope Hall, and the John Maclean House as recognized historic sites on the campus. Officials of Princeton Township have sought this designation for the lake, its islands, and the surrounding shoreline for two years. The application to the National Register cited Carnegie's historic importance as the first artificial lake designed expressly for rowing.

Dana G. Munro, Former Wilson School Director, Dies

DANA G. MUNRO, a historian and diplomat who directed the School of Public and International Affairs (later the Woodrow Wilson School) for nineteen years, died in Waquoit, Massachusetts, on June 16. A member of the Princeton faculty since 1932, Munro was ninety-seven.

In the first half of this century, Munro was known on the campus as "Young Dana" to distinguish him from his father, Dana C. Munro, a medieval historian who taught at Princeton from 1915 to 1933. The younger Munro, whose academic interests focused on Latin America, joined the State Department after World War I and rose to become chief of the Latin American division. He also served as minister to Haiti for two years.

Munro came to Princeton as a professor of history, and was appointed the first incumbent of the William Stewart Tod Professorship of Public and International Affairs in 1939. That year, he also took over as director of the S.P.I.A., a position he held until 1958. (In 1948, the school was named for Wilson.) Munro retired from teaching in 1961 but maintained his lifelong interest in Latin America. As recently as 1983, he published a memoir about his experiences as a student in the region. □

STEWARTSON-DOUGHERTY
Real Estate Associates
366 Nassau Street
Princeton, N.J. 08540
PHONE: 609-921-7784

VERY SPECIAL ON PINE STREET

A completely renovated Nineteenth Century charmer adding another gem to this picturesque and convenient location. On first floor, an entry foyer, living room with fireplace, separate dining room with new bay window and completely new window-wrapped kitchen, powder room and study. Upstairs, a master bedroom with its own new bath and two other bedrooms and bath. Central air, garage. Secluded brick patio. Immediate occupancy. $368,000

Robert Dougherty '50 Julie Douglas w/'41
Paul Douglas '41 Betsy Stewardson Ford w/'54
Georgia Graham w/'52 J. B. Smith '45
Diane Unruh w/'70 Barbara Broad w/'38
Betsy McClelland w/'50 Judy Perrine s/'69

For no obligation—Information about real estate in the Princeton area call (609) 921-7784 or Outside of New Jersey 1-800-542-0067.

REALTORS

Representing Previews Executive Homesearch

ST. CROIX

Everything you expect from a vacation paradise.

Beaches, Tennis, Golf, Dining, Entertainment, Shopping, Relaxation

Ralph Locke Islands, Inc.

P.O. Box #800

Waccabuc, N.Y. 10597

Toll Free Nationwide

(800)-223-1108

The Buccaneer
ST. CROIX, U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS

Princeton's Other Brew

IF THERE IS truth in advertising, then Princeton students of the eighties and nineties are members not of the Baby Boom Generation or the "Me" Generation but of the Coffee Generation. Fetishized in the television series Twin Peaks and billed as the drink of overachievers—who want to relax with a drink that will pick them up, not slow them down—coffee is a vital substance on the campus and a drug many students will continue to use after they leave Princeton.

William C. Porter, the head of purchasing for the university's food services department, estimates that ten thousand pounds of regular coffee are consumed on the campus each year, but, he says, Princeton's coffee consumption has decreased 50 percent in the last eight or ten years. Porter attributes the decline to a "general nutrition trend" among health-conscious undergraduates who worry about the detrimental side-effects of caffeine. Consumption of decaffeinated coffee is increasing, he says, along with regular and herbal teas.

But can a sleep-starved student or professor find a good cup of coffee on the campus—the kind of steaming brew that tastes good even without three creamers and five packets of sugar? "As long as everyone keeps the coffee equipment clean and uses boiling hot water," says Porter, "you get a good cup of coffee" with the university's blend, a custom mixture of Robusta, Colombian, and Brazilian beans from the Ellis Coffee Company, in Philadelphia.

If, however, students or faculty members venture off-campus for an afternoon "cuppa" joe, they find that the pickings are rather slim. Several restaurants near the campus serve regular coffee (and, more rarely, espresso or cappuccino) after their regular lunch hours, but Princeton has no café proper, a gathering place that at many universities serves as an intellectual hub.

So when haggard professors and graduate students want coffee, they tend to congregate at the coffee machines in their departmental offices and lounges. Among the undergraduates, upperclassmen turn to the eating clubs. "Terrace drinks a lot of coffee," says Michael E. Graff '91, the club's house manager, but according to Barton Rouse, Terrace's steward and head chef, an increasing number of students choose cola drinks as their stimulants of choice, even in the mornings. Terrace, the only club to own an espresso machine, also provides stronger brews for its students "when they need to pump up at night" before midterm and final examinations, Rouse says.

ILLUSTRATION BY STACY M. WIZOLA

If students need to calm down after this caffeine-induced stimulation, they can gather at the Murray-Dodge Café, a cave-like basement beneath Murray-Dodge Hall where, oddly, a cup of coffee is nowhere to be seen. The Murray-Dodge Café, known to its devotees as, simply, "Café," serves only cocoa and teas (mostly the naturally uncaffeinated herbal variety)—in the interest, say its managers, of fostering a relaxed atmosphere, free of coffee-stimulated over achiever nervousness. Founded twenty years ago by Princeton's United Campus Ministries as a gathering place for students who wanted a nonalcoholic alternative to the eating clubs, Café "has continued to be a vital place and an alternative-type place," according to Sue Anne Steffey Morrow, the associate dean of the Chapel and adviser to the Murray-Dodge Café. In the same vein as its paradoxical name, Café's motto—that it is devoted to "The Fine Art of Being Open"—refers not to its hours of operation (10 P.M. to 12:30 A.M., Wednesdays through Saturdays) but to its openness to all students.

The most recent addition to the campus's coffee scene is the Chancellor Green Café, which occupies the rotunda adjacent to the Student Center. Opened in 1985, shortly after New Jersey raised its drinking age to twenty-one and forced the university to close its on-campus pub, Chancellor Green operates from 5 P.M. to midnight and is popular with students who want to take a break from studying at Firestone Library, says Edward M. Nase, the assistant director of food services. In addition to regular coffee, the café serves cappuccino, espresso, and six to eight flavored coffees each day.

Patricia L. Naylor, who until last June served as Chancellor Green's coordinator, supervised the renovation of the old pub into a more intimate facility. With help from the Coffee Development Group, an international organization interested in increasing the coffee-drinking market in places where the bean is not cultivated, she helped transform Chancellor Green into an award-winning coffeehouse. In 1988, the Coffee Development Group named Chancellor Green the best college coffeehouse—based on the quality of its coffee and programming—and awarded Princeton $1,000 for its scholarship fund. Last year, Chancellor Green's patrons, many of them graduate students without access to the eating clubs, downed sixteen pounds of coffee a week.

President Shapiro, who takes his coffee black, acknowledges that Princeton needs more facilities like Chancellor Green, but he says that the university has no new plans brewing. Elaine Showalter, who chairs the English department and drinks iced coffee year-round, says that professors also need more such places. She suggests that the university use the faculty club in Prospect as a café during mornings and afternoons, when lunch is not being served.

In the meantime, graduate students and professors in the English department can get their caffeine fixes in the Hinds Library, a lounge in the basement of McCosh Hall where, according to department manager Beth V. Harrison, the department spends about $600 a year on coffee and related supplies. Professors of English have been known to quibble over the best way to brew a pot, but those in the comparative literature department seem more resigned to their fates. "Please do not criticize the coffee," reads a sign over a well-used coffee machine in a cramped corner of East Pyne. "Some day you too could be weak and old."

—Gayle Wald GS

Gayle Wald, a graduate student in English from Elkins Park, Pennsylvania, takes her coffee with milk.

PRINCETONIANS AT OXFORD

By Carol Zall '88

"OXFORD, THIS IS OXFORD." THE conductor's voice booming through the train as it pulls to a stop is enough to send Anglophiliac shivers down the spine. Visions of garden parties and flying butresses flit before the mind's eye, fueled, no doubt, by one episode too many of Masterpiece Theatre. Oxford, this is Oxford: a bustling town of 140,000 where the streets are far too narrow for the unending flow of traffic and that, since the founding of scholars' halls in the twelfth century, has liked to call itself home to the greatest university in the world. Eight centuries and countless scholars later, the world is still captivated by the Oxford mystique, and Princetonians are no exception: each year, our top students enter into fierce competition to be Rhodes or Marshall scholars at this reserve of cobblestone and stained glass, while the rest of us entertain notions of the charmed contemplative life. But in 1990, do such old-world images match the reality to be found in the crowded town by the river Cherwell, an hour west of London?

According to Princetonians studying here today, the most striking feature of life at Oxford is that it is not what they expected it to be. Whether it's the lack of computers or, as one student puts it, that "both the weather and the people are cold and damp," students from across the ocean are in for all sorts of surprises. Says Matt Saal '85, who is a Rhodes scholar at Balliol College, "It's not that Oxford is more or less than I expected—it's just that it's different."

Different indeed. Take, for instance, the Bodleian Library, one of the largest and greatest collections of books anywhere. Its five million volumes (about a million more than Firestone has) are still catalogued on tiny slips of paper, which are glued into ancient leatherbound books and arranged only by author. Why? Because "any good scholar already knows who the worthwhile authors are," Saal says one librarian told him. Each time they open the catalogues, students report, crumbling paper slips fall out, effectively losing that information forever. Incredibly, a proposal to computerize the Bodleian is highly controversial, drawing opposition from some dons who insist that they got along fine without computers in their day.

Like computers, telephones are few and far between. Often, there is just one phone for an entire dormitory. Consequently, students and professors alike communicate primarily by means of the "pigeon post," or plainly put, the hand-delivered campus mail. Communication with friends can sometimes be reduced to an epistolary version of telephone tag, as notes endlessly cross each other in the post.

But the differences between Oxford and an Oxford's Bodleian Library provides an elegant place for students to read—if they can find the books they need.

PHOTO COURTESY OXFORD UNIVERSITY

American university like Princeton go deeper than mere technology. At the heart of the matter is the very notion of what a university is and how it is organized. At Oxford, the key word is decentralization, and one is hard put to find some method in the madness. Divided into thirty-five independent colleges—each with its own grounds, buildings, chapel, faculty, administration, dining halls, traditions, and social calendar—the university is really a community of communities. One Princetonian studying here called it “a medieval kingdom.” The decentralization is so complete that prospective students apply not to Oxford but to a particular college.

This lack of structure carries over to the colleges themselves, where a laissez-faire attitude colors all aspects of daily life. Take, for instance, what happens when the unwitting Yank arrives at Oxford for the first time: absolutely nothing. You get off the train, figure out how to get your transatlantic luggage allowance to your college, and that's that. Says George Nolfi '88, a Marshall scholar, “I was dropped off at New College, the porter asked my name, then he said, ‘Here's the key to your room, Mr. Nolfi,’ and goodbye. I put my stuff into my room and started meeting people.” Nolfi's first official contact came nearly two weeks later; it was a note from his adviser, and it came via pigeon post.

Yes, Oxford is a decentralized zone, a place with no resident advisers, no registration or fire-code lecture, and no University Store that coordinates its book purchases with academic departments. As one American puts it, the attitude toward information at Oxford is that “If you have to ask, then you obviously don't know.” While facing a life without phones or *Freshman Herald*s, the newcomer must also adjust to another reality: being a Yank among Brits. “It was definitely a big factor that we were American,” recalls Bobby Peck '88, a Rhodes scholar at the truly grand Magdalen (pronounced “Maudlin”) College. “On one of my first nights here, I went to a party in the M.C.R.—that's the Middle Common Room—and there was a group of British graduate students, all saying, ‘Oh yes, and they think we're their fifty-first state, too.’” Although most Americans agree that nationality ceases to be an issue after a while, the initial reception can be chilly. “It's amazing—people whom you've eaten dinner with, whom you see every day because they live on your hall, are capable of not acknowledging your presence,” says Jocelyn Alexander '87, who is another Rhodes scholar. Adds Nolfi, “At Princeton, the faux pas when you're walking around campus is not to respond if someone says hello to you. Here, the faux pas is to say hello.”

But for all the nit-picking and comparisons, most Princetonians can cope with the perceived deprivations of life at Oxford. And life gets even more interesting when they adjust to such distinctly Oxonian experiences as donning “subfusc,” the official outfit (including an academic gown, correctly colored shoes and socks, etc.) that must be worn dur-

The charmed contemplative life?
Jocelyn Alexander
'87 in front of
Balliol College.

PHOTO BY CAROL ZALL

ing examinations and other designated times. Among other ancient traditions that surround this sartorial requirement, test-takers may demand pints of ale from the proctors. But if a modern-day student lays claim to his or her alcoholic entitle-

Oxonians Get Serious About Fundraising

WHEN DR. HENRY DRUCKER reported for work at Oxford in January 1987, he was the university's sole fundraiser. A former political scientist and director of fundraising at the University of Edinburgh, Drucker found that his new employer had no fundraising organization to speak of. Just imagine: no letters from Annual Giving, no appeals from classmates, no telethons . . . Oxford, which is really a federation of thirty-five autonomous colleges, had for sixty years received enough financial support from the British government that it did not have to mount university-wide campaigns or even annual appeals for money.

Two daunting tasks faced Drucker in his new job: first creating an entire fundraising organization where none had existed before, and then raising £220 million—more than $400 million.

Besides the decline in government support, Ox-

Nicholas Ulanov '78

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

*The Bodleian's five million books are catalogued on tiny slips of paper,
which are glued into ancient leatherbound volumes and arranged only by author.*

ment, the proctor can counter by citing the student's lack of a sword or silver shoe buckles.

Gowns are also worn to dinner at many of the colleges. At Merton College, which dates to the thirteenth century, students eat at one of two dinner seatings, the second of which is formal. Wearing black gowns, students stand for a mumbled prayer in Latin, then take their seats at long benches beside long, polished wooden tables. The magnificent hall is somewhat more inspiring than Commons at Rockefeller-Mathey Colleges, but the fare served up by the uniformed staff is not. Moreover, there's precious little elbow room and not a napkin in sight ("If you're at Oxford, you shouldn't need a napkin," jokes Nolfi). The meal is over in about twenty minutes. While the students at Merton wear neckties and jackets to dinner, the "formal" seating at some of the other colleges means jeans, T-shirts, and gowns. At last, Oxford enters the twentieth century.

Central to Oxonian tradition is, of course, academic work, and this system also is vastly different from our own. Americans who study at Oxford pursue either a second A.B. or a graduate degree. For those doing an A.B. (which, after seven years, and upon payment of the appropriate fee, automatically becomes an A.M.), the curriculum of lectures and preceptorials is replaced by weekly meetings with a tutor. The tutor provides a reading list, ford's need for a fundraising campaign arose from two factors. One was its anemic endowment of $13.5 million. (Princeton's endowment, of $2.7 billion, is two hundred times bigger.) Although several of Oxford's individual colleges are richly endowed—collectively, their income from investments during fiscal year 1988 came to nearly $45 million—the university remains responsible for two-thirds of the colleges' budgets. Another factor was that Oxford, burdened with an annual operating deficit of $2 million, was facing a government-mandated budget cut of 25 percent. In the face of this financial crisis, Oxford decided to launch—from scratch—a fundraising effort similar to those of private universities in the United States. Drucker canvassed development offices at Stanford, Harvard, Duke, and other schools. But it was Princeton, he says, that provided the "main model" for what became known as the Campaign for Oxford.

"Many Princetonians gave us wonderful advice in setting up the office and beginning our solicitations," says Drucker. In particular, Drucker cites Nicholas Ulanov '78, a former Rhodes scholar and an educational consultant, who advised Oxford throughout the planning stage and recruited other Princetonians to help. Ulanov now serves in New York City as interim director of Oxford's U.S. office.

Oxford has 125,000 alumni, or "old members," but when the university decided to go after them for money, it realized it knew the whereabouts of only about 3,000 of them. Since 1987, it has managed to track down most of the missing and get their names, addresses, and other relevant data into a computer. But the loyalty that many Oxonians feel toward their colleges does not necessarily translate into loyalty toward the university. To foster a sense of identity with the university, Oxford started a slick alumni magazine, Oxford

Today, which is published three times a year.

The five-year Campaign for Oxford is international in scope, and for fundraising purposes the university has divided the world into four parts: Europe, North America, Japan, and everywhere else. Besides New York City, the campaign maintains offices in Toronto and Tokyo. Of the £121 million ($226 million) raised to date, 60 percent has come from Europe, 5 percent from North America, 5 percent from Japan, and 30 percent from elsewhere.

Like Princeton, Oxford solicits most of its gifts from individuals, foundations, and corporations. But unlike Princeton, most of the individual gifts are not from alumni, who have contributed only about 10 percent of the total to date. Drucker explains, "We don't have the reservoir of alumni with strong ties to the university and who feel obligated to give money the way Princetonians do." To persuade non-alumni to give to Oxford, he says, "We emphasize the excellence of the school and its central place in English history and culture." In making their pitch to their fellow Britons, Oxford's fundraisers have at least one advantage: there isn't a lot of competition. Oxford is one of a handful of universities in Great Britain, compared to more than three thousand institutions of higher learning in the United States.

Of course, the magic of Oxford's name doesn't hurt, either, nor does its leadership in British higher education. Executives at Fiat, the Italian automobile manufacturer, endowed a chair in Italian studies after learning that the university graduates 25 percent of the trained speakers of Italian in the United Kingdom.

—Nicholas H. Morgan '75

Nick Morgan is the university's director of development communications.

and the student prepares a ten-to-twelve-page essay on the readings. With an average of two such essays a week per student, Oxford's system sounds dauntingly difficult. But according to the experts, the reality is different. Says Peck: "I have two essays a week. It can be a lot of work if you do them very properly, but almost no one does, British or American. Also, the essays are just read aloud—the tutors don't take the essays and go back and critique them with a red pen. Sometimes they answer the phone while you're reading your essay, or they fall asleep." Tim Gokey '83 agrees, adding that, because the essays are read aloud, "You can sort of read fast through the parts that are particularly ridiculous."

A student's approach to tutorials is a matter of priorities. If you're at Oxford chiefly for the academics and wish to get a "first" (the highest level of a degree), the system will be exhausting, as well as highly rewarding. For those who see Oxford as more of a cosmopolitan experience—a chance to wear subfusc while reading good books—the amount of work needed to get a "second" is not overwhelming. Gokey, who did an A.B. in politics, philosophy, and economics

(P.P.E.), recalls spending as much time writing his essays as searching for books in the library.

Students pursuing graduate degrees usually encounter an even less structured system than the tutorials. For a degree-by-thesis, there is no course work at all. Nolfi, working toward a Ph.D. in moral philosophy, says, "I don't have to do anything but produce a thesis." For him and others doing original research, the lack of computer facilities and the short library hours cease to be amusing eccentricities. "The fundamental tools for writing a good thesis exist in such an attenuated form that it makes life extraordinarily difficult," he says. "It's hard to believe that any great discoveries or theories came out of a place as irrationally set up as this. It actually makes me deeply respect the British culture as a producer of great intellect."

The degree of frustration students experience is directly related to their priorities. For Gokey, who at Princeton earned a joint degree in engineering and the Woodrow Wilson School, studying for a second A.B. was a chance to do a lot of the reading that his undergraduate curriculum didn't permit. After four years of grinding away at Princeton, Oxford was a place where he could read, row, captain the boat club, and "play at being a different person." Now back to finish a Ph.D. in economics, Gokey describes his first two years at Oxford as "incredibly satisfying and very expanding." Summing up the divergence of opinion about studying at Oxford, he adds, "Those who enjoy it are the ones who come to get an international experience, meet a very cosmopolitan group of people, and travel in Europe. Those who are disappointed are the people who are really interested in studying a particular subject" but are stymied by the antiquated research facilities and lack of structure. David Mehnert '87, a Rhodes scholar who works part-time as a stringer for Newsweek in London, agrees: "The best thing about Oxford is that it's just an hour from Heathrow Airport. I use my scholarship as a travel grant."

If Oxford defies expectations on most fronts, there is no denying that a certain Oxford charm does exist. While Brideshead Revisited bears about the same relation to Oxford as This Side of Paradise does to Princeton today, there remains a peculiar something-or-other in the air here, which you inhale while strolling through elegant quadrangles and past architectural masterpieces. Due partly to the perpetually gray skies and narrow streets, partly to the old, black-hatted porters who rule the colleges, and partly—perhaps particularly—to the low-tech pace of life, this charm imbues Oxford with a certain faint colo(u)r. Perhaps it is rose-colored. As Mehnert says, the students "see the world through a narrow prism, seemingly unaware that they are living in what is actually a working-class industrial town." Yet they live in a medieval kingdom, too.

Carol Zall, a freelance writer who lives in Silver Spring, Maryland, plans to pursue a degree in Celtic studies next year at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland.

The Turnbull Sun Dial, at Corpus Christi College, was the model for Princeton's Mather Sun Dial.

PHOTO COURTESY OXFORD UNIVERSITY

Why Have Presidential Elections?

THE THIRTEEN KEYS TO THE PRESIDENCY

Allan J. Lichtman and Ken DeCell '72 • Madison Books, $24.95

THIS BOOK describes a prediction model that, when applied retrospectively, identifies without fail the winning candidate in every presidential election since 1860. The authors identify thirteen dichotomous questions that, when answered in the affirmative, give the advantage to the incumbent candidate or party. Since the campaign of 1860, every incumbent who has accumulated at least five affirmative answers, and every challenger who has collected at least five negative answers, has subsequently won the presidential election; all candidates who have forfeited at least six of the "keys" have later lost.

Here are the keys that Allan J. Lichtman and Ken DeCell '72 claim will unlock the doors of the Oval Office: 1. "After the midterm elections, the incumbent party holds more seats in the U.S. House of Representatives than it did after the previous midterm elections." 2. "There is no serious contest for the incumbent-party nomination." 3. "The incumbent-party candidate is the sitting president." 4. "There is no significant third-party or independent campaign." 5. "The economy is not in recession during the election campaign." 6. "Real per-capita economic growth during the [current presidential] term equals or exceeds mean growth during the previous two terms." 7. "The incumbent administration effects major changes in national policy." 8. "There is no sustained social unrest during the [current] term." 9. "The incumbent administration is untainted by major scandal." 10. "The incumbent administration suffers no major failure in foreign or military affairs." 11. "The incumbent administration achieves a major success in foreign or military affairs." 12. "The incumbent-party candidate is charismatic or a national hero." 13. "The challenging-party candidate is not charismatic or a national hero."

The main strength of this book is the identification of factors that are basic to the election of presidents. To take one example, the economy (Keys 5 and 6) surely affects presidential elections. Growth in the Gross National Product and increases in real wages during the year before an election have been shown in many studies to correlate with presidential voting. Moreover, survey research shows that perceptions about growth in the economy, in both the past and the future, affect the selections people make for president.

Similarly, issues of war and peace (Keys 10 and 11) provide a crucial background for presidential elections. Campaigns with slogans like "don't change horses in midstream" and "he kept us out of the war" play to the concerns of the American public. The inverse relation between the number of U.S. troops in Vietnam and Lyndon Johnson's popularity between 1965 and 1968 demonstrates the significance of foreign and military affairs during elections.

But the strength of this book is also its weakness, for in identifying the key factors in presidential elections, the authors ignore the sizable body of research on

Sensuous and Suggestive Shapes

MELODIC FORMS: THE SCULPTURE OF DAVID CHAMBERLAIN '71

David R. Godine, $35.00

WRITING ABOUT the sculpture of David Chamberlain '71 depicted in this book is sort of like describing a wave, a subtly mixed color, or the richly textured sound of a string quartet. These works, in mahogany, bronze, and marble, are elusive and allusive studies in curvilinear forms full of seemingly weather-worn hollows and sea-carved grottoes. Some seem to struggle within convoluted spirals; others burst out in more than one direction, allowing the viewer to see within and through the heart of the composition.

Many of the names of these sculptures are musical, hinting at the artist's intention but only hinting—never telling. "Eroica," a two-foot-high composition in bronze, recalls the Beethoven symphony, and from one angle, it appears to be a stylized G clef. Yet viewed from another side, it looks like a spinnaker straining at every seam and barely skimming the surface of the sea. The top of the piece, which tapers to a curved tip, reaches idealistically skyward. Of course, these thoughts may bear no relation to what another viewer might see or what Chamberlain had in mind. But that's not the point: we seem to be invited to interpret as we will, gently guided by the artist's suggestions and the sensuousness of the shapes.

Back at his fifteenth reunion, Chamberlain announced that he would donate to the Class of 1971 Fund (and ultimately Princeton) the profits from a limited-edition series of sculptures called Reflets dans l'Eau, after the Debussy series. This was his way, he has written, to "offer something back to the university, pledging talents as compared to money." Works in the Princeton series, some of which are still available, feature patinated bronze, which gives a matted effect, in close contact with highly polished bronze, which brilliantly mirrors both itself and its surroundings. Melodic Forms shows that such images of beauty are typical of the artist. The only shortcoming of this beautifully photographed book, which presents full-color views of forty-six works, is the problem of all books on sculpture: you keep wanting to get up, walk around the pieces, and touch them.

"Eroica"

PHOTO COURTESY COURIER GALLERY OF ART, MANCHESTER, N.H.

—Andrew C. Mytelka '85

En Route

@ Princeton Jct. Train Station

Pick up your Tailgate party En Route to the game

- Cheeses & Pates
- Gourmet Sandwiches & Salads
- Fresh Fruit Tarts & Desserts
- Baguettes and other breads

Monday - Friday 5:30 AM - 8:15 PM

Saturdays 8 AM - 3 PM

Call 609.799.8844

Barge Beautiful Canal du Midi or Burgundy aboard "La Tortue".

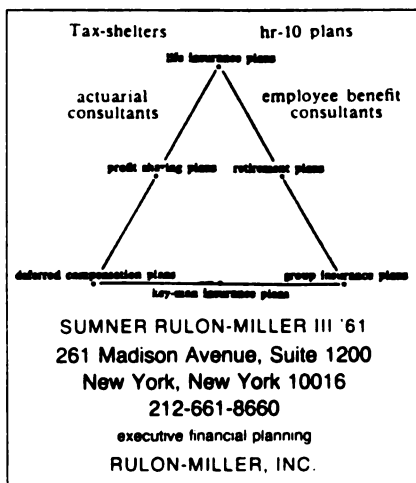

Cruising Spacious, comfortable. Large sundeck, lounge, 3 twin staterooms/baths. Notable cuisine, 10-speed bikes, minibus. Seasoned, agreeable British crew. Weekly charters Apr.-Oct. Color brochure: "LaTortue", Dept P, Box 1466, Manchester, MA 01944

Wanted to Buy

Highest prices paid for American and European Art, including paintings, watercolors and drawings, sculpture and prints from 18th century to present. Please contact Stuart P. Feld, '57

Hirsch & Adler
GALLERIES INC.

21 E. 70th St. NY 10021 • (212) 535-8810
Fax: (212) 772-7237

The JOE BROWN Studio announces ...his artistic legacy
Princeton Professor Emeritus Joe Brown created over 400 pieces of sculpture which are found in both private and public collections all over the world. Certified bronze sculptures from original molds are available in limited editions. The studio and gallery is open by appointment only.
The Joe Brown Studio • Timothy Maslyn, Resident Sculptor & Curator
RD 1, Box 122 A
Princeton, NJ 08540
609-921-2868
THE Joe Brown STUDIO

this topic that antedates their own. Nearly all the factors they mention have been the subjects of considerable research. In 1964, for example, V. O. Key pointed out in The Responsible Electorate (a book that is on every basic reading list in electoral politics) the importance to presidential voting of such issues as the economy, foreign policy, and the management of government. Yet the authors write as though their "keys" were unknown to scholars or the public until they discovered them.

I must also question Lichtman and DeCell's entire enterprise. In 1962, Donald E. Stokes '51 '52 (now dean of the Woodrow Wilson School) showed that presidential campaigns were little more than a "random walk" through time. Along the same lines, I argued more than a decade ago that the changes from one incumbent party to the next follow a "Poisson distribution," one noted for random occurrences. And if you come from the school of thought that says that "figures don't lie, but liars figure," anecdotes from history confirm that the electoral college can produce idiosyncratic elections. For example, the winning candidate has not always been the person with the most popular votes. Why would someone attempt to predict events that many agree are either purely random or idiosyncratic?

Compare elections to a game of roulette. Suppose a not-so-astute Princeton student (are there any?) visited Atlantic City with the intention of discovering the "keys" to the roulette wheel. As the student watched, the metal ball landed, in succession but purely by chance, on 3, 5, 7, and 9. Obviously, the temptation to win a fortune by betting on 11 on the next spin of the wheel would be overwhelming. Yet this chance pattern that the student had observed would not negate the physical law that the wheel produces random numbers.

Even though the temptation to bet would be enormous when an observer noticed such a pattern, any "keys" the student might develop have no more predictive power than the authors' "keys" to the presidency. Observation of patterns after the fact have no more theoretical validity than the student's theory of odd numbers. "Postdiction" is not prediction.

Most troubling about The Thirteen Keys to the Presidency is the authors' assertions about campaigns. They argue that the "keys" are deterministic and that campaigns don't matter. In this vein, the book's jacket has a quotation from Lee Atwater, congratulating Lichtman and DeCell for predicting "a Bush victory back when no one thought he had a chance," and another from George McGovern, praising them for proving that "1972 wasn't all my fault." As the authors put it, "the outcome of 1988 was apparent long before Peggy Noonan or Willie Horton entered the picture."

But the evidence that Lichtman and DeCell adduce to minimize campaigns demonstrates, instead, the importance of campaigns. A candidate's charisma (Keys 12 and 13), after all, is most prominently displayed in a campaign, while negative advertising during a campaign is designed to deprive an opponent of charisma. Social unrest (Key 8) often results from economic (Keys 5 and 6) or military (Keys 10 and 11) policy changes (Key 7) that take place during a campaign. For example, Jimmy Carter ordered the rescue of the American hostages in Iran during his bid for renomination in 1980, and the failure of this mission on the eve of the Wisconsin primary clearly affected his candidacy. Lyndon Johnson announced the cessation of bombing raids into North Vietnam and his own withdrawal from the 1968 race after a weak performance in the New Hampshire primary. In 1972, Richard Nixon announced increases in social-security payments one week before Election Day.

Nearly all these "keys" are part of the essential contingency of campaigns, and that is precisely the reason they are so often associated with electoral success. But for understanding presidential elections, read V. O. Key, not The Thirteen Keys to the Presidency. In my opinion, this book's main thesis cannot be taken seriously as social-science research. But then, I never bet on the number 13.

—C. Anthony Broh

Tony Broh, the university's registrar, is teaching Politics 332, "Public Opinion and Mass Political Behavior," this fall. He is the author of A Horse of a Different Color: Television's Treatment of Jesse Jackson's 1984 Presidential Campaign (1987).

Books Received

THE POTPOURRI GARDENER
Theodore James, Jr. '57
Macmillan, $22.95

IN THE CHINESE MOUNTAINS:
A NOVEL OF PERU
John Hopkins '60
Peter Owen, 73 Kenway Rd., London SW5 0RE
£12.95

THE DEATH OF INDUSTRIAL CIVILIZATION:
THE LIMITS TO ECONOMIC GROWTH
AND THE REPOLITICIZATION OF ADVANCED INDUSTRIAL SOCIETY
Joel Jay Kassiola '74
SUNY Press, $59.50 cloth, $19.95 paper

Unpredictability Sets the Theme For 1990 Football Team

FOUR GAMES INTO the 1990 season, the Princeton football team defies characterization. At times exciting and dominant, at times baffling and incompetent, the Tigers enter the meat of their Ivy League schedule with some of the question marks from training camp resolved but whole new questions raised.

Up to now, the exciting play of the team has pretty much balanced the erratic play. With unimpressive wins over two of the weakest teams on its schedule—Fordham and Brown—and a lopsided loss to Division I-AA power Colgate, Princeton has evened its record at 2-2 (1-1 Ivy). That's not too different from the 2-1-1 record the Tigers had at the same point last year, but it's hard to imagine this team running off a five-game winning streak, as the 1989 co-champions of the Ivy League did. But these Tigers major in unpredictability and minor in comebacks, so anything could happen.

At least some things are clear. The tailback position, monopolized by Judd Garrett '90 for the past three seasons, is split, roughly two to one, between sophomore Erick Hamilton and senior Dan Bents. Both bring more speed to the backfield than Garrett did, but they lack his experience, moves, and, especially, receiving skills. (A telling statistic: Garrett was Princeton's leading receiver last year, but these tailbacks have caught only one pass this season.) Nonetheless, the tandem of Bents and Hamilton has proved relatively effective: Hamilton had 164 yards rushing against Fordham, and Bents is a hard-nosed runner.

The receiving corps, a similarly unknown quantity during training camp, has also crystallized. Joe Baker '91 starts as one wideout, and Matt Tarkenton '92 (the son of former N.F.L. star Fran Tarkenton) and Mark Rogers '92 share time at the other. Fleet of foot—indeed, Princeton's quickest trio of receivers in a long time—these wideouts have shown flashes of brilliance, bringing the bomb back into the Princeton playbook. They've also displayed hands of stone.

For Coach Steve Tosches, this inconsistency is perhaps the most frustrating aspect of the season so far. As the Tigers' offensive coordinator, Tosches has designed a ball-control attack. (What coach wouldn't smile at six-yard rushes on first down?) Establishing a strong running game sets up short passes to the outside, or perhaps longer patterns to the tight end over the middle. This type of possession-based offense, however, requires the receivers to catch the ball—and the quarterback to get it to them. This year, that hasn't always happened.

Intense both on and off the field, defensive end Renard Charity '91 exhorts the offense during the game against Fordham.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

Instead, the Tigers have fallen behind early in most of their contests. (Princeton has only scored two first-quarter touchdowns so far.) Consequently, quarterback Joel Sharp '91 has been forced to pass more often and for longer attempts. Sometimes, the results have been spectacular: four pass plays this season have covered fifty yards or more. Other times, dismal: Sharp has completed only 44 percent of his passes this year. Receivers have dropped many of these passes—including several on crucial third downs—but Sharp has misfired just as often, either overthrowing his man or bouncing the pass short.

To Sharp's credit, he has run the ball effectively himself, tallying a pair of touchdowns and showing excellent mobility on a twenty-yard scoring ramble against Brown. But overall, the offense has been sloppy. In the Brown game, for example, the Tigers fumbled five times—all on the exchange between the center and the quarterback. Granted, the starting center, David Bocian '92, is out for the year with an ankle injury, but these miscues, combined with several delay-of-game penalties, have made some of Princeton's possessions sights of horror, not beauty.

The defense is just as enigmatic. At the beginning of the season, the secondary was thought to be the strongest unit of the Tiger defense, but so far, Princeton has been torched by opposing quarterbacks, especially in the first half. Brown's quarterback, for instance, completed seventeen of twenty-two first-half passes, and Colgate's Dave Goodwin shredded the Tigers for 343 yards passing overall. The three interceptions the secondary pulled down in the second half against Brown may presage better times for this unit.

Tailback Erick Hamilton '93, seeking to fill the shoes of Judd Garrett '90, rushed for 164 yards against Fordham.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

The linebackers, led by Aaron Harris '93 and Jim Freeman '92, have played solidly. The linemen, led by Renard Charity '91, have generally done well against the run, but they haven't applied much pressure to the opposing quarterbacks. Two telling trends have hurt the defense all season. For one, the Tigers have allowed opponents to score immediately before halftime in each of their games—the kind of generosity that drives a defensive coordinator crazy. More significantly, the defense has rarely been able to stuff the opposition on three straight downs. This forgiving defense has weighted the time-of-possession statistics heavily against the Tigers.

By far the brightest spot on the team has come from an unexpected quarter—the special teams. For some reason, kick-offs, punts, and defending against attempts at field goals and P.A.T.s have never been Princeton's forte; this year, the biggest plays have been made by these units. Against Brown, for example, Michael Lerch '93 made a pair of electrifying kickoff returns. (He also ran a reverse for a thirty-nine-yard touchdown, caught a fifty-seven-yard pass, and blocked a field-goal attempt.) Even so, Princeton was losing, 16-7, at the half, and had to kick off to open the third quarter. But on the return, some Tiger jarred the ball loose, and Marvin Williams '92, whom we last saw in a basketball uniform, recovered the fumble on the Brown 15. Two plays later, the Tigers scored and were back in the game.

Chris Lutz '91, the placekicker, has taken over the punting duties and has performed surprisingly well. (He averaged more than forty yards a punt against Brown—outstanding for the Ivy League.) Lutz has had more problems on kickoffs, on which he has a tendency to hook the ball out of bounds (a five-yard penalty). The downfield coverage on both kickoffs and punts, however, has been excellent, and the scene of the hardest hitting of this year's team. Where Franco Pagnanelli '90 was once the Tigers' enforcer, now it's the cover team on kicks.

Tiger fans distressed by Princeton's perplexing play can take solace in the equally undistinguished efforts of the other Ivy schools. In matchups with the Patriot (formerly Colonial) League, the Ivy League is a pathetic 3-13; one of those wins was Princeton's defeat of a weak team from Fordham, struggling in its second year in Division I-AA. At this point in the season, it looks like Dartmouth, Princeton's final opponent, will give the Tigers their stiffest test. But you never know. The only predictable thing about these Tigers is their unpredictability.

—David Williamson '84

Youthful Field Hockey Team Searches for Consistency, Experience, and Goals

HALFWAY THROUGH the fall season, Beth Bozman, Princeton's field hockey coach, looked down her team's schedule of remaining games and sighed. "We have no more easy games," she said, "and we're at the point where we need to win the rest of them."

Actually, the situation isn't as dire as all that. Although it seems unlikely that the Tigers (5-3 overall; 2-1 Ivy League) will match their success of last year, when they briefly broke into the top-twenty national rankings, they still have an outside shot at the Ivy title. And if that doesn't happen, Bozman can take solace in the experience her inexperienced team will have gained.

Like many of Princeton's athletic squads this fall, the field hockey team is young up and down the roster. Four freshmen, including the goalkeeper, Melanie Orpen, and one of the team's leading scorers, Kim Simons, are in the starting lineup, and only three juniors and one senior, co-captain and all-American Stephanie Naticchia, are there to lead them. "We have a lot of talented players, maybe more than we've ever had," Bozman said. "They just don't have a lot of experience."

The team's relative youth was especially apparent at the beginning of the season. Foreshadowing future contests, the team dominated its first game, against a weaker Cornell squad, but narrowly lost, 1-0. The Tigers then reeled off three consecutive victories, but the wins could not conceal a general lack of consistency. Perhaps the team's most important missing element was a killer instinct at the offensive end of the field: against Lehigh, for instance, Princeton took fifty-three shots but scored only three goals.

Above: Stephanie Naticchia '91, Princeton's all-American attacker, maneuvers around an opponent from Rider College. Below: Displaying perfect form and concentration, sophomore Treilly Vergara gives the ball a good whack.

PHOTOS BY LARRY FRENCH

Two games later, against Delaware, Princeton outshot the Blue Hens, 22-8, and controlled play for the entire game, but still lost, 1-0.

"People have tended to blame our attack for the problems we've had this season," Bozman said. "I really don't think that's fair. We've had lapses across the board." At the midpoint in the season, however, it seemed as though some of these lapses were being corrected. In perhaps the team's finest outing thus far, Princeton beat a capable squad from Ursinus, 3-0, with Naticchia notching a pair of goals. Orpen, the goalkeeper, also played her first complete game in the net. (She had been rotating with Liane Kersey '91.)

The true test of the team's mettle lies ahead. Still on the schedule are games against Ivy powers Penn and Harvard, not to mention Penn State, which is ranked fifth in the country. (The latter game will be played during the week of midterm examinations—a coach's nightmare.) Following their match against the Nittany Lions, the Tigers will head to California during the midterm vacation for games against Stanford and the University of California at Berkeley, the top two squads on the West Coast. Wins against these strong programs would nicely accent a season of seasoning.

SCOREBOARD

Varsity Football

(2-2 overall; 1-1 Ivy)
Cornell 17, Princeton 14
Princeton 23, Fordham 14
Colgate 39, Princeton 13
Princeton 27, Brown 23

180-Pound Football

(1-2 overall; 0-1 E.L.F.L.)
Princeton 6, Penn 3
Navy 18, Princeton 7
Army 42, Princeton 8

Men's X-Country

(4-1 overall; 0-1 Ivy)
Princeton 25, St. John's 32
Princeton 25, Rider 30
Princeton 27, LaSalle 30
Princeton 15, Delaware 42
Penn 26, Princeton 33

Women's X-Country

(5-1 overall; 1-1 Ivy)
Princeton 15, Columbia 50
Princeton 19, Rutgers 41
Princeton 15, LaSalle 48
Princeton 15, Army 47
Princeton 15, Manhattan 47
Brown 24, Princeton 34

Men's Soccer

(3-4 overall; 3-1 Ivy)
Cornell 2, Princeton 1
Seton Hall 2, Princeton 1
Princeton 2, Dartmouth 0
Princeton 2, Penn 1
American 2, Princeton 1 (overtime)
Southern Connecticut 3, Princeton 1
Princeton 5, Brown 2

Women's Soccer

(4-4 overall; 1-2 Ivy)
Princeton 7, Franklin & Marshall 0
Cornell 4, Princeton 0
Princeton 1, Dartmouth 0
Monmouth 2, Princeton 0
Princeton 2, Texas Christian 1
Southern Methodist 3, Princeton 1
Princeton 3, Stony Brook 1
Brown 3, Princeton 1

Field Hockey

(5-3 overall; 2-1 Ivy)
Cornell 1, Princeton 0
Princeton 2, Rider 0
Princeton 1, Dartmouth 0
Princeton 3, Lehigh 0
Lafayette 4, Princeton 1
Delaware 1, Princeton 0
Princeton 3, Ursinus 0
Princeton 3, Brown 2 (overtime)

Princeton Exchange

FOR RENT

ENJOY THE LUXURY of your own villa, private pool overlooking the Caribbean, and staff of five to serve you. 3 BRs, 3 baths; exquisitely furnished; on one acre with terraced gardens in most exclusive residential neighborhood in Ocho Rios, Jamaica. Everyone should try this kind of living at least once. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70 (owner), 1165 Churchill Downs Rd., Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR waterfront beachhouse amid tropical gardens. Spectacular view, excellent snorkeling. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70. 1165 Churchill Downs, Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

PARIS: Elegant small studio for two just off the Seine in the 6th. 2 min. walk to the Louvre, Notre Dame. 609-924-4332.

BARBADOS: Home of the late John L. Roe Jr. '34. West Coast on bluff overlooking Caribbean. Three air-conditioned BRs, cook, maid, gardener, laundry, swimming pool. 215-527-0585.

PARIS: Rue de la Paix, Elegant apartment. Suitable for 2 or 3. 7-days preferred. $200/night. 212-838-1731.

STOCKING ISLAND, Exuma, Bahamas: Octagonal wood and glass home, spectacular 360-degree sea view. All modern conveniences. $1000 weekly for two with boat. Sam Burns '46, 407-231-2822. Brochure avail.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FLA.: Delightful beachfront condominium. Magnificent gulf view. Spacious 2 BR, 2 baths, loft. Pool. Tennis. Will Smith '63. 908-842-2096.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS (Virgin Gorda): Elegant new villa directly on own private snorkeling beach. Spectacular, panoramic view of North Sound including Bitter-End (dive school, etc.) Perfect weather year round. 3 BR, 2 bath, magnificent LR, wrap-around deck, full mod. kit., microwave, dishwasher; marina, fishing, pool, tennis. (Restaurant, provisioning, staff, car, available extra.) $2,500/wk. 609-921-7872.

EXCLUSIVE LUXURY 4 BR, 4 bath villa at private Tryall Club in Montego, Jamaica. Private pool, staff of four, gorgeous grounds overlook Caribbean and championship golf course. Also private tennis, scuba, beach and club house. Available at 2 or 3 BR rate off-season. 203-254-0228 (h) or Carol Shaw at 203-929-6391.

LONDON LUXURY FLATS: In Knightsbridge, Mayfair, Chelsea, Kensington, Whitehall Court. One, two, three bedrooms. Furnished and decorated by owners. Rented by day, seven day minimum; reduced rates when exceeding six months. Call during office hours: 518-686-7841.

KAUAI, HAWAII: 4 BR, NaPali Coast beach house. $650-850/wk. 703-560-7900.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant villa on blue Caribbean. Breathtaking views. Daily maid. All amenities. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

ST. THOMAS: 2 or 3 BRs on the water, spectacular downisland view. H. Macaleer. 919-942-8439.

ITALY: Renting delightful holiday accommodations, each personally selected. Tuscan castles, Umbrian farmhouses. Seaside villas, lakeview cottages. Centrally-located apartments Venice, Rome, Florence. Week/month. 415-821-9345.

SANIBEL ISLAND: Gulffront condominium, 2 BR with pool and tennis. Weekly/Monthly. Boozan '79, 201-522-8219

PORT ANTONIO, JAMAICA: "Nirvana:" Fully equipped, staffed, 3 bedroom, 2 bath, beachfront villa on mile-long, mostly deserted beach. Surf, few tourists. $800/wk. in season. 207-359-4447.

ST. JOHN: Off-season rates. 2 bedroom villa, pool, spectacular view. 508-668-2078.

LONDON RENTALS: Privately owned flats and houses in London's best areas offering comprehensive personal service at attractive prices. One week minimum stay. Call: A Place Like Home, London. 800-526-0215.

MAINE: Tenants Harbor and Port Clyde. Wonderful homes, fully furnished, immaculate and comfortable. $200-$2,000 per week, year round. C. Lang, POB 282, Tenants Harbor, ME 04860. 207-372-8906.

KAUAI LUXURY CONDO on the ocean in sunny Poipu. Fully equipped. 2 BRs, 2 baths, free tennis at Waiohai Tennis Club. $600/700 per week. 213-681-6869.

ST. BART'S, FRENCH WEST INDIES: Luxurious seaside villa surrounded by privacy, beautiful beaches and French restaurants. 412-687-2061.

PARIS. LEFT BANK APARTMENT: St. Germain, close to D'Orsay, Louvre, Rodin. Sunny. Fireplaces. Antiques. Luxuriously furnished. Memorable! 412-687-2061.

ROME, ITALY: 18th century villa amidst vineyards. Splendid views and location. 609-921-8595.

BEQUIA, GRENADINES: For rent charming beach house on Friendship Bay Beach. Sleeps four. Excellent cook/housekeeper provided. Phone 514-935-6444.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS: Our secluded beach house on beautiful Brewers Bay, Tortola. 3 baths, maid, bunk room. Weather perfect all year. Rates: R. H. Smith '42, Westover Park, Stamford, CT 06902; 203-323-2294.

MAD RIVER SUGARBUSH AREA: Comfortable farmhouse for up to 20 skiers. $350 per day. William Iler '51, 508-922-0010.

TORTOLA. BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS: Luxury 5 bedrm., 3 bath villa. Pool. 11 island view. Every amenity. Maid, car included. Two thousand, six hundred dollars weekly. 516-283-2299.

MONHEGAN ISLAND, MAINE: 4 BR, 2 bath. Panoramic island, ocean view. Available June-September, $700/wk. Bill Walker '64. 215-687-3271.

SKI VERMONT: Spacious 4 bedroom house near Stratton/Mt. Snow. 703-522-5454.

SAIL THE VIRGINS: The best beaches, best views, best of everything. Fully equipped 40' O'Day. 2 cabins, salon, galley, 2 heads, shower, sleeps 7. Captain, provisioning available. 201-747-3976.

VAIL, CO: 3 BR plus loft. 5 min. from gondola and great skiing. $225/night. $275 during Christmas and spring break. Bruce Brookings '67; 303-761-8815.

Princeton Alumni Weekly

Reaching 54,000
upscale, sophisticated
readers with every issue.

Published more frequently
than any other alumni magazine in the world.

Why advertise with
anyone else?

For details please contact:
Ms. Lolly O'Brien/Advertising Director
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William Street
Princeton, New Jersey
08540
(609) 258-4886

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK: Rocky Mountain seclusion, minutes from skiing. Creek-side home sleeps six. No X-mas. 303-926-3907.

ST. JOHN: Fabulous private home near beach. Peaceful. Furnished. Box 12287, St. Thomas, VI 00801. 809-775-4266.

SUN VALLEY, ID: Luxurious, spacious, ski condo at base of Mt. Baldy in Warm Springs. 3 BRs, 3 baths, fireplace. Walk one block to lifts, restaurants, shops, apres ski. Bill Travers '71, 607-257-7322.

CARIBBEAN, VIRGIN GORDA, B.V.I.: Leverick Bay. Three bedroom villa directly on water. Private grotto and dock for swimming, snorkeling, boating. Low $1,500. High $2,000/week. Owner 813-395-2985. Jack Zwick, 17080 Captiva Dr. S.W., P.O. Box 207, Captiva, FL 33924.

EXUMA, BAHAMAS: Magnificent hilltop view. Fully equipped, 4 bedrooms, van, private beach, housekeeper available. $1,000 weekly in season. 302-428-1455, evenings.

LUQUILLO, P.R.: Newly refurbished completely equipped 2 bedrm. 1 ba. apts. Beach 1 block, stores nearby. Special alumni rate. Beautiful beach and views. E. Pinney '47, P.O. Box 2210, Martinsburg, WV 25401. 304-263-4660.

FLORENCE ESTATE: Monthly or yearly. $1,500/month. 219-874-8740.

CARMEL, CALIFORNIA: Cute two bedroom, two bath home close to town. Weekly or longer-term rentals. Rosemarie Carter, 408-624-2930.

PROVIDENCIALES, Turks and Caicos, BWI. Luxury "Villa Camilla" offers beauty and serenity on undiscovered tropical island 90 minutes from Miami. 3 bedroom/3 bath-house fronts pristine 12-mile beach with virgin snorkeling, diving; bill, bone fishing. Sleeps 6-8. $2,000/wk. high; $1,500/wk. low. Guesthouse apartments sleep 2-4. $750/wk. high; $500/wk. low. '71. 617-731-2194.

SEABROOK ISLAND, S.C.: Near historic Charleston, oceanfront 1 BR condo, 2 baths. Sleeps 4; great golf, tennis, restaurants, pelicans. Hugh Hanson '47. 215-649-7335. Princeton discounts!

ENGLAND, COTSWOLDS: Thatched cottage. Near Stratford, Oxford, London, 3 sitting, 3 bedrooms, 1½ baths. Central heat. Oscarsson, Rockport, ME 04856.

3 BR, 2 BA CONDO overlooking Lido Beach, Sarasota. Beautiful view of gulf, walk to St. Armand's Circle, fine shops and great restaurants. Nov. Dec. Jan. $2,000/mo. 215-644-1296.

SPAIN: Lovely 4 BR villa (pool) overlooking Mediterranean/village. Hess '64. 203-688-9333.

VIEQUES, PUERTO RICO: 4 bedroom, 3 bath villa. Pool. 360 degree views. Beautiful beaches. Amherst '58.

PROVIDENCIALES, BWI: 3 BRs, 3 baths on private beach. $1,500/wk. 216-229-2978.

VERMONT, MORETOWN: Remodeled farmhouse sleeps 10. 15 minutes to Mad River Glen, 20 mins. to Sugarbush, 40 mins. to Stowe. For rent week, weekend, month. 802-229-0051.

CARIBBEAN PARADISE: Luxury 4 BR, 3 bath villa. Perfect 2-6 people. Enjoy heavenly views, gardens, privacy. Walk to 2 spectacular beaches. Tortola, British Virgins. Clipper Cleaver '41, Box 356 Adamsville, R.I. 02801. 401-635-4725(h), 617-742-8310(o).

TORTOLA, BVI: Three bedrooms overlooking two beaches. Maids, snorkeling, unspoiled. Bell, Box 3678, Greenville, DE 19807. 215-388-2241.

VAIL/BEAVER CREEK: Well-appointed 3 bedroom, 3 bath house 15 min. to Vail, 5 min. to Beaver Creek. Available Sat. to Sat. $850/wk. Charles Gaylord '34, 303-722-3474.

VIRGIN GORDA, BVI: 3 BR rental. Magnificent view. All conveniences. Quiet, reasonable. Some fall, spring vacancies. 516-676-2090.

PRINCETON: Furnished house near campus. 3 bedrooms, study/guest room, family room. January through July 609-921-6858.

FRANCE, PROVENCE: 2 BR cottage near Avignon. Fully furnished with garden and panoramic view. $500/month. 213-473-7530.

HANA, MAUI: One-bedroom executive getaway house with panoramic ocean/mountain views on 7.5-acre orchard/flower garden. $95/day, 4-day minimum. 213-654-2765.

ST. MAARTEN: A luxury condo/villa. Resort offering airy and air conditioned villas, full kitchens, private courtyards. Freshwater pool resting in a coral rim. Superb snorkeling on site. Unbelievable sunsets. Coral Shore, a "one of a kind". Maria Licari Haut, 201-832-6655.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR villa at Lagoon Point, sensational views. Weekly $840-$1260 winter; $560-$840 summer. Valentine, 8 Fern Way, Madbury, NH 03820. 603-742-3063.

NEW YORK CITY: 2 bedroom duplex in Greenwich Village. Furnished, good size and sunny. Available January-September 1991. 212-243-5637.

TORTOLA, BVI: Luxe! 3 bedrooms overlooking Smugglers Cove. Christmas/February $2500 week. Call Jane Romney 809-495-4594 for this or smaller rentals.

ELEUTHERA, BAHAMAS: Cotton Bay Club. Magnificent waterfront home. Trent Jones golf course 100 yards away. Snorkeling, tennis, 3 bedrooms, Bertram sportsfisherman boat, pool, housekeeper. 617-722-7045.

FOR SALE

MANHATTAN: If selling a co-op, condominium, or townhouse, call about our unique 200 brokerage firm multi-list program. Sharon Baum w'62, S.W. Bird & Co., 331 Madison Ave., New York, NY; 212-599-8450 ext. 272.

PROVENCE, FRANCE: Authentic 18th century farmhouse restored and modernized. In medieval perched village 2 minutes down cobblestones from chateau. Terraced garden, pool, view of Lubéron mountains. Available after July. Asking $550,000. Mills '39, rue Tracapelle, 84220 Gordes, France.

EASTERN SHORE OF MD: Seeking residential property in waterfront mid-shore area, convenient to Washington, Baltimore and Phila.? Call Juana Mestres w'57. Clare Hughes Real Estate, Cambridge, MD 21613. 301-228-4236 (o), 301-228-4787 (h).

CIRCA 1760 SALTBOX FARMHOUSE: Original fireplace and baking oven. Baking for soldiers encamped for the Battle of Bennington done here. Plank floors with rose head nails; Christian Doors and "Morning Staircase"; 5 bedrooms, 8 rooms, 2 baths. Apartment over garage, grounds include perennials, stone walls, birch cluster, apple orchard, views. 9.94 acres. $375,000. Coldwell Banker Hoisington Realty, P.O. Box 87, Bennington, Vermont 05201. 802-442-8337.

BIDDEFORD POOL, MAINE: Unique 1 BR + den condominium in quiet, charming summer community 30 minutes south of Portland. Prime location. Harbor + ocean views from large deck. Walk to wonderful sand beach, $160,000. Owner '54, 212-258-6510 or 207-282-6010.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK, COLORADO: Unique properties. 10% of commission proceeds donated, in your name, to the Yellowstone Bighorn Research Association in memory of my father, Professor Erling Dorf, Hon. '33. Bob Dorf 303-476-2421.

ISLAND HOUSE: See "For Rent, Stocking Island."

ST. JOHN, U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS: Luxury loft suite condominium at Galloways Point, Cruz Bay. Sleeps 4, fully equipped kitchen, tastefully furnished. On site pool, rental management, maid service and Ellington's Restaurant. 5 minute walk to town and ferry, panoramic harbor view, cooled by prevailing trade winds. $275,000. Charles Detwiller day 617-246-7400, evening 617-237-3026.

EXCEPTIONAL HISTORIC, fully and authentically restored Colonial on secluded waterfront point, near the Chesapeake Bay. Elegant primary home or weekend retreat has random width pine floors, three fireplaces, three or four bedrooms, 3½ baths, two car garage, porches, mature landscaping. Marketing video available. Call Juana Mestres w/57 at Clare Hughes Real Estate, Cambridge, MD 21613, member of "Employee Relocation Council". 301-228-4236/301-228-4787.

SHORT HILLS: Magnificently and completely restored 1880's Victorian. Unbelievable craftsmanship. Brick walls surround lush trees and formal gardens. Walk to village and NYC commute. Helen Hagerman w/30, Raymond Connolly, Realtors. 201-376-5323.

EASTERN SHORE OF VA: New Chesapeake Bay waterfront home on 2 acres. Deep water. All rooms water view. $280,000. Call owner 804-787-4280. Lynn Corson '53.

EASTERN SHORE OF MD: Prestigious waterfront building lot, 2 acres, minutes from Oxford. Call Marguerite Beebe, Latham Realtors, Easton, MD 21601. 301-822-2234(w), 301-822-6248(h).

GREAT CAMANOE, BVI: Secluded home, magnificent view on private island. 2 BR, baths. Land Rover and Whaler. Doug Martin '54. 203-426-2928.

FOR SALE/FOR RENT

NANTUCKET—Come join the 400 happy Princeton families. We have large and small rentals, investment opportunities, estates and commercial enterprises. AND we give your investments TENDER, LOVING CARE—PREFERRED PROPERTIES. Nancie B. Taylor, w/43, Lucy T. Eaton, d/43. 508-228-2320, 800-338-7715.

WASHINGTON, DC, METROPOLITAN area, Northern Virginia, Maryland. Sales, rentals, land, property management. Colleen Finks w/61, associate broker, Pardoe & Graham, 6729 Curran St., McLean, VA 22101; 703-734-7020; eves., 703-821-2850.

FOR EXCHANGE

MONTEREY BAY, CALIFORNIA: Beach front luxury condo in exchange for like: Italy, Switzerland, France. Duke Slichter '54. 415-941-3244.

RESORTS & TRAVEL

ENJOY THE REAL NEW ZEALAND interestingly and comfortably guided by knowledgeable New Zealanders. Write: Grant Simpson, Whitianga, New Zealand.

LONDON, ENGLAND: Luxury self-catering apartments in the heart of Mayfair. We offer you the comfort and privacy of a recently converted period Georgian town house. British Breaks, Ltd., P.O. Box 1176, Middleburg, Virginia 22117. Telephone 703-687-6971. Fax 703-687-6291.

FLORIDA KEYS, BIG PINE KEY: Fantastic open water view, Key Deer Refuge, National Bird Sanctuary, stilt house, 3/2, screened porches, fully furnished, stained glass windows, swimming, diving, fishing, boat basin. 305-665-3832.

"NOT ONCE did I feel like a tourist; I felt an Italian friend was showing me his ITALY, his favorite spots." La Pergola, Tours, Inc.: A special company for the special traveler. Call for 1991 tour schedule. 914-358-6035.

ARIZONA GUEST RANCH: Riding ranch-bred horses, tennis, pool, fantastic birding, shooting, all in a verdant valley surrounded by historic mountains. Season, Nov. 1 to May 15, limited to 40 guests. Brochure, Circle Z Ranch, Box 194 P-1, Patagonia, AZ 85624, winter 602-287-2091, summer 814-425-3768, Don Simmons P'49 manager.

BED & BREAKFAST

MANHATTAN B & Bs and private apartments. Prime locations, attractive rates. AT HOME IN NEW YORK, P.O. Box 407, NYC 10185. Lois Rooks, Director. 212-956-3125; fax 212-247-3294.

D.C. AREA BED & BREAKFAST: 15 minutes from downtown. 301-229-4835.

WANTED TO BUY

OLD TRAINS: Private collector interested in sets and collections. Contact David A. Hoffman, M.D. '54, 1330 Penn Ave., Wyomissing, PA 19610. 215-373-4271.

RARE BOOKS AND FIRST EDITIONS: We are interested in purchasing libraries or single volumes from the 15th to the 20th century. Top prices paid. Also, expert appraisals for individuals or institutions. David L. O'Neal '60, Antiquarian Booksellers, Inc., 234 Clarendon St., Boston, MA 02116; 617-266-5790.

BUSINESS SERVICES

EUROPE 1992! Doing business in Germany? Princeton grad provides full range of information engineering, personnel and management consulting services. David T. Fisher '69, Personatec GmbH, Wilhelmstrasse 16, 6200 Wiesbaden, W. Germany. Tel. 011-49-6121-305-005. Fax. 011-49-6121-305-006.

PROFESSIONAL TAX PLANNING, ACCOUNTING, AUDIT REPRESENTATION. Personal and business. Enrolled to practice before IRS. By appointment. 212-947-6031. Virgil M. Cummins '67 (EA), 430 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10001.

GOODS & SERVICES

PERSONALIZED TICKET SERVICE: Broadway, concerts, opera, sports. Entertainment, Incl 609-799-7077.

CRAYFISH: Shipped live. Write for prices. Pyramid Farms Crayfish, 4340 Egypt Rd., Cambridge, MD 21613.

JOHN LENNON 1970 Bag One lithographs, signed, numbered. Buy/sell. Dorothy Rogers Art Search, Boston. 617-267-6040.

RARE IRISH WILD SMOKED SALMON: Delivery worldwide. 800-688-6275 Giftmark (Ireland). $70/2 pound side. (Spectacular 2 ft. long fish, serves 20) Free recipes.

PRINCETON WEDGWOOD PLATES: Blue/white 1930's. Newton Williams 1928. 503-359-9250.

DO YOU LOVE YOUR WORK? If you don't, we'll help you define and find the work you want to do. We'll work with you until you've found your new career. Private sessions or small groups. Lois Schneider Career Counseling, 212-673-8861.

STEINWAY & SONS BABY GRAND PIANO. Brown mahogany cabinet/Sheraton style. Model "O" manufactured 1909. Excellent condition. Call Stuart Nunnery '71. 215-794-5135.

OPPORTUNITIES

YOUNG MD with great idea seeks capital partner(s). R. Austin '84, 54 Mendosa Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94116. 415-759-6389.

EDUCATION

ANXIOUS ABOUT COLLEGE OR GRADUATE SCHOOL APPLICATIONS? Former Ivy admission officer will help you right from the start. College Planning Associates: 212-496-2656.

PLACE YOUR AD IN THE PRINCETON EXCHANGE

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____ State: _____ Zip: _____

Telephone, Work: _____ Home: _____

My ad should run _____ time(s), beginning the month of _____

Classification: _____

Text: _____

Payment for all insertions must accompany initial request. My check for $_____ is enclosed. Rates per insertion: 1-4 insertions, $1.20 per word; 5-9 insertions, $1.15 per word; 10-17 insertions, $1.10 per word. Send to: Princeton Exchange, Princeton Alumni Weekly, 41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540 (609)258-4886. No phone orders please. Issues are published 17 times from September through July. Ads will appear five-six weeks after receipt. When calculating payment, multiply number of words X number of insertions X rate per word to arrive at total price. P.O. Box number counts as two words, phone number as one word. No charge for zip code or class numerals. We cannot accept P.O. box numbers. Please make checks payable to Princeton Alumni Weekly.

Digitized by Google

12

ARTHUR C. HOLDEN
Box 182
Washington, CT 06793; 203-868-7063

Most of those who have had as much experience as members of the Class of 1912, at least in time, would be willing to vouch for the frequently heard statement that it is very unfortunate when one member of the human race becomes immeasurably more powerful than it is possible for his fellows to be. Most of the rest of us realize this and are quite willing to denounce the type of dictatorship which has been unfortunately prevalent in the 20th century. At the beginning of the century, indeed, President Theodore Roosevelt was one of those who joined in denouncing individuals who drew their power from amassing great wealth.

Yet Princeton has just learned that one of its graduates of the Class of 1932; namely, Laurance Rockefeller, has just made a gift of $21 million to their University for the purpose of creating a Center for Human Values. Certainly, it is an example of power well-used by an individual. It will assist other individuals to make a sincere effort to understand those who have devoted their lives to developing particular human values. The idea of a center seems to offer opportunity for the better understanding of the relation of human values as well as the coordination of values.

Certainly, all other news is eclipsed by the news that a single member of the Class of 1932 has decided to utilize great personal financial power and to transfer that power to his University to be apportioned in the creation of better understanding of human values and their interrelation.

13

ALISON R. BRYAN
Box F
Frenchtown, NJ 08825

We are proud to record the names of donors of 1989-90 memorial gifts in honor of classmates, from 11 widows and seven family members. If any addresses are needed, please phone Annual Giving at 609-255-3373 or send a card to A.G., New South Building, Princeton, NJ 08544. An updated list of Class widows and next of kin will appear in a future Class notes column.

The donors are: Mrs. Russell H. Davis, in memory of her father, Porter K. Crooks; Miss Louise Sullivan, daughter of Arthur J. Sullivan; Mrs. Richard H. Staehle, widow of Richard H. Staehle; Mrs. James McK. Rose, widow of James M. Rose; Mrs. John C. Weeks, daughter of Charles C. Dunlap; Miss Eleanor H. Nimick, daughter of Francis B. Nimick; Mrs. Andrew G. Wilson, daughter of Prof. Robert D. Baldwin. The list will be continued in the next notes column.

We have been in touch with 1913 memorial scholarship student Stephen Simmons Absecko '90 and two students whose summer activities were helped by 1913 funds, Tiffany Ho '90 and Irma Martinez '92 of Los Angeles. Tiffany's parents are originally from China.

We have heard from Mrs. Lois Rystrom of Winston-Salem, N.C., Mrs. Florence Bruder of Fair Haven, N.J., daughter of Judge Joseph H. Smith; and Mrs. Toni Howell of Winston-Salem, widow of Lawrence Day Howell; and Mrs. Andrew G. Wilson of Rochester, Mich., daughter of Robert Baldwin.

We have received a letter from Mrs. Joan Cowan Bowman, of Short Hills, N.J., daughter of the late Ruth Cowan, a 1913 widow. She sends a 1913 banner, which she found in the closet of her parents' home shortly after her mother's death.

Mrs. Man Randolph has moved. Her new address is: 656 19th Pl., Vero Beach, FL 32962.

17

ICE GRAMMER, c/o Chemical Bank
30 Rockefeller Plaza, Ste. 6100
New York, NY 10112

Steve Hirsch returned in early Sept. from a three-week trip to London, Denmark, Paris, and Amsterdam. He had a grand time.

The Class lost one of its most beloved members when Percy H. Buchanan passed away on Sept. 7. Perc took great interest in '17, serving as president and Class notes secretary. He will be sorely missed. A Class memorial will appear shortly.

We are also saddened to learn of the death of George Kurzman's widow on July 30.

18

JARVIS CROSWELL
Meadow Lakes, Apt. 3108
Hightstown, NJ 08520

We are in need of news items, so please send along any tidbits you hear of. For example, Kenneth Stevenson '47, son of our classmate Stuart Stevenson, sent along a copy of a story from the July 28 Austin American-Statesman. Seems that Stuart's youngest granddaughter, Irene Stevenson (her father is Stuart Jr. '43), is off to Moscow to work for the Soviet news agency Tass. Irene grew up in New York and Chicago, graduated from Princeton in '86, and has just wound up studies for a master's at the Univ. of Texas. At Tass she will endeavor to make the English language wire service more marketable by eliminating the clumsiness of translation that has sometimes marked its stories. Tass has found a three-room apartment for this most enterprising young lady and she and her large dog should have moved in by the time this story is printed. More power to her, I say.

So you see, there are all sorts of interesting stories to be sent in, if not about you and your activities, about those of your progeny. So drop a line to Alan Kirk, 827 Turkey Run, McLean, VA 22101. Beat Yale—and Harvard.

19

GEORGE B. LARSON
14 Lake Forest Dr.
Charlottesville, VA 22901

The fall is moving along and every 1919er. We hope everyone enjoyed it.

20

SALLY S. McALPIN W'20
Box 670
Princeton, NJ 08542

Maybe your secretary should be fired! Instead of buckling down to the Class Notes in her first week home, she gadded. Her very pleasurable fling included the 50th anniversary of a school 45 miles away, a day in New York, and three days in Maine at a grandson's wedding. Where, oh where, is the time for well-considered Class notes. Apologies, apologies.

After 11 years of Sally Frank '80's court case with the eating clubs we might bury that piece of news along with the well covered problem of drinking. This fall we read in the N.Y. Times of a Princeton senior, Wendy Kopp, who after raising over $1,000,000, has launched a sort of peace corps for teachers which she has named Teach for America. It is a summer teaching institute that will place 500 recent graduates in rural or inner city schools. Wendy obviously is endowed with organization ability, self confidence, intelligence, and enthusiasm. The best of luck to you Wendy. May you be turning the dearth of teachers around.

Another newspaper tells us that a number of educational institutions are incorporating community service work in their curricula, such as requiring the tutoring of grade school students, or giving academic credits for seminars in which in-class work and volunteer projects are combined.

With pride we close with a newspaper clipping headed "Princeton Alumni Form National Service Group to Spur Involvement in Community Service Projects," referring to the Class of 1955's Project 55.

Finally, let us bring Coué to our private cheers for our football team: "Day by day, in every way, may they become better and better."

We have a memorial in this issue.

21

A. EDWARD CONOVER
331 Lower Dolington Rd., Apt. C-4
Newtown, PA 18940

We recently asked the Class widows who are regularly receiving the PAW if they wished to continue to do so. Seventy-one percent said "yes" with enthusiasm. Typical answers included: "I enjoy it very much." "I always read it with great interest," "It's great," "I couldn't exist without it." "I read it cover to cover." It looks as though the editors deserve a round of applause.

James McDonnell's widow, Priscilla has a heightened interest in the PAW—she has five grandchildren who graduated since 1986, and three more who are still undergraduates. Heinie Leb's widow Eleanore lives a very active life. She swims every day and bowls in the winter. Last spring she was driven to her 60th reunion at Wellesley.

Well, you can't win 'em all. When I reported my talk with John Fawcett last spring I mentioned his "two sons." I really know better. The first "son" was a daughter, Grace Helen ("Gay"). She recently returned from a twenty-year stay in Paris, France, where, among other things, she was a manager with N.C.R. Corp. John's second "son" is son John who lives with four children and wife in Snohomish, Wash. He occasionally visits Berkeley to lend a hand with the "heavy work."

22

JACK REYNOLDS
1660 Park Ave.
Quakertown, PA 18951

The 1922 Class Council has elected John G. Carriller '60, son of Harold, as the assistant secretary. Please address all future correspondence to 103 E. 84th St., N.Y., NY 10028.

23

LISEY GOOD
201 W. Evergreen Ave., Apt. 716
Philadelphia, PA 19118

Betsey and Alan Carrick report that they had a beautiful trip to England this past spring. They were blessed with perfect weather for the duration of their two-week trip.

Donald Griffin hosted an early-Aug. luncheon at Prospect to welcome the new head of Princeton's R.O.T.C. program, Lt. Col. Dotsey. In attendance were President Harold Shapiro, former Dean of the College Jeremiah Finch, a dozen or more current and former members of the University staff and faculty, as well as prominent local alumni.

Barksdale Maynard '88, writes to report "a Princeton encounter of a very unusual kind." He says, "While viewing the partial phase of the July 22 total solar eclipse from a lonely wooded hilltop south of Bellingham, Wa., I encountered the Rev. Dr. Charles Woodbridge, who had, by chance, come to the same remote spot to view the setting crescent sun. In chatting we quickly discovered our Princeton connection, and as we watched the dim sun sinking into the Strait of Georgia, we sang 'Old Nassau' together!"

24

RICHARD H. HOMES
862 Prospect Ave.
Winnetka, IL 60093

Sam Benedict writes from Cincinnati that he and Betty are still living in the house they built in 1936, where they are very comfortable, and that the only trips they make are to their cottage in the Les Cheneaux Islands in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

Lyman Gilmore has moved from Peterborough, N.H., to 924 West Kiowa St., Colorado Springs, where he will be close to his son William and his two granddaughters. His trip west reminded him that he was moving in the steps of his great-grandfather, who followed the Oregon Trail in about 1850. Having been born and raised in Nebraska, Lyman said he was glad to be returning to his western roots. He is very well mentally, but has trouble seeing and walking.

Josephine and Peter Doelgers spent the summer in Whitefield, N.H. They are now back at their home in West Palm Beach. They, too, may attend our next reunion.

Dorothy and Paul Barringer were in Australia for about a month recently. They were there to attend a meeting in Perth devoted to the study of meteors. Some of the largest craters are in Australia. We shall report on this in a later issue.

25

JOHN L. K. JENNEY
Box 123
Montchanin, DE 19710

The annual Class lunch will be held at the Princeton Club of New York on Dec. 6. Harry Steeger is making the arrangements.

Bunny (whose name was omitted from the 65th Reunion Directory) and Ted Stevenson lingered at their summer residence in Swannanoo, N.C., to be with his twin brother, Don (Yale '25), who was suffering from a stroke, before returning to California. Following a conversation at Reunions, he forwarded information on the Medical Benevolent Foundation, for which he has been working as a board member for the past 20 years. The organization helps 75 hospitals and several hundred community health projects in 26 developing countries to recondition used medical equipment and recruit volunteers to serve overseas and raise funds for training nationals. (Contributions welcome!)

Pecherman and Jenney were the senior members (accompanied by their much more junior wives) at the Princeton Alumni College in Colmar—the sister city of Princeton in Alsace and "Crossroads for the European Integration—Horizon 1993." Stan Brown '53 (son of '26) and his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of our Phil Sturges and parents of Katarina '90, were also with us. Stan, who had represented the law firm in Brussels in the 1970s, gave an informative talk on the development of the European Community since the Treaty of Rome in 1957. It will be recalled that Bink Butterworth was our first ambassador to the Iron and Steel Community and the E.E.C., residing for several years in Brussels and Luxembourg.

In sending contributions to the 65th, Steve Cleaves wrote, "Sorry I won't be with you, but will see you at the 70th." Apparently, in propitiation for his absence, he sent your secretary a birthday card which, when opened, greeted him with a musical "Happy Birthday to You." Other cards received are acknowledged with thanks.

26

ROBERT WOHLFORTH
57 Rockwell Rd.
Ridgefield, CT 06877

Dick Schwartz continued his winning swimming competition last August at the 10th annual Penn. Senior Games in Shippensburg, Penn., capturing three Silver medals; one in the free style, one in the back stroke, and one in the breast stroke, and qualifying for the U.S. Natl. Senior Sports Classic, to be held in Syracuse, N.Y., June 28-July 3, 1991. This is the third year Dick has competed successfully, and if he continues to maintain or better his records next June, he surely will be 1926's Old Guard aquatic star.

Bill Master had a grandson in this year's graduating class who was married to another graduate in the University Chapel in July. Bill writes from Waverly, Penn., that Lucy's illness will keep him from attending our mini-reunion this October.

"Highland Forests" is a general partnership owning 5,000 acres of choice woodlands and waterways in N.Y.'s great Adirondack upstate area. The partnership's purpose is to preserve its holdings from threat of development. Key member of this partnership and longtime resident is Koert Burnham, who, as one of the 12 Highland Forests partners, has chronicled the story of this unique project upon its 21st anniversary. According to the advance contents page sent by Koert, his account runs some 125 pages and 21 chapters, and gives a detailed record of the land involved and the successful preservation efforts of the partnership. Among original partners was Peter S. Paine Jr. '57, also a Rhodes Scholar.

Those from 1926 attending the Princeton Today weekend program last May were Mary and Woaz Supplie, Patty and Bill Nevius, Frances and Ed Wilson, Buzz Hallock, and Nate Moyse.

Pres Hazelwood is back home in Oldfield, Long Island, N.Y., after spending part of the summer touring Wisconsin and Minnesota with his new bride.

We have a memorial in this issue.

28

R. PARK JOHNSON
Box 28
Penney Farms, FL 32079; 904-284-8696

The indefatigable Atkinsons, Ken and Ikey, on their 18th house exchange vacation: this time, in Aug. 1989, it was in Ottawa, Canada. They were impressed with this lovely, northern capital city with handsome government buildings, rivers, canals, lakes, and well-kept parks and playgrounds. The many changes of colorfully arrayed guards, in red uniforms and bearskin headgear, at various official buildings, are a great tourist attraction, "for children young and old," as Ken expressed it. The Atkinsons had a daughter and two grandsons with them, and the latter especially enjoyed the children's museum.

In reply to questions, Ken says that the house exchange system is economical, but once in a while somewhat adventurous. In Ireland, for instance, they once lived in the ill-furnished home of a prominent government official, and it was so cold in July that every morning when Ken got up, he turned on every burner on the stove, the toaster oven, and anything else that radiated!

On another vacation, it was cold in the summer in a farmhouse near Carlisle, along the Scottish border. In this case there was a coal stove that kept them warm. However, this necessitated a daily chore of removing the ashes. They were surrounded by a multitude of friendly sheep. The car that went with the house was very good, except for the minor problem that the brakes failed the first time they drove it. Getting to a repair shop in the nearest town was a harrowing experience, as Ken held the hand brake while Ikey drove.

We're glad that this is a continued story, and we look forward eagerly to the next installment about house exchange number 19.

29

LOUIS F. KEMP
12 Winthrop Rd.
Guilford, CT 06437; 203-453-4646

Inky Boyd didn't remember this Alces Americana moose as being a member of 1929. But wouldn't he make a fitting Class mascot? Inky and Addie escaped the blistering St. Louis heat, getting relief with a stay in Southwest Harbor, Me., where they ran into this handsome moose. Vacationing took your scribe to Santa Barbara, Calif., for a visit with his brother, Dave '23. I was entertained at Samarkand, a retirement community, treated to a rodeo, and witnessed the famous Santa Barbara Fiesta, known as "Old Spanish Days."

While west, I enjoyed brief contacts with Bernie de la G. Graeff, who used to live in Maryland, but has been in Montecito, Calif., for 20 years, and who has a daughter in Pasadena and two granddaughters; and Grabam Nash, 86 years old, who has the distinction of being the oldest in the Class (he was 21 when he entered as a freshman). He started with Bankers Trust, continued in banking in California, and has been in Santa Barbara for 40 years.

Fult Wright, in Montecito, has survived a series of operations, has used a walker for five years, and faces a hearing and sight loss. Nevertheless, Fult was in good spirits.

We have memorials in this issue.

30

HUBERT A. "RED" SCHNEIDER
8008 Westover Rd.
Bethesda, MD 20814

Gil Fitzbugh has moved back to N.Y.C., after having lived in California since his retirement from Metropolitan Life. To even things up DeWitt Manning has moved from New Canaan, Conn., to California, and is living in a care center in El Monte.

José Rafael Moneo, the Spanish architect who is chairman of the architecture dept. at Harvard, is designing his first building to be erected in the U.S.—a museum and cultural center at Wellesley College, made possible in large part by a gift from Kathryn (a Wellesley graduate) and Sbelby Davis.

Red Schneider continues his travels. In late July he made a passage up the Norwegian coast on the local coastal steamer, stopping at some 35 small towns and villages untouched by the larger cruise ships. The trip started in Bergen and went all the way up to the North Cape and beyond the Russian border. Red rates the scenery as some of the most spectacular in the world. In September, Red took his daughter on a quick grand tour of Europe, stopping in Paris, several places in Switzerland, the Rhine, and ending up in London. Red has sold his sailboat, having regretfully decided that he was too old to go sailing singlehanded. However, he still pokes around various Eastern shore creeks and gunk holes in his power boat. During the past summer he was visited by Anita and Dave McMullin and Associate Fran Adams, followed by Skippy and Fred Frost. Red welcomes visitors, especially from 1930, so give him a call if you would like to spend some time on the Eastern shore, renowned as the "place of pleasant living."

We regret to report the death of Associate Eleanor Ross, widow of Lee Ross, in Princeton on July 22. She is survived by two sons, Hamilton R. '55, and John Q. '58. We also note with regret the death of Associate Caroline Fisher, widow of Dave Fisher. She died on June 18 and is survived by a son, David Jr. '61, and a grandson, David III '91.

31

HUGH T. KERN
15-01-U Meadow Lakes
Hightstown, NJ 08520; 609-448-4100

In the current issue of ROWING NOTES, the newsletter of the University Rowing Assn., there is a feature article and picture of last year's undefeated varsity women's crew. Pulling an oar at number two was Laura Matlack '91, granddaughter of our Betty and the late Bob Matlack. Laura will be back for another season, and we all wish her luck.

From Woody English comes a clipping from the Pingry School Review about Herbert K. England, from whom we haven't heard in a long time. Well, "Herb" or "King" (for Kingsbury) has been very busy. He was recently honored by the Warren County (N.J.) freeholders for his service as school superintendent, as a member of Meals on Wheels and the county office on aging. He was voted Man of the Year by the Chamber of Commerce and Outstanding Senior Citizen of Warren County. Whew! As Casey once remarked, "they say you can't do it, but that doesn't nearly always work." How does Woody know about Herb England? He happens to be a Pingry classmate and writes the '27 class notes for the Review.

It has been suggested that for our 60th reunion this coming June, we set up an exhibit table somewhere, with books written by '31ers. We have already noted books by the late Nellie Rose, by Bill Doerflinger, Bob Hall, and Dave Lavender, and Whit Darrow must have a book of drawings somewhere. Norrie Houghton is in the process of publishing his memoirs, and there must be many more authors among us. This is an open invitation to let us know. Remember Peter Arno? A caption for one of his cartoons of two lovers in a clinch: "Have you read any good books lately?"

32

MATLAND A. EDEY
Seven Gates Farm
Vineyard Haven, MA 02568

A recent letter from the Alumni Council informs us that for five years in a row at least 60 classes have not missed filing a column in each issue of the ALUMNI WEEKLY. What the letter didn't say is that 1932 has NEVER missed a column. It has been relatively easy for this writer to keep the record intact, thanks to a cadre of classmates who keep the news flowing this way, also because the WEEKLY is now a biweekly. The men who really sweated it out and who were truly responsible for building our remarkable record had to do it every week—and they did it for 45 years. Let's not forget them: Buzz Roberts, Ty Kennedy, Bill Piel, Zack Taylor, Jim O'Malley, DeWitt Stern, and Amos Eno.

A letter from Bill Ryckman finds him in good shape, and grateful for his memories of Princeton, and in addition for 50 fine years of marriage to the same wife, for a happily married daughter, and for a son who is a senior V.P. of the Manufacturers Hanover bank. Eric Kocber writes to remind us of the publication of yet another book, THE MAKING AND UNMAKING OF A FOREIGN SERVICE OFFICER (Jim Macfarland please note). Paul Brand, still grieving over the loss of his wife, would appreciate hearing from friends. Yet another scholarship with a '32 link has been established, this one by Lawrie and Arch Kerr in memory of Lawrie's father.

We have memorials in this issue.

33

ARTHUR MOODY
600 E. Cathedral Rd., Apt. A314
Philadelphia, PA 19128

This is the time of year when the southward and, for some, westward trek begins. A note from Ray Carter, then in Rockport, Me., tells of some classmates Down East. A number of the herd have now received 80th birthday greetings, though the real flood will come in 1990 and 1991. Anyway, Ray sent a photo of himself and Bink Dannenbaum singing lustily, Bink having celebrated his 80th on July 11. Ray goes on: "Through the fog in Maine appeared Lil and Don Johnson in Owl's Head; Sophia Godfrey championing at the bit to go to Broadmoor reunion; Keldel championing at the bit because there is no golf in Ile au Haut nor does he have a boat this summer; Hank Thompson is hiding in Hancock Point."

The Kent School QUARTERLY's summer issue contains a feature headed "Puck Purnell to Attend Divinity School," in which we read that Erl G. Purnell (Kent '64) is leaving his post as alumni secretary and director of Annual Giving at Kent to attend Yale Divinity School as a postulant for ordination in the Episcopal Church from the Diocese of Connecticut. Puck says: "My parents introduced me to the Church and I suppose they thought that Kent School would strengthen that start. It did. I drifted away from it for a while in the 1970s but returned because the Church represents the need most people have, certainly one I have, to seek divine grace." Puck is, of course, the son of our late distinguished classmate, J. Stanley Purnell. Puck's brother David is Class of '68.

Curly Marsb is concerned with the mailing of the summer newsletter. There is some evidence that not everyone received it. Anyone who didn't should write or phone Curly, who has a supply. His address is 20 Clark Road, Bernardsville, NJ 07924; 201-766-1532.

We have memorials in this issue.

34

RALPH K. FITCHER
4347 Province Line Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

John Evans calls attention to an Associated Press dispatch from London reporting the death of one John Evans, "a former coal miner regarded by the Guinness Book of Records as the world's oldest man." He was 112. The only similarity with our John Evans seems to lie in the description of the deceased by his son, aged 79, who said his father "always had a very lively mind and just loved life."

Betty and Jay Hambleton spent their summer as usual at Fish Creek, Wisc., on an island a few miles north of Sturgeon Bay. Jay describes it as "once idyllic . . . now the destination of all tour buses."

Doc Talbot is enjoying "the unexpected pleasure of living to 78" and hopes "to be able to work until about two days before the funeral." He and Sylvia are content in their two lives, one in Chicago at their jobs (he practices medicine, she administers a large patent-law firm), the other just across the border in Wisconsin for two days a week, "where we are foresting 25 acres and building a retreat for R and R."

Bill Weaver, who authored and published privately in 1979 an autobiography called NEVER A DULL MOMENT, has written "an update in my budding career," called AND FURTHERMORE! covering the 1980s. In his preface he says he saw the earlier book "receive such a fantastic reception and establish me in the Forbes 400 of egos, along with Donald Trump, I feel compelled to take pen in hand once again. "This book," he says, "is written for my own enjoyment, and I make no bones about it."

Some class!

We have a memorial in this issue.

35

JOSEPH C. HAZEN JR.
94 Essex Rd.
Summit, NJ 07901

LIFE-CARE. After 55 years in the real estate business, Hunter Moss retired early this year. Two months later he unretired to become a "retired housing specialist, helping older people through the maze of life-care living." He and Helen themselves live in a life-care community in Gladwyne, Penn. Among the growing number of classmates who have also switched to life-care living is Bryce Schreiner. He and Jean are two of the 246 residents of Friendship Village, situated on 62 acres of a former golf course in Upper St. Clair, Penn. He says, "It's a little like living in college again, without courses and exams." Last summer Anne and Jack Duff came to visit the Schreiners, to inspect their retirement community and to look at Bryce's 47 reunion pictures. The Duffs live in Pittsburgh, but they weekend on their farm near St. Clair.

IN BRIEF. Asked for news, Pat Humpfrey is terse: "Never bit a dog. Don't plan to. All I do is read published trash, write unpublished trash, maintain grounds and buildings, and take my pills." Pat retired from Martin Marietta in the Virgin Islands in 1974. He and Liz now live in Aiken, S.C.

WELCOME BACK. It's been a long time since the Class caught up with Charlie Stauffer and Gil Glass. Charlie, who lives in Lancaster, Penn., reports that aging and the remnants of polio combined to put him in a wheelchair a few years ago. "However," he says, "I am quite well and am enjoying life." He and Dotty went to Alaska last May and "recommend the trip to those who enjoy mountains and wildlife—real wild life, not the reunion kind of wildlife." Before his retirement Charlie managed a storage company in Lancaster. Gil Glass reports more succinctly: "Retired Cape Cod summers; Key Biscayne winters; Providence, R.I., in between. Two children, both professors. Life goes on, but temporarily grounded by chemotherapy." Gil was once the manager of a prominent manufacturer of children's clothing.

We have memorials in this issue.

36

JAMES Q. BENSEN
24 Aylesbury Cir., Windermere
Madison, CT 06443

President Paul Hancock sent us this photo taken last May at the Class mini-reunion at Tides Inn in Va. Those taking a special tour are identified on the steps of General Robert E. Lee's home (l-r, top): Campbell Groel, Em Hazen, Bobbie Jessor; (middle row) Dorothy Porter, Ellie Groel, Gordon Cutler, Bill Osborne, Bettie Anne Osborne, Scott Jones, Helen Jones; (bottom row) Evelyn Hancock, George Brown, Jean Brown, and Betty Cutler.

Fred Kimball, in reply for our plea for some news, wrote of an ongoing interesting activity: "In Westport, Conn., I'm starting my 26th year as a justice of the peace, having been elected to that position in 1964. I now perform about 40 wedding ceremonies a year throughout Fairfield City, and beyond, within Connecticut. The 26-year total probably exceeds 700 marriages. Jeanne, still my bride after 62 years and still a superb teacher of voice, serves as hostess for weddings in our house or as navigator when I drive to obscure locations elsewhere. Champagne is no longer a novelty for us.

The many different people we meet represent an endless and fascinating variety of educational backgrounds, religious beliefs, racial strains, national origins, and degrees of poverty or wealth. In slums or mansions . . . and Fairfield County has plenty of both . . . or in ordinary homes like our own, no two weddings are ever the same!"

37 STANISLAW F. MEDUNA
250 Broadway, Rm. 2104
New York, NY 10007

If you want to buy old '37 beer cans, contact Herbert Blume, 655 Springdale Terr., Morrisville, Penn. (215-896-5622).

All those in the San Francisco area, look for the notice of a Class luncheon Jan. 29, 1991, sponsored by Jack Irwin, on the way to visit his sheep ranch in Australia.

Dutch Meyer's grandson Steven, born at the time of our 50th, spent a week in July with his parents and sister Sally Rose, born Apr. 2, 1990, in Hawaii. The son (Frank III or Steven?) is building a house in Kauai and moving there next year. Dutch also says to look out for Jack Eberhardt, croquet champ: he cheats, because he practices.

Poor Barbara and Bob Stuart are finding that retirement often means being busier than ever, with the Volcker Commission, the Council of American Ambassadors, and work with Gus Hart on a golf course development project.

Garbled history. So soon are the facts forgotten, as the New York Post ran an article last May about our Nassau Inn sign. "The original Nassau Inn sign is back. The sign was taken a half-century ago by Princeton's Class of '37 when the old inn was being demolished. It was missing all those years, but was recently discovered in a New Jersey barn."

Here's some more philosophy of life, by "Al, Ace, Indian, Jeronimo" Pollock: "In retrospect I guess I got what I wanted out of life and what I asked for, even tho' it was a little hectic at times, even for a nomad. Hope to make our 60th, as the medics predict I'll see the turn of the century."

We regret to report the death Aug. 19, from cancer, of Pete Peabody's wife, Bo, whose large, brilliant, abstract oils are in both corporate and individual collections and have been in shows all over the country, from San Francisco to East Hampton, with one in the permanent collection of the National Museum for Women in Washington. She was a nationally ranked figure skater in the 1940s. She was a member of the board of directors of the Graphic Arts Council of the Fine Arts Museums in San Francisco and served as a director of the Napeague Inst.

"Glamour" Award Winners

PHOTOS COURTESY OF GLAMOUR MAGAZINE

TWO MEMBERS of the senior class, Dora Chomiak '91 (left, above) and Audrey Robinson '91 (right), are among Glamour magazine's Top Ten College Women for 1990. The winners were selected on the basis of their achievements in academic and extracurricular activities and are featured in the magazine's October issue.

Robinson, a native of Centerville, Ohio, was chosen for her accomplishments in science and technology. A chemical engineer, she serves as president of the Princeton Planetary Society and co-chaired the First and Second Annual Princeton Space Forums. In Glamour's October issue, she explains that her goals include promoting the "peaceful expansion of mankind into space." Robinson is a member of Quadrangle Club. She also sings with the Glee Club, and two summers ago, she went with the Glee Club on its six-week European tour. She is currently applying to graduate programs in materials science and engineering.

Chomiak, from McLean, Virginia, is a politics major and was chosen for her work in communications. She serves as president and producer of "American Focus," a student-run, nationally syndicated radio show, and she has interviewed Faye Wattleton, Peggy Noonan, and Caspar Weinberger. Chomiak told Glamour, "The challenges I face in coordinating the activities of forty undergraduates to produce a professional radio program have far surpassed any prior adventures." Chomiak is a member of Campus Club, an Orange Key guide, and a former resident adviser in Butler College, where she served as vice-president of the college council. She is fluent in Russian and Ukrainian and spent last summer in the Soviet Union, studying local political systems. Her postgraduate plans remain uncertain: she is torn between a job in broadcast journalism in the United States and returning to the U.S.S.R. to work as a legislative assistant to a people's deputy.

In addition to the magazine coverage, both women received $500, a five-day spree in New York City, and a chance to meet with a prominent professional in their individual fields. For Chomiak, this meant a harried day editing scripts with television journalist Diane Sawyer. Robinson spent a quieter day with science writer Isaac Asimov. He signed for her a copy of The Collapsing Universe, a book of his that first inspired her interest in the field.

of Art in Amagansett, Long Island. We regret to report the death of John Farley, relieved of all his cancer problems, Sept. 12, 1990. We have memorials in this issue.

38 WILLIAM P. TAMS
Box 167
Moran, WY 83013; 307-543-2396

As reported, Hank Gardiner and Kate Bramwell were married in June 1989. Kate having lived in Princeton, they decided to spend winters there (P.O. Box 551, 08542) and summers in Quogue, N.Y., Hank's retirement abode. The photo confirms that their decisions have been more than sensible.

Ned Kauffman continues to travel a great deal to judge at dog shows. When not living off the beach (his very words, but perhaps he's referring to his location, not his livelihood) on Siesta Key, near Sarasota.

As it must to all men, it has come to George Frank, under Irma's competent direction, to clean out his cellar and to discover all sorts of things that they had long since forgotten. In this treasure trove is a number of excess copies of 50 YEARS LATER, our 50th

United States Postal Service Statement of Ownership, Management, and Circulation (required by 39 U.S.C. 3685). 1A. Title of Publication: Princeton Alumni Weekly. 1B. Publication No.: 01499270. 2. Date of Filing: September 20, 1990. 3. Frequency of Issue: Twice monthly October-December and February-April; once monthly September, January, May, June, and July. 3A. No. of Issues Published Annually: 17. 3B. Annual Subscription Price: $19.50. 4. Complete Mailing Address of Known Office of Publication: Princeton Alumni Weekly, Princeton University Press, 41 William Street, Princeton, NJ 08540. 5. Complete Mailing Address of the Headquarters of General Business Offices of the Publisher: Princeton Alumni Weekly, Princeton University Press, 41 William Street, Princeton, NJ 08540. 6. Full Names and Complete Mailing Address of Publisher, Editor, and Managing Editor: Publisher: Princeton Alumni Weekly, Princeton University Press, 41 William Street, Princeton, NJ 08540. Editor: J. I. Merritt, 41 William Street, Princeton, NJ 08540. Managing Editor: Andrew C. Mytelka, 41 William Street, Princeton, NJ 08540. 7. Owner: Princeton University Press (a nonprofit corporation without stockholders), 41 William Street, Princeton, NJ 08540. 8. Known Bondholders, Mortgagees, and Other Security Holders Owning or Holding 1 Percent or More of Total Amount of Bonds, Mortgages, or Other Securities: None. 9. For Completion by Nonprofit Organizations Authorized to Mail at Special Rates: The purpose, function, and nonprofit status of this organization and the exempt status for Federal income tax purposes has not changed during preceding 12 months. 10. Extent and Nature of Circulation. A. Total No. Copies. Average No. Copies Each Issue During Preceding 12 Months: 56,411. Actual No. Copies of Single Issue Published Nearest to Filing Date: 57,254. B. Paid and/or Requested Circulation. 1. Sales Through Dealers and Carriers, Street Vendors and Counter Sales: None. 2. Mail Subscription: Average No. Copies Each Issue During Preceding 12 Months: 54,763. Actual No. Copies of Single Issue Published Nearest to Filing Date: 55,690. C. Total Paid and/or Requested Circulation. Average No. Copies Each Issue During Preceding 12 Months: 54,763. Actual No. Copies of Single Issue Published Nearest to Filing Date: 55,690. D. Free Distribution by Mail, Carrier, or Other Means: Samples, Complimentary, and Other Free Copies. Average No. Copies Each Issue During Preceding 12 Months: 152. Actual No. Copies of Single Issue Published Nearest to Filing Date: 154. E. Total Distribution. Average No. Copies Each Issue During Preceding 12 Months: 54,915. Actual No. Copies of Single Issue Published Nearest to Filing Date: 57,254. 11. I certify that the statements made by me above are correct and complete. Nancy S. MacMillan, Business Manager.

CALL FOR PORTFOLIOS

The Princeton Alumni Weekly will be reviewing photography portfolios to supplement our current listing of freelancers. The following rules apply:

- Must be deadline oriented
- Samples of objects, architecture, and interior spaces preferred as subject matter
- Review of book is not a guarantee of commission

Contact Stacy M. Wszola/Art Director PAW for an appointment at (609)258-4722

reunion book. There are also a couple of copies of AFTER 25 YEARS. At the recommendation of our powers that be, they are offered to classmates whose original copies have been chewed up by Fido or are otherwise unavailable. Send $10 per copy to George (157 Harbor Rd., Sands Point, NY 11050) for packing, shipping, and refreshments for him and Irma. Profits, if any, will go to the Class treasury.

The Franks were among the last of us to see Jean Ringwalt on a skiing outing in Vermont in March. It is with great sorrow that we must report her sudden death on July 25. Our condolences go to Joe in his grievous loss.

Ben Cheesman's wife, Lucy, passed on in March, not long after they moved to Easton, Md., to be near their daughter. Our sympathy to him also. His address: 305 S. Hanson St., Easton, MD 21601; 301-822-0785. We have memorials in this issue.

39

RICHARD R. UHL
12 Charlotte Ct.
Bridgcliff Manor, NY 10510

Resuming our recent report on midsummer minis in the Hudson River valley, here's photographic evidence produced by Nat Boynton of another night to remember, this one at "Le Shack." Leni and Johnny Gorman's summer home on Lake Champlain. Helen and Ed Hobler had driven east for a five-day visit, Bill Bardusch was there for a few days, Barbara and Nat Boynton came for dinner and overnight, and Pat and Nick Quinn drove over from nearby Keene Valley for dinner.

On their drive east Helen and Hobe had stopped off to see Whitney and Scof Scofield at their summer home on Lake Ontario. And that gathering was augmented by two breakfast guests, Catherine and Johnny Johnson. The moral is: if you just beat the bushes anywhere in the north woods, you're sure to flush out a '39er.

Hobe's letter concluded on a sad note. Dick Sylvester's wife, Anne, died in early Aug., one day after their 49th anniversary. Attending the service for her in Riverside, Conn., were Hobe and Johnny Meade, both of whom had been in their wedding party, as well as Henna and Cliff O'Hara, Betty and Phil Warner, Jane and Eben Hall and Leni and John Gorman. We, too, extend our sympathy to Dick.

Adding to our distinguished roster of grandchildren of '39 are three new entrants this fall, all Class of '94: Lindsay Arthur III, Grace Sidford Cornelius, and Jesse Keyes. All three are third-generation Princetonians.

40

BENJAMIN FULLER
6119 Vernon Terr.
Alexandria, VA 22307; 703-329-1961

From this photo one would assume that Hugo Laibam is nattily attired in his 1940 vintage beersuit. However, according to Hugo it is "my special white Cisterian habit consisting of a replica of a 1940 beersuit (but without Baetjer's Test-Tube Tiger)." This picture was taken at the Cisterian Abaye de Lerins, off the coast of Cannes, on the island of St. Honorat. In the past Hugo has described himself as a "quiet rolling stone" in light of his full, diversified, and adventurous life at home and abroad. Recently he seems to have found more permanent roots among the monastic orders and currently can be found at the Hundred Acre Monastery in N.H.

Yale Game at New Haven Nov. 10, 1990

Delaware Judge Jim "Colonel" Latchum was awarded the Order of the Wooley by the U.S. solicitor general in early June. The honor states that "the practice of law must embody scholarship, dedication, and, a fortiori, humor." Jim was specifically cited "for his contribution to the profession in furtherance of the infusion of humor and whimsy into the legal profession of Delaware."

Peggy and Bucky Turner raised the opening curtain on our post-50th reunion gatherings when they assembled a group of classmates at their Baltimore residence for a delightful lunch in mid-Aug. Present were Martha and Bob Bordley, Bill Dixon, Roberta and Ben Fuller, Nannie and Johnny Koppelman, Lib and Don Patterson, Dottie and Beau Pearre, Mary Helen and Harry Turner.

With sorrow we report the deaths of Bill Leslie, on Aug. 22, and Fitzbugh Green, on Sept. 5. We have memorials in this issue.

41

BILL WILSON
Box 1420
Bridgehampton, NY 11932; 516-537-2458

Dave Davis, who, with Mary Ann, was a Coloradoan, sends in this favorably slanted report from his recent traverse of the Arkansas River's upper valley: "Mt. Harvard—long, low, gentle, and blasé. Good only for a stroll around yard. Mt. Yale—three puny pointy-headed peaks try unsuccessfully to attain some height and notice, but any great stature is not in the cards. Mt. Princeton—this colossus of the range centers on Buena Vista, towering over all its neighbors and thrusting its pinnacles ever upward. It dominates the entire valley from Leadville to Salida—all of which is only proper."

NORTH

S10 9 8 6
HA K J 7 3
D10
CA 3 2

WEST (Forbes)

SA Q 7 4
HQ
DQ 9 7
C ...K 9 8 7 4

EAST (Tisch)

S5 3 2
H ...10 9 8 5 4
DA 6 2
C6 5

SOUTH

SK J
H6 2
D ...K J 8 5 4 3
CQ J 10

Alan Truscott of the N.Y. TIMES reported on Feb. 27 a hand played by Malcolm Forbes in his own London house on the final full day of his life. Malcolm was a member of the winning team representing Corporate America against England's Houses of Lords and Commons. The contract was two diamonds with Sir Peter Emery declarer sitting South. Malcolm led his singleton heart queen, won in dummy, and Sir Peter ran the diamond ten to West's queen. In some difficulty, Forbes shrewdly underled his Club king, won by South, who then drove out the diamond ace. CBS's Larry Tisch eschewed the obvious heart lead and made the subtle play of continuing clubs. Malcolm's king locked Sir Peter in dummy, from which there was no escape. He had to lose heart and club ruffs plus two spades for down one. Truscott closed by observing that "Forbes's last battle, like so many others in an enterprising life, had left him a winner."

42

ARMSTRONG HUNTER
R.R. 1, Box 250
Perkinsville, VT 05151; 802-263-5361

More notes from now-aging flaps: Andy and Madge Palmer's new dog, Leo, glossy black and tan, wears an orange collar, represents '42 nicely on his N.C. rounds. Harry Kalt (Ariz.): "Grandson Devin MacKenzie Kalt born last Nov. 22 in Phoenix." Don Machenzie (now Tex.): "Martha and I back from marvelous trip: England, Italy, Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey. Still a lot to be learned." Brief word from Steve Dewing (Me.): "Retired, poor health, limited activity."

From more recent communications: Ray Oriet (N.Y.) broke his leg on a golf course in July, was immobilized/incapacitated the rest of the summer. Pitz and Dee Fitzgerald had a pleasant visit with Howie and Duckie Clark in their new haunts in Sedona, Ariz. Charlie Hardin's name now tops the list of 37 partners in his 155-lawyer N.J. firm. Noble McCartney (D.C.), on the other hand, is still working at the law on his own, and prefers that, while Doug McKay (W.V.), in practice with his son, likes sitting at the counsel table, taking over sometimes for the final summation.

Bruce and Wini McDuffie have completed their move from Binghamton, N.Y. to Chattanooga, and are full-time Tennesseans. Forrest and Barbara Eggleston (Penn.), off to the Camerons in June for summer work in mission hospitals, note that "much of the surgery is being done by what we would call technicians, for there are just not enough surgeons to go around. It will be good to get back into clinical surgery, even if a bit rusty."

Maybeth Gebman (Fla.) gave Nev a monumental 70th party in July: 29 aboard, including Bill and Eileen Haenber, Herdy and Betty Ulmer, Mike and Rita Barrett. Missing because away: Phil and Phaedra Moore, John and Grace Tritsch. Nev keeps busy in good works for St. Augustine's St. Francis House, Trinity Episcopal Church, and now also St. John's Cty. Assn. for Retarded Citizens.

Urgent from Sam Schretner (Conn.): Autobiographical information forms from dilatories/delinquents, please! Jan. 1 is soon!

We have memorials in this issue.

43

JACK LAPLIN
10 Vardon Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06117; 203-523-8929

This past June, Belle and Bonsall Seggerman embarked on an art-buying expedition to Austria, Czechoslovakia, and Hungary. The account of their travels and travails, which reached this desk via Lin Miller, while much too long for the column, was completely hilarious. Accompanied by Belle's 18-year-old daughter, "who cleverly kept smiling at officials and border guards," the Seggermans endured an apartment in Budapest with no telephone or running water for three days, viewed art exhibits, did museums, became entangled in bureaucratic red tape, drank fine wine, and returned unscathed to Connecticut.

A year ago, Barb and Bev Ridgely returned from their latest journey to exotic places, a fascinating, though strenuous, nature tour of Madagascar, Réunion, and Mauritius. Says Bev: "we intend to keep traveling this way as long as we're physically up to it! When not on the go, we continue to divide our time between Providence (midweeks) and Squam Lake, N.H. (most week-ends), and to devote our energies to conservation causes, Brown students and activities, writing, gardening, etc."

Frenchy and Bill Connolly became grandparents for the ninth time last Nov. 8. Total score now: a full baseball team of nine!

We have memorials in this issue.

44

HERVEY S. STOCKMAN
1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

Alden Whitman, noted N.Y. TIMES reporter passed away in early Sept. of a stroke, while attending food writer Craig Claiborne's 70th birthday bash in Monte Carlo. Whitman was a master of obituary writing. His criterion: "A lively expression of personality and character as well as a conscientious exposition of the main facts of a person's life." (COME TO JUDGEMENT). As your current secretary and one who is sadly aware of our accelerating attrition, I gently suggest those of you who want to offer a hand in your own memorial, address in 250 words or less your fingerprint on life and we'll pop it in your folder. Leave a copy with your final effects and label it "For '44 and Princeton." Thank you.

CHOPPED AND NEVER RERUN: Hugh Douglas's daughter, Patricia, wed a D.C.-stationed Marine, Dan Wrinkle, in June 1989 in Newport; followed in Aug. by son Stephen '80 taking the hand of Juliette Crittenberger '79 after a record-breaking 11-year courtship. The Crittenbergers' family tradition is military service. Juliette's father, a colonel, gave his life in Vietnam; her grandfather commanded Army II Corps in Italy in WWII. Some of you probably soldiered for him. Hugh writes that he and John Ware were to play on grass at the Intl. Tennis Hall of Fame in Newport this summer but were ached by rain. SQUASH: George Wadsworth has bestowed a permanent trophy, the Copa Wadsworth, on the annual national team matches between the US Squash Racquets Assn. (U.S.S.R.A.) and the Mexican Squash Federation. In this spring's meeting George won his match and Mexico the cup. The U.S.S.R.A. says next year will be a different story. The Hoblers, Herb and Wells '41, honored their brother, Ed '39, with their establishment of the first Princeton women's annual squash trophy, the Edward W. Hobler '39 Award. Ed is still formidable, going to the all Princeton finals of squash's national 70-plus division, before bowing to Cal McCracken '40. Have a grand fall and frequent thoughts and prayers for our men and women in the Middle East.

We have a memorial in this issue.

45

WARREN W. EMMON
U.S. Courthouse, 915 Lafayette Blvd.
Bridgeport, CT 06604

Chick Bolling snapped Class P-grade standard-bearers Bob Caldwell and Bill Campbell, side by side once again, reminiscent of their close alphabetical seating as they sopped up learning in the 1940s classes of Buzzer Hall and other faculty greats of that era.

Speaking of matters academic, herewith a column devoted to recording the achievements of and recognition received by two of our distinguished professorial classmates. Bill Arrousmuth leads off with two awards. Bill was honored as a 1989 Literary Lion of the N.Y. Public Library, joining a distinguished roster in that capacity. Subsequently, Bill received the Montale Prize from the Eugenio Montale Foundation of Rome. The prize is awarded to a scholar who has contributed to making 20th Century Italian Poetry better known in his own country.

Bill received the award for his translations of the poetry of Montale, one of Italy's great modern poets, but has also translated the works of renowned film director Antonioni.

Next to be noted are the significant achievements of Chick Cole, who for forty years has headed the art dept. and coached crew at the Pomfret School in Conn. Chick's achievements as crew coach were honored last year when the New England Inter-scholastic Rowing Assn. established the Charles D. Cole Trophy to be awarded to the outstanding preparatory school girls' crew. Chick's crew missed winning the first award by only one point.

46

ROBERT CAMPBELL JR.
Investors Security Services
636 Morris Tpk., Short Hills, NJ 07078

I spoke recently with Alex Pond, our third classmate to be named president of a major Eastern university. Alex corrects me by saying he is only "acting president" of Rutgers Univ. But, he continues, he had been exec. V.P. of Rutgers practically from the day he arrived in 1982, so administration is the side of education he knows well.

Alex graduated in the physics dept. with some of us in 1947, and went on to receive his master's, and doctorate at Princeton ('53). Thereafter, he taught physics at Washington Univ. and at SUNY-Stony Brook until coming to Rutgers. Alex married in 1958. He and Barbara have two children: Ward, living in L.A. and Nan, in Vt. In fact, they are vacationing these days in Sudbury, Vt. He has lost contact, he says, with many of his classmates at Princeton, partly because his two roommates, Don Mercer and Ward Maibis, both died years ago. He will, however, be at our 45th, resplendent in his new reunion jacket. Welcome home, Alex.

Andy Bassett, a pioneer in bioelectrical medicine, was awarded an honorary L.H.D. degree by the State Univ. of N.Y. for establishing electrical bases for controlling cell function. Ross Miller retired as V.P. of Data Systems at Southern New England Telephone; he and wife, Jane Ann, live in Madison, Conn. Art Whinston's law firm in Portland, Oreg., has three Princetonians: Bill Noonan '77, John Vandenberg '79 (Art's son-in-law) and Art, who also has his name on the shingle. In keeping with a Tiger family as well, Sandy Taggart reports daughter, Leesy '78, married Jon Elliot '77 in Calif., amid earthquake aftershocks. Roger Wescott has returned to Drew Univ. from Univ. of Tennessee, and has a new book in publication, GETTING IT TOGETHER, which links the humanities and sciences. Roger still heads up the linguistics dept., which he founded. Russ Scott was married last Nov. to Anne Addison. His extended family now consists of six children, three grandchildren, and a power boat.

We have a memorial in this issue.

47

ASA BUSHNELL
Box 7034
Tucson, AZ 85725; 602-741-4715

What are the odds of three Princeton Tigers (two of them classmates) showing up in Egypt among 14 lawyers from all over the States? Well, the proof is in this April photo of Chet Kurzel (r) and Ace Asbworth with Andy Spanogle '57 (kneeling) in front of the Temple of Kar-

"Do You Want Peace of Mind in an Uncertain Market?"

Philanthropy and peace of mind? Certainly. A growing number of alumni and friends have invested in Princeton's future, and their own, by establishing a life income trust. Here's what their gift "gives" them:

- Life income from a fund that is managed as part of Princeton's highly successful endowment
- An income tax deduction—and a lower tax bill
- The ability to increase current income with no capital gains cost

You can establish a life income trust with a gift of $10,000. Write or give us a call. We'll be glad to describe how a Princeton-managed trust can provide peace of mind and for the University's future.

Planned Giving Program
Princeton University
Box 39
Princeton, NJ 08544-0039
(609) 258-6318
(609) 258-6320

Director
Daniel H. Jamieson, Jr. '74

Associate Directors
Jane Rae Bradford
Robert B. Turner

nak. Chet reports that Andy led the expedition on behalf of the Corp. for Professional Conferences. He also marvels that Ace identified him as a fellow '47er during introductions: "What a memory! I never would have recognized him."

Herb Lape always will remember the summer of 1990 as a joyous one, beginning with a week-long rafting trip that he, Bill Smith, and their wives took down the Colorado River, and closing with the good news from a judge that, as investors in the recovery of a fabulous sunken treasure in the Atlantic, they will not have to share with assorted pretenders. He even laughs about this phone call from free spirit Steve DeClerque: "Hey, Herb, I never used to like you, but all of a sudden you're my best friend!"

Ken Stevenson sends a page of celebrity pix from a recent issue of MANHATTAN magazine that features a dashing Dr. Jim Malm in formal attire with a healthy-looking former patient Regina Coughlin, both smiling because Jim was feted as the Heartbeat Cabaret honoree for 1990. Kennedy Schmetz deserves kudos after observing 25 years at The Smithsonian's international front in Aug. And hats off to Cornelia and Don Niemann for now boasting six grandchildren, three of each variety (the girls belong to son Hendrix '73).

Peggy and Arno Flescher are pleased that the June 2 wedding of their son Arno to Sabrina Pray of Greenwich attracted '47 support from Dottie and Bob Bonsall, Barbara and Bob Boyle, and Mickey and George Eggers.

We have memorials in this issue.

48

DAVID K. FINEVES
106 Snowden Ln.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3340

Perhaps Heyward Siddons can keep spouse Anne's whirlwind doings sorted out. Anne, along with Robert Caro and Kitty Dukakis, was a featured guest at the "N.Y. TIMES-N.Y. is Book Country" brunch last month. She talked about her current novel, KING'S OAK. Scheduled for next year is OUTER BANKS. And a recent N.Y. TIMES doublecross (created by Tom Middleton) was based on Anne's HEARTBREAK HOTEL.

Jack Zimmerman also just won't stop. Quite the contrary. In addition to being chief of a busy surgical service, and a busy surgeon, Jack has become chairman of the board of the Intl. Hospice Inst.

And from the Golan Heights comes word that Al Blessing has completed a stint with Volunteers for Israel. Jeanne and Steve Kurtz have foreshortened semi-retirement and now live in Maine only during summer months. They have taken up residence in Washington, D.C., to be near family. Steve can't seem to stay away from education and has taken on the interim headmastership of a school in suburban Potomac for a year.

Lee Weil had a crack at knocking holes in the Berlin Wall while touring Eastern Europe with a group of former U.S. ambassadors.

Logan McKee is into direct mail marketing and lawn management. He predicts another 1929 like crash despite his allegiance to Luke 6:38.

We have a memorial in this issue.

49

ALVIN R. KRACHT
Limerick Lane Poetryworks®, 5 Birch Ln.
Chappaqua, NY 10514; 914-238-0352

The photo of Bob Abernethy (l) and Joe Barbieri was taken in Sept. at the NBC studios in Moscow, where Bob is stationed as NBC-TV's Moscow correspondent. Joe, who recently sold the Stagebill Group of theater programs to Arthur Levitt, former president of the American Stock Exchange, remains on staff as vice chairman emeritus of Levitt Media, and was in Moscow as a member of the Illinois-Russia Theater Assn., a well-established cultural exchange group. Bob, who does an outstanding job with his plum assignment during these times of great international change and increased U.S.-U.S.S.R. cooperation, had just returned from covering the Bush-Gorbachev mini summit in Helsinki.

Following his happy reunion with Bob, a round of theater parties with visiting American troupes and their Russian hosts, and a couple of business meetings, Joe journeyed on with a group of scientists to inspect troubled Lake Baykal, the largest lake in Siberia. Chicago-based Joe, with Lake Michigan—largest entirely in the U.S.—at his doorstep, in his semi-retirement has found the time to expand his interest in major environmental issues. Further input on any of the above can be obtained by writing Joe at 505 North Lake Shore Dr., Apt. 3105, Chicago, IL 60611.

Dr. Jay Goodkind sent along this news with his A.G. contribution: "Daughter Julie running home nursing care office for Kimberly Co. Son Tom working in Washington for Relocation Associates. Dad working at medicine, and in March had a showing of photography at Westminster Theological Seminary in Philadelphia."

We have a memorial in this issue.

50

PETE BUCHANAN
151 West St.
Beverly Farms, MA 01915; 508-922-1650

Those who might say we're "over the hill" because the 40th is behind us should examine carefully the photo in this section of Kathleen Turner draped over Dick Gamble. Ostensibly she was in Boston to appear in CAT ON A HOT TIN ROOF, but there is also a bit of the cat-swallowing-the-canary look in the photo. Dick and wife, Nicki, continue to be involved in Planned Parenthood and abortion rights in a number of different ways and were two of the 61 who slept on the Supreme Court steps at the time of the Webster decision in April 1989. Kathleen Turner was sponsoring a Planned Parenthood benefit when she joined Dick, and, he modestly admitted, a few others. This is, of course, only the latest in a continuing series of our classmates appearing with comely actresses. Bob Price started it perched on a love seat with Hedy Lamarr, discussing guided missile physics, and Jack Wilson followed up with a doubleheader photo, featuring Linda Evans and Ursula Andress on the Riviera. Others are encouraged to continue the tradition, whether or not the actress has ever appeared in one of Jim Billington's 25 best movies. As librarian of congress Jim was empowered to drop and add films to the list submitted by the Natl. Film Board of the 25 placed in the Natl. Film Registry as "culturally, historically or esthetically significant."

Among male actors Sru Bakula's son Scott has gained increased recognition as the time-traveling scientist in the TV series "Quantum Leap." Scott himself is continuing a tradition of handsome male Class progeny in the world of acting, following in the footsteps of Frank Reeve's son Christopher.

The Class will greatly miss our faithful reuner and past reunion chairman, Jack Borden, who died suddenly on Sept. 26. A memorial will follow.

A word of caution. When you are ticketed for a four-week trek in the Khumbu Nepal, do not have "before" and "after" pictures taken. Dick Murphy did, and here are the results. He will be back for our 40th, but these shots seem to confirm that the trek is strenuous to the max.

In Germany, Paul Schleyer celebrated his 60th birthday by hosting a symposium on arcane aspects of chemistry. "My former Princeton students and postdoctoral fellows were well represented on the program. Many have had distinguished careers." As a non-academic treat, he writes, there was a concert of Haydn sonatas "on an 'original' hammerflugel in a lovely little rococco castle" in Erlangen.

The Young & Rubicam agency indulged in a game of corporate musical chairs in March. Roby Harrington is now regional director of Y. & R. advertising, responsible for all its U.S. agencies except N.Y.

Please remember the kind invitation of Stuart Johnson (Dartmouth '51) to drinks and buffet after the Dartmouth game in Princeton Nov. 17. He lives a wedge shot from Palmer Stadium. Call him (609-448-3170) or me (609-921-6720) for directions. Come and relive the P-D rivalry of the early 1950s.

We have a memorial in this issue.

George Garrett has a new novel, ENTERED FROM THE SUN, which is winning the usual excellent reviews for the Class' most eminent novelist. The third and last in George's Elizabethan trilogy, it is a fictional investigation into the death of Christopher Marlowe in 1593. George told the N.Y. Times book review section, which called the book "an ambitious investigation into the nature of knowing and remembering," that he plans to move on next to novels set at the 1893 Chicago World's Fair, in a Florida town as Martin Luther King was assassinated, and at an unspecified football game. Perhaps the Princeton-Dartmouth weekend of 1951?

Bill Ballargeon is also at work on scholarly literature, in his case a dissertation on T. S. Eliot, which occasionally brings him from Seattle to the Library of Congress in Washington.

Wim van Beekelen has been much in the news as secretary-general of the Western European Union, a nine-nation organization that has taken a leading European military role in the Gulf crisis. Under Wim's leadership, the W.E.U. has been working closely with U.S. forces to contain Iraq.

Chuck DeVoe is at it again, with his latest victory the U.S. Tennis Assn. grass court championship for men 60 and over. Phil Dorn sighted this news on the sports page. Noting that tennis now has championships up to and beyond age 75, Phil and the rest of us are looking for many more victories.

Jim Sparkman's son, Jamie, graduated from Middlebury last June and was accepted in the first class of the new Teach for America program, the brain-storm of Wendy Kopp '89 to assist inner-city and rural areas which have difficulty recruiting teachers. Jamie is assigned to a Brooklyn school this fall. Meanwhile, Jim was appointed to a four-year term

Sighted Ship—Sank Same

PHOTO COURTESY OF JAMES D. SHEPPARD '50

JAMES D. SHEPPARD '50 was one of thirty-four midshipmen from Princeton's Naval R.O.T.C. unit aboard the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Princeton on July 7, 1948, when it helped to sink the battleship U.S.S. New York during a training exercise in the Pacific.

Built in 1912, the New York was a veteran of two world wars and had survived two tests of atomic bombs at Bikini Atoll. Deciding that the radioactive hulk would make a good target for bombing and gunnery practice, the Navy towed it out to sea, then dispatched the Princeton, another carrier, and three destroyers to send it to Davy Jones's locker in the waters fifty miles south of Pearl Harbor.

By the time the Princeton arrived on the scene, at 9:30 A.M., the destroyers and shore-based planes had already pounded the target, which planes from the two carriers proceeded to attack with bombs, rockets, and machine-gun fire. At 1 P.M., the Princeton sounded general quarters, and the entire task force opened up with its five-inch guns. Smoke poured from the old ship, and it began to list. At 2:05, the New York capsized. Shore-based Marine Corps and Navy planes delivered the coup de grâce with a barrage of five-inch rockets and five-hundred-pound bombs. At 2:45, the old battlewagon slipped bow first under the waves, plunging to its grave three miles below. Aboard the Princeton, the bugler played "Taps."

Sheppard recalls, "Navy officials were chagrined that the New York had gone down after 'only' eight hours of assault instead of the expected thirty hours or so. But the bombardment had provided a spectacular show for the midshipmen, few of whom complained about the premature sinking," which allowed them to return to Pearl Harbor early and enjoy a few more hours of liberty. (Several weeks later, a task force that included the U.S.S. Iowa and three cruisers took four days to sink another battleship, the U.S.S. Nevada.)

Five days earlier, Sheppard and the other Princeton midshipmen had posed for a group photograph, above. Left to right, front row: Robert F. Danziger '50, Lloyd E. Cotsen '50, Paul Hofflund '50, Stephen L. Post '50, Charles R. Krigbaum '50 *52, Alexander M. McDougal '50, Francis R. B. Godolphin '24 *29 (dean of the college), Douglas Delanoy '50, unidentified, Fred W. Doyle '50, Henry I. Hall '50, Owen J. Toland '50.

Middle row: William E. Maritz '50, William M. Apgar '50, Anthony I. Sylvester '50, Robert F. Frantz '50, Ralph M. Moberly '50 *56, Charles W. Cammack '50, Harvey F. Robbins '50, Walker McKinney '50, Lee D. Bellmer '50, J. Stewart Bakula '50, Henry C. Stambaugh '50, William F. Clarkson '50.

Back row: Marine Corps Sgt. Johnson, George E. Hale '50, William W. Sant '50, Charles L. Reese '50, Edward W. Purnell '50, Hugh J. Morgan '50, Timothy Fiske '50, Sheppard, Philip F. Ruppel '50, Lawrence W. Chisolm '50, John T. Lewis '50, Robert L. Christensen '50 *57, and Navy Lt. C. F. Gressard.

Can anyone identify the unknown sailor?

on the Manchester, Vt., Planning Commission. He's described in the local press as an outspoken opponent of large retail developments.

It is my sad duty to report that Bob Stell died in August after a long bout with cancer, and that Tom McClure died in May. We also note with sorrow that Terry Liebman's wife, Priscilla, and his mother recently died. Our sympathies to all.

53 FRANCE J. LONNIGAN
Box 18
Blawenbury, NJ 08504

It seems that we are repeatedly chronicling the deeds of our classmates in the fields of commerce, diplomacy, public service, etc., of which we are justly proud. Less frequently do we comment on the accomplishments of our brethren laboring in the groves of academe. Perhaps you are familiar with the various publications known as "insiders' guides" to colleges. Prominent among these is LISA BERNBACH'S NEW IMPROVED COLLEGE BOOK. The editors, while musing through New England, landed at Middlebury College and ran head on into Bones Spencer. The guide, which is intended to acquaint prospective students with selective colleges, relies to a considerable extent on the opinions and comments of their students. At Middlebury, students rated both professors and their courses. It is not surprising that Bones, professor of history, was considered one of the most respected professors. Comment: "He is very demanding, but his passion for the subject makes the student want to learn." Among the most frequently recommended courses was Bones's African history. Congratulations Bones, you done us proud.

By the time you receive this RAW, we will have gathered at our Harvard game party. Let us consider Dartmouth at home on Nov. 17: Don Smith (D'53), has kindly invited us all to a cocktail party after the game at the home of Debbe and Kester Pierson at 185 Dodds La. (East on Nassau St. 1.2 miles.) Dartmouth and Princeton will be playing hockey that night at 7:30. Don adds that he was a classmate of Ed Mattheus in high school. We hope that doesn't scare anybody away.

54 DICK STEVENS
1 Valley Sq., Ste. 101
Blue Bell, PA 19422

The Dunne family has done it again... an HBO special "Women and Men: Stories of Seduction." John Gregory Dunne and wife, Joan Didion, adapted a Hemingway tale, "Hills Like White Elephants" for TV, with what the WALL STREET JOURNAL calls: "clean and uncluttered dialogue and performances that are simple, spare and direct. This is one sweet, sad film as heartbreaking as the open road." Out of the trilogy, only the Dunnes' effort was rated an unqualified success. For an encore, John dished up a new collection of essays entitled CROONING. John has this personal fantasy about being able to croon like Johnny Mathis.

Jay Helme is a fixture as the president of Helme Associates in Newport, R.I. But the real star of the family is his daughter Sally '75, who is a world-class yachtswoman and a director of the U.S. Yacht Racing Union. Sally, our Class baby and a former advertising manager for YACHT magazine has moved on to bigger and better. She joins the Lewmar Marine Group in England as international advertising and promotion manager. She comes by this naturally—her dad has long been active racing for the Shelter Island Yacht Club.

In the "landing on your feet" department, Norm Mattheus left Federated and Robert Campeau to become an investor and consultant in no less than five start-ups which are going great guns. Norm's son Gary '80 presented the family with a baby boy... three generations and no gray hair.

Bill Martin is the director of the Center for Business, Religion, and the Professions, a part of the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary devoted to exploring issues of public education, healthcare economics, and the right of choice for the terminally ill... all subjects of upcoming forums that the center is sponsoring. If you are interested or want to be part of the mailing list, call Bill Martin 412-362-5610.

When people ask you your age, don't say 58, say 15 Celsius... it sounds better.

55 MIKE ROSENBERG
40 E. 88th St.
New York, NY 10128; 212-722-7447

Bob Ruben is pictured here with Belgium's Prime Minister, Wilfried Martens (I), as they attended the Fifth Intl. Congress in Pediatric Otolaryngology in Ghent during our 35th reunion. Bob, who is professor and chairman of the dept. of otolaryngology at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine/Montefiori Med. Center in N.Y., presented three invited lectures at the conference: "Craniofacial Anomalies and Obstructive Sleep Apnea in Children," "The Assessment of Auditory System Integrity in Infants and Newborns," and "really the most important, for it defines a whole new area of medical concern," "The Utilization of Language as an Outcome Measure for Pediatric Otolaryngology." There, I have now used the same fourteen-letter word three times in one paragraph!

Frank Creus' wife, Barbara, is the mayor of Galveston, Tex.

Jim Connelly was re-elected town justice in Hilton, N.Y. He ran as a democrat/conservative. As an undergraduate, he subscribed to the Kane (Penn.) Republican.

Wali Milbourne represents Saul, Ewing, Remick & Saul at their new law offices in suburban Philadelphia at Great Valley. As businesses pepper the suburbs, the service industry follows.

Leon Prochop has just completed a two-year term as president of the American Society of Neuroimaging and now starts duties as editor-in-chief of the society's publication, the JOURNAL OF NEUROIMAGING. Leon also continues his duties as professor and chairman of the dept. of neurology, College of Medicine, Univ. of South Florida.

Bill R. Clark's specialty as an attorney is fiduciary matters, particularly estate and trust administration and estate planning.

We have memorials in this issue.

56 DAVID M. JORDAN
410 Rodman Ave.
Jenkintown, PA 19046

The Class contingent at Ithaca for the opening football game with Cornell consisted of Scott McMullin, Mike Malitz, Roger Kaufman, and Dave Jordan. On a cloudy and overcast day, our bright orange-and-black 30th reunion hats made it easy to spot '56ers in the stands. A week earlier Barbara and Dave Jordan joined Moir and Steve Weidenborner in celebrating the wedding of Sally and Scott McMullin's son David to Marlene Brown in N.Y.C. Earlier still, when Scott was delivering a Shakespeare lecture at Colgate, he encountered Coleman Brown, who is, of course, the chaplain and a professor of philosophy and religion there. Coleman, Scott said, is doing work with inner-city problems, which ties in with the homeless shelter in N.Y.C. that Scott is involved with, funded in part by Cornell. All of which carries us some distance from a Saturday afternoon in Schoellkopf Field.

Bill Greenspan reports that he is enjoying life, doing organizational consulting work for medium-sized companies. Tom Waite checks in with an item from GOLF Digest, quoting Stu Bloch, V.P. of the U.S.G.A. and chairman of the equipment standards committee, approving the use of long putters. Tom points out that Stu, one of the longer '56ers, "has struck another blow against short people" with this one.

Dave Gaurin notes that he and his wife, Nancy, have enjoyed numerous visits to Princeton since their daughter Meredith enrolled in the Class of 1991. And Gene Singer, whose daughter Debra graduated from Old Nassau in June 1989, promptly sent off Lisa to Princeton in Sept. of the same year. Coeducation, anyone?

We have just received word of the death on Aug. 17, 1989, of J. Lawrence Buell III. A memorial will follow. We have a memorial in this issue.

57 JACK SCHLEIM
Box 6177, Yorkville Station
New York, NY 10128; 212-427-3575 (H)

Lex Winans: "I've recently diversified my business energies into retail, of all things. Am opening five "Turtles" stores in large regional shopping malls to sell 100% cotton turtle necks in 60 colors at only $10 each. We are hoping for a long and cold winter here in the Pittsburgh area!"

Jim Sandler: "Appointed by governor of Conn. as co-chairman of Commission on Quality and Integrated Education. Added to chairmanship of Conn. Energy Advisory Board and four children under the age of 13 leaves little time for anything more than practice of law." Sueloo Li: "I am in touch with Paul Woo '56 of Campus Club." Peter S. Liebert: "In addition to a practice of pediatric surgery that seems to be getting busier, and duties as editor of EMERGENCY PEDIATRICS, I have been appointed director of pediatrics at St. Agnes Hospital, White Plains, N.Y."

TEXAS MONTHLY (Vol. 18, No. 4) devotes its cover story to "Robert A. Caro's Epic Search for the Soul of Lyndon Johnson." "It's not a question of liking him or hating him," Caro says. "What I meant to do was understand him." He has spent 15 years writing his monumental biography, THE YEARS OF LYNDON JOHNSON. With the publication earlier this year of the second volume, THE MEANS OF ASCENT, he is halfway through. Bob was also the subject of a major article in the Apr. 1990 VANITY FAIR.

Gifted Education Press, Manassas, Va., has issued Andrew Flaxman's monography, GREAT THINKERS OF AMERICAN HISTORY: A STUDY OF THE SPIRIT OF FREEDOM AND LIBERTY THROUGH THE LIVES OF FRANKLIN AND LINCOLN.

58 RALPH L. DEGNOFF
7 Grade Sq.
New York, NY 10028

Paul Eckenrood, after 28 years in the retail world of specialty store apparel in Chicago, St. Louis, Richmond, and N.Y., decided to take the "cure" by moving to Fort Meyers, Fla., and entering the brokerage business. He reports his personal boxscore as "two marriages, five grown children, two grandchildren, and single once again—a busy, 30-plus years—slightly bent, but not bowed."

Al Demaree's son Bruce Allan was married to Jennifer Schultz last spring. Al is the exec. editor of FORTUNE.

Bob Bum meets each spring with Jay Haus and two other psychiatrist friends to "regress in the service of The Ego in La Jolla, Calif." Princeton memories join them.

David "Stump" Salzman is still in the ranching business and has recently entered the raspberry business. Stump has left the political world to escape the excess emphasis on opportunism and cynicism.

Gib Kirwin, through his daughter Rachel (9), has become very involved with the ballet. His daughter's director and instructor, Ruth Langridge, of the Dance Assn. in Belvedere, Calif., started the Princeton Ballet in the 1960s, when her husband was attending the Graduate School.

Frank Stella had an exhibition this past summer at the Portland Museum of Art, Portland, Me. The exhibition was entitled "The Circuits Prints." The Circuits were named for automobile race tracks which he visited in the 1970s and feature abstract designs of uneven, layered loops and figure eights.

59

JAY M. SHAM.
11321 Rolling House Rd.
Rockville, MD 20852

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO: What did we do to offend him? On our very first day of classes, Harold W. Dodds announced that he would retire as Princeton's 15th president; he had served in the post since 1933. A few weeks later the University abandoned its "7 P.M. rule" and allowed women to remain in dormitory rooms until 9 P.M. on Fridays and Saturdays. The 7 P.M. rule had been in effect since 1947.

Dave Robb is thinking ahead. His son, Matthew, is a freshly minted member of the Class of 1994, and will graduate at the same time as our 35th reunion. Dave plans to be there. Also planning to be there is Fred Tiley, who writes that he hopes to make it back from Salem, Oreg. Fred is attending to spinal disorders in his orthopedic practice. Another scalpel-wielder in the Far West is John McFarlane in Vancouver, B.C. The Maccer, who maintains a clinical practice of surgical oncology, is head of surgery at St. Paul's Hospital, head of general surgery for the Univ. of British Columbia, and claims to have time for skiing, fishing, tennis, and golf.

Bob Tull certainly knew how to hold on to at least one of his life insurance clients—he married her! When Bob moved from Denver to Albuquerque he took Judy Long with him as his wife; Bob says Judy didn't want to lose her agent. They left behind Chris Economos, who stayed on in Denver to entertain Armon Cooper and Hal Pachios when they passed through recently. Chris reports that both looked well.

The Class of 1959 Memorial Scholarship Fund had a market value of over $321,000 in July, an increase of $19,000 from the previous July. Two of our classmates' children benefited from the fund during the 1989-90 academic year. The Junior Faculty Fund awarded $11,943 last year, while its market value increased by $21,000. Contributions to both of these funds can be made when you send in your Class dues.

60

MASON LOWANCE
100 Lincoln Ave.
Amherst, MA 01002

You think you are in good shape? Wrong! Preston Haskell's daughter, Rushton, is a triathlon specialist who has won TWELVE triathlon competitions recently, and she has competed in the U.S. Championship at Hilton Head, S.C., where she placed third. News articles say that she works at it every day, starting at 6 A.M. Three days a week, she starts with swimming up to 3,000 yards. After she climbs out of the pool, she usually runs from five to eight miles. After her day of full employment, she lifts weights, does aerobics, and then works on the Stairmaster

Tête-à-Tête

PHOTO BY GEORGE F. WEINSTEIN

ACTRESS KATHLEEN TURNER and Dick Gamble '50 plot strategy at a recent Planned Parenthood gathering. Dick and his wife, Nicki, are involved in abortion-rights activities and were among the people who slept on the steps of the Supreme Court in April 1989 to hear the case of Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services. The court's decision in this case substantially weakened Roe vs. Wade, a 1973 decision that legalized abortion, by returning the power to regulate abortions to the states.

Following in the footsteps of his father, Clarence J. Gamble '14 '16, who promoted birth control in the United States and in underdeveloped countries, Gamble's career has been in international family planning. Clarence Gamble was responsible for opening the first public birth-control clinics in forty American cities and for creating national family-planning administrations in twenty countries in Africa and Asia. Dick continued his father's work, serving as chief executive officer of the Pathfinder Fund, which his father had founded in 1957. Since 1983, Dick has been a volunteer with Planned Parenthood of Massachusetts, of which his wife is executive director. He also sits on the board of the International Women's Health Coalition. The Gambles are currently involved in a fight to create a constitutional amendment in Massachusetts that would forbid the government to interfere in matters of abortion.

from 30-45 minutes. Tuesday mornings she rides her bicycle with fellow triathletes, then rides with another group on Thursday afternoons. Preston himself was also celebrated in Jacksonville press releases as one of the ten most influential men in the city. Coming from Birmingham to Jacksonville by way of Princeton and the Harvard Business School, Preston conceived of a new approach to architectural and engineering design, and founded a company that takes the client all the way from initial contact to completed construction without the need for outside consultants or layers of specialists. It has succeeded enormously in Jacksonville, and Preston's firm has constructed some of the most important buildings in the city. He is unable, however, to keep the pace of his daughter for even one day of her marathon week! So get cracking, you 1960 joggers!

Joe Hungate is now living in a "small, comfortable house" in Pittsburgh, and invites any classmates in the area to look him up for a visit. And from Andy Prindl, who is managing director of the Nomura Natl. Bank (in the London office) in faraway Japan, we learn that our classmate Tosbio Hara has opened the Hara Museum of Contemporary Art in Tokyo, a museum collection that includes some 400-600 post-1950 works by Asian, American, and European artists, and is housed in the Hara mansion, built in 1937. In Mar. 1990, the Hara Museum celebrated its 10th anniversary and the newspaper reviews of the exhibits were extremely positive.

61

GEORGE BRAKELEY III
98 Winfield Ln.
New Canaan, CT 06840

By now Mike Iseman's attention-getting dues letter is in your hands, making the case for doing your bit to underwrite running the Class. Please do respond to treasurer Larry Brennan, who reports that Fred Bishop has joined (retroactively) the 100% Club, comprising those who've never missed a year of dues. Wanna join? Ask Larry on the dues envelope flap where you stand. And while pen is in hand, jot down " '61 Mid-Winter Dinner, P.C.N.Y." on your 1991 calendar for Thurs., March 7 (per chairman, Page Chapman). Then pencil in June 6-9, our Thunderous Thirtieth.

Charlie Rentschler writes, "The iron foundry business continues to be tough, but fun. We did sales of $23 million last year and, at year's end, had 330 employees." What Charlie didn't say is that he pulled the company—Hamilton Allied Corp.—back from the brink. Quite an achievement.

Hope you enjoyed our first-ever summer newsletter (even if it did come in the fall). Wouldn't have been possible without some critical funding (over and above dues, Annual Giving et al.) provided by the following: Peter Boer, George Brakeley, Peter Georgescu, Fred Hütz, Mike Iseman, Jim Lane, John MacMurray, Bob Ochsner, and Charlie Rentschler. Our thanks to all of these gents. And our thanks in advance to those from whom the secretary would like to hear—pro or con—about the newsletter.

62 ERIC W. JOHNSON
2221 Craig Ct.
Vienna, VA 22182; 703-280-9080

A FOOT THAT COUNTS: The photo, taken in July 1989, shows Rich Smith and son Peter '90, with friend who is holding the bottle of champagne, atop Colorado's Mt. Princeton. "At 14,197 feet it's one foot higher than Mt. Yale (but somewhat lower than Mt. Harvard)."

EIGHT SECONDS IN EUROPE: In more late-breaking travel news, John McGraw earlier reported that he, Barbara, and the children—Catherine (Emory '90) and Adam (Rensselaer '93)—had a wonderful European trip the summer of 1989. Highlight was seeing Greg Lemond win the Tour de France by eight seconds in Paris. "Had a great visit with Sue and Jack Whitelaw in Brussels, where Jack is chief financial officer for Exxon Chemical Intl."

CHEMICAL V.P.: Joe Byck is now V.P. for business development and planning for Danbury, Conn.-based Union Carbide Chemicals and Plastics Co., Inc. Joe joined the company in 1967, initially working at the chemicals and plastics research and development facility at Bound Brook, N.J.

DETECTIVE FROM MOSCOW: Bob Woods spent ten days this past winter in Moscow on a technical exchange, part of participating in a joint U.S.S.R.-U.S. satellite experiment. He also did yeoman service for us in tracking down Ben (C.B.) Moya, who disappeared from the Class address roles last year, through C.B.'s family. C.B., formerly of Albuquerque, now lives in Colorado. Bob says, "By the way, this was no mean feat of detection. There are more Moyas than Joneses in Albuquerque."

63 SELDEN S. EDWARDS
Elgin Academy, 350 Park St.
Elgin, IL 60120

Robin Freer is chairman of "Fairness for the 90s," developing on a nonpartisan basis a data base of elections and population information for fair redistricting following the 1990 Census. He is also chairman of recently-accredited Washington Episcopal School, a thriving elementary school he founded four years ago, and board member and chairman of the annual fund at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. Robin is still a partner at Peterson, Belknap, Webb and Tyler, splitting his professional time between D.C. and N.Y.C. He and Roberta live in Chevy Chase, Md., with Kimberly (15), Elliot (11), Ashleigh (9), and Daniel (7).

Dennis Fowler is heavily involved with computer consulting these days, but still does some freelance writing, up on his 90-acre farm in Otego, N.Y., which he shares with wife, Peggy, the financial organizer of a local theater group. Definitely our most published classmate, Dennis is the author of more than fifty pulp and romance novels. When not punching out richly descriptive prose on the word processor, he runs marathons, canoes, cross-country skis and leads the local computer club. Dennis and Peggy's daughter Celeste, a talented actress, is now a Princeton freshman, having graduated with honors in June from Berkshire School.

Steve Hisley is manager of the Deloitte, Haskins and Sells office in downtown Baltimore. Dick Reizenstein is assoc. dean at the Univ. of Tennessee. Jack Black is V.P. and general counsel at T.I.C. in Steamboat Springs, Calif. Charlie Hodge is a professor of neurosurgery at Syracuse Univ. And Justin Stevenson is a partner at Shearman and Sterling on Lexington Ave., N.Y.C.

Looking closely at last year's Annual Giving statistics you will see that the Class of 1963, under the direction of Class Agent Earl Hoffman, raised $231,000, more money than any non-reunion year except for the Class of 1952. Another mark for our distinguished record in class giving.

By the way, my FAX number is (708) 695-5017. Send some news!!!

We have memorials in this issue.

64 JOTHAM JOHNSON
Box 12
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Jim Fisher wrote last May that he had become a grandfather last fall and wondered if anyone had "beaten him to grandfatherhood?" Now comes a letter from Rick Valdes, an attorney in Dallas, and this snapshot of Rick and one of his five grandchildren, Mariana, born in Mar. 1988. Can anyone top that?

From Carl Peterson '36 comes word that our Carl Peterson was married on June 4 in Albuquerque to Linna Lewis. Between them, the newlyweds now have four children to keep an eye on. Carl Sr. reports that Carl Jr. has been with Sandia Natl. Laboratories in Albuquerque since earning his Ph.D. in aero from Princeton in 1969, and is now manager of Sandia's Aerodynamics Dept. To Linna and Carl, congratulations and much happiness!

Also in June, Fred Kufser passed along the news that son David was graduated with the Class of 1990. "There's more shade in front of Nassau Hall now than there was 26 years ago!"

Hightstown attorney Michael Pané was one of the "most wanted" persons arrested during the American Cancer Society's June Jail-a-thon in Princeton. This annual fundraiser, for cancer research, has participants raise bail money for their release. Anybody looking for a use car?

Any of you see the hour-long interview on C-SPAN in Sept. with Congressman Jim Leach? Good questions and good answers beginning to end.

65 J. MICHAEL PARISH
Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts
1 Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004

Pete Nagy last week proved why he always believed it was more important to play cards than to attend classes, by placing second, along with Ralph Katz, in the World Championship Open Pairs Duplicate Bridge Championships in Geneva. Anyone who knows Geneva and knows Pete will marvel at this result but those who know him best will not be surprised.

Ulrich Haarman is back in Freiburg, Germany, after his stint last year at the Annenberg Research Inst. for Judaic and Near Eastern Study, an offshoot of the Inst. for Advanced Studies, where he studied ethnic prejudice in the medieval Middle East.

Jimmy Stewart '32 rediscovers his youth. Jimmy (LEFT) was caught last alumni day in his old Triangle Club dazzle while Van Williams, ever the loyal old tiger, (MIDDLE) and his loyal wife, Myra, look on. Myra portrays America, smitten by the energy, the glow, and the great sense of fun, presence, and moral center that always characterized one of the best people ever to graduate from the University. This may be tongue-in-cheek, but Van sent me the picture and left the text to be written by others. There's also a lot of truth in it. This year's Alumni Day (predictable punchline, but what do you want from a flack?) will be Feb. 16, 1991. Make plans for next year: Canoe trips, visiting to the friend in New Mexico, Alumni Day. I regret to report the passing of Charlie Fry, Sept. 12, in N.Y.C. of leukemia. A memorial will follow in a future issue.

66 JEFFREY N. MCCOLLUM, A.T.&T. Products
5 Wood Hollow Rd., Rm. 1J19
Parsippany, NJ 07054

Class of 1966—Overall Class 25th Reunion, June 6-9, 1991.

Let's begin with another series of friendly reminders offered with the intention of making our 25th reunion meaningful and memorable.

If you haven't sent your registration to Tiny Morgan, do it now while you can still capture the $175 discount available if you and a spouse/significant other register before Jan. 1, 1991, and before your cash reserves get drawn down by Christmas purchases. First to register were Kim and Ken Oboz, whose registration reached the reunion committee on Sept. 20.

Jim Merritt reports that more than 70 of us have returned our questionnaires for the Class book. Don't forget Fabian Bachrach's offer to photograph any classmate free of charge. You need simply make an appointment at any of the seven Bachrach studios around the country. They are located in Boston (616-536-4730), Chicago (312-642-5500), Greenwich (203-869-6922), Morristown (201-267-2006), N.Y. (212-755-6233), Philadelphia (215-563-0551), and Washington (703-548-2111).

If the 25th reunion is to be meaningful and memorable, it's up to each of us.

A TIP OF THE HAT: Congratulations to John Sculley, who, in June, joined Bob Rauston as a member of Princeton's board of trustees. Both are charter trustees. As President Turk Thacher noted in his Aug. letter, "John has worked long and hard for the University." Clearly the University, like the Class of '66, recognizes and appreciates John's talents and tireless service.

With deep regret we report the death of Joe Graddy, who perished in a mountaineering accident in July. A memorial will appear later.

67 PETER J. TURCHI
6503 Masefield St.
Worthington, OH 43085

From Jack Laporte, Phil Handy was the subject of the cover story in the Orlando SENTINEL's Central Florida Business section (Feb. 19-25). The article describes Phil's successful career in business and finance, and also mentions friends and colleagues Ketih Gollust and Doug James.

Mike Wyatt's wife, Karen, reports that Mike is now associate deputy secretary of labor (number three position in dept.) "which keeps him busy with the management of the dept." Even so, Mike and Karen, with their two daughters (10 and 6), still try to get to their houses in New England whenever possible. Mike also keeps busy with Schools Committee in the D.C. area, and (as we recall well) Princeton A.G.

Marty Krasny writes that he would be interested in talking to classmates about a new nonprofit educational organization, the Center for the Twenty-First Century, dedicated to achieving "a new social and cultural consensus for a pluralistic America."

Frank Moss moved to Ft. Wayne, Ind., where he is rector of Trinity Church. Wil Painter also moved, to Canyon Country, Calif., (north of L.A.), with wife, Mary; daughters, Gallia Marie (2) and Katherine Ann (7 mos.); Mary's mother; (and two great daves). Wil is V.P./O.P.S. for an E.N.R. 400 general contractor, and has been course director for Civil Eng. Corps Officer School, Port Hueneme, Calif., (Naval Reserve).

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO: Albert Schweitzer dies. Sukarno puts down communist revolt. Che Guevara leaves Cuba "to fight imperialism abroad" (in Bolivia). U.S. has 108,000 troops in Vietnam. Sloop hangs on to Top Chart honors.

68

JOE KLAMKE
Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour St.
Hartford, CT 06115; fax 203-524-7057

Steve Hahn has just begun his seventh year as headmaster of Lawrence Academy in Groton, Mass., pointing toward a bicentennial celebration that will take place in the same spring as our 25th reunion in 1993. Steve and his wife spent last summer painting and landscaping their new home in Hillsboro, N.H. Their children, Josh, Dianna, and Rebecca, attend Berkshire Children's Community.

Alan Dunning recently became the newest member of the board of education of the Summit (N.J.) Public School System. When not tending to educational issues, Alan is a partner with the N.Y. law firm of Cleary, Gottlieb, Steen and Hamilton. He and wife, Anne, have parented and ushered four children through the Summit educational system.

Frank Bell's son Chris left San Jose, Calif., and is pursuing his education in the unlikely combination of engineering and music at the Univ. of Hartford, in Conn. Frank notes that Chris enjoys college life, but occasionally breaks away from musical engineering and visits relatives in the Northeast.

Mike Hagerty's son Michael left Vienna, Va., to become a Princetonian this fall. Mike left Martin Marietta last year to become president of Defense Group, Inc. D.G.I. is a three-year-old defense corporation located in Arlington, which is growing at better than 50% per year under Mike's direction.

69

PAUL GEORGE SITTENFELD
1854 Keys Crescent
Cincinnati, OH 45206

GROTON MEN. Jeremy Hubball and son Josh in front of the Chapel there, where Jeremy recently enjoyed his 25th reunion. Josh, a sophomore, the second of Joan and Jeremy's four, is a classmate of Curtis Sittenfeld, second of Betsy and Paul's four.

"Paradise" Regained

SEVENTY YEARS after its first printing, This Side of Paradise, by F. Scott Fitzgerald '17, is being released again in its original form—with cover art, dust jacket, and spellings just as they were in 1920. Henry Reath '69, the president and publisher of Collectors' Reprints, Inc., has engineered the reprinting of first editions of many major American novels, including three of Fitzgerald's.

Reath founded Collectors' Reprints in 1987, after leaving the presidency of the publishing division at Doubleday. Fascinated by the history surrounding first publications and realizing that rising prices were rendering rare first editions inaccessible to the average reader (copies of The Great Gatsby with original dust jackets sell for more than $10,000), he set out on a literary quest to reprint the original Gatsby, aided by his wife, Mary.

At the suggestion of Charles Scribner III '73 '77, whose family had donated the Scribner Room and Scribner Archives to Firestone Library, their first stop was Princeton. The first Gatsby printing was so small and is now so rare that the Reaths had not been able to find any copies of the dust jacket among their bookseller friends. With the help of Steven Ferguson, the library's curator of rare books, Mary Reath found Fitzgerald's own copy of the Gatsby dust jacket, which features a painting by Francis Cugat.

The dust jacket is of particular significance to this novel. The painting, featuring a huge pair of eyes over a brightly colored New York skyline, was actually commissioned several months before Fitzgerald finished the novel. When Fitzgerald saw it, he wrote to his editor, Max Perkins, "For Christ's sake don't give anyone that jacket, I've written it into the book." The eyes appear in Gatsby on a deserted billboard alongside the railroad track between West Egg and New York. The original Cugat painting, also donated to Princeton by the Scribner family, hangs in Ferguson's office in Firestone.

Collectors' Reprints' First Edition Library published its first re-release, of the 1925 edition of The Great Gatsby, in 1988. To their chagrin, the Reaths learned that their reproduction dust jackets were starting to show up on original copies of the books, tremendously increasing their values. First Edition Library now prints its logo on the backs of the dust jackets as well as on the copyright pages.

Since publishing Gatsby, First Edition has produced fifteen more reprints, and This Side of Paradise is the sixteenth. At the time of its release in 1920, Paradise was far more popular than Gatsby would be in 1925, when it was released. But while Gatsby's reputation has grown, says Reath, This Side of Paradise has not "stood the test of time." Nevertheless, he adds, of all the twentieth-century authors included in the First Edition Library, "Fitzgerald is the most popular."

—Nuala O'Connor '89

THIS SIDE OF PARADISE

Julie and Bill Pape arrived at his 25th reunion in St. Louis in an impressive manner. They bicycled from their Highland Pk., N.J., home and, happily, included a night in Cincinnati on their odyssey.

CLIPPING COLLECTION: The CHRONICLE OF HIGHER EDUCATION reports that Ohio State Univ. undergraduates in a class called "The Stock Market" are investing $5 million of the Univ.'s endowment. A professor of finance there, Steve Buser, is one of their instructors and reports that final grades in the course will be based on class participation and on the return the students receive on their investments.

Steve Wunsch was reported by the WALL STREET JOURNAL as leaving Kidder Peabody & Co. to start Wunsch Auction Systems, Inc. He is developing a new trading system that would allow stocks to be bought and sold electronically in a single burst twice a day. Previously, he was V.P. in Kidder's financial futures dept., responsible for market structure analysis.

Finally, thanks to Rev. George Handzo, himself a hospital chaplain, for sharing a wonderful article out of THE LUTHERAN. The title is "St. Chris, the calm" and the subject is Susquehanna Univ.'s Chris Thomforde, their chaplain. To abbreviate hopelessly a wonderful article, the piece makes clear that Chris

Princeton Clubs and Alumni Associations

PC OF CENTRAL FLORIDA (Orlando): Fri., Nov. 2: Luncheon to honor President Harold T. Shapiro '64 at the Omni Intl. Hotel in downtown Orlando. Reception at 11:30 A.M. followed by lunch. For info. call Richard Connor '82 at 407-422-8116.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN PC: Tues., Oct. 30: Dinner with Prof. of Biology Henry Horn. For details call Michael Reidy '76 at 303-893-8100.

PC OF WESTERN WASHINGTON (Seattle): Wed., Oct. 31: Luncheon with Prof. of Biology Henry Horn. For details call Richard Prentke '67 at 206-583-8888.

CAROLINA TRIANGLE PC (Raleigh-Durham Area): Thurs., Nov. 1: President Harold T. Shapiro '64 will address the annual dinner meeting of the assoc. Please call Jim Blackburn '69 for info. at 919-832-2893 (b).

PC OF OREGON (Portland): Thurs., Nov. 1: Dinner with Prof. of Biology Henry Horn. For info. call Kenneth Suid '62 at 503-626-1253.

PRINCETON AREA ALUMNI ASSN.: Sat., Nov. 3: All Princeton area alumni and parents are invited to attend a reception with President Harold T. Shapiro '64 following the Penn football game, at Maclean House. For further info. please contact Nuala O'Connor '89 at 609-258-4885 (b).

PRINCETON CLUB OF MID-HUDSON VALLEY: Sun., Nov. 4: Dinner with John M. Doar, Esq., '44. For details call Lloyd Lawrence, Jr. '76 at 914-473-8294.

PAA OF GREENWICH: Sat., Nov. 10: All tiger fans are invited to attend a pre-game reception at 11 A.M. prior to the Princeton-Yale football game in New Haven. B.Y.O.L. For further info. call Tom Bennevil '77 at 212-850-2816 (b).

Grant A. Peacock '46
Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

*Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased*

Suite 2600
450 Park Avenue at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022

(212) 753-4640

continues to meet life with the caring and warmth he brought to our undergraduate days.

HARVARD GAME: Cocktails and dinner, Sat., Oct. 20, 6 P.M. at Robin and Jack McCarthy's home, 148 Hunt Drive, in Princeton.

70

JAN KUMK
113 Laurel Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

And the Reunion Flashbacks Just Keep on Coming!

The PRINCETON PACKET noted "One spectacular feature of the P-rade this year was the Class of 1970's orange and black larva [Don't they know a 70-pede when they see it?] Popping out of the snake-like creature, which was led by a tiger head with antennae, were heads capped by pith helmets. Placards of the safari outfitted Class included, 'This bug's for you,' as well as one carried by a youngster that said, 'I bug my ...

—mother
—dad
—brother
—X all of the above ..."

We also received a wonderful note from Ellen Klyce, spouse of Brig Klyce, which reported that "As a cynical member of the Harvard-Radcliffe Class of 1975, I assumed I was immunized against a Princeton reunion and any attendant emotional responses. Instead, I discovered this weekend that I was awash with tenderness and joy at the privilege of participating with a stellar Class in a glorious time. For me, this weekend was a visit to Brigadoon, only the costumes were better ... Thank you for everything you and everyone else did to make this weekend happen. You can bet I'll be goin' back."

In addition to Brig and Ellen, we are pleased to observe that in the fall of 1966, seven young tigers arrived at Princeton from Memphis, Tenn., as proud, but anxious members of the Class of 1970. Happily, each of these individuals returned for our 20th. This group includes Mark Weisburd and his spouse of six months, Martha Petty (both now in the Chapel Hill area); Alan Lightman (from Concord, Mass.); and still residing in Elvis's old neighborhood, along with the Klyces, are Jeanne and Frank Jamison, George Stratton, and Louise and John Slater. By the way, we have no confirmation that Elvis was sighted on the dance floor Saturday night, despite what the tabloids have written.

We have a memorial in this issue.

71

STUART E. RICKERSON
Grace Station, P.O. Box 1142
New York, NY 10028

For Greg Conderacchi, each new decade brings a new career (so far, at least). In 1970, Greg began reporting for the WALL STREET JOURNAL as a summer intern. He continued on staff after graduation, covering the auto industry in Detroit, and then national economics in Washington. He managed to squeeze in a master's in public policy from Harvard, too. In 1980, Greg joined Catholic Charities in Baltimore and built a multi-million dollar division to serve the poor: soup kitchens, homeless shelters, low-income housing, and non-profit fuel oil company. Then, earlier this year, Greg kept his streak going by joining Price Waterhouse. In his new position, he will direct the marketing of its management consulting services in the Baltimore-Washington area. Specializing in information technology, Greg will split his time between the firm's Baltimore and Falls Church, Va., offices. If you don't catch up with him before then, he promises to make our 20th reunion.

Frank King's son David (11) made friends (photo) with some current Princeton students in the "Tiger Tent" just before the Harvard game in Cambridge last year. The Kings attended with Drs. Phyllis and Henry Lerner.

Rick Sobel received a Ford Foundation grant to do research and organize a conference of key decision-makers on public opinion and the U.S.-Central American policy. The conference was held at the Woodrow Wilson School in May, and Rick is planning to publish the proceedings in 1991. He published another book recently, entitled THE WHITE COLLAR WORKING CLASS: FROM STRUCTURE TO POLITICS, noted in the Feb. 7 PAW.

72

KIP HEWITT
21 Wildcat Rd.
Darien, CT 06820

Pictured is Bill deGolian, who has recently joined the law firm of Johnson & Ward in Atlanta as a partner, continuing his civil litigation practice. Bill is also a commander in the Naval Reserve and is now the commanding officer of his reserve unit. At the time of writing, his unit had been placed on alert and two of his men were on their way to the Middle East, with perhaps more to follow.

Jono Peters writes that last spring he was in Portland, Ore. and called on Kim McColl but found he was out fishing. Jono then passed through San Francisco and called on David Kixmiller, only to find that he was on vacation in Florida. When he got back to N.Y., he called Jim Robinson, but he was playing baseball in Arizona at a "Dream Baseball Camp." Jono will keep trying to reach people; in the meantime, he says all is well for him, Peggy, and their three children.

Douglas Noll says that "after celebrating my 11th anniversary with the Nassau Cty. (N.Y.) attorney's office, I've about decided this job will do until something better comes along. Teaching English as a foreign language to Central American refugees provides a fresher challenge. I learn a lot more from my students' courage and optimism than I teach."

Vinnie Lynch is a corporate finance managing director with J.P. Morgan. Vinnie and his wife, Becky, have three kids, ages eleven to three. Mark Extein is a partner at Foley Lardner in Orlando, Fla. Mark and his wife Lynn have two children.

73

R. GREGORY PLIMPTON
Box 14545
North Palm Beach, FL 33408

When your plans call for air travel, think of T.W.A. or Midway. At T.W.A., you'll find Gary Smedile in charge of planning, control, and maintenance. Off work, Gary is soccer coach and Cub Scout leader for Tommy (10), Jack (7), and Cassie (5). They live in Kansas City. At Midway, Marv Pollack has just taken over as director of advertising. The food may not be as better, but you'll at least feel better about it. And when you're flying Gary or Marv, enjoy a Miller and think of Mike Coccaro, the new regional manager for Miller Brewing's eastern region, which includes N.Y. and N.J. Mike has moved up from the D.C. area.

If you want to know about used computers, (and who doesn't?) Alex (Louise Motherball) Randall has written ALEX RANDALL'S USED COMPUTER HANDBOOK (Microsoft Press). And Alex knows used computers. He founded and runs the Boston Computer Exchange in 1982 and has traded many a P.C. since then. His co-author, Steve Bennett, has also co-authored computer books with cousin Peter Randall. Peter's latest of seventeen computer books include THE OFFICIAL 1-2-3 GUIDE from Lotus and THE LASER JET HANDBOOK.

If you want a new computer, call Todd Rulon-Miller, the new director of sales and marketing at NEXT computers. And if you want great software to go in it, see Matt Griffin, the new president of software giant Egghead or Bill Webster, president of Star Computer Systems in Torrance, Calif.

74 JOHN STRYKER
15 Woodbine Rd.
Kendall Park, NJ 08824

CAREER MOVES: Matt Singleton, pictured here, has been appointed head of the financial audit division of Arthur Andersen in N.Y. He joined Andersen in 1974 and was admitted to the partnership in 1984.

Kerry Haber has been named V.P. and director of Bernardon & Associates, a 32-member architecture and land planning firm in Kennett Square, Penn. He specializes in corporate and speculative office and distribution buildings.

Ginny Kamsky has been appointed to the board of directors of W.R. Grace & Co. in N.Y.

Bill King is now V.P. and treasurer at Phillips Credit Corp. in N.Y. He previously worked for American Express. Bill has moved to Greenwich, Conn.

Rob Schuman has a new job as general manager of International Post, the most complete international video production facility on the East Coast.

Stephen Read has been promoted to associate professor of psychology, with tenure, at U.S.C.

EARTHQUAKE ANNIVERSARY NOTES: Dan Taylor reports that he and his family were shaken up by the Oct. 1989 quake in the Bay Area, but it didn't change their lives that much. Not so fortunate were Perry Israel and family, who had to move out of their house while earthquake damage was repaired. Perry reports that his entire block looked like a convention of carpenters and masons, but "Princeton on the West Coast lives—I was wearing my Reunions shirt when the earth shook, and none of our family was injured!"

OTHER ANNIVERSARIES: Bruce Morgan and his wife, Barbara, were married July 15, 1989, in Philadelphia. Barbara is in medical advertising and Bruce is with the Philadelphia Natl. Bank "and getting gray with the Princeton Club softball team."

75 MELISSA KUBEN MISHKINIAN
940 Riverside Ave., Berkeley Square
Trenton, NJ 08618

Margaret Benefiel finished her Ph.D. in religion from Catholic Univ. of America in Aug. 1989 and moved to Boston last Sept. for a postdoctoral fellowship at Boston College, studying Quaker spirituality and Bernard Lanergan.

Andrew Schreier, a partner in the N.Y.C. law firm Morrison Cohen Singer & Weinstein, has been elected to the board of directors of Yeshiva Univ.'s Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law.

While speaking on environmental issues at an Intl. Bar Assn. conference in Strasbourg, Russell Frye recognized a face in the audience: David Jacoby. Rusty is now with Chadbourne & Parke in Washington, D.C., while David is with Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin, Krim & Ballon in N.Y. David himself missed Reunions this year because he was delivering a paper at an environmental law seminar in Switzerland.

Wayne Willcox has joined Hickory Venture Capital Corp. in Huntsville, Ala., as V.P. He says that he and Cintra Eglin Willcox '80 miss some aspects of Dallas, "such as Princeton football recruiting, but we also find the slower pace and economic vitality of Huntsville to be a pleasant relief."

Linda and Larry Rosenblatt returned to the Princeton area last fall after two years in England. Mobil Oil did not let them stay long, however; they moved to the Fairfax, Va., area this summer with Becky (12) and Andrew (8).

John Fedors Jr. has joined the legal department of Morgan Stanley as a staff attorney. He previously specialized in computer law at Cleary, Gottlieb, Steen & Hamilton.

Jeff Weickel describes himself as a twelve-year "veteran" of Ford Motor Co., now working as a manager in the strategic planning activity at Ford Motor Credit. Four children keep him busy, too: Steve (10), Scott (7), Katie (2), and Kelly (not yet 1).

76 JAMES L. MARKETOS
Lane & Mitzendorf, 919 18th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20006

Here's our official 15th reunion logo. By now you've received Bob Ireland's letter containing the questionnaire for our reunion directory, which is being compiled by Kristin White. You may also have received by now Josh Libresco's survey. We urge you to complete the questionnaire and survey as soon as possible, and return them to the appropriate people.

Cecelia Slater was married on Dec. 2, 1989, in the Princeton Chapel, to David Pikus '77. Tom Byrne was the best man. Cecelia is an asst. professor of pediatrics and an asst. attending physician at the N.Y. Hospital-Cornell Medical Center in N.Y. She attended Cambridge Univ. as a Marshall Scholar, and received her M.D. from Harvard. David received his law degree from U.Va., and is a partner in the N.Y. law firm of Shea & Gould. Tom Gonnella, who trades for First Boston in N.Y.C., was among the Princeton attendees. He has four children, ages two to eight.

Benjamin Horrow, born Jan. 17, 1990, joins sisters Ellen and Aviva, children of Jan and Mindy Meislich Horrow. Mindy is director of ultrasonography and asst. professor of radiologic sciences at the Medical College of Penn. in Philadelphia. Jan ('73) is assoc. professor of anesthesiology at Hahnemann Univ.

Dave Smith lives in Pinole, Calif., and is a staff pathologist (chief of surgical pathology) at the V.A. Medical Center in Martinez.

Kate Stewart married David Dall, an Australian research scientist who specializes in entomology and virology, on May 12. He finished a postdoctoral fellowship at Hoffman-LaRoche and landed a terrific job in Canberra, so they are headed for Australia. "The move has put pressure on me to finish my training in

77 JAMES BARNON
15 W. 72nd St., Apt. 24-B
New York, NY 10023

clinical psychology," reports Kate, who's winding up an internship in N.J. after schooling at Adelphi Univ. "Now for THE DISSERTATION." Her earlier move from N.Y. to N.J. was good preparation, she says: "I've managed well enough so that a move halfway 'round the world elicits only mild hysteria."

PRACTICE, PRACTICE: Lawyer Mark Goldrosen left the San Francisco public defender's office to start his own practice, specializing in criminal defense. His wife, Barbara Solomon, had their second child, Jason, on April 27. Lawyer Charles Hey, also in private practice, recently participated in a major sex discrimination trial in Federal court in Puerto Rico. "We represented a female plaintiff who won a judgment of over half a million dollars," he says. When not litigating, he's active in the nonprofit and philanthropic world ("not with my own money") and is on the boards of two N.Y.-based foundations. Jeanne Pomar Asber is in a private internal medicine practice in Kensington, Md. She and husband Norm Asber have two boys, Brian (4½) and Eric (2½). As noted in AMERICAN LAWYER, attorney Steven Beckelman has become counsel to McCarter & English in Newark.

P-TONIANS AT B-SCHOOL—Kim Pousner Corfman was a visiting associate professor at the Columbia Univ. business school last year. Among her students, she said, were "a fair number of rather young Princeton alumni." (Can't the same still be said of us '77ers? What gives?) Kim says her two children are becoming "real New Yorkers at very young ages, to our ambivalent amusement."

78 BOB PERSON
Box 886
Middlebury, VT 05753

Peter Slevin has been an eyewitness to some of this century's most exciting events. As the Miami

NOW ONLINE

- The Electronic PAW •
- A Computer Bulletin Board •
- System for Princeton Alumni •
- Provided by the •
- Princeton Alumni Weekly •

Featuring message bases for Bulletins, Precept Discussions,
Class Notes, Young Alumni and Regional Activities, plus
Electronic Mail

Also files of University News,
Sports Results, Calendar of Campus Events, and more

Accessible 24 hours a day
Free of charge

609-258-3602

PROTOCOLS:

300 / 1200 / 2400 baud
Eight data bits,
one stop bit, no parity

STAFF WRITER- ASSOCIATE EDITOR

PAW seeks a staff writer-associate editor. Chief responsibilities are covering campus news and Princeton sports and writing occasional feature stories. Candidates should have two years' experience on the editorial staff of a newspaper or magazine. An excellent opportunity for a young alumnus/a in journalism. PAW is an equal-opportunity employer.

Send résumé to:
Andrew Mytelka '85
Managing Editor
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William Street
Princeton NJ 08540

HOW DO YOU GET THE PAW?

You get your PAW, year in and year out, thanks largely to class dues. If you haven't been paying your class dues, act now!

Dues make the difference!

THE ALUMNI
COUNCIL

HERALD's European correspondent since 1987, he has been in Moscow, Warsaw, Prague, Budapest, Bucharest, and Belgrade. "There's nothing like a front-row seat on history to help teach you what values are important in life. Peter has been responsible for moving the paper's office from London to Berlin, "to be closer to the story."

Brackie Mitchell and Laurie Taylor-Kelley were married in Baltimore this past July 14. Princetonians in attendance were Weezie (Wharton) and Chris Pistell, Leslie (Conrad) '77 and Dana Dreitelblis, Washington Bowie V '33, John Koppelman '40, and the groom's father, Braxton Mitchell '50. Brackie and Laurie have Ph.D.s from the Univ. of Michigan. Laurie is an art historian, while Brackie works in the Univ. of Texas Health Science Center, specializing on diabetes and heart disease.

Frank Todisco resumed his table tennis career when he competed in the U.S. Open Table Tennis Championships in Baltimore this past summer. While Frank didn't win any of his ten matches, he writes, "I did enjoy hitting a few good shots again, and catching some of the top players in the world." According to Frank, his career highlight was winning the 1978 P.U. table tennis championship.

Robert Henry Klein was born on Feb. 26, 1990, to Claire and Bob Klein. The new dad writes, "'78 classmates have been very supportive with best wishes, clothes, and syntomatics." The Kleins enjoyed a week with the Bonnyman family, Al, Jean, and kids Edward and Norman, on the Outer Banks of N.C. in Aug.

79

MARTHA KRAMER
27 Northhill St., Apt. 6-R
Stamford, CT 06907

HEARD FROM: David Lummis is a C.P.A. for Wolff Companies, a private investment firm in Houston. He and his wife, Susan, are kept pretty busy by their son, Rice (4), and daughter, Helen (2½). Outside of work, Dave and two friends purchased a historic recording studio four years ago. They started a Spanish music record label, which is now distributed by PolyGram Records. For those who might be curious, their latest hit single is "Todos Me Dicen," by Rick Gonzales and the Choice.

Lisa Irby Favaro has been living outside of London since 1989 with her husband, Ken, and two sons, Nicolas and Alexander (the latter born in June 1990). Lisa is taking a break from the business world to enjoy motherhood, and touring England and the rest of Europe.

KUDOS: Zovan Cvetichanin has been promoted to assoc. principal in the architectural firm of Swanke Hayden Connell Ltd. in N.Y. Having served as senior architectural designer on numerous projects, he is now working on projects internationally: in both N.Y. and London.

Annette Quick is now an asst. V.P., involved with evaluation at Dean Witter Reynolds in N.Y. Howard Price has completed his fellowship in endourology at the Univ. of Minnesota, and has joined the urology faculty at U.Mass-Worcester.

MEET YOUR CLASS OFFICERS: Class Agent Amy Brantz lives in Center City Philadelphia and works as a financial consultant at Merrill Lynch. Besides serving the Class, Amy is a member of the board of the Princeton Club of Philadelphia, is A.G. committee chairperson for the Philadelphia region, and a member of the Alumni Council's Committee on Awards for Service to Princeton. She also serves on the finance and investment committees of the Red Cross of Southeastern Pennsylvania, and other community groups.

Her goal as Class agent is to encourage over 60% of our Class to participate in A.G. by our 15th reunion, an ambitious one since our 10th reunion participation was just under 50 percent.

80

HENRIK D. PARKER
25 Farmhouse La.
Philadelphia, PA 18925

Kudos to Len Ritz for his stealth dues letter! Let's see if we can all respond with creative payments of our Class dues. Remember, send them in before Dec. 31 to get that 1990 tax deduction.

The imperious-looking fellow is none other than

Bruce McBarnette as he appeared in the opera AIDA, with the Washington Opera at the Kennedy Ctr. in Washington, D.C., in Mar. Outside of opera, Bruce continues to compete in track and field, a year ago coming within a second of the world record for the 100-meter dash. Kathy Schoeffler reports having moved to Durham, N.C., attracted by the quality of life and the slower pace, compared to Washington, D.C. She is a research associate at Burroughs Wellcome, and enjoys working on the renovation of her 50-year-old house, when not folk dancing (although a broken toe, broken while dancing, had her recently sidelined.) News from Dave Givnish is that he and his wife, Kim (U.Va. '81) live outside of Philadelphia, where Dave is involved in importing Christmas decorations.

CLASS ISSUE: Barbara Matton Busbong and Craig Busbong welcomed their second daughter, Constance McFerran ("Mackie"), into the world on Jan. 13, to join older sister Patton. Right after Reunions, they all moved back to Houston, where Craig is starting a private practice in child psychiatry. Christine Rose Parham and her husband, Jim, were blessed with the arrival of a daughter, Christine Elizabeth Marie, on Apr. 24. Christine is taking a break from teaching to be a full-time mom, while Jim continues his church job and teaches full-time at a choir school in Chicago.

81

JEAN ANABILE TELLJONNAN
50 Riverside Dr., #9F
New York, NY 10024

Jane Folger, a librarian and rare book seller in Brooklyn Heights, is pictured participating in a summer workshop on storytelling on campus in August.

Martha Bittenbeim Kistellus and her husband, Vytas '78, had their third child on Apr. 1. Curtis Voorhees (9 lbs., ½oz. at birth) joins big brother Andrew (6) and big sister Julia (2½). Bill von Oebesen and his wife, Nancy, are thrilled to announce their birth of their red-haired baby boy, Nicholas, on Apr. 10. Mary Webb Bourke just welcomed Bourke Baby number three into the family: John Benedict was born July 16. He joins brother Chris Jr. (3) and sister Molly (18 mos.).

Chester Irons writes: "My travels with Citibank have taken me across most of Europe and the Middle East. Currently based in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, as market head for Citibank's Intl. Private Banking Division for the Lower Gulf. Any '81ers in the vicinity are welcome to drop by and join me for a warm pint of fresh camel milk and wafers, just delicious together." Beih Nelson writes: "Moved to Salem, Mass.—still with Hartridge House as a management consultant. Lots of travel for work—most recently to Dubai... where, among other things, I took a swim in the Persian Gulf."

82 TIM DOOLEY KOOS

12409 Sadler Lane
Bowie, MD 20715

Is this a wedding or an acrobatics act? According to Rich Bazarian, his world turned upside-down when he married Dr. Ana Cairns of Glasgow, Scotland, Sept. 19, 1989, in N.Y.C. Pictured are Charlie Parajon

'83, John O'Rourke, Pete Silver, Rich, Steve Teager, Rick Coffey, and Ana. Pete just started a three-year fellowship specializing in pediatric intensive care at Long Island Jewish Medical Center. Last December John transferred to the London office of Goldman Sachs. Steve does aerodynamic testing on airplanes and helicopters for the F.A.A. technical center in Atlantic City. Rick still works for Pierce Investment. Ana is a pediatric critical care fellow at Montefiore Medical Center/Albert Einstein College of Medicine (Bronx, N.Y.), where Rich is an Ophthalmology Resident. They were introduced by mutual friends before either of them set foot in Montefiore. Looks like their life isn't going to be boring.

Did you all receive our first dues appeal? Isn't that a great idea of Bill Kissinger's, to have a country-wide Princeton-Yale football party on Nov. 10, watching ESPN at 12:30? We were hoping this column would be filled with lots of details of who might be hosting the get-togethers BUT since this column is due seven weeks before the game, as of yet we don't have any recruits (except for Bill who bought a television set for the event). So please check the Class newsletter for details and stay tuned for photos of '82ers cheering our tigers on.

83 GAIL FRANCK

345 West 87th St., Apt. 3F
New York, NY 10024

Louise Howlett sent in this picture from her June 15 wedding in Williamstown, Mass. Pictured are (back) Paul Epply-Schmidt and Joanne Epply-Schmidt '82 (hidden is their son, Alexander), (middle) Kurt Schulte '82, Jennifer Howlett '74, Louise Nicholson Howe, Diane DeCordova Lewis, Nan Gillespie O'Connell, Holly Hackett Kania, and (front) Kris Brower Schulte, Lindsay Brown (Williams '86), Louise, and Julia Sensenbrenner. Louise was ordained to the priesthood in the Episcopal Church this fall. Both are teachers at St. Andrew's in Delaware.

This baby is Iesa. She was born Jan. 9 to Jose Lopez-Cepero and his wife. Jose is a manager with the consulting division of Vila Del Corral & Co. in San Juan.

Greg Waddell spent 1989 getting a master's in humanities at Duke, and in doing so "got to study all those things he missed as an econ. major." It was, he says, "a blast." Now he is back in D.C. paying off his student loan. Finally, J. Hutter Geller and Alan Geller '78 had a son, Daniel, on May 1. J. finished her residency in family practice and is practicing in Califon, N.J., and raising goats.

84 TIMOTHY C. WU

Beacon Court, 175 Beacon St., Apt. 413
Somerville, MA 02143

THE LITTLE MERMAID?: Marcy Levinson married Wyman Williams (Ph.D. Cal.Tech. '89) in Summit, N.J. on July 7. Princetonians at the wedding included (front, l-r): Lise Rybouski Abitkoff, Dana Levinson '85, Wyman, Marcy, Chuck Steidel, and Sarah Hoyt Steidel '83; (back, l-r): Timothy Wu, Elizabeth Sanchez Soriano '83, Mark Dickinson, John Soriano, Toni Thompson, Karen Palmer, Andrea Wilson '85, and Bonne Wagner. Lise is working for the Marriott Corp. Credit Union, and lives in the Washington, D.C., area with her husband, Kevin, an attorney. Dana is in the master's program in hospital administration at the Univ. of Illinois-Chicago. Chuck and Sarah live in Berkeley, Calif., where Chuck is a postdoctoral fellow in astronomy at U.C.-Berkeley, and Sarah works with abused children. John and Liz are both attorneys, John in N.Y.C. and Liz in N.J. Karen is an associate producer with the CBS news show "48 Hours," and alternates between such scenic locations as the Grand Canyon and inner-city murder scenes. Andrea is at Stanford med. school, and Mark is in the doctorate program in astronomy at U.C.-Berkeley. Toni is teaching English in Seoul, Korea, and Bonne is in her third year at the Harvard graduate school of design. As for the bride and groom, Wyman is laboratory director at Dynamics Technology in Torrance, Calif., and Marcy is morning news anchor at KLAC radio in Burbank. The couple are determined to see the world from underwater, and took a belated scuba-diving honeymoon to Maui in Oct.

85 BOB JANAK

1578 Oak Ave., Apt. 1
Evanston, IL 60201

PROFILE: FAMOUS SONS
AND DAUGHTERS OF 1985
Matty Pendo

AGE: 27
WAIST: 36
NICKNAME: Little Doggy
HOMETOWN: Sunset Strip.
PROFESSION: Investment
Counselor, Merrill Lynch.
WHY I DO WHAT I DO: "Because I like the clocks and other trinkets that are showered upon me at the completion of a deal."

HOBBIES: "Tibetan festivals, pagan rituals, and celebrations of the earth."

LATEST ACCOMPLISHMENT: "Dodging bulls while riding naked on a Harley through the streets of Pamplona."

QUOTE: "If Charlie Brown can have a girlfriend, so can I."

LAST BOOK READ: THE NORTON READER (from Lit. 151).

PROFILE: "Suave, debonair, and determined to name my firstborn 'Spalding.'"

FAVORITE DRINK: "Dewar's White Label, uh... and whatever she's having."

Famous Sons/Daughters of 1985 is a series in pursuit of the exciting lifestyles and dynamic adventures of our Class's heroes and vigilantes. On deck: famous daughter of '85, Erika Wolf.

We have memorials in this issue.

86 SALLIE KIM

2645 California St., #303
Mountain View, CA 94040

George Tanaka, the kimono-robed figure pictured here, took last year off from Harvard med. school to research and travel in Hawaii, Korea and Japan (where this picture was taken).

New M.I.T. graduates:

Vic Reiner finished his graduate studies in math, and Ed Norton and Mitch Petersen completed their studies in economics. Mary Murphy has graduated from Harvard business school and is moving to L.A., where she will work at Warner Bros.

My computer ate a great deal of information I had stored about classmates, so if you had sent in information about yourself and it does not appear, please send the information to me again! I apologize for the loss of news.

We have a memorial in this issue.

87 MARY TAYLOR DEBKO

1935 Seville St.
Santa Rosa, CA 95403

This column was written in California. Please take note of the new address. My new phone number is 707-571-8863.

Jennifer Fraser married Bruce Gregory on Sept. 30, 1989, in Easthampton, N.Y. David Oelman was best man; ushers were Andrew Simwell, Matt Curtis, Simon Furtie, Bill Cooper, Andy Keller, and Lee Hobson. Several other '87ers also attended, including Lorna Mack, who said the wedding was "just beautiful!" Ronald Fraser '54 gave his daughter away in the ceremony.

Mike Russell is a second-year M.B.A. student at Harvard. He became engaged to Christina Fanlo (Haverford '87) last summer, while on a trip to Ireland. They plan to wed in 1991. Also marrying are Laura Kunkemueller and Vern Kennedy '88. Laura presently is an underwriter for C.N.R. Insurance in Boston. Vern works for Nynex on Long Island. They will also be married in 1991.

Steve Boyle, living in Brentwood, Calif., works in real estate for Caldwell Banker. He plays lacrosse for the L.A. Lacrosse Club, which was ranked first in Calif. in 1989.

Dana Brewer Harris wrote from London, where she and husband, Ike, spent last summer. They began work on master's degrees from the Katholieke Universiteit de Leuven in Sept., she in European studies, he in business administration.

There were several summer 1990 weddings. Among them were Shannon Duffy to Pete Weiland (June 9 at Lawrenceville), Gioia Whittemore to John Frelinghuysen (Aug. 18 in Dorset, Vt.), and Rebecca Ivry to Cliff Stein Aug. 19 in Newton, Mass.).

You need not get married to send me news. I would welcome letters from anyone, married or single, especially if you have never been mentioned in a PAW or newsletter.

88 CHRISTOPHER LU

206E Holden Green
Cambridge, MA 02138

Pictured here is Steven Diamond, who is teaching English in Indonesia to university students and professors preparing to study abroad. The photo comes courtesy of Adrian Brown '82, who ran into Steven "in the middle of some nice paddies in the interior of Bali." Another '88er currently abroad is John Maull, who is teaching English in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Chad Henderson writes that he is in Wyoming, working as the public policy manager for the Natl. Outdoor Leadership School (N.O.L.S.), an international wilderness education school. Also out west is Jay Evans, who is studying alpine ants in Utah and Colorado. Jay spent much of last winter caretaking at the Rocky Mountain Biology Lab, digging for ant colonies below five feet of snow. Clark Fernon is designing for Boyle Engineering Corp. in San Diego, and says he is surfing and playing a lot of beach volleyball.

On the East Coast, Sean Sawyer is beginning the Ph.D. program in art history at Columbia as a Jacob K. Javits Fellow. Also beginning school in N.Y. is Janet Lapidus, who is a first-year student at Columbia law school. According to Janet, Kimberli Cohn married Scott Bailey last May 29.

Speaking of marriages, Matt Toll and Ann Tweedy '89 recently were engaged. Both are currently in the Boston area: Matt is a sportswriter for the Boston Herald and Ann is a second-year student at Harvard law school.

89

DAVID MILLER
4698 S. 36th St.
Arlington, VA 22206

A CLASS MILESTONE: The blonde, blue-eyed individual pictured here is the current holder of the title First Class Baby. Michael Lloyd Martinson, born

June 1, 1990, is the son of Lloyd '88 and Katie Gallagher Martinson. Katie and Lloyd, married Aug. 12, 1989, live in Summit, N.J. "Last year," she writes, "I taught kindergarten in Jersey City. I don't plan to return to work outside the home, however. Instead, I'll devote all of my energy to raising a family." Any challengers to the title?

D.C. DO: Pictured here is the crew from Washington D.C.'s pre-reunion reunion last spring, gathered for an afternoon of croquet and charcoal-broiled burgers at the Reston, Va., home of Marion Spano Devlin. Back (l-r): Ben Freeman, Tony Royko '85, Nicole DeLarato, Roberto Cuca '88, Jim Cohen, Bruce Berger '91, Tunie Williams, Bob Devlin, Phil Kaminsky, and Jennifer Hunt. Middle: Rob Kerner, Flo Wu, Carol Marshall-Massey, Jason Juffras '85, Chris Ross '85, and Steve Simroth '87. Front: John Gazdale, Marion, Kalpana Shankar, David Miller, and Kim Reisler.

NOTES FROM THE FRONT: Army Second Lt. Robert D. Bradford III spent five months last year in Oklahoma at Field Artillery O.B.C., and is now stationed in West Germany (soon to be known as western Germany), about 30 minutes east of Frankfurt. Bob writes: "I am in a Lance Missile Battalion. Lance will be phased out by '95. Job security isn't great in the Army, but at least they are paying me to travel. I went to Verdun in April, Crete for 12 days in May, and have been wandering around Germany training in the woods." Bob has offered to entertain any classmates passing through.

90

BRETT GOODMAN
22 Berkeley Terrace
Livingston, NJ 07039

Ah, the sporting life. Judd Garrett continues to make headlines on the football field. The Philadelphia draft pick performed well in the pre-season and nearly made the Eagles. Judd was cut on the last day of training camp, but has since latched on with the Dallas Cowboys, who have placed him on injured reserve due to a bruised shoulder. Brad Remig and Bob Surace are still involved in football as well. Brad, who works for the Public Finance Group in Harrisburg, Penn., during the week, is a sideline interviewer for C-Tech, the cable network that broadcasts Princeton games. Bob is an asst. coach at Springfield College in Mass., where he is studying for a degree in sports management.

Sandi Butler rejected two offers to play basketball in Europe and is working for the N.B.A. in N.Y. Her former teammate, Jojo Rein, is also in the Big Apple, working for the N.F.L. In hockey news, Kevin Sullivan is trying out with the Intl. Hockey League team in Kansas City, and Mark Khozozian is attempting to latch on to the L.A. Kings organization. Soccer star Karl Schellscheidt is a member of the club team in Solingen, West Germany, where he is visiting relatives. Brian Carlson is down under, where he is playing pro rugby while working in Australia, and Diana Gardner has embarked upon a pro tennis career, participating in tournaments throughout the world with top-ranked competition. Jill-Allyson Grabill is a marketing representative for the N.Y. Mets, and your Class secretary researches the Olympics for NBC Sports in preparation for Barcelona '92.

Speaking of the 1992 Games, don't be surprised if you see a few classmates going for gold. Tim Brill, a two-time American junior champion in the modern pentathlon, is training for the Olympics while conducting pharmaceutical research for Merck, Sharp & Dohme in N.J. Erik Osborn is working out with the Columbia Univ. swim team while attending a pre-med program there, and Mike Ross trains with the Peddie School swimmers when he's not assisting a computer science professor at Princeton.

93

OWEN KERN
53 Holder Hall
Princeton University Campus

Continuing an 80-year-old tradition, the Princeton Student Agencies are an integral part of undergraduate life. And of course, '93ers are there; Tom Dippel, John Vann, Matt Karchmer, Juan Galvan, Scott Koenig, Ben Richardson, Eric Andrews, Jon Thompson, Mark Hoffman, and Jon Peretz are all agency managers.

In varsity football's season-opening heartbreaker against Cornell, Linebacker Aaron Harris was voted Ivy League Sophomore of the Week for his outstanding play. Steve Tufillaro distinguished himself on special teams by blocking a punt in the first quarter that set up the Tigers' first touchdown.

GS
*60-*75

C. ROOM DAVIS '73
26 Crescent St.
Northampton, MA 01060

AEROSPACE & MECHANICAL SCIENCES: Capt. Carl T. Berry '71, U.S.N., reports that his current assignment is commanding officer of the U.S.S. Alaska (S.S.B.N. 732) (Blue), a Trident submarine.

ARCHITECTURE: James Walter Lamm '67 is a principal in the Los Angeles architectural firm of Kober Rippon Associates. He is currently working as project manager on a 30-story office building in downtown L.A. with architect Michael Graves of Princeton. He is a member of the Culver City Historical Preservation Advisory Committee, L.A. Conservancy, and the like. Last May, five '73 M.A.U.P. graduates held a pleasant mini-reunion in Princeton: Hank Abernathy '73, principal, Hillier Group Architects; Joe Dean '77, associate, Hillier Group; Jerry Luitin '77, asst. director, Hudson County (N.J.) Transportation Authority (part of N.J. Transit); Randy Zisler '77, in real estate finance and analysis; and Yong-Chol Chyun '73, Chyun Associates.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING: Noble M. Johnson '74 has received a Distinguished Senior U.S. Scientist award from the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation, Federal Republic of Germany.

ENGLISH: Fred Price '71 is principal lecturer and head of English at Trinity and All Saints' College, Leeds, England, and a member of the executive committee of SCEPSHE, the Standing Conference on English in Public Sector Higher Education. Carol Lee Saffioti Hughes '75 continues as an active member of the Wisconsin Alumni Schools committee and directs Princeton's book award program for Wisconsin.

HISTORY: Kimlada Miwa '67 is currently director of the Inst. of American and Canadian Studies, Sophia Univ., Tokyo. His recent publications include THE ISLAND STATES OF OCEANIA AND THE BIG POWERS (1990), in Japanese.

ROMANCE LANGUAGES: Ronald W. Tobin '62 reports the publication of his book. TARTE A LA CREME: COMEDY AND GASTRONOMY IN MOULIERE'S THEATER (Ohio State Univ. Press, 1990). He gave the Robert Nicholish memorial lecture for 1989 at Catholic Univ.; his subject was "Molière's Last Supper." Ronald Rosbottom '69 became dean of the faculty at Amherst College July 1, 1989.

SOCIOLOGY: For the last three years, Robert N. Hill '73 has been working in Saudi Arabia for Aramco, the Saudi national oil company. He advises the oil minister and the Aramco executives on oil pricing and related activities as a "loanee" from the Chevron Oil Co. based in San Francisco, where he used to live. Robert writes, "I guess you could say I'm an 'in-house' academic in the business world." (Probably a pretty busy one, by now.)

WOODROW WILSON SCHOOL: Peter J. Mailon '71 recently moved from Hyderabad, India, to Bouake, Ivory Coast, where he has taken up the position of director of research for the West Africa Rice Development Assn.

YOUR MESSAGE HERE: Yes! Your own life story could unfold here—in these very pages, or pages very like these—if you will but submit highlights of same soon. For once, at last, you see, your secretary has caught up with all submitted reports and threatens to use this space to unleash rambling essays of his own devising upon an unsuspecting and possibly innocent readership. Luckily a remedy is near; relief is at hand: Write!

Meanwhile, we understand that the first-ever A.P.G.A.-sponsored reception for all entering graduate students, held Sept. 16 in the recently expanded art gallery, was a considerable success. More later, but special thanks should go to Martin H. Cbeiten '71 (romance languages), longtime A.P.G.A. board member, whose idea this was two or more years ago and whose persistence and financial assistance finally made it happen, and to A.P.G.A. past president William N. LaRiche Jr. '70 (architecture), who spearheaded and coordinated the many arrangements this year. Happy autumn!

Fremont Carson Peck '20

MONTY PECK died at his home in Locust Valley, N.Y., May 29, 1990, at the age of 92. He was the father of Dr. Fremont C. Peck Jr. '44, Maybel Peck, and the late Andrew F. Peck '47. He had nine grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. He was predeceased by his first wife, Isabel, and his second wife, Elizabeth.

Monty was born in Brooklyn and attended Poly Prep there before entering Princeton in 1916. In 1925 he bought the Brooklyn DAILY TIMES, and continued publishing until 1937. He served in WWII, rising to the rank of lt. col. in the air corps.

For 35 years he was a director of the F.W. Woolworth Co. He was also director of the Carson C. Peck Hospital in Brooklyn, of the Williamsburg Savings Bank, and of the Webb Inst. of Naval Architecture. Monty's favorite hobby, dating from his youth, was photography, and he had several exhibitions. In later years he became an ardent golfer. Monty's life was productive in many significant ways, but it was the warmth of his personality that meant most to his multitude of friends. What a quiet, unassuming, but effective person he was. To be with him was always a heartwarming experience.

The Class of 1920

Charles W. Wendt '26

CHARLIE WENDT, a pioneer in the development of commercial aviation, died of cancer May 7, 1990, in Sarasota, Fla. Although Charlie left Princeton to enter business, he had many friends in the Class, and over the years was a loyal supporter of Princeton and '26.

In 1936 Charlie's work as an estate and financial adviser centered in Wilmington. Subsequently he became affiliated with Richard duPont as treasurer and board member of All-American Aviation, a pioneer organization which was the first feeder airline to collect air mail. For several years this was done by a device which enabled a low-flying plane to pick up a sack of mail from a line between two uprisings. In 1953 Charlie became president and treasurer of All-American Engineering and Research Corp., a spin-off.

In 1928 Charlie married Ethel Gegenheimer, a Mt. Holyoke graduate. They had numerous outside interests in Wilmington, before moving to Florida after Charlie's retirement. Among others was St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, of which Charlie was formerly senior warden and treasurer. Charlie is survived by Ethel and a son, Jon R. Wendt '60, and a granddaughter, to whom we extend our sympathy.

The Class of 1926

Charles Emile Arnt Jr. '29

CHARLIE DIED Aug. 6, 1990. He had prepared for college at Michigan City High School and Andover. At Princeton he was president of the Triangle Club, V.P. of Theatre Intime, and a member of the Glee Club. He roomed with Joe Hague and was a member of Tower.

He tried banking in Chicago for two years, but then helped form the University Players (with Henry Fonda, Jimmy Stewart '32, and Josh Logan '31) and played with that company at their theater in West Palm Beach, Mass., and elsewhere. He acted in Shubert productions and with the Playwrights' Guild in N.Y. In Hollywood, he played character parts in more than 250 films. In 1947 he pulled up his Hollywood stakes and settled on Orcas Island in Puget Sound. He took on a number of kinds of farming there and became famous as a raiser of Charolais cattle, which won many prizes. Hollywood would not let him go that easily, however, and he continued to be called back for quick assignments, the last of which was SWEET BIRD OF YOUTH.

In 1938 Charlie married Patricia Bradley, and she survives, together with their daughter, Abby, and two sons, Rockwell and Derek. The Class extends sincere sympathy to Charlie's family.

The Class of 1929

James Carey '29

JIM DIED IN Princeton July 24, 1990. He prepared for college at Carteret and Hotchkiss. At Princeton he won numerals in hockey and track. He was on the Prom Committee, student council, and secretary of the Philadelphia Society. He was in Ivy and was its manager.

But of course what most of remember is his outstanding leadership of our Class, as V.P. and president in our undergraduate years and president for a total of 15 years in our alumni period.

Jim's banking career started with Seaboard, but in 1931 he went to the Bank of N.Y. He became V.P. of the Bank of N.Y. and stayed there until retirement in 1969. He had been a resident of Princeton for more than fifty years. He was a vestryman of Trinity Church, secretary of the Procter Fund, board president of Princeton Country Day School, on the board of the Princeton Y.M.C.A., Princeton Hospital, Recording for the Blind, and was board chair of Seeing Eye.

His first wife, the former Elizabeth Lees Smith, died in 1947. His second wife, the former Deborah Locke Livingston, survives, as do his sons, George and James Jr., and his daughter, Nancy Bicknell. The Class extends sincere sympathy to Jim's family.

The Class of 1929

Carl Longstreet Darnell '29

WE HAVE ONLY recently learned of Carl's death in 1988. He had prepared for college at Lawrenceville. At Princeton he played varsity water polo. His roommates were Fred Reynolds and Marion Raney.

He left Princeton in 1928 and, after a period on a coffee farm in Colombia, went to the Univ. of Pittsburgh, where he received a B.S. in chemistry in 1931. He was for seven years with Standard Products and then became assistant to the president of Loud Gold Mines, then in 1941 went with Rite Way products in Memphis. During the war he was a sergeant in the Chemical Warfare Service, receiving citations for his service in England, France, and the Philippines. He had been in a nursing home, and his wife is deceased.

The Class of 1929

Marc Haas '29

MARC DIED July 9, 1990, at his home in Burgenstock, Switzerland. He also had a home in N.Y.C.

Marc left Princeton in 1927 and went immediately into the investment banking business, first with Newburger, Henderson & Loeb, then with Emmanuel & Co. and, after the war, with Allen & Co. In 1955 he formed American Diversified Services, an international venture capital conglomerate, and he also headed American Transportation Enterprises, providing bus transportation in 14 large cities. He was a senior warden of St. Bartholomew's Church in N.Y., and was a member of the Long Island Country Club and the Belair Country Club in Calif.

He was an ardent collector, especially of stamps and antique silver, and his greatest fame in that field came when he sold his stamp collection for $11 million to a London dealer. In 1929 Marc married Mildred Arndt, and in 1951 Helen Hotze, who survives, as does Marc's son Arthur. The Class extends sincere sympathy to Marc's family.

The Class of 1929

Walter Frank Morris '29

FRANK DIED NOV. 25, 1989. He prepared for college at Columbus Academy. At Princeton he roomed with Tom Matthews and was a member of Cannon Club.

After graduation he studied civil engineering at Princeton and started work with the Goodyear Zeppelin Corp. in Akron, then went to Carnegie-Illinois Steel in Pittsburgh. He was in the Army Engineers during the war, serving in New Guinea and the Philippines. Upon returning after the war he became secretary and treasurer of the C.E. Morris Co. in Columbus. He became V.P. of the board of Columbus Academy, president of the University Club of Columbus, and was on the board of the Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts and the American Inst. of Steel Construction.

He married Sally Wells in 1949, and she survives, together with their children, John and Mary. The Class extends its sincere sympathy to Frank's family.

The Class of 1929

John Stewart Vhay '29

JACK DIED Mar. 22, 1990. He prepared for college at the Deane School. At Princeton he was on the rifle team and was in the University Orchestra. He roomed with Cliff Marcus and belonged to Court Club.

He received master's and Ph.D. degrees in geology from Princeton, and his entire professional career was with the U.S. Geological Survey, much of the time as a cobalt economic geologist. He belonged to the Mineralogical Society of America, the Society of Economic Geologists, the American Geophysical Union, and the Yellowstone-Beartooth Assn.

Jack's hobbies included fiddling, fishing, and restoration of musical instruments. He was on the board of the Spokane Junior Symphony. He married Marion Soule in 1935, and she survives, together with their children, John S. Jr., Mary Louise, Sarah Frances, and Elizabeth. His brother David '30 is deceased. The Class extends sincere sympathy to Jack's family.

The Class of 1929

William A. Grier '32

BILL GRIER, of Vero Beach, Fla., died there of throat cancer Aug. 10, 1990. He had previously lived in Hartsdale, Scarsdale, and Chappaqua, N.Y.

Following graduation, Bill went to Columbia Law School and in 1936 got a job as a lawyer working for General Motors. There he involved himself with anti-trust cases, stockholder and labor legislation, contracts, marine and railroad financing, and executive compensation plans. He retired as a senior attorney of G.M. in 1977 after 41 years with the company—barring four years in the field artillery during WWII.

Before moving to Florida Bill was active in community affairs and was elected to the town council. In Florida, he became a town commissioner of Highland.

Central to Bill's life was his family. He had forty wonderful years with his first wife, the former Virginia Waugh, before her death in 1977. Two years later he married one of Virginia's closest friends, Marjorie English. A widow, she brought great happiness with her, along with two children of her own to join the two daughters Bill already had. They and Marjorie survive him, as do six grandchildren and four step-grandchildren. We shall miss this fine citizen, and send our deepest sympathies to his survivors.

The Class of 1932

Challen R. Parker '32

AFTER A LONG and difficult struggle with leukemia, Bill Parker died in Greenwich, Conn., Aug. 10, 1990. He came to us from Hotchkiss, and roomed all four years with the late Huck Cochran. Bill was a well-known and respected member of our Class. He played on the varsity soccer, hockey, and baseball teams. He was also assistant manager of football, chairman of the intracollegiate athletic assn., and a member of Ivy.

Bill was one of a large cadre of Yale and Princeton graduates recruited by the Central Hanover Bank in 1932. All the others drifted off into various careers, but Bill stayed the course, retiring as a V.P. in 1974 after 42 years with what became a much larger bank, Manufacturers Hanover. During WWII he served in the Marine Corps. What had made him a good athlete also made him a good marine and a good banker: dogged determination to do his best.

Bill was married twice, first to the former Betty Putnam, who bore him three children, Penelope, Betty Tucker, and William. After Betty's death he married the former Joan Post, who brought to the family three children of her own. All of them survive, as well as one grandchild and three step-grandchildren. We send deepest sympathy to all of them.

The Class of 1932

George Pomeroy Bassett Blaine '33

GEORGE BLAINE, who had lived in Pasadena for many years, died there Nov. 9, 1989.

George was born March 23, 1911, in Cincinnati, where he grew up. He prepared at Walnut Hills High. During college years he transferred to the Univ. of Cincinnati College of Law. After college George was a sales representative for Globe-Wernicke, in which his family was interested, in Michigan and northern Ohio. During WWII he served as an officer in the Navy.

After the war, George moved to the West Coast with the firm of Art Metal, Inc. In recent years George has enjoyed boats, and has also spent a great deal of time helping a Vietnamese refugee family.

In 1942 George married Mamee Kirby, who survives him. He is also survived by their four children, Judy, Connie, George Jr., and Joseph. There are three grandchildren.

George's cousin, George P. Bassett IV '67, of Ewing, N.J., also survives. He is the son of the late George P. Bassett III '29. The Class of '33 extends its sympathy to the family.

The Class of 1933

Robert Lewis Gwinn '33

BOB GWINN died in Vanderbilt Hospital in Nashville, Tenn., June 23, 1990. A memorial service was held in the Benton Chapel of Vanderbilt Univ. Divinity School, designed many years ago by Bob and his partner, Bert Brush. A Dixieland band played "Old Nassau," the "Navy Hymn," and "The Saints Come Marching In." Josh Billings and Bert Brush represented the Class.

Bob was born Jan. 4, 1910, and grew up in Bronxville, N.Y. He prepared at Andover. In college he was in Triangle and Theatre Intime, a member of Charter, and roomed with Bill Dinsmore. After graduation he did graduate work in architecture at Princeton, receiving his M.F.A. in 1935.

He entered the Navy (Seabees) in '42, and served for 18 months in New Caledonia. Bob had moved to Nashville in 1940, where he began a lifelong architectural practice with Bert Brush. He was active in the community and in the First Presbyterian Church.

In 1944 Bob married Betty Howard, who survives, as do their son, Peter; daughter, Jane Gwinn Strumpf; and Bob's brother, David. There are four grandchildren. We have lost a wonderful classmate, and send our deep sympathy to Betty and all the family.

The Class of 1933

William S. Skelly '33

BILL SKELLY died May 10, 1990, in Pittsburgh. He had spent almost all his life in the Pittsburgh area.

Bill was born Sept. 21, 1911, in Monongahela, Penn. He prepared at Kiski. In college he was in the Instrumental Club, a member of Key and Seal, and roomed with the late Dallam Hollowell.

After college Bill worked in N.Y., at first with Arthur Andersen, and then with City Bank Farmers Trust. In 1938 he went back to Monongahela with the First National Bank. During WWII he spent three-and-a-half years in the Army, emerging as a major.

Though he later moved to McKeesport with the Western Pennsylvania National Bank, Bill spent the rest of his career as a banker in the Pittsburgh area. He was very active in community affairs.

On May 17, 1941, Bill married Martha Sherratt. Martha died a few years ago. In later years they traveled a great deal, especially with Princeton Alumni Colleges.

Bill is survived by two children, Robert L. and Mrs. John (Linda) Kosar; a brother, John S. Jr.; and four grandchildren. The Class of '33 has lost a good friend, and extends its sympathy to the family.

The Class of 1933

Roger Bertine Kirkpatrick '34

ROG KIRKPATRICK, whose matchless wit and perfectly tuned sense of pure fun endeared him to persons of all stages and stations in life, died Aug. 22 at home in Princeton. He joked with the town's reigning social arbiters and University undergraduates; he kidded the president of the bank as wittily and gently as he did the waitress at the club. And they all took pleasure in his attentions. The prevailing sentiment was voiced by a classmate's wife: "I loved that man."

Rog was a former Class president (1954-59), A.G. Class Agent (1949-54) and special gifts chairman (1983-84), and the first administrator of our Special Assistance Fund. In June he and Nancy, with the whole family, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary and his 80th birthday. He had retired in 1975 as general sales manager of the eastern division of Container Corp. of America. Surviving, besides Nancy (Goldsmith), are three sons, Alexander L. (Sandy) '66, Peter F., and Stuart F. (a fourth son, Roger F., was killed in a mountain-climbing accident in 1982); six grandsons, and a brother, Malcolm. To them we offer our sincere sympathies.

The Class of 1934

Palmer Hutcheson Jr. '35

PALMER HUTCHESON JR., a fifth-generation Texan, died Jan. 26, 1990 at St. Joseph's Hospital in Houston.

Palmer was born Apr. 17, 1913. He attended the Kinkaid School and graduated from the Hill School. At Princeton he majored in politics, was news editor of the PRINCETONIAN, and was associate editor of the NASSAU LIT. He roomed with Jack Kephart, J. G. McCain, and Bill Cox, and was in Quadrangle. Palmer graduated from the Univ. of Texas law school in 1938. He was a member of the TEXAS LAW REVIEW. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Psi Delta Psi honor societies.

He served as asst. district attorney and asst. city attorney before entering the Navy in 1942. He attained the rank of lt. commander in the Naval Reserve. In 1946 he joined his father Palmer Sr. '09, his cousin Thomas Taliaferro '08, and his brother Thad '37 in forming the Houston law firm now known as Hutcheson & Grundy. Palmer was of counsel to the firm at the time of his death. He was a member of the American, Texas, and Houston Bar assns., and the American Law Inst.

He is survived by his wife of 52 years, Gwendolyn, three daughters, and seven grandchildren, including David Palmer Oelman '88, to all of whom we send our deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1935

John Kephart Jr. '35

Jack died July 15, 1990, in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Jack prepared for Princeton at Haverford School and the Hill School. While at Princeton he roomed with Palmer Hutcheson, John McCain, and William S. Cox, was a member of Elm Club, art editor of Bric-a-Brac and a member of the Gym Team. He also majored in politics in his senior year, after honors in architecture in his junior year. After graduating from Harvard Law School Jack practiced law with several Center City law firms in Philadelphia, including Kephart & Kephart, with whom his father, a former chief justice of the Penn. Supreme Court, was also associated. A hobby, industrial material handling and package design, led to his association with Penna. Box and Lumber Co.

About 15 years ago Jack retired from law and turned to the arts, training at the Academy of Fine Arts and becoming a painter and sculptor.

Jack shared in the ownership of the Bar N Ranch, a dude ranch located near West Yellowstone in Montana.

He is survived by a son, John W. Jr., three daughters, Marcia K. McKeon, Cynthia K. Hendricks, and Leah Dufraine, nine grandchildren and his brother, A. Evans Kephart '27, to whom we send our deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1935

Robert W. Anthony Jr. '37

BOB ANTHONY died July 24, 1990 of a sudden pulmonary embolism, leaving his widow, Nancy; son, Robert Wolcott (Cornell '64); and daughters, Anne Burnett and Deborah Dodge; a grandson; and a granddaughter. His funeral service in Trinity Episcopal Church in Asheville, N.C. was packed with over 400 people.

Bob came to Princeton from Mercersburg, was a member of Cloister at Princeton. He spent 43 years in retail, working for large stores such as Bloomingdale's, and finally, opening his own specialty store in Asheville, retiring in 1983. All along the way he was active in community affairs, being involved in projects to revitalize the downtown business district. Bob served as V.P. of the Asheville Chamber of Commerce, president of the Asheville Merchants Assn., special gifts chairman for United Way and, in church work, as vestryman, senior warden, and lay reader. Always interested in Princeton, he was a member of the Princeton Club of Western N.C.

All our sympathies go to Bob's family and many friends on the loss of a great citizen.

The Class of 1937

Walter J. Devlin '37

FAITHFUL PRINCETONIAN Walt Devlin died July 26, 1990, after a short but valiant battle with cancer.

Walt came to Princeton from Lawrenceville. At Princeton he majored in economics and graduated with honors. He was associate editor of the Dink, member of the Debating Panel and Arbor Inn, and Junior Class Committeeman. After Harvard Law School, he became a member of both the N.Y. and N.J. bars, was an attorney with Lindabury, Depue & Faulks in Newark 1942-1943, and then in the legal department of Standard Brands, and assistant to the president of Fleischmann Distilling Corp., a subsidiary. He rose to president of Fleischmann, and at retirement in 1980 was president and director of Julius Wile & Sons, Fleischmann's parent company. He also served as chairman of the industry's natl. association, and was founder and first chairman of the board of Discus, a trade association of retail liquor dealers.

In 1945 Walt married Gene Dickson and they produced sons John and Peter and daughter Tricia Zanghi, with six grandchildren. A daughter, Mary, died in 1969.

Our sympathies go to the family, as the Class will sorely miss him.

The Class of 1937

John Ward Chapman '38

WE LOST a brave and cheerful classmate when Jack (Sparrow) Chapman died Mar. 26, 1990 of heart failure, after several years of operations for cancer. He never complained about his many problems and always had an optimistic outlook. He was ever fun to be with and had a ball at our 50th.

A psychology major, he belonged to Colonial, was chorus leader in Triangle, and coxswain on 150-lb. crews, with a major letter junior year. After a year at Penn law and another in business, he joined the Army, ending in the Air Corps, where he earned the Legion of Merit and two Distinguished Flying Crosses, flying "The Hump" and fighting the Japanese. He stayed in the service, becoming full colonel in 1953, and serving in Asia and Europe. His last assignment was in command of the 2,000 Air Force R.O.T.C. cadets at the Univ. of Arizona. He retired in 1967 and moved to the San Diego area, where he spent 10 years in residential real estate, until health problems caught up with him. This didn't keep him from volunteer work at hospitals. Sparrow is survived by his dear widow, Anne; a son, John S.; and a daughter, Barbara Woods. Their great loss is shared by his classmates.

The Class of 1938

Walter Blears Hankin '38

WALTER HANKIN died of cancer in Mercer Med. Center Aug. 9, 1990. He was a lifelong resident of Trenton and practiced architecture there since college except for Navy service.

Walt prepared at Peddie. He roomed with Cass Ruhlman all four years, played in the University Orchestra, and majored in architecture, continuing with three years of graduate work at the Univ. of Pennsylvania. He then served four years in the Pacific, specializing in meteorology, and left the Navy as a lieutenant, senior grade.

An enthusiastic golfer, he won several club championships at Hopewell Valley Golf Club and at the Trenton Country Club. He belonged to the Scottish Rite and the Free and Accepted Masons. In 1952 he married Carolyn Schiavone, who survives. He also leaves a son, Walter J.; a stepson, Roger J. Marks; and a stepdaughter, Patricia Marks; two sisters, Marion MacKinnon and Elizabeth Kline; and two grandchildren.

The Class of 1938

Robert Sanders Davies '40

DUKE'S widow Marjorie has said: "I think of two nouns to associate with Duke... loyalty and tradition. Consider: three generations at Princeton, Allan '10, Duke '40, Rob '70; four generations at Davies & Davies, Kent School and all three boys; Trinity Church—three generations; Cathedral of St. John the Divine, over 20 years as a trustee." Duke died July 11, 1990, at the New Rochelle Hospital, from a heart attack.

At Princeton Duke majored in art and architecture and took part in crew and Cap and Gown. In WWII he served in destroyers with the rank of Lt. commander. He then studied accounting at Columbia and joined the family firm of Davies & Davies. Duke served 1940 well, and returned regularly for Class gatherings. As a regional V.P. for the last five years, he arranged our N.Y.C. Class dinners, which kept many of us in close touch with him.

Duke is survived by his widow, Marjorie; three sons, Sanders, Robert, and Allan; a stepdaughter and two stepsons; and six grandchildren. We extend our deep sympathy to them all and with great sadness acknowledge another farewell to a devoted friend and classmate who regarded 1940 as the greatest group on earth.

The Class of 1940

Mahlon Paxson Laird '40

WITH THE DEATH of Pax Laird June 15, 1990, at his Newton Square, Penn. home, the Class has lost a warm and friendly colleague. After devoting ten years to the Silver Springs Martin Luther School as personnel director, Pax retired in 1983. Earlier he had occupied personnel management positions with the Univ. of Pennsylvania and the Graduate Hospital. Pax enjoyed life and his love of people, joined with a unique sense of humor added immeasurably to his successful career.

Pax prepared at the Episcopal Academy, which equally shared in his loyalties with Princeton. He majored in psychology and roomed in Holder with Frank Shanbacher and Lew Calder '41. He was a member of Campus Club as well as the 9:39 Club. Following college Pax served in the Armored Infantry and as first lieutenant, with later military government duty in Germany.

Pax adored his family and will be sorely missed, not only by friends and classmates, but especially by his widow, Elizabeth Hutchinson Laird; daughter, Becky and son, Mahlon Jr.; and four grandchildren. To them all the Class sends a message of deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1940

Scott Harrison Lytle '40

RETIRED UNIV. of Washington history professor Scott Lytle died in Seattle July 21, 1990. The son of Richard R. Lytle '13, he attended St. Andrew's and Exeter. He achieved a brilliant record at Princeton, graduating with highest honors in history and high honors in the humanities, was Phi Beta Kappa, and awarded the France-Amerique Prize Medal. Wrestling and tennis were his sports and he belonged to Dial Lodge.

After graduate work at Cornell, followed by U.S. Army service in the C.I.C. where he earned the Bronze Star and further study at Princeton, Scott moved to Washington, where he taught for nearly 40 years.

In later years he took part in a teaching exchange program in France and spent much time in the Avignon area, to which he and his wife became greatly devoted. Scott was a highly admired scholar and noted for helpfulness in editing and suggesting improvements in the works of others. He contributed to historical journals and added commentary to many published works.

Scott is survived by his widow, Meta, three daughters, and a son. To them all the Class sends its deepest sympathy and fully shares in the loss of this respected educator and scholar.

The Class of 1940

Donald Lewis Mulford '40

INEXHAUSTIBLE CARING for his beloved Montclair, N.J. community, tireless devotion to the content of his local newspaper publications, along with boundless enthusiasm for living were among the qualities possessed by Don Mulford, who died June 3, 1990.

For over 50 years he was in newspaper work and was the former editor and publisher of the Montclair Times and the Verona-Cedar Grove Times. In his eulogy at Don's memorial service, classmate Dallas Townsend saluted him as "one of the best newsmen I have ever met in any field of journalism." National political events and conventions were Don's personal reporting interest. Don was known as "Mr. Montclair," and was admired for his civic accomplishments.

Don prepared at Montclair Academy and St. Paul's School. At Princeton, he was circulation manager of the PRINCETONIAN, roomed with Wally Irwin, was a member of Key and Seal, and took part in lightweight crew, and graduated with highest honors.

Don experienced WWII as a combat correspondent and was awarded the Bronze Star. Don is survived by his widow, Penny; two daughters; a stepson and two stepdaughters; and three grandchildren. To them all the Class extends its deepest sympathy. Don's friendly greeting frequently offered to one and all—"Never fear, Mulford's here"—will indeed be missed by so many.

The Class of 1940

Paul Parker '40

FORMER SURGEON and chief of urology at the Mercer Med. Center in Trenton, N.J., Paul Parker, died Aug. 8, 1990. For the past four years he had been living in retirement in Hopkinton, N.H. Paul was from Trenton and came to Princeton by way of Lawrenceville. He was a member of Gateway Club, roomed all four years with the late Dave Anderson, and graduated with honors in biology. He then went on to attend the Univ. of Pennsylvania Med. School and completed his residency training there in 1946. During the Korean War he served in the U.S. Medical Corps. Paul was a member of numerous medical and professional societies and active in his local Hopkinton church. Fishing was one of his dominant outside interests.

Paul is survived by his widow, Marjorie; a son; three daughters; and a brother, H. Norton Parker '38. To them all the Class extends its sincere sympathy and reluctantly bids a fond farewell to another friend and classmate.

The Class of 1940

Henry Briscoe Thomas '40

HENRY THOMAS, retired president of the Palmetto Compress & Warehouse Co., died July 12, 1990, in Columbia, S.C. Henry joined 1940 with that splendid group from Gilman School. He played varsity lacrosse, was a Cap and Gown member, roomed with Johnny Koppelman, and majored in psychology. After WWII service as an officer in the airborne troops, he married Beckie Lucas.

Henry's working career was connected with the cotton warehouse industry. He had been president of the Cotton Warehouse Assn. of America and the Carolinas Cotton Warehouse Assn., and served on the board of the National Cotton Council. He was particularly mindful of his community, participating in a wide range of organizations, and had been on the vestry of Trinity Episcopal Cathedral. His interest in Princeton was steadfast, for he helped form the S.C. Princeton Alumni Assn., was its first president, and chaired the S.C. $53 million campaign.

To his widow, Beckie; three daughters; and eight grandchildren; and brothers Robert '42, J. Richard '47, and Andrew '49, the Class extends its sympathy. The Class will sense deeply the absence of his friendly nature, optimistic outlook, and good company.

The Class of 1940

Alan Lochiel Cameron '42

AL DIED Jan. 31, 1990, at Queen of the Valley Hospital in Napa, Calif., after a protracted illness. At the time of his death, he was a retired stockbroker, having spent his entire career in the investment field.

A native of N.J., Al came to Princeton via Montclair Academy and Glen Ridge High School. He was a member of Cannon Club and, like most of the Class, went into the service immediately after graduation. A captain in the U.S. Army, he was a communications officer in New Guinea, the Philippines, Okinawa, and Japan.

After the war, he joined Merrill Lynch as a broker in their N.Y. office. He subsequently moved to Hemphill Noyes & Co., where he became a general partner. Following the merger of Hemphill Noyes with Hornblower Weeks, he was offered the partner-in-charge position for their San Francisco office. He and his family moved to Calif. in 1967. He was a member of the V.F.W. and the Napa Lions Club, and was a talented piano player.

To his sons, Alan Jr. and Michael, and to his brother, Charles, the Class extends its most sincere sympathies.

The Class of 1942

Duport Mauro Copp '42

DUPE DIED June 21, 1989, of lung cancer at Anne Arundel Medical Center near his hometown, Shady Side, Md. At the time of his death, he was a consultant for U.S. Army defense contractors, having retired in 1975 as a colonel.

Dupe attended Episcopal Academy and St. Alban's School in Washington before entering Princeton with our Class. He left in 1942 to enlist in the Army, serving with General George Patton in the Artillery Division. He left the service in 1946 and worked in the private sector until the Korean War, serving on active duty until 1975 when he retired with the rank of colonel. Among his awards were the Legion of Merit, the Airmen's Medal, the Bronze Star, the Joint Service Commendation, and the Purple Heart.

A resident of Shady Side, on the shores of the Chesapeake Bay, since 1983, Dupe was a member of the Chesapeake Yacht Club, the Army-Navy Club in Arlington, Va., and the Naval Academy Officers and Faculty Club. He always enjoyed boating, golf and tennis.

To his widow, Dorris, and three stepchildren, the Class extends its deepest sympathies.

The Class of 1942

Trumbull Higgins '42

TRUMBULL DIED of a heart attack at St. Luke's Hospital in N.Y.C. Apr. 25, 1990. He was a military historian and an author who once described himself as "a specialist in military flasco." At the time of his death, he was a professor of history at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice in N.Y.C. and had written numerous books on military history.

Trumbull came to Princeton via Choate, majored in history, and was a member of Court. He received a master's from Princeton in 1946 and a Ph.D. in 1951.

Trumbull was described as a restless, incessant traveler, often preferring the journey to the destination. He possessed a bright, inquiring, and provocative mind equipped with an analytic method prepared to probe his opponent's target at its weakest spot. It could also be said that he worked all the time, even while he idled.

He and his widow, Barbara, who were married for 35 years, shared an interesting life centered on travel, literature (her field), and an exploration of the ethos of military history, in which Trumbull centered on contemporary wars.

To Barbara; his stepdaughter, Hadley Haden-Guest; his son, Jonathan; and to the other members of his family; the Class extends its most sincere condolences.

The Class of 1942

James Maxwell Napp '42

JIM DIED Jan. 10, 1990, at his home in Redding, Calif. At the time of his death, he was retired and was suffering from lung cancer.

Jim came to Princeton from Mount Herman, leaving before graduation to finish his education, graduating from Wooster College in 1946. He then worked in Calcutta, India for four years with Socony Vacuum. He subsequently moved to Pasadena, Calif. where he served as office manager, job placement counselor, stock broker, plant security supervisor and finally, after his move to Redding, as a milkman for a local dairy. His daughter, Barbara, said he was always "a sucker for sick or stray animals."

Tragically, Jim's widow, Betty, was in a serious multi-vehicle accident in 1981 and has never fully recovered from the massive head injuries she received.

In addition to his wide-ranging business activities, Jim was active in the Presbyterian Church as a deacon, an elder, a member of the Pastoral Search Committee and served as well on the board of trustees.

To his widow, Betty, and his daughters, Barbara and Sharon, and to his sister, Kay, the Class extends its most sincere sympathies.

The Class of 1942

Oliver Miller Blackburn '43

WE LOST Ollie May 24, 1990, from the lingering after-effects of a 1984 stroke, coupled with severe emphysema. He was 69, and had been very ill and hospitalized for several weeks prior to his death. Ollie was a product of the Pittsburgh area, and lived there most of his life. He served with distinction in the military during both WWII and the Korean conflict. While at Princeton, Ollie distinguished himself academically, with election to phi beta kappa. Following graduation from Harvard law school, he spent his working career as an attorney for Westinghouse.

Ollie is survived by two children, Elizabeth and John; a brother, William; a nephew, James '69; and three grandchildren. His nephew James summed up all our sadness when he wrote: "Ollie was a wonderful, funny, and literate man with a capacity to listen and hear the words and feelings of others that endeared him to everyone he met. We will miss him, and I'm sure his fellow 1943 classmates will too." To the entire family we offer deepest sympathies.

The Class of 1943

Charles Donald Ford '43

DON DIED May 20, 1990, at the age of 69, following a four-month bout with cancer. Born in Atlantic City, N.J., he graduated from the local high school and entered Princeton with the Class in 1939. While on campus, Don became a member of Campus Club, a member of the fencing team, and played trumpet both in the marching band and with a group composed of students and "townies."

During WWII, Don, who had been studying Chinese, entered the Naval Intelligence Language School to take up Japanese before he completed his senior year. He later switched to Army Intelligence. After the war, he returned to Princeton and obtained his degree in 1948, in politics. Don's interest in military intelligence led him to a job with the C.I.A. as a civilian career. He served in the C.I.A. until 1976, when he retired to San Jose, Calif.

In 1948, he married Martha, who survives, as do a daughter, Kathleen; and a granddaughter, Christie. His college roommate of three-plus years, Dr. Jim Mason, remembers Don as a man who was an active, alive, take-charge type of person with a quick wit and wonderful sense of humor. To all his family, we offer our most sincere condolences.

The Class of 1943

Robert Austin Hauslohner '44

BOB DIED of a heart attack at his home in Rosemont, Penn., June 5, 1990. He was 67. He was his own man and well known for his independence. A close friend spoke of him warmly as "wonderful fun, feisty, interested in everything." He loved food, art, and animals.

Bob was highly respected in the art world. He was a dedicated print collector who amassed an important print collection. He was a former president of the Print Club of Philadelphia and treasurer and trustee of the Philadelphia Museum of Art. His professional practice was initially in maritime law and then primarily estate law with Rawle & Henderson, where he was also managing partner. In later years he was counsel with Hepburn Wilcox Hamilton & Putnam. He gave freely of his time and energies to his community.

Hauslohner came to Princeton from Lawrenceville. Like so many he went off to war and 32 months in the Army in the European Theater. He graduated in '46, going on to Penn for an master's in economics and his LL.B. He is survived by his wife of 35 years, the former Lorna McAlpin; two sons, Peter A. and David K. '78; daughters, Emily W. Hauslohner Adams and Sarah M. Diaz; and six grandchildren. To his family and friends our deepest sympathies.

The Class of 1944

Theodore Foulk '46

TED FOULK lived a wonderfully rich and inspiring life through June 4, 1990, when, at home, overlooking his beloved Vermont valley, among family and friends, he characteristically took charge and cast off after a valiant struggle against an extremely virulent cancer.

Ted was hardworking and caring, feisty and fun, fiercely independent, a loveable skeptic, generously sharing, with values and a zest for life. After Princeton, he came to Philadelphia to manage and own Bloodgood Nurseries. "Retiring" in 1972 to Vermont, he continued with landscape design, crafted a magnificent hilltop post-and-beam home with his own hands, and headed Quaker State Plantations. A man of many enthusiasms: fast cars and technical market analysis for a time; and, persistently, wine, cookery, corgis, and Labrador retrievers. He also was an accomplished fly fisherman, a leading collector of antique samplers, an early and avid environmentalist, and feminist. And he was, perhaps, Princeton's only contemporary dowsler ("Of course there's water here, but I can't tell you how deep").

Ted leaves his widow, Joanne, who managed their charged relationship with subtle skill; son, Griff; and daughters Becky '73, Margy, and Abby '76; and eight grandchildren. A life worth living, an end worth emulating.

The Class of 1946

Richard H. Dietze '47

DICK DIED June 29, 1990, after a five-year bout with cancer. Through that time he displayed a will to live, quiet courage, sharp wit, and unfailing positive spirit. He will be missed.

Dick was born in Huntington, Long Island. He graduated from Lawrenceville and entered Princeton in June 1943. Called to the Army several months later, he served with the 291st Infantry Division in Europe. He was awarded two Bronze Stars and a Purple Heart.

After the war, Dick returned to Princeton, earning a degree in economics. Upon graduation, he worked in a small family firm in N.Y. before embarking on a 30-year career with the Dupont Co. in Wilmington, Dela. Dick specialized in intl. marketing of polymer products.

Dick was an avid and accomplished sailor, skipping many cruises over the years. He also enjoyed flying. His other great interest was Princeton. He served in a number of offices in the local alumni assn., including its presidency. Recently, Dick served as regional V.P. of our Class. He attended many Reunions and had no prouder moment than when his daughter, Jane, graduated from Princeton in our 40th reunion year.

Dick is survived by his widow, Helen; daughter, Jane '87; and two stepsons, Brandt Allen Jr. and H. Gordon Allen. To all the Class extends its deep sympathy.

The Class of 1947

Percy Allan Ransome Jr. '47

AFTER A LONG battle with emphysema, Percy Ransome died Apr. 30, 1990, in Moorestown, N.J. Perce came to Princeton from Exeter and received an A.A. degree in economics, after a three-year interruption for Army service during WWII. At Princeton Perce was a member of Tiger Inn and was also an outstanding member of the lacrosse team.

After graduation, Perce joined Giles & Ransome, his family's business in Bensalem, Penn. He became president in 1957 and chairman of the board in 1982. He retired in 1988. In 1967, Perce and his brother, Ernie '47, and another brother, Dawson, started Ransome Airlines, which became one of the largest regional airlines in the U.S. He served as executive V.P. of that company.

Perce was a dedicated family man. His first wife Marty (Stingel) passed on in 1971. He then married Mary Close. His greatest loves were his family and his Maryland farm on Chesapeake Bay, where he regularly hunted and fished. He also was an enthusiastic golfer. An ardent conservationist, Perce co-founded the Chesapeake Wildlife Heritage Foundation.

In addition to Mary and his two brothers, Perce is survived by six sons, David, Peter, Ralph, and Charles Close, Richard and Percy A. Ransome III, and three daughters, Elizabeth Wilcox, Julie Kenyon, and Susan Metz, and 13 grandchildren. We extend to them our deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1947

James Ellis Mayer '48

WE LOST Jim this spring in a tragic swimming accident off the remote Osa Peninsula in Costa Rica. Jim graduated from Exeter, Princeton, and Yale law. He was a political science major and a member of Key and Seal at Princeton. He served in WWII, and was awarded the Bronze Star for work in Korea.

Jim was, for many years, a magistrate in his beloved hometown of Johnstown, Penn., where he was famous for his civic work, especially on conservation affairs. An enthusiastic hiker, he blazed the Laurel Trail in Western Penn., engaged in white-water rafting, and, together with Becky and friends, made a number of backpacking and canoe trips in the Alaskan wilderness.

Jim was a project person; when the sports program faltered in Johnstown, Jim boosted soccer into existence. After the steel mills shut down, Jim volunteered his legal services gratis to area redevelopment programs. In the words of the tribute made for him by his colleagues, he was "Johnstown's Renaissance Man."

Jim is survived by his widow, Becky (Schultz), three daughters, a son, and three grandchildren. He will be sorely missed by his family, friends, and Johnstown.

The Class of 1948

Walter Herbert Gantz Bolton '49

WALTER BOLTON, known to us as "Jake," died Nov. 3, 1989, following a long bout with lymphoma.

Jake was born Mar. 4, 1928, and prepared for Princeton at Columbia High School, Maplewood, N.J. At Princeton he majored in politics and was a member of the Bridge Club. Following college, he saw service in the Army, became an agent for N.Y. Life Insurance Co., then joined the Prudential Insurance Co. He worked in Prudential's home office in Newark, N.J., for 33 years, primarily as V.P. in charge of employee compensation, and took early retirement in 1985.

On June 16, 1962, Jake married Virginia Graham. They had a son, Robert, and for the past 18 years have lived in Mendham, N.J. They vacationed regularly at Cape May and Long Beach Island, N.J. Jake's interest and experience at playing bridge—he was one of the youngest Life Masters at age 20—continued throughout his life. He was an avid reader and enjoyed collecting stamps, coins, shells, and bottles. As an alumnus, he served Princeton as a schools committee member, and '49 as a regional chairman for Annual Giving.

In addition to his widow, Virginia, and son, Robert, Walter is survived by a stepdaughter, Cheryl Ann Wermann, and a stepson, Paul G. Nastasio. To each of them we extend our heartfelt sympathy at the loss of a most kind and caring man.

The Class of 1949

Richard Foth Ferris '51

DICK DIED of a heart attack June 25, 1990, at his Chatham summer home.

He and Ann lived in Darien, Conn. Dick was a vibrant and committed participant in the Darien community and in the Congregational Church. Ann says, "He seemed to become increasingly wise as the years passed, almost out of proportion to time itself." He and Ann met when her cousin, Jack Rathman '50, brought him, Scott Helm, and Bill Stockton up for a weekend at Vassar in 1950.

Dick was director of marketing and business strategies for I.T.T. Technology Corp. Most recently, he headed Ferris Associates, acquisition and divestiture consultants.

Dick came to Princeton from Verona (N.J.) High School. He majored in mechanical engineering, was a member of Cannon, and roomed with Scott Helm. From 1963 to 1968 he was chairman of the Plainfield, N.J., schools committee for Princeton. He served in the Navy from 1951 to 1954. In Ann's words, "Dick was a man of principle, honor, loyalty, and devotion. His death has made me review what I am bringing to the world. I feel so sad that he has died, but he was so fine, what more was there for him to become?" Dick is also survived by daughter, Susan; son, Richard; a granddaughter; and a sister. He will be missed by many.

The Class of 1951

Robert Charles Hemminger '55

"A BALDING TEDDY bear with a Santa-like disposition," writes a former student, "Hemmie's presence was always friendly. He was a pillar of knowledge and compassion." Bob Hemminger died suddenly at his home in Montclair, May 25, 1990. He was dean of the faculty at Montclair Kimberley Academy. Surviving are brothers George and Gilbert.

After a stint in advertising, Bob taught history at the Punahou School where he wrote musical shows for the Honolulu Community Theater. After joining the faculty of Montclair Academy in 1962, he devoted his life to school and community. He was president of the Mental Health Center of Montclair, headed the history department, led tours to Europe, and inspired generations of tennis teams to several championships.

John Kidde '57, speaking at his funeral, said, "Hemmie was about friendship and understanding, about teaching and commitment to community, about talent, humor, compassion and integrity... May his humor, friendship, and positive spirit be with us from now on."

The Class of 1955

Malcolm Scott McCorquodale Jr. '55

MALCOLM DIED suddenly on Apr. 27, 1990, of a heart attack. He was 57 and in apparent excellent health, having completed 56 100-mile bicycle rides in the prior year. In addition to his love of family, friends, and bicycling, he had continued to pursue lifelong interests in squash, tennis, music, photography, and other arts. He was bright, charming, able, talented, and many-faceted.

"Mac," as he was known to many of us, was born on June 22, 1933, in Houston, where he attended St. John's Academy, until coming to Baltimore for senior year at Gilman. At Princeton, he joined Cap and Gown, majored in history, and spent junior year at the Sorbonne.

After graduation, Mac spent two years in the Army in SHAPE headquarters, writing précis from the French papers for the U.S. commanding general. In 1959, he married Robin Hunt, and, in 1961, received his degree from South Texas College of Law, and went to Schlumberger Intl., living in N.Y. and Paris. He eventually became chief counsel. In 1974, he retired to Houston, where he became V.P. of the de Menil Foundation.

Malcolm was a member of the Civil War Roundtable, Texas Philosophic Society, Briar Club, Religious Society of Friends, and the Houston Bicycle Club.

He is survived by his widow, Robin; sons Malcolm III, Angus, and Wilmer; brother, Douglas; and sister, Ellen Martin. We extend to them our deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1955

Edward Lyman Coffey Jr. '56

ED, WINNING his bout with cancer, had resumed his professional duties when he was struck down suddenly by heart failure June 19, 1990, at home in Port Washington, L.I. Ed, a three-letter athlete from Westfield (N.J.) High, exercised his considerable athletic talents on Princeton freshmen teams and in club sports. He was among the five '56ers who captured the clapper from Nassau Hall. A pre-med student, Ed also found time for Orange Key, the Westminster Fellowship, and a Keyceptership. A member of Cannon, Ed roomed with Ray Mentzer and Jim Gibson. We remember him for balancing intensity and seriousness of purpose with a sense of adventure and playfulness.

Following graduation, Ed attended Columbia Medical School and served with the army in Alaska. Ed trained at Massachusetts General and Children's Hospitals in Boston and at Presbyterian Hospital in N.Y.C. He then embarked upon a distinguished dual career as pathologist at North Shore Univ. Hospital on Long Island and clinical professor of pathology at Cornell Univ. Med. Center.

Ed relished the intimacy of his family life. To his lovely widow, Lina; daughters, Amy and Meg; son, Edward III; granddaughter, Myles; and sister, Sabrina; we offer our condolences for the loss of one who brightened so many lives.

The Class of 1956

Leland S. Berger '60

LEE BERGER died May 4, 1990, of injuries sustained when he jumped from a bridge into the Ausable Chasm. The suicide tragically ended Lee's courageous five-year battle against depression.

Born on Staten Island, N.Y., July 27, 1938, Lee graduated from Lawrenceville. He was a pre-med and a biology major at Princeton, and was a member of Terrace. An avid sailor, he also managed the swimming team.

Lee earned his M.D. from Yale in 1964 and interned at Grady Memorial in Atlanta, with a residency in diagnostic radiology at Hartford (Conn.) Hospital. Two years on the U.S. Public Health Service at Fort Defiance, Ariz., kindled his love of the outdoors, travel, amateur radio, and photography. Lee loved the North Country in N.Y. state and joined the Associates of Radiology in Plattsburgh in 1973. He raced his Ensign each year in the Mayor's Cup Regatta on Lake Champlain, winning five firsts since 1981 in the cruising class. He was also a radio enthusiast with more than 200 DX contacts worldwide. His quiet sense of humor, intelligence, generosity, and kindness will always be remembered.

Lee is survived by his widow, the former Eleanor Garrell (Vassar '64); his parents, Herbert and Sylvia; and a sister, Dr. Shelby Berger-Jacoby. The Class extends its deepest sympathy to all of them.

The Class of 1960

William Prescott Hersey '63

BILL, A self-employed architectural illustrator who lived in San Francisco, died suddenly of a heart attack March 31, 1990.

Born Sept. 4, 1940, in Boston, he attended Exeter and then majored in architecture at Princeton, drawing a thesis of "serial vision." He belonged to Key and Seal, was an officer of Triangle Club, sang in the Glee Club, and was a P.J.&B. Player. His post-graduate degree was in architecture from Yale. Bill stayed on in New Haven with the firm of Moore, Lyndon, Turnbull & Whitaker until 1969, when he became a freelancer.

Three years later he moved to San Francisco, where he became highly regarded for pen-and-ink renderings of projects, such as Sea Ranch in Calif. and Piazza d'Italia in New Orleans, both designed by architect Charles Moore. Bill also lectured on architectural art at U.C.L.A. and Tulane.

The Class shares its grief with his survivors, including his parents, Francis P. '30 and Mary; brother, Peter '56; and sister, Nancy Paulsen. He was the nephew of Winthrop P. '28 and David W. '63.

The Class of 1963

Eugene Bosworth Zachary '70

BUD ZACHARY died suddenly June 3, 1990, in Toronto, where he had lived for the past fifteen years, employed with Bell Canada as a systems analyst.

Known by many of his closest friends as Zach, he came to Princeton from Glen Rock, N.J., where he had been an outstanding student and amateur golfer. At Princeton, he distinguished himself as a two-time All American and captain of the Eastern intercollegiate championship team in 1970, establishing Springdale course record with round of 63. A basic engineer, he was a member of Charter and lifelong friend of his roommates David Bear, Dennis Kelly, Terry Marsh, Steven Gripper, and William Gardner.

He will be remembered most as a great friend and devoted father with high expectations of everyone, most of all himself. Although never married, Zach managed to juggle responsibilities of full-time work and single parenthood. The Class extends its sympathy to his son, Brendyn; daughter, Leya; his parents Margery and Dimitry, sister, Barbara Van Ness; and all those whose lives he touched.

The Class of 1970

Lloyd Peter Wallace '79

LOYD DIED of AIDS May 14, 1990, at his home in Philadelphia. His illness had been diagnosed at least two years earlier.

Lloyd was born and raised in Pittsburgh, one of nine Wallace brothers and a sister. At Central Catholic, Lloyd was an outstanding student, swimmer, and citizen.

Matriculating at Princeton was Lloyd's pride and glory. He lettered in swimming as a freshman, and was a member of Cottage. Lloyd was active in Class activities and developed close relationships with classmates, teachers, administrators, and others fortunate enough to cross paths with this gentle giant.

After graduation Lloyd attained his C.P.A. and M.B.A. and spent most of his career with Morgan Bank, more recently as senior V.P. of their financial division in Wilmington, Dela. Lloyd was a devoted son of Princeton and was instrumental in founding the gay alumni assn., The Fund for Reunion. He returned to campus annually and was a P-rade marshal. For many of us, that orange and black Da Vinci hat, along with his love for Sinatra and Bing, and the quality of his friendship, has become one of Lloyd's enduring trademarks.

He is survived by his mother and father, his brothers and sister, numerous nieces and nephews, and Michael, his companion of eight years.

The Class of 1979

Suzanne Alele '85

OUR CLASSMATE Suzanne died on June 23, 1990, at the National Institutes of Health in Washington, D.C., after a courageous fight with cancer.

Suzanne was born in Nigeria, and raised in Kingston, Jamaica, where she was an accomplished athlete. She moved to Washington, D.C. as a teenager, and attended Walter Johnson High School, where she was a member of the track and swimming teams.

After graduation, Suzanne received her M.B.A. from the Univ. of Maryland, and worked as a computer specialist for the Federal Reserve.

Suzy was a free spirit at Princeton. She excelled as a biology major, managed the lightweight football team, ran track, saved people at the information center from computer center catastrophes, and was a member of Cap and Gown, the Third World Center, and the International Center.

The Class extends its sincere condolences to her father, Dr. Christopher Alele; her brother, Peter Alele, and all of her family and friends who loved her and benefited from her wondrous presence. We salute a remarkable member and friend.

The Class of 1985

Everett T. Christmas Jr. '85

EVERETT DIED Sept. 14, 1989. He was 26 years old.

Prior to his death, Everett was counseling adolescents at Covenant House in N.Y.C., working exhaustingly long hours to provide understanding and love to these teen residents.

Those of us who had the fortunate experience of knowing Everett, both at Princeton and afterward, recall him as an incredibly forceful individual who challenged and inspired us. In his work, he was a brilliant perfectionist, who infused his projects with a passionate spirit; when not working, he brought the same intensity to the pursuit of relaxation and good times. Conversations with him were terrific. In essence, he was one of that rare breed who care—he brought himself fully to the task at hand, whether it was studies or personal relationships. Everett was well loved by many, including those of us at Princeton, and he is sorely missed.

The Class of 1985

Deborah Lynn Schade '85

DEBORAH DIED Jan. 18, 1990, at the age of 26.

Born in Mountain View, Calif., she graduated with honors from Awalt High School, where she was V.P. of the student body, and participated in Calif. Junior State.

At Princeton, Deborah devoted her studies to politics and philosophy. She withdrew after sophomore year and later attended Columbia Univ.

Deborah will be remembered as a persistent questioner and thinker who sought truth and encouraged those around her to think about, question, and improve society. She was a true leader and a loving person, one who brought out the best in others and imbued them with a sense of purpose and confidence in themselves.

Deborah is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Schade; her brother, Henry III; and her sister, Tina Dollens. She will live forever in the hearts and minds of those who knew her. To all, we extend our heartfelt condolences.

The Class of 1985

David Dinnocenti '86

THE CLASS of 1986 and Class of 1985 mourn the death of David Dinnocenti. David originally began Princeton with the Class of 1985, and after a year away from school between his freshman and sophomore years, graduated in 1986. He was an architecture major and a member of Ivy and the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. David played golf at the Hill School, and continued to play golf for four years on the varsity golf team at Princeton. After graduation from college, David worked with the Linpro Company, a real estate development company in Wilmington, Dela., and at the time of his death, he was obtaining his M.B.A. at the Wharton School of Business at U.Penn.

While at Princeton David was a generous friend—he was a consummate host to his friends at his parents' vacation home on the N.J. shore and spent much time listening to his friends' problems, but rarely burdened others with his own. On Feb. 7, 1989, David took his own life. The Class of 1986 extends its condolences to his parents, Eugene and Helen Dinnocenti; his brother, Gregory; and his sister, Donna Marie.

The Class of 1986

The Unspeakable in Pursuit of the Uneatable

FROM MY WINDOW at New College, Oxford, I used to watch the Wychwood Warriors playing at war and plunder. They wore ox-horn helmets, chain mail, and other Norse accouterments, and swung broadswords and battle-axes in wild courtyard melees.

The Wychwood Warriors are a branch of the Federation of Dark Age Societies, one of scores of social, political, and cultural organizations I discovered while attending business school at Oxford a few years ago. It seemed that all of them were represented at the Freshers Fair, a three-day gathering that is held each fall to recruit members from the new crop of students.

One section of the fair was devoted to athletics. In addition to traditional team sports like crew, squash and rugby, I found car racing, hang gliding, polo, and "korfball" (a game similar to basketball, but played on a smaller court with a smaller, lighter ball). Liberal factions seemed to dominate in the political section: I recall a smoke-filled corner with a lot of socialists in black leather and chains. Before leaving the fair with my pockets stuffed with fliers, I signed up for a parachute drop, a pentathlon run, a sake tasting, and a witch trial, to be held later that week in something called the "Oakshott Room" with "lavish quantities" of mead and mulled wine. I also joined the Oxford Enterprise, an entrepreneurial club—an odd thing to do at a place where entrepreneur seemed a pejorative term.

I followed up on some of these clubs, and here is my pick of Oxford's more unusual student organizations.

OXFORD TIDDLYWINKS SOCIETY. Tiddlywinks is a tabletop game in which players try to flip little plastic disks—"winks"—into a bean pot for hours on end. Such exertions used to promote a lot of drinking at the weekly meetings of the Tiddlywinks Society, but the thirty-one men and one woman who constitute the membership became more focused after the team's previous captain broke the tiddlywink high-jump record on BBC television. "Cambridge is very good," the current captain, Jim Wicks, told me. "They have well over fifty members and practice regularly. We have never beaten them." But with more than two hundred inquiries about the society at the Freshers ters"—people who wait by railroad tracks, often in the rain, to count locomotive numbers. The society sponsors an annual black-tie Roller Dinner aboard a train traveling from Bristol to Taunton.

"REAL" TENNIS. Tennis at Oxford is an eight-hundred-year-old sport played indoors in an asymmetrical court with a handmade ball and warped racquets. It should not be confused with court tennis, the sport familiar to most people but dismissed as "rubber ball" tennis by Oxford's Real Tennis pro, A.J. Oliver. The game is played with bowed racquets and a ball made of five yards of cotton yarn and with all the bounce of a potato pancake. The court is orange and black, and a platform called the "penthouse" slopes into the court.

THE CHRISTCHURCH AND FARLEY HILL BEAGLES. Beagling is a kind of poor man's fox hunt. It's pursued by the same class of sportsmen, and the beaglers wear similar livery, but they chase the quarry—a hare—on foot. Understandably, Britain's animal rightists are less than enthralled. Oscar Wilde's description of fox hunting—the unspeakable in hot pursuit of the uneatable—also applies to beagling, although at least you can eat a hare. After the beagle master releases the quarry, a pack of yapping beagles sets off in pursuit. The dogs are directed, more or less, by "whippers-in," who brandish brass horns and walking sticks. After the dogs corral and kill the hare, the beagle master daubs his cheeks with the animal's blood—a gesture surely as atavistic as any of the mock combats of the Wychwood Warriors—then retreats to celebrate with his fellows at the nearest pub.

—Carlo Cannell '85

Carlo Cannell lives in San Francisco. He attended Templeton College, Oxford's new business school, as a visiting professional in 1988-89.

ILLUSTRATION BY STACY M. WEZOLA

Fair, he was confident about the future.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY SEXUAL DECADENCE SOCIETY. The four-hundred-strong O.U.S.D.S. was in its second year and was firmly under the control of Anu Ojhi, age twenty, a cockney of Indian ancestry who had managed to win support for the club from The Sunday Sport, the British equivalent of The National Inquirer. Interest in the organization increased after the society's premier event was terminated by the police. "It was a stone groove, like an orgiastic Swedish porno film," said Ojhi, a physics major whose hero is John Belushi.

THE OXFORD RAILWAY SOCIETY. Daniel Miller, the society's secretary, described this club as a "mash" of "slightly mad-cap" train buffs who strive to ride every inch of track in the British railway system. The highlight of the year was a special opportunity to ride in a freight car over some obscure gauge track in Wales. Members do not associate with "spot-

Princeton's Trustees

Given how much our trustees do for the University, it is important for our alumni to be familiar with our board and its tasks. Who composes our board of trustees, and what precisely is its role and function?

As my presidency at Princeton unfolds, I become increasingly appreciative of the strengths, experience, and wisdom of the members of the board. This positive feeling of president for board—and I hope vice versa—is not something I take for granted, for it has surely not always been the case. President Maclean complained that, during his tenure, there were no railroads to take meddling trustees back home. President McCosh griped that the board was “full of old dotards and sometimes they go to sleep.” Moses Taylor Pyne noted, “The Trustees spent most of their time fighting Doctor McCosh.”

Harold T. Shapiro

Although today's trustees do not hesitate to express their views, the prevailing dynamic is one of teamwork—and no one ever falls asleep! I concur with President Dodds, who, at the close of his administration, told a group of alumni, “I have known college presidents who always took to their beds for the weekend following a meeting of their trustees. My sworn testimony is that I have never attended a meeting of our board which did not give a lift to my heart.”

Just who are these board members and what do they do?

The corporation known as The Trustees of Princeton University had its origin in a charter granted by King George II, which “passed the Great Seal” of the Province of New Jersey on October 22, 1746. To the trustees and their successors, the charter granted full power and authority to build houses or buildings; to elect, and at any time displace, a president, professors, and a “treasurer, clerk, usher, and steward”; to grant degrees, and to receive, among other things, “goods and chattels.” The trustees were limited, however, in how much they could acquire; in 1780, this limitation was a yearly income of “the value of twenty thousand bushels of wheat.” Luckily for Annual Giving—and the University—this limit was eventually eliminated!

Today there are 40 trustees, of whom two (the governor of New Jersey and the president of the University) serve ex officio. Thirteen are elected by alumni for four-year terms. The rest are chosen by the board itself to serve either as four-year term trustees or ten-year charter trustees. The president presides at meetings of the board, but the board elects the chair of its executive committee from elected members.

The composition of the board has changed significantly from the first board, of which three-fourths were clergymen. (In fact, it wasn't until 1913 that a requirement for at least eight trustees from the clergy was dropped.) Slightly more than half the current trustees are in business and industry or banking and finance; the rest are involved in law, education, government, communications, medicine, and the arts. While it wasn't until 1757 that the first alumnus served on the board, now all board members (except the governor) are alumni.

The addition in 1900 of trustees elected annually by the alumni—and the 1942 resolution revoking the right to life tenure—opened the board to younger members (although, in 1746 the youngest member was a mere 23—and the oldest only 58!). Further diversity was assured in the 1960s, with the addition of an alumni trustee representing the graduate school and an alumni trustee elected each year from the graduating class by the vote of the members of the junior and senior classes and the two most recently graduated classes.

Not long ago, the board fulfilled a major obligation in selecting a new president. Members also exercise direct responsibility in specific areas, such as approval of capital and operating budgets, approval of all new buildings, selection of honorary degree candidates, overseeing the management of the endowment, and private-sector fund raising. Board approval is required for all major University policies.

The full board meets four times a year, but the work of the various committees (executive, finance, grounds and buildings, curriculum, honorary degrees, plans and resources, and student life, health and athletics) brings members to campus almost every month during the academic year—and occasionally during summer.

Perhaps the most important function of the board, apart from various fiduciary responsibilities, is to help set overall University policy and to define the appropriate balance between long-term and short-term objectives. In addition, the board serves as a “court of final review” for many initiatives sponsored by faculty, students, alumni, administrators, and others.

It is also important to note what the board does not do: academic issues are usually delegated to the faculty, and admission concerns to the dean of admission and the dean of the graduate school.

The importance and value of having this group of external checkers and balancers cannot be overstated, nor can their dedication and commitment be commended enough. Ultimately the trustees—in partnership with the faculty—bear the responsibility not only for the preservation of Princeton's past and the full realization of its present, but also for the fulfillment of Princeton's future.

“This positive feeling of president for board—and I hope vice versa—is not something I take for granted, for it has surely not always been the case.”

THE PRINCETON LAMP

A handsome token of your Princeton days. This classic brass and marble lamp is as appealing for its quality as it is for the ties it represents with your alma mater. The precisely-crafted bas-relief university medallion gleams with a 24 kt. gold finish, and the subtle variation in the marble's pattern and hue makes each lamp naturally unique.

To order the Princeton Lamp, send the completed order form with a check or money order for $195 (price includes shipping and sales tax) in care of the Princeton Lamp Agency to: E. Owen Evans '91, The Princeton Lamp Agency, 216 West College Hall, Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 08544. For faster service Visa and MasterCard orders may be placed 24 hours a day by telephoning: 1-800-258-LAMP.

Because of limited stock, place your Holiday season order now to insure delivery by December 25, 1990.

Purchaser's address

NAME _____

STREET _____

CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

PHONE _____

If shipping address is different please attach the address of the intended recipient on a separate sheet of paper.

Digitized by Google

photo by Tim. by T. ed

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

November 7, 1990

S A V I N G S P E C I E S

Before It Saw The Light It Saw The Light Of Count

It's called a light-fade test. For hours on end, various surfaces and materials of the LS 400 were blasted as if by the sun.

Why? Because contrary to the old cliché, there is no such thing as "timeless beauty." In fact, beauty is very much a factor of time.

Of Day, Less Days.

The engineers at Lexus know this. That is why an entire task force was created to investigate ways of fighting age and maintaining the value of your investment.

The result is a luxury sedan whose luxury was fashioned with one eye to the future as well as the present.

The optional handworked leather

on the seats and trim is designed to resist bleaching by the sun. The burnished California Walnut on the doors and center console is designed to resist fading and cracking. And the exterior finish incorporating up to 42 steps is designed to maintain its rich gloss and luster.

In all, 96 items were studied as part of our anti-aging program. When a surface proved too sensitive to sunlight or the oils from human skin, the offending material was reformulated, again and again if necessary.

So see the dealer nearest you to discover what sets the LS 400 apart: Any car can be new today.

We want to be new tomorrow.

The Relentless Pursuit Of Perfection.

In 1906 reunion planners were vexed by the problem of how to get the alumni to the baseball game in an orderly fashion to prevent a wild rush for the best seats. Someone suggested that the alumni be formed together in a procession and marched down to the ballfield. Classes who would not submit to any other regimentation gladly accepted the chance to parade. They had already been practicing for several years. Small impromptu parades had regularly marched up and down Nassau Street day and night, stopping only for refreshment. The procession of classes soon acquired the sobriquet Pee-rade, and, as well, a menagerie of animals, from elephants to tigers. Marching bands and exotic floats joined in.

At first, only alumni marched in the P-rade. Later, in the 20's, the alumni welcomed sons and daughters, and gradually as Princeton grew and changed, the P-rade welcomed all Princetonians and their families. —excerpt from University: a Princeton Quarterly, 1978

Today, the P-rade is a march of 10,000 lasting nearly three hours. In the words of the late Fred Fox '39, assistant to the president at Princeton, "It's the best sloppy parade around." In fact, there are many who think it has gotten a little too sloppy and too long. They cite problems with the:

- line of march
- marshals
- terminus
- route

In an effort to address these questions and assure the health and welfare of this great Princeton tradition, the Alumni Council has asked a special ad hoc committee to study ways to improve the P-rade and report to the Executive Committee at its January 26 meeting.

The Ad Hoc Committee solicits your thoughts and suggestions. Please write c/o: The Alumni Council, Box 291, Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 08544. Thank you.

The Ad Hoc Committee on the P-rade:

Don Altmaier '55
 Ken Barnhart '45
 Al Bates
 Arlene Pedovitch '80
 Joe Prather '61
 Juliet Richardson-Smith '78 *81
 John Stryker '74
 Robert Sullivan '39
 Turk Thacher '66
 Jack Wagenseller '44, chair
 Dan White '65
 Karen Woodbridge S '65

Alumni
 Princeton

Council
 University

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

CONTINUING THE ALUMNI PRINCETONIAN, FOUNDED IN 1894

FEATURE

12 MOTHER NATURE'S TRUSTEE

*John Sawbill '58 and
The Nature Conservancy Take
A Nonconfrontational Approach To Saving Species*
by David Williamson '84

DEPARTMENTS

5 LETTERS

7 PRINCETON NOTEBOOK

Three Senior Administrators Resign; Barbara Sigmund, Mayor of Princeton, Dies

11 ON THE CAMPUS

Electronic Locks at Forbes College Provoke Controversy, Innovation
by Larry Zygmunt '92

17 BOOKS

19 SPORTS

Football Loses to Bucknell and Harvard; Harriers Roll to Impressive Records

25 CLASS NOTES

41 MEMORIALS

On the Cover

The trumpeter swan is one of many endangered species in North America that the Nature Conservancy, the subject of our feature, works to protect. Photo by Michael S. Quinton.

FROM THE ARCHIVES

Revelers from the Class of 1930 ham it up in midtown Manhattan, en route to the Princeton-Columbia football game of 1939. We don't know if they made it to Baker Field to see Coach Tad Wieman's Tigers beat the Lions, 14-7, with tailback Dave Allerdice '41 passing for one touchdown and running for the other. Princeton went on to post a 7-1 record that season.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS PHOTO

J. I. MERRITT '66, Editor

ANDREW C. MYTELKA '85, Managing Editor

DAVID WILLIAMSON III '84, Staff Writer

NUALA O'CONNOR '89, Assistant Editor

STACY M. WISZOLA, Art Director

NANCY S. MACMILLAN, Business Manager

LOLLY O'BRIEN, Advertising Director

R. T. HOWELL, Production Manager

LORRAINE DONEKER, Graphic Assistant

BOARD OF EDITORIAL DIRECTION

EDWARD R. WEIDLEIN '68, Chairman

LEA B. BELKIN GELB '82 • CHRISTOPHER V. CONNELL '71

LONDON Y. JONES '66 • ELLIOTT D. LEE '74

PATRICIA H. MARKS '72 • JOHN A. MCPHEE '53

PUBLICATION BOARD

DOROTHY L. BEDFORD '78, Chairman

ROBERT K. DURKEE '69 • ROBY HARRINGTON III '51

WALTER H. LIPPINCOTT, JR. '60 • PETER O. PRICE '62

PETER G. SMITH '46 • DANIEL N. WHITE '65

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE

ROBERT F. SENNOTT, JR.

Ivy League Magazine Network

254 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001 • (212) 684-5603

LOCAL ADVERTISING/PRINCETON EXCHANGE

LOLLY O'BRIEN (609) 258-4886

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is an independent magazine supported by alumni class subscriptions and by paid advertising. Its purpose is to record news of the alumni and at the same time to review without partiality the achievements and problems of the administration, the faculty, and the student body of Princeton University. The views expressed in the Alumni Weekly are those of signed contributors or the editor and do not necessarily represent official positions of the university.

PUBLISHED BY

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS

41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540

Telephone (609) 258-4885

TWX 510-685-2306 UNIV PRESS PRIN • Fax (609) 258-6305

ELECTRONIC PAW BBS: (609) 258-3602

Materials can be transmitted to our offices via telecommunications, using the upload facility in the file-transfer section of the Electronic PAW computer bulletin board system. Its protocols are 300/1200/2400 baud, eight data bits, one stop bit, and no parity. It is online 24 hours a day.

PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY (ISSN 0149-9270)

Vol. 91, No. 4, November 7, 1990

Printed by William Byrd Press, Richmond, Va. Annual subscription $19.50 (foreign postage $5 extra); single copies $1.50. All orders must be paid in advance. Copyright © 1990 Princeton University Press. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Second-class postage paid at Richmond, Va., and at additional mailing office.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to PAW Address Changes, 3175 Princeton Pike, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

Digitized by Google

"It's been smooth sailing ever since we turned our portfolio over to Princeton."

Princeton invest your money? Sure. With a Life Income Trust, you give the University securities or cash and receive income for life (and/or your spouse's life).

Some of the benefits:

MANAGEMENT. Your trust is managed as part of Princeton's highly successful endowment, which provides both investment expertise and diversity.

GROWTH. Life income trusts can provide inflation protection through an increasing income. For example, income to donors who invested in the "Pooled Growth Fund" in 1981 has virtually doubled (while future growth is not guaranteed, Princeton's endowment has performed remarkably over the last 60 years).

TAX ADVANTAGES. With a Life Income Trust, you get an immediate income tax deduction. You can also convert low yielding, appreciated securities to a higher income at no capital gains tax cost.

Interested in joining over 400 alumni and friends who've invested for themselves and in Princeton's future? Give us a call; we'll be glad to show you how.

Planned Giving Program
Box 39
Princeton University
Princeton, NJ 08544-0039
(609) 258-6318
(609) 258-6320

Director
Daniel H. Jamieson, Jr. '74

Associate Directors
Jane Rae Bradford
Robert B. Turner

More Frank Talk

The Alumni Council's award to Sally Frank '80 (PAW, July 18) is a slap in the face to the thousands of alumni who labor out in the vineyard for Princeton year after year in so many different ways. Although I am not much interested in returning to the good old days, and while I recognize that "Alumni Council" and "university" are not synonymous, the award certainly gives one pause as to where Princeton is headed.

GEORGE A. BRAKELEY III '61
New Canaan, Conn.

Although I can only surmise why the Alumni Council chose to honor Sally Frank '80, I assume it did so out of gratitude to her for showing Princeton that its policy of condoning discrimination was not in keeping with the enlightened image the university generally enjoys. The $27,000 in legal fees the university paid Frank in 1986 to settle her lawsuit against Princeton is a small price to pay to restore this image.

CHARLES D. REICH '38
Shaftsbury, Vt.

I am always glad when fellow alumni are enthusiastic enough about the university to put pen to paper in what they see as its defense, so I appreciated the letters on Sally Frank '80 that appeared in the September 12 PAW. I would add my voice to those of Nat Boynton '39, Hugh E. McGee '81, and John G. Kellogg '32—a voice, however, expressing admiration for Frank's courage, perseverance, and dedication to Princeton.

There is an inscription in the arch between Dickinson and McCosh halls that reads, "Here we were taught by men and gothic towers democracy and faith and righteousness and love of unseen things that do not die." I was taught by both men and women. Professors taught me, but also men and women whom I was privileged to address as peers, people who continue to teach me, people like Sally Frank. Hers is a cause of fundamental righteousness, reflecting the best of Princeton University.

One happy outgrowth of such a controversy is the self-criticism that accompanies it. What, for me, are the "unseen things that do not die"? In what values do I put my faith and stake my life? I thank Messrs. Boynton, McGee, and Kellogg for pushing me to ponder these questions in my heart, but I do not join them in their disparaging evaluation of either Ms. Frank's efforts or the Alumni Council's recognition of those efforts.

STEPHEN R. NICKLE '83
Demorest, Ga.

Leftist Agenda

I felt a cold chill run down my back when I read that the New Jersey Supreme Court's decision in favor of Sally Frank '80 was based on the court's subjective assessment of the "gestalt" of the relationship between the university and the all-male clubs, rather than on the law.

A common-sense interpretation of the law would tear holes in any argument that the clubs are public accommodations, a status that presumably arises from the clubs' relationship with Princeton. Although it's true that the eating clubs draw their memberships exclusively from the ranks of the university and would not exist if there had never been a Princeton, they remain eminently private institutions. The clubs have never received money from either the state or federal governments; nor has the university ever had any say in their affairs. All but one (Colonial) own their own land and buildings, hire their own employees, maintain their own grounds, and pay their own taxes.

For two centuries, the criteria of ownership and financial responsibility have served this country admirably in determining who should control something. But no longer. The N.J. Supreme Court's decision reflects the leftist agenda of many in our legal establishment who seek to redress perceived wrongs. When people who are supposed to be mere interpreters of the law instead become activists for "doing good," we have a crisis of government on our hands.

ANTHONY LETAI '87
Chicago, Ill.

Shame on Sally Frank '80! She brought the camel all the way into the tent! Shame also on presidents Goheen, Bowen, and Shapiro, for they opened the flap and let its nose in. Now all our internal affairs are subject to the scrutiny of the enlightened electorates of Newark, Hoboken, and Jersey City, New Jersey. Maybe, like proud little Grove City College, we should never have taken the government gold and just toughed it out on our measly endowment of $2.7 billion.

DAVID S. LONG '37
Enon Valley, Penn.

Regarding Robert B. Grossman '87's letter in the September 12 PAW: while I commend him for the fluency of his argument, I disagree with his assertion that Tiger Inn is different from a fraternity in that frats "are not recognized by the university and are not institutionalized, and so they are a far lesser evil than the all-male eating clubs." I'm sure that I speak for other alumni of Tiger Inn when I say that we don't care if Princeton University recognizes the club or not. It is our complete indifference to the issue of university recognition that proves our independence.

REED M. BENET '84
Somerville, Mass.

Gays and R.O.T.C.

I am offended by the intolerant tone of Robert H. Spencer '87's letter (PAW, September 12) objecting to the Alumni Council's decision to grant a service award to John W. Bitner '38 for his role in Exceptional Experiences for Selective Travelers.

Egypt	Ancient.
Greece
Asia Minor
the Aegean	Classical.
Carthage
Central Asia
the Kyber Pass	Mysterious.
India
Nepal
the Himalayas	Oriental.
Japan
Southeast Asia
Java	Enigmatic.
Borneo
Ceylon
Sumatra	Primitive.
South America
the Galapagos
the Amazon	Vibrant.
Ancient Civilizations
the Andes
Australia	Compelling.
New Zealand
New Guinea
Kenya
Tanzania	Exciting.
the Seychelles
Northern Italy
Burgundy	Artistic.
Southwest France
Alsace-Lorraine
the Rhine	Cultural.
the Moselle
Flanders
Scotland
Wales	Historic.

Highly acclaimed itineraries, especially designed for alumni of Princeton, Harvard, Yale, and other distinguished universities. For further information, please contact:

Alumni Flights Abroad
Department PR 169

A.F.A. Plaza
425 Cherry Street
Bedford Hills, New York 10507
TOLL FREE 1-800-AFA-8700
N.Y. State (914) 241-0111

ACTUAL SIZE

THE PRINCETON WATCH A Timely Gift

This gold plated quartz watch for men or women can be personalized with class year and/or initials. One year limited manufacturer's warranty.

$75.00 each

Call or write for your Princeton Watch today.

☐ Year _____ ☐ No Year

☐ Initials _____ ☐ No Initials

☐ Check enclosed (N.J. Residents add 7% tax)

☐ Charge my ☐ VISA ☐ AMEX ☐ M.C. ☐ H. Gross
Shipping and handling $3.00

_____ Exp. Date _____

Signature _____

Name _____

Address _____

One Palmer Square
Princeton, N.J. 08542
609-924-6088

At the sign of the goose...®

"sustaining the university's R.O.T.C. programs." He asks Princeton to do something that, legally, it cannot do: make R.O.T.C. comply with the university's equal-opportunity policy. His position ignores the U.S. Supreme Court's recognition of the necessity and constitutionality of the Department of Defense's regulations against homosexuality. The most recent appellate opinion affirming these policies is Ben-Shalom vs. Marsb, which was decided by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in August 1989.

Guys and lesbians are entitled to any opinion they want, and clearly they have a place within the university community. But so does R.O.T.C. It is through academic freedom and a broad-based, heterogeneous makeup that Princeton continues to be a great university. I urge Mr. Spencer to be tolerant of viewpoints, preferences, and programs that differ from his own.

WILLIAM D. DEGOLIAN '72
Atlanta, Ga.

Theater and Dance

With the start of a new school year, it is important to acknowledge the end of more than a decade of strong and thoughtful teaching by Alan Mokler in the Program in Theater and Dance. In its decision not to rehire him as the program's director, Princeton has lost more than a great administrator. Beginning in 1979, Mokler and the artists he brought to the campus gave the Princeton community innovative and intelligent productions of important dramatic works, along with consistently challenging and generous teaching.

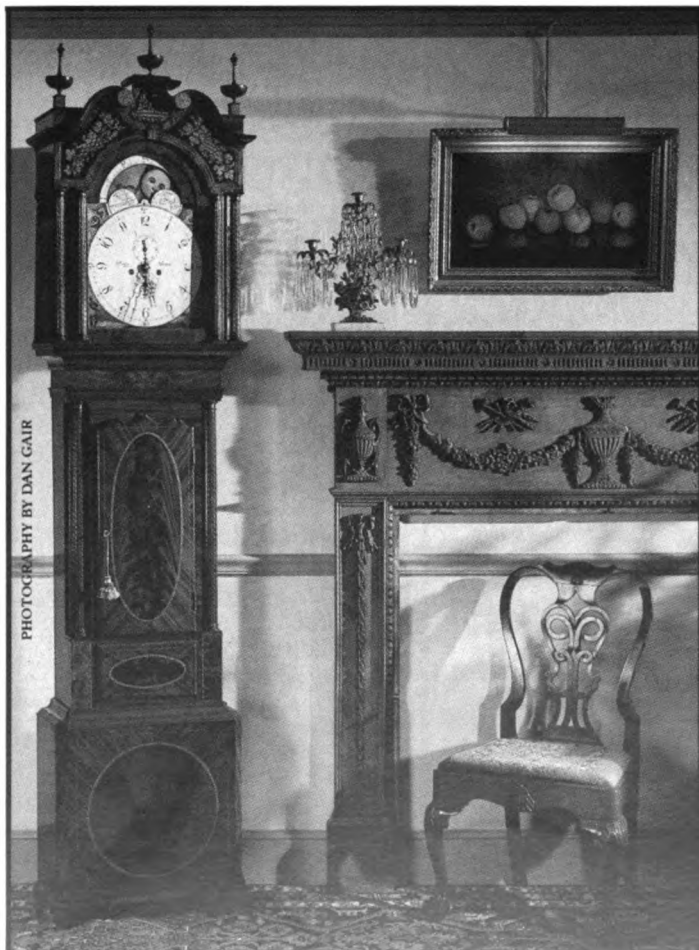

Princeton has had perhaps the nation's finest theater program in terms of the intellect, creative talent, and sensitivity of the faculty. Having taught and studied at dozens of theater programs, I am proud to say that Princeton's classes, rehearsals, and mentoring were unsurpassed. Alan Mokler's program stood out largely because of the supportive environment that he, Carol Elliott, and the other faculty members created. Students learned how to work as effective and imaginative collaborators, not as self-centered competitors. Many of these students have established successful careers in the theater, working as directors, actors, dramaturgs, teachers, and playwrights all over the country and abroad. I speak for many in saying that Alan and Carol were deeply appreciated and shall be greatly missed.

NORMA BOWLES '84
Los Angeles, Calif.

Adlai's Advice

In a famous speech delivered to the Class of 1954, Adlai Stevenson '22 advised, "Your days are short here; this is the last of your springs. And now in the serenity and quiet of this lovely place, touch the depths of truth, feel the hem. You will go away with old, good friends. Don't forget when you leave why you came." The admission office will be producing a new recruitment video and would like to include excerpts from Stevenson's address in it. If anyone knows of an extant recording of the speech, please contact me, at 216 Nassau Hall (609-258-3044).

ANDREA DIEHL
Assistant to the President
Princeton, N.J.

R. JORGENSEN ANTIQUES

R.R. 1, Box 1125 Route 1 Wells, Maine 04090 (207) 646-9444 Open 10-5, Closed Wednesdays

PHOTOGRAPHY BY DAN GAIR

Provost Benacerraf and Other Senior Administrators Announce Resignations

Left to right: Provost Paul Benacerraf, Dean of the Engineering School Hisashi Kobayashi, and Director of Health Services Louis A. Pyle, Jr.

PHOTOS BY ROBERT P. MATTHEWS (LEFT), JOHN T. MILLER '70 (CENTER), AND UNKNOWN (RIGHT)

THREE SENIOR university administrators, including the provost, announced their resignations this fall, setting the stage for Princeton's most far-reaching administrative make-over since President Shapiro took office three years ago. Searches are currently underway to find successors to the provost, Paul Benacerraf '52 '60, a philosophy professor; the dean of the School of Engineering and Applied Science, Hisashi Kobayashi '67; and the director of the university's health services, Dr. Louis A. Pyle, Jr. '41.

Benacerraf, the university's second-ranking official, was appointed provost in October 1987 by then President Bowen. (In the 1960s, when Bowen was the provost, Benacerraf served as the associate provost.) In addition to supervising the day-to-day operations of the university, the provost formulates the university's budget and oversees the Art Museum, the library system, and the Plasma Physics Laboratory.

Benacerraf said that he was leaving the post for personal reasons. "In the last few months, as I have wrestled with the overwhelming demands of this job and the real and immediate needs of a young family, I have come to feel that I cannot fulfill both to my satisfaction," he said. Benacerraf and his wife, Dr. Suzanne Miller, a professor at Temple University, have a four-year-old son and an eighteen-month-old daughter.

Benacerraf's sudden departure may also reflect a growing rumble of discontent among some senior members of the faculty over the general direction of university policy. Last spring, for example, the provost informed the faculty of a change in the university's pension plan in a blunt and, some said, tactless memorandum for which he later publicly apologized. And as the point man for the university's year-old budget-cutting program, Benacerraf has come under pressure from both academic and administrative quarters.

In a letter to the faculty announcing Benacerraf's decision to step down, President Shapiro said that the provost had "served the university's interests selflessly" during "this difficult period of administrative transition." Shapiro continued: "The benefits of his creativity, insight, and hard work will continue to enhance the university for years to come. I will miss working with him on a daily basis."

Benacerraf will continue to serve as the provost until his successor is chosen. He also will stay on as a special assistant to the president with responsibility for the Plasma Physics Lab and for several undisclosed "joint programs with other institutions." He plans to return eventually to teaching. In the meantime, Shapiro has asked the faculty's Committee on Appointments and Advancement to supervise the search for a new provost. Richard E. Quandt '52, an economics professor, and Dean of the College Nancy Weiss Malkiel were among those mentioned as possible successors.

Kobayashi, who has served as dean of the Engineering School since 1986, announced in September that he would step down in June 1991, after his five-year term expires. He said that he wanted to leave his administrative position to concentrate on teaching and on research into high-speed communications networks. A committee headed by Dean of the Faculty Robert C. Gunning '55 is conducting the search for Kobayashi's successor, and will consider candidates from both within and outside the university.

During Kobayashi's term as dean, undergraduate enrollment at the E-School increased by almost a hundred and the groundwork was completed for a significant expansion of the E-Quad. (Construction has already begun on a building for the university's new program in materials science and on a new wing for the photonics and opto-electronics program.) Kobayashi also pushed for greater financial support for graduate students and for more collaboration between the university and industry.

Pyle, who has been in charge of the McCosh Health Center for the last thirteen years, will also step down at the end of this academic year. His original term as director of health services ended in 1985, but it has since been extended—at the request of the university—several times. Pyle said that, after a new director is appointed, he will continue to serve as a physician at McCosh. "The clinical work with students has always been the most satisfying part of the job," he said.

Under Pyle's leadership, the staff at McCosh has almost doubled, including not only more physicians, but also more counselors and athletic trainers. (The number of beds in the infirmary, however, has dropped—a tribute to the efficacy of antibiotics and other medical advances.) Pyle's term has also seen the

From Carnage to Carnival

LIKE MANY people who grew up in the South, Reid H. Mitchell, now an assistant professor in the history department, had a father who was a Civil War buff and a mother with an acute understanding of little boys.

As a first grader in New Orleans, Mitchell made an announcement when he came home after the last day of school. "Well, I've finished," he told his mom.

"What do you mean?" she asked.

"I learned to read," he said. "That's the only reason I went to school in the first place. I just wanted to read Daddy's history books."

"I see," said his mother. "Go get one of Daddy's books, and you can read it to me."

Mitchell fetched a volume of Lee's Lieutenants from the bookshelf and opened it, but alas, Douglas Southall Freeman did not write on a first-grade level. "I'll go one more year," he said.

Reid Mitchell went to school for a great many more years, and learned not only to read history but to write it. His Civil War Soldiers: Their Expectations and Their Experiences, published by Viking in 1988, became a selection of both the Book of the Month Club and the History Book Club. Simon and Schuster published the book in paperback in 1989.

Civil War Soldiers began life as Mitchell's doctoral dissertation at the University of California at Berkeley. "The Civil War was not perceived to be on the cutting edge of historiography in the late seventies," he says, recalling how he decided on a dissertation subject. "But I realized I'd better do something that I cared about and loved, that was of fundamental importance to me. I tell my students that taking on a research project is like getting married—you're going to live with it a long time."

Reid H. Mitchell

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

Mitchell knew that Civil War soldiers had written an enormous number of letters and diaries that had not been published, let alone used by scholars. He decided to write about the soldiers—Confederate and Union—and what they thought and how they felt. His research took two years and led him to twenty libraries; he found the richest lodes in the Southern History Collection at the University of South Carolina, the United States Military Institute, in Carlisle, Pennsylvania, the Library of Congress, and the University of Michigan. After he earned his Ph.D., in 1985, he spent the next two summers revising the dissertation, for he had thought all along that the material could become a book of general interest.

Mitchell, who got his undergraduate degree from the University of New Orleans, wanted his second book to be about New Orleans. "I care about it and consider it home," he says. "What do people want to know about New Orleans? Jazz. I couldn't write a book about jazz. What else? Food. I couldn't write a cookbook. But there's carnival. At that time, there was no scholarly work on carnival." The money he earned from Civil War Soldiers helped finance a year off from teaching so he could research Mardi Gras.

For his next scholarly project, Mitchell plans to return to his first love, the Civil War, and write on some aspect of the collision between the war and nineteenth-century American culture.

Mitchell says that he writes not for historians but for an intelligent man or woman who is not necessarily trained as a historian. "I try to write like the best of The New Yorker," he says. "I don't want to neglect my academic career, but I went into academia to write history. The books have to drive the career."

Yet "I don't teach grudgingly," he says. "Students want to hear about the past." At Princeton, he teaches History 377, America from the Gilded Age to the Progressive Era (1877 to 1920), and while James M. McPherson, the senior Civil War historian in the department, was on leave, Mitchell taught the Civil War course. This fall, he is teaching a freshman seminar on William Faulkner's South and, with historian Nell I. Painter, a graduate seminar on Reconstruction.

—Ann Waldron

creation of many new health-related services, including the university's occupational medicine program for employees, the Sexual Harassment/Assault Advising, Resources, and Education (SHARE) program, and the Alcohol and Other Drug program.

Following a national trend, the McCosh staff has begun to focus on medical education. "In the old days, we provided primary medical care for acute problems, and little else," Pyle recalled. "Now we concentrate more on behavioral patterns that affect a student's long-term health. Most of them are in a malleable stage—a 'teachable moment'—and we want to take advantage of it." This educational initiative has often relied on the efforts of other students: dormitory health aides, peer-to-peer counselors, and "peer educators" on such issues as eating disorders, sexuality, sexual harassment, and alcohol abuse.

Thomas H. Wright, Jr. '62, the university's vice-president, general counsel, and secretary, will lead the search for Pyle's successor, and a new director should take office by next summer.

Barbara Sigmund, Popular Mayor of Princeton, Dies at 51

BARBARA B. SIGMUND, the mayor of Princeton Borough, died on October 10, at the age of fifty-one, after a long bout with cancer.

In a funeral service that filled the University Chapel to overflowing with three thousand mourners, friends and fellow politicians praised the popular and colorful mayor, who took office in 1984. New Jersey Governor James J. Florio, who defeated Sigmund in the Democratic gubernatorial primary last year, said, "My memories of her will be rich and varied, and they'll be a constant friend for the rest of my life."

Sigmund, the wife of Professor of Politics Paul E. Sigmund, came from a family of politicians. Her late father, Hale Boggs, was a congressman from Louisiana, and after he died in an airplane crash in 1972, her mother, Lindy, succeeded him. As mayor, Sigmund sought to control the rapid development that has taken place in Princeton during the last decade and to keep the borough from becoming an exclusive enclave of the rich. Although she sometimes criticized the university—particularly for its

CORPORATE BOOK-BUYING SERVICE

We offer personal service, hassle-free ordering by phone or mail, and out-of-print search service.

In addition, we provide consulting service for corporate libraries, and we can supply textbooks for your corporate learning program. There's no charge for special orders, and you can get rush service when you need it. We'll ship anywhere in the world. We have a large selection of current titles in stock:

- Computers • Mathematics • Physics
- Engineering • Biology • Chemistry
- Business • Technical Reference

the
PRINCETON
University Store

36 University Place, Princeton, NJ 08540
609-921-8500 ext. 248

Discover the Duncaster Lifestyle.

... people who plan ahead
are very glad they did.

Become a Duncaster Associate and preview our non-profit life care retirement community in a personal way. Attend events and seminars and be guided through your decision-making process. Enjoy community privileges, including help with your health insurance claims at a preferred rate. All this before you make a commitment.

For the facts, write or call Mrs. Patricia B. Copp, Director of Resident Services,
Duncaster, 40 Loeffler Road,
Bloomfield, CT 06002
(203) 726-2000

 Duncaster

role in development along Route 1—President Shapiro called her a “steadfast friend” of the university and “an extraordinary and courageous woman who has left an indelible mark on this community and on all who knew her.”

Known for her wit and spirit, Sigmund lost an eye to cancer eight years ago but then turned her disability to an advantage. Decorative eye patches—embroidered, patterned, or even sequined to match a particular outfit—joined her favorite colors, lavender and pink, as personal trademarks. Following her death, merchants tied bouquets of lavender ribbons along the route she walked between her home, on Evelyn Place, and Borough Hall.

In Memoriam: Eric M. Rogers, Norman W. Mather *47, and Frank H. Johnson '30 *36, Emeritus Professors of Science

ERIC M. ROGERS, a professor of physics, emeritus, who was famed for his ability to teach science to nonscientists, died in Cambridge, England, on July 1. He was eighty-seven.

A native of Britain, Rogers attended Cambridge University and worked at the Cavendish Laboratory with Lord Rutherford, the Nobel laureate in physics. He came to Princeton during World War II as a visiting assistant professor and didn't leave until 1971, when he retired as a full professor. A popular speaker both before and after his retirement, Rogers delivered a series of lectures on atoms that was televised by the BBC in 1980.

In academic circles, Rogers is best known for Physics for the Inquiring Mind, which shows how physics can be taught by asking questions instead of announcing results. Now in its twelfth printing, the book is used in many college-level physics courses for nonscientists. In Physics 101a, his legendary introductory course, Rogers applied his theories of science education to a generation of Princeton students, emphasizing the philosophical underpinnings of physical science rather than equations and routine measurements.

NORMAN W. MATHER *47, a professor of electrical engineering and computer science, emeritus, died in Princeton on July 3. He was seventy-six.

Mather joined the faculty in 1948 as an associate professor, and became a full professor ten years later. In 1952, he began a nineteen-year association with Project Matterhorn, the fusion-energy program that later developed into the Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory. As head of Project Matterhorn's engineering division, Mather designed much of the electronic equipment that was used in the first generation of atomic accelerators.

In 1968, he returned to teaching full-time, specializing in signals, circuits, and microcomputers. Mather also served as clerk of the faculty from 1968 to 1971. He retired in 1982.

FRANK H. JOHNSON '30 *36, the Edward Grant Conklin Professor of Biology, emeritus, died on September 22 in Princeton of complications from a cerebral infarction. A painter, author, and pioneer in the field of bioluminescence, he was eighty-two years old.

Johnson applied his interest in bioluminescence—the phenomenon whereby some animals, most notably fireflies and a variety of fish species, emit light—to fundamental biological problems. In 1960, for example, he and a group of Japanese researchers isolated luciferin crystals, a light-emitting compound, from a luminescent fish of the South Pacific. He was also among the first biologists to address the impact of advances in chemistry on biology, presaging the rise of molecular biology.

As an undergraduate, Johnson founded the Princeton chapter of Sigma Xi, a society that recognizes scientific research. After graduate work at Duke, he returned to Princeton for his doctorate and joined the faculty in 1937. Among the courses he taught during a forty-year career at Princeton was one on microbiology.

In addition, Johnson was an accomplished artist who worked in charcoal, oils, and watercolors, and two of his paintings appeared on the cover of PAW. Longtime readers may also remember Johnson as the creator of one of this magazine's most unusual covers. In 1948, Johnson took a photograph of millions of luminescent bacteria that he had arranged in the shape of the Princeton seal with the caption “living light.” The bacteria themselves provided the light for the exposure.

Electronic Locks at Forbes College Provoke Controversy, Innovation

RESIDENTS OF Forbes College have long joked that were it not for their proximity to the Wawa, Princeton's only all-night convenience store, no one else would ever lay eyes on their dormitories, at the intersection of Alexander Road and University Place. But as of the beginning of this school year, even the most dedicated of campus explorers cannot get beyond the façade of the former Princeton Inn after 9 P.M.—unless they bring their student identification cards.

As the first step in a plan to increase campus safety by controlling access to all dormitories, the university last summer installed an electronic-lock system at Forbes, which is considered particularly vulnerable to intruders because of its location on the edge of the campus. All Forbes residents received a plastic card-key about the size of a credit card, but several times thicker. The key, which contains a circuit board, unlocks a door when it's held in front of an electronic reader mounted on an adjacent wall.

The university programmed individual doors to lock themselves at 6 or 9 P.M., depending on their location, and the public-safety office's computer system assigned each card to open some of the doors—or all of them. If lost, a key can be deleted from the system. At the main door of Forbes, the university installed one lock that accepts the identification cards of all students. Three telephones outside the door permit visitors to call students inside the college to gain admission.

Although electronic keys have been in use at the Engineering Quadrangle at night for several years, dormitories have never had any security "system" beyond the key locks on individual room doors. Last year, when the university announced its plans for Forbes, many students—including members of the safety committee—complained, claiming that electronic locks were inconvenient or unnecessary, or that the cost of outfitting Forbes with these locks (roughly $200,000) would be better spent improving the dim outdoor lighting on the campus. Opponents of the plan continue to contend that the university paints "outsiders" as the only danger, refusing to admit that crimes or harassment can originate with students themselves.

Among the residents of Forbes, the plan's reception has been mixed. Most sophomores call the system an unnecessary nuisance, an obstruction to mid-night dashes across the street for chili dogs; freshmen, who have never known it any other way, are more amenable to the locks. "We started with an underclass dorm for that reason," says Thomas K. Emmons, the project manager in charge of implementing the system. Some people evidently feel strongly enough about the locks to vandalize them or otherwise subvert the system. One student taped his card to a reader, thereby keeping the door unlocked.

*Not surprisingly,
local pizza merchants are less than amused
by the locks. "Quite frankly, they suck," says one deliveryman.*

The sophisticated computer system has defeated all such attempts at resistance. It automatically locks any door whose reader is disabled, and if a door is open for more than twenty seconds, an alarm sounds. A computer station in the public-safety office, in Stanhope Hall, displays and records all activity on the system, so proctors quickly noticed the taped-up card and seized it.

Another kind of problem confronted Orthodox Jews, who are prohibited from operating electronics on the Sabbath (sunset Friday to sunset Saturday). "It would have meant that there would be no way for traditional students to enter Forbes on Friday nights," says Rabbi Edward Feld, the director of the Princeton Hillel Foundation. Feld, who was on sabbatical last year, was unaware of the problem until some Jewish students told him about it. "I suggested to Jerry Witsil [the director of public safety] that we set aside one door, a side entrance, that could be opened by non-electronic means," Feld says. Before the next Sabbath, the university had installed a combination lock on the door to the Forbes coffee shop, and provided the combination to the Orthodox students.

Less easily solved is the problem faced by Princeton's unofficial religion, the first church of late-night pizza. In order to deliver their pies to Forbes, the purveyors of pizza have had to bang on doors and plead for admission on the outside phones. Students who happen by the doors have been pressed into service as doormen for the deliverers of this circular cuisine. Not surprisingly, local pizza merchants are less than amused by the locks. "Quite frankly, they suck," says Paul Smith, the night manager of Teresa's Pizza, on Nassau Street. "I'm tired of my drivers being late because they're waiting for some idiot to come downstairs and open the door."

University administrators say that they expect everyone, including the pizza deliverymen, will eventually get accustomed to the new state of security. "It's here, it's staying, and people are going to have to get used to it," says Witsil. Richard R. Spies '72, the university's financial vice-president and campus safety guru, says that "their concerns about how well it works will be looked at, but I've said from the beginning that this is not something subject to a referendum."

And no matter what, more electronic locks are on the way. Spies estimates that it might take two to three years to equip all dormitories with the locks, but no administrator will say exactly where locks might appear next. Mathey and Rockefeller colleges are likely candidates, says Spies, because "they're more exposed," but the Gothic style of these buildings poses special challenges. For an electronic system to operate, the doors must latch shut completely and reliably, so many of the old, ill-fitting doors may have to be replaced.

In the meantime, students grumble but adjust, perhaps unaware of the locks' one incontrovertible benefit: they have contributed to Princeton slang. If oriented properly, a card-key can open a lock from inside a wallet. Some talented students have perfected a method of opening doors with their wallets still inside their back pockets by pressing their posteriors against the card readers. They call it the "butt-read."

—Larry Zygmunt '92

Larry Zygmunt, a junior from Arlington Heights, Illinois, is majoring in English.

OTHER

NATURE

BY NOW, JOHN C. SAWHILL '58 HAS gotten used to the strange looks he gets from flight attendants on USAir and Continental Airlines—he knows they're mistaking him for their boss, the oft-reviled airline mogul Frank Lorenzo. And to be sure, there is a superficial resemblance between the two men. They're about the same age, height, and weight, and they share the angular physique that distinguishes dedicated runners from mere joggers.

Given Lorenzo's notoriety, many people might take umbrage at such a comparison. (You certainly wouldn't want to tell an Eastern Airlines mechanic that he looks like Frank Lorenzo.) But Sawhill doesn't seem to mind.

Then again, Sawhill isn't the confrontational type. In a career that has included stints as president of New York University, as the deputy secretary of energy, as a consultant on Wall Street, and—most recently—as president of the Nature Conservancy, he has mastered the arts of diplomacy and compromise. So when Sawhill found himself on the same airplane as the real Frank Lorenzo not long ago, what did he do?

"I went over and introduced myself, and we laughed a bit about the resemblance," Sawhill recalls. "Then I asked him if he'd be interested in making a contribution to the Nature Conservancy."

This airborne exchange illustrates not only the way that John Sawhill operates, but also, in large measure, how the Nature Conservancy approaches its mission of preserving habitats for endangered species. Over the years, the group has protected some four million acres, an area almost twice the size of Yellowstone National Park (the nation's largest). With more than a thousand preserves, an $85 million fund for land acquisition, 550,000 members, and eleven hundred full-time employees, it's easily the largest private land-conservation organization in the world. It's also one of the quietest, least political, and least strident of all environmental groups. And according to Sawhill, it's precisely this low profile that has allowed the Conservancy to become so successful.

"We are basically a non-advocacy group, and we're very proud of that reputation," Sawhill says. "Most of our members feel very strongly about that. It's one of the reasons we can appeal to such a broad political spectrum—people can coalesce around our basic concept of land conservation. If we were to become an advocacy organization, we would polarize our membership and wouldn't be nearly as effective as we are."

A philosophy of cooperation, not confrontation, guides all the Nature Conservancy's efforts. Unlike some of the smaller but higher-profile environmental groups (the Sierra Club and the Environmental Defense Fund, for example), the Conservancy doesn't file lawsuits to stop the development of land it wishes to protect, and it doesn't throw its considerable political weight behind petitions or pieces of legislation. Moreover, it actively seeks—and gratefully accepts—donations from large corporations, even ones with less-than-spotless environmental records. Just to be in contact with such corporations would be anathema for many environmental groups.

As an essentially apolitical institution, the Conservancy eschews purism for results. It operates programs in every state; a refuge for bald eagles on the James River in Virginia, a 7,500-acre preserve in Florida for the endangered Key deer, a Top: John C. Sawhill '58. Bottom: Rising like the spines of a dragon, the pinnacles of a mountain cast shadows across the 502-square-mile Gray Ranch, the Conservancy's newest preserve in New Mexico.

TOP PHOTO: BACHRACH BOTTOM PHOTO: BILL WALDMAN

'S RUSTEE

John C. Sawhill '58, President of the Nature Conservancy, Takes an Apolitical Approach to Saving Species 🌿 By David Williamson '84

The Honey Creek Ranch Preserve, a Conservancy project in Texas, boasts such lush vegetation as waterlilies, Spanish moss, and cedars.

PHOTO BY HAROLD E. MALDE

small site in Oregon for the woolly meadow-foam (a rare medicinal plant). Endangered species ranging from ocelots to fringe-toed lizards thrive on Conservancy preserves. Among the organization's international efforts are a project to protect the tropical rain forest of South America and an island-ecology program in the South Pacific.

The Conservancy owns 90 percent—some 55,000 acres—of Santa Cruz Island, off southern California. In Oklahoma, the group is attempting to stitch together several hundred thousand acres for its new Tallgrass Prairie Preserve. Perhaps the brightest star in the Conservancy's constellation is the recently acquired Gray Ranch, 321,703 rugged acres—some 502 square miles—in the boot heel of New Mexico. Conservancy experts estimate that Gray Ranch supports more than seven hundred species of plants, seventy-five species and subspecies of mammals, and fifty types of reptiles and amphibians.

Blessed with this enormous variety of flora and fauna, Gray Ranch epitomizes the kind of property that the Conservancy seeks to protect. Since it was founded in 1951, the Conservancy has worked to preserve the biological diversity of the planet. It pursues this narrow agenda by acquiring habitats in which rare, threatened, and endangered species live; plants get the same priority as animals. These strictly scientific priorities give the Conservancy a flavor different from other land trusts, which by and large seek to protect wilderness areas, not individual species. As a former president of the Conser-

"We're in the science business, not the pretty business," said a former Conservancy president.

vancy was fond of saying, "We're in the science business, not the pretty business."

The Conservancy takes the business of conservation seriously. As a nonprofit organization that relies exclusively for its support on gifts from individuals, foundations, and corporations, it conducts a sophisticated fundraising operation. Indeed, the long list of ways to donate to the Conservancy—planned giving, estate planning, life income trusts, and so forth—recalls Princeton's fundraising apparatus more than it does the often shoestring appeals from other environmental groups. And like administrators of a university campaign, development officers from the Conservancy are delighted to help a donor tailor a gift to his or her particular needs.

Equally adept are the Conservancy's team of lawyers and real-estate experts, who are renowned for their ability to secure properties—often in creative ways—that the group's biologists target. In one famous case, the Conservancy wanted to purchase a two-thousand-acre hunting club on Shelter Island, at the eastern end of Long Island, for use as an osprey preserve. The company that owned the club refused to sell, so the Conservancy bought the entire company, for more than $10 million. It then sold off all the company's assets—including nine brownstones in Manhattan—except the Shelter Island property.

The Conservancy isn't afraid to cut deals with big corporations, either. In a tax-saving "discount sale," for example, Procter & Gamble sold the Conservancy a property in Florida's Big Bend that was valued at $29 million for only $19 million. The Conservancy resold the property (at cost) to the state, and it's now part of a refuge that stretches for two hundred miles along the Gulf Coast. Similarly innovative deals have been struck with such corporations as Kimberley-Clark, Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing (3M), and Chevron.

PURISTS MIGHT QUAIL at these seemingly unholy alliances, but Sawhill and the pragmatists at the Conservancy have no such qualms. "What causes activity to take place in this country is the business community," Sawhill says. "Businesses are the principal drivers of economic development and growth. Either we're going to get them working with us and accomplish a lot, or we're constantly going to be fighting them and accomplish nothing."

Sawhill says he sees a troubling polarization of corporate America and the environmental movement. In the legislative arena, for example, environmentalists often ignore the economic and practical effects of laws they draft. "The current Clean Air Act is an example of this," Sawhill says. "No one's against clean air, but according to the nonpartisan experts at Resources for the Future, it's going to have a negative cost-benefit effect in the long term." Similarly, he observes, the business community could improve legislation by tempering the more unrealistic proposals with its own expertise, rather than just employing obstructionist tactics.

"Neither side is really at fault," Sawhill says. "I think the fault is that they haven't communicated very well." And unless the lines of communication improve, he claims, this situation will get worse as new environmental issues come to the fore. He cites the issues of global warming and electromagnetic radiation as potential flashpoints between industry and environmental groups.

To avert such conflicts, Sawhill suggests that executives inculcate an ethic of environmentalism throughout their enterprises, especially among their front-line employees. "It's not enough for the C.E.O. to say, 'We're environmentalists,'" Sawhill says. "You've got to change a whole series of managerial systems so that the employee understands that the company has a new set of values." These kinds of aggressive measures may not make the most economic sense in the short run for many companies, he says, but they will pay long-term dividends.

DuPont, for instance, recently announced that it would no longer produce chlorofluorocarbons—a compound used in aerosols and refrigeration that damages the atmosphere's protective layer of ozone—and was widely hailed for having taken a responsible approach to the environment. Unocal, an oil company in California, has offered to buy (and then take out of service) pre-1971 automobiles, which are responsible for a disproportionate share of air pollution. Like the

The Conservancy's objective is not simply to protect wilderness areas, but to preserve species—like this bald eagle—and the habitats they live in.

PHOTO BY ART WOLFE

DuPont initiative, Unocal's program was both environmentally sound and a resounding public-relations success. Another oil company, ARCO, has just introduced an "emission control gasoline" whose marketing strategy stresses not performance but environmental value.

gifts and then plows the profit into purchases of other land.

Few practices of the Nature Conservancy generate as much controversy as the Trade Lands Program, and perhaps its most vociferous critic is George W. Reiger '60, an author and a columnist

The Conservancy's projects range from the very dry—such as Texas's Gypsum Dunes Preserve (left)—to the very wet—the habitat of this West Indian manatee (right) on Florida's Gulf Coast.

For this kind of strategy to succeed, Sawhill says, companies should concentrate on the products and services they know best (ARCO and gasoline, for example), thus giving their programs credibility. Companies should adopt creative approaches and promote their efforts effectively. Finally, he says, they should stick to it, lest consumers dismiss their programs as just more advertising gimmickry. By pursuing this formula, Sawhill argues, industry might be able to help shape the environmental debate, not simply react to it.

But businesses should also be more sensitive to environmental concerns, he adds. Far too frequently, companies plunge into development projects without adequately exploring their potential impact on the environment; often the result of this approach is endless litigation. Sawhill says that some of these problems could be avoided if, before they began a project, industries checked first with the Nature Conservancy's Heritage Program, a computerized index to the habitats and populations of more than 65,000 species of plants and animals. It's considered the most complete database of its kind in the world, and, for a relatively modest fee, a corporation can have a property evaluated with respect to its biotic diversity.

The Heritage Program also helps the Conservancy decide which properties it should pursue. When a given piece of land comes on the market, the Conservancy's biologists determine its ecological significance by checking the database. If it's a desirable parcel, the real-estate division will attempt to acquire it. The Conservancy also uses the database to vet donated properties. In many cases, donors give land that, although undeveloped, doesn't have any particular ecological distinction; under the Trade Lands Program, the Conservancy sells or otherwise disposes of these for Field & Stream magazine. Some people at the Conservancy, Reiger charges, are "more interested in deals than ideals." He cites the case of Elkhorn Slough, a haven near Monterey, California, for birds migrating on the Pacific flyway. The Conservancy acquired 350 undeveloped acres overlooking Elkhorn Slough and plans "compatible development" for the site—perhaps ten or twenty vacation homes. "The original owners of the Elkhorn Slough did not pass title to T.N.C. in anticipation of that organization developing the property, when they could have developed it themselves at greater personal profit," Reiger has written.

"We never accept land and then misrepresent what we're going to do with it," retorts Sawhill. "In our Trade Lands Program, we always make it very, very clear in advance that it's land we're not going to hold. It doesn't make much sense for us to put our resources into some land that doesn't have much ecological value." Recently, he adds, the Conservancy has been obtaining "biotically insignificant" property that adjoins existing Conservancy preserves, but these acquisitions are part of the Conservancy's Biosphere Reserve Concept, a new effort to protect entire ecosystems, not just individual species.

SIMPLY BUYING the core natural area and setting it aside doesn't always work anymore," Sawhill explains. "We need to be concerned with what happens in the surrounding area. The economic and recreational activity there will have a direct effect on our conservation objectives." Along Virginia's Eastern Shore, for example, the Conservancy has established the Virginia Coast Reserve, an immensely fertile 35,000-acre preserve that encompasses a multitude of barrier islands and marshlands. To regulate the expan-

LEFT PHOTO: HAROLD E. MALDE
RIGHT PHOTO: PATRICK ROBE

Above: Nimble-footed mountain goats are among the species in the Pine Butte Swamp Preserve, in Montana.

ABOVE PHOTO: RON GEATZ
PHOTO OF GRAY BAT BY
BATES LITTLEHALES '46

Right: California's San Andreas Fault provides the conduit for a spring to seep out (lower left) at Willis Palms, in the Coachella Valley Preserve. Bottom: Majesty aloft, the whooping crane is another endangered species that the Conservancy is working to preserve.

RIGHT PHOTO: HAROLD E. MALDE
BOTTOM PHOTO: STEVE WILSON

sion of marinas and other real-estate development, it has also purchased all the deep-water ports on the mainland and acquired many waterfront farms.

That's regulating, not halting, commercial and private development. According to a Conservancy report, "We acquired 6,000 acres of seaside farms and village properties at key locations, with the intention of reselling these properties with conservation plans and deed restrictions that will protect ecological values." The governing concept, as with Elkhorn Slough, is "compatible development." And as a result, some of the Virginia reserve's objectives sound distinctly economic: revitalizing the coastal fisheries, promoting nature-oriented tourism, and improving the local economy. Other stated goals of the Coast Reserve focus more on the environment: protecting the Eastern Shore's most significant natural areas, encouraging low-impact agriculture, and restricting the density of development on the waterfront.

Opponents of this plan fear that "low-density development" really means "expensive vacation homes"—that only the rich will be able to afford property in the reserve. But this conclusion contravenes the Nature Conservancy's professed commitment to creating "livable, viable, and sustainable local communities" that maintain "the quality of life, natural beauty, and cultural values" of the area. Regardless of which side is right, such suspicions illustrate how the Conservancy's low-key approach can leave the organization open to charges of elitism.

And such charges aren't new. Because the Conservancy has traditionally drawn its members and donors from the wealthier strata, the organization has acquired what the New York Times called a "tweedy reputation for upper-class altruism." The sheer size of its assets—estimated at $617 million—also provokes comment. But, says Sawhill, "we're not as well heeled as people think we are. Relative to what we're trying to do, we don't have nearly enough. Our balance sheet may look good, but remember that $400 million of that is tied up in preserves." (This figure is even more impressive when you consider that the Conservancy owns only about two million of the four million acres it has protected over the years. The rest has been transferred to various state and federal agencies.)

The Conservancy's conservative attitude toward opening its preserves to the public perpetuates this reputation for elitism. Some of the group's scientists would ban all people from refuges owned and managed by the Conservancy; others in the organization want to allow the public to see what goes on there. At present, the Conservancy grants the public only limited access to its properties, so the biologists seem to have the upper hand.

Sawhill thus faces something of a dilemma. On the one hand, he defends the Conservancy's willingness to make deals behind the scenes, despite the elitist connotations of the practice. "When you're negotiating real-estate deals, you've got to do it quietly," he says. "Otherwise, you end up paying a lot more." This secretive, low-profile approach also enables the Conservancy to move rapidly when a piece of land becomes available. Most of all, this strategy has proved extremely effective in the past.

On the other hand, Sawhill wants to expand the Conservancy's membership dramatically and to reach out to all segments of society, in particular to people from socioeconomic groups different from the organization's traditional supporters. "What we really want to do is to establish a conservation ethic within the American public," he says. "You don't do that by working with just a small, elite group—it's got to be much larger." He hopes to see the Conservancy's membership eventually reach three million. "It's possible," he says. "I've never met anybody who didn't think that what we are doing is important."

Just how the "quiet" Conservancy will balance its traditional methods with this populist objective remains to be seen. The smart money, however, would bet on John Sawhill to strike a compromise. □

Updating the Word of God

THE NEW REVISED STANDARD VERSION OF THE HOLY BIBLE
Bruce M. Metzger *42, tr. and ed. • Oxford University Press, $19.95

ALREADY KNOWN by its initials as the N.R.S.V., this new English translation of the Hebrew and Christian Scriptures will certainly become the Bible of choice for most churches (Catholic, Protestant, and Orthodox), departments of religious studies, seminaries and divinity schools, religious publishers, and scholars who work with Hebrew, Greek, Aramaic, Syriac, and Latin.

The New Revised Standard Version of 1990 is a complete reworking of the Revised Standard Version of 1952. Almost simultaneously, a new Revised English Bible has been published in England. The two new versions have much in common and some basic differences, but it seems likely that the N.R.S.V. will be more accepted in the United States and, perhaps also, in Canada. It may come as a surprise to many that since the R.S.V. of 1952, more than twenty-five other English translations of the Bible—and as many more of the New Testament alone—have appeared.

The reasons for all this activity by biblical translators and exegetes are manifold: discoveries of ancient manuscripts, the impact of continuing work on the Dead Sea Scrolls, the combined research of many biblical (and other) scholars, and the evident obsolescence and ambiguity of words and phrases in that greatest of Bibles, the King James (or "Authorized") version of 1611. Of course, all the linguistic scholarship in the world cannot, for many, replace the cadences and rhythms of the King James. The same attitude toward new translations may be true of many Jews, who have the Jewish Publication Society's new version of 1982, but who may associate the Hebrew Scriptures with earlier J.P.S. translations (such as that of 1917), with the Hertz Bibles that are used in many synagogues (but that include only the Pentateuch and weekly readings from the Prophets), or with the ba'al koreb's chanting of each portion with studied inflection and dramatic resonance. These attitudes remind us that religion, tradition, worship, and piety are not necessarily tied to a clean text.

But a corrected and improved text is certainly necessary for the intensive study of the Scriptures, and the N.R.S.V. makes way for a new generation of linguistic and historical scholarship, so that ancient stories, poems, and parables speak from the past to the present. Bruce M. Metzger *42, who chaired the revision committee under the auspices of the National Council of Churches, is without doubt the foremost biblical linguist—especially with regard to the Greek texts—of our time. The successful completion of the N.R.S.V. is largely owing to his tireless leadership and his meticulous attention to the nuances of style, grammar, and etymology. He notes in a preface "To the Reader" that the committee tried to be "As literal as possible, as free as necessary."

The new gender-neutral text avoids eyebrow-raising phrases like "once I was stoned" and tongue twisters like "you who bew."

The most innovative and controversial feature of the N.R.S.V. is the translators' deliberate effort to make the biblical languages inclusive where the text itself allows. Thus: "God said, 'Let us make humankind [not man] in our image'" (Genesis 1:26), and "Happy are those [not Blessed is the man] who do not follow the advice of the wicked" (Psalm 1:1). In the New Testament, the translators made a serious and consistent effort to translate such Greek terms as anthropos (in older versions, man), uios (son), and adelphos (brother) in various inclusive ways where the original text does not demand a masculine reference. Their attempt to close the gender gap is in line with the key Pauline passage that "in Christ Jesus you are all children [not sons] of God. . . there is no longer male and female" (Galatians 3:26, 28).

The one major exception in the N.R.S.V. to the contemporary preference for inclusivity is the all-important retention of the masculine gender when speaking of God, who is invariably "he," "him," and "his." In a comment to the press before the publication of the N.R.S.V., Metzger was quoted as saying

A Perfect Place For A . . .

Weekend Escape

Imagine... THE RESIDENCE INN*

$79.00*

- Studio Suites with Queen Sized Beds.
- Separate Living Room, many with Fireplaces.
- Fully Equipped Kitchens.
- Complimentary Continental Breakfast.
- Heated Pool, Whirlpool and Sport Court.

*Rates valid Friday and Saturday nights only based upon availability. Rates are subject to 6% New Jersey State Sales Tax. Escape Rates not valid in conjunction with other discounts.

THE RESIDENCE INN PRINCETON
4225 Route One • Princeton, NJ 08540
(201) 829-9600

Children's Photographs from $75.00

Bachrach
Photographers since 1868

We're Now in Greenwich

Boston 617-536-4730 Chicago 312-642-5500
Greenwich 203-869-6922 Morristown 201-267-2006
New York 212-555-6232 Philadelphia 215-563-0551
Washington, D.C. 703-548-2111

STEWARTSON-DOUGHERTY
Real Estate Associates
366 Nassau Street
Princeton, N.J. 08540
PHONE: 609-921-7784

HARTLEY AVENUE

This pretty pre-war Colonial protected by University lands is full of great surprises. A raised entry porch leads to a front entry hall, a library, a marvelously large living room 20x22 with fireplace, formal dining room, convenient kitchen and powder room. Upstairs, there is a master bedroom and bath plus four other bedrooms and bath. Two car garage; full basement. A spacious raised deck off the living room provides the extraordinary vista of a private University owned tree encircled meadow - your own bucolic world just three minutes from Nassau Street. At the front, mature shade trees and a view of the lake across the road. $395,000

Robert Dougherty '50 Julie Douglas w/'41
Paul Douglas '41 Betsy Stewardson Ford w/'54
Georgia Graham w/'52 J. B. Smith '45
Diane Unruh w/'70 Barbara Broad w/'38
Betty McClelland w/'50 Judy Perrine s/'69
For no obligation—Information about real estate in the Princeton area call (609) 921-7784 or Outside of New Jersey 1-800-542-0067.

REALTORS

Representing Previews Executive Homesearch

JOIN THE RANKS OF PROUD ALUMNI WHO CARRY THE CLASSIC CASE OF PRINCETON

Choose from a distinctive collection:

• Traditional Attachés • Accountant and Lawyer Brief Bags • Top Zip Briefcases • Legal Writing Pads • Desk Agendas.

Each piece is expertly handcrafted using only the finest leathers and is elegantly monogrammed on the interior in 24 karat gold leaf with the seal of PRINCETON UNIVERSITY.

To place an order, receive a complimentary brochure or request further information call (800) 553-1907; Fax (619) 423-2064. Affinity Fine Leather Goods, 2248 Main St., Suite 4, Chula Vista, CA 92011.

that the revision committee did not intend "to tamper with the gender of the Deity." So, amid all the felicitous revisions in the direction of inclusivity, we are still left with such sexist language as "He who did not withhold his own Son, but gave him up for all of us, will he not with him also give us everything else?" (Romans 8:32). Some might even argue that while Jesus incarnate was clearly male, there is some question as to whether the preexistent Logos or the postresurrection cosmic Christ should be addressed as masculine, but the N.R.S.V. ignores this issue. In not even recognizing such problems, the N.R.S.V. will seem to many to go only halfway toward being "sensitive to the danger of linguistic sexism," as Metzger notes in the preface.

How far, it may be asked, can we go in modernizing ancient texts? Much can be done, as the N.R.S.V. demonstrates, but there are limits. For example, in the first Psalm (mentioned above), the new version reads "Happy are those," not "Blessed is the man." This pluralizing, which seems inclusive, creates problems in the next verse, where reference is made to delighting "in the law of the Lord, and on his law they meditate day and night." But in ancient Israel, this pious occupation was strictly reserved for men. Women's work was something else. It is fine that in our day we would like to include women in religious practices traditionally the province of men, but by so translating the Scriptures are we being true to the original meaning of the text?

How do we cope with ancient cultures that were predominantly patriarchal? We can repudiate and eschew them, as some contend. We can revise and correct, up to a point. And we can accept the past for what it was but resolve to do better in our own day.

—Hugh T. Kerr '31

Hugh Kerr is an emeritus professor of theology at the Princeton Theological Seminary and the senior editor of the religious quarterly Theology Today. He also is secretary of his class.

Books Received

A LIFE FOR LANGUAGE: A BIOGRAPHICAL MEMOIR OF LEONARD BLOOMFIELD
Robert A. Hall, Jr. '31
John Benjamins, $29.00

THE LION'S SHARE (war novel)
Donald J. Young '45
Avranches Press, 1700 Cheryl Way,
Aptos, CA 95003. $7.95 paper

COMPUTATIONAL CHEMISTRY USING THE PC
(includes computer diskette)
Donald W. Rogers '54
VCH, 220 E. 23rd St., Ste. 909,
New York, NY 10010. $55.00

THE FIRST LATIN AMERICAN DEBT CRISIS:
THE CITY OF LONDON AND THE 1822-25
LOAN BUBBLE
Frank Griffith Dawson '57
Yale University Press, $30.00

STRATEGY FORMULATION FOR GENERAL MANAGERS
Henry H. Beam '60
Kendall/Hunt, $14.95 paper

AN ARTFUL LIFE: A BIOGRAPHY OF
D. H. KAHNWEILER, 1884-1979
Charles Ruas '60 '70, tr. (by Pierre Assouline)
Grove Weidenfeld, $24.95

DICTIONARY OF 4,573 CRUCIAL CROSS WORDS AND THEIR CLUES
Franklin Kemp '62 et al.
CrossStar, 5334 S. 74th E. Ave.,
Tulsa, OK 74145. $4.55 paper postpaid

MARKETING YOUR INVENTION
Richard C. Woodbridge '65, ed.
American Bar Assn., Order Dept. 537, 750 N.,
Lake Shore Dr., Chicago, IL 60611. $2.00 paper

ENERGY EXERCISES: EASY EXERCISES FOR HEALTH AND VITALITY BASED ON DR.
RANDOLPH STONE'S POLARITY THERAPY
John Chitty '71 and Mary Louise Muller
Lotus Press, 39690 Wildflower Dr.,
Murrieta, CA 92362. $20.95 paper postpaid

IRANIAN JEWRY DURING THE AFGHAN INVASION: THE "KITĀB-I SAR GUZASHT-I KĀSHĀN" OF BĀBĀI B. FARHĀD
(18th century)
Vera Basch Moreen '72
Franz Steiner Verlag, Birkenwaldstrasse 44,
D-7000 Stuttgart 10, Germany. Dm 98.00 paper

MAKING A NEW DEAL: INDUSTRIAL WORKERS IN CHICAGO, 1919-1939
Elizabeth Cohen '73
Cambridge University Press, $27.95

THE ORRICK, HERRINGTON & SUTCLIFFE ARBITRAGE REBATE MANUAL
Perry E. Israel '74
Packard Press, $25.00 paper

A KID'S GUIDE TO HOW TO SAVE THE PLANET
Billy Goodman '80
Avon, $2.95 paper

STATES OF EMERGENCY: TECHNOLOGICAL FAILURES AND SOCIAL DESTABILIZATION
Jocelyn Phelps '82, tr. (by Patrick Lagadec)
Butterworth-Heinemann, $39.95

WOMEN'S VOICES, WOMEN'S WORK (by women employees of the university)
Margaret C. Clark '88 and Alexis R. Faust, eds.
Orders to Barbara L. Sutton, Office of Population Research, 21 Prospect Ave.,
Princeton, NJ 08540. $6.95 paper

Tigers Lose to Harvard and Bucknell, But Defense Shows Its Potential

BARELY AUDIBLE above the expectant murmurings of 25,000 fans gathered in Palmer Stadium on October 20, a twin-engined airplane droned high overhead in the brilliant blue sky. Suddenly, four tiny figures sprang from the plane and started a precipitous, free-fall descent. One by one, gaudy parachutes of yellow and black opened, and members of the U.S. Army's Golden Knights parachute squad began to drift in great spirals toward the stadium.

Their objective: to deliver the official ball for the Princeton-Harvard football game. Their target: a small black circle planted smack in the center of the 50-yard line. The first jumper missed the circle by perhaps ten yards. The next two were closer: one of them, with a Princeton flag flowing behind him, came within a couple of feet of it. The last parachutist, however, landed dead on. The crowd loved it.

Unfortunately for the fans, the pinpoint accuracy of the Golden Knights was about the only precise maneuver on the football field that afternoon. In a sloppy, uninspiring game on the part of both teams, Harvard eked out a 23-20 victory with a last-minute field goal. Coupled with a non-league loss to Bucknell a week earlier, the defeat dropped the Tigers' record to 2-4 (1-2 Ivy), with some of the toughest league games still to play.

It's hard to figure out this team. In previous games this season, either the offense has sputtered or the secondary has tarnished an otherwise strong performance by the defense. Even in victories over Brown and Fordham, Princeton only seemed to awaken after the intermission (and a lackluster first half). A bright spot for most of the season has been the play of the special teams, so given this enigmatic year, it was perhaps apt that this unit let the side down in the Harvard game.

Specifically, Princeton had two punts blocked and returned for touchdowns in the first half, and these plays were directly responsible for the Tigers' demise. The punter, Chris Lutz '91, can't be blamed; the guys on the line just didn't block the Crimson rush. According to Joe Restic, Harvard's veteran coach, his staff had spotted a weakness in Princeton's punting game from films of the Tigers' prior contests, so his team had concentrated on blocking punts in practice during the week before the game. It seems that Princeton linemen, intent on stifling pressure from the outside, had a tendency to leave the middle uncovered. Joe Gordian, who blocked one of the punts, said after the game that he wasn't touched by a Princeton player before he got to Lutz.

Great "D"! Cornerback James Lowry '91 gets between a Brown receiver and the ball in a game played earlier this season.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

The blocked punts made all the difference, because Princeton's defense turned in perhaps its best performance of the season. Harvard's complicated multiflex offense never got on track and scored only three field goals, one of which came after Joel Sharp '91 was intercepted deep in Princeton territory. The Tigers' big line stuffed dozens of Harvard's running plays, and the secondary intercepted three passes and allowed the Crimson a paltry thirty-four passing yards in all. The defense, which also played superbly against Bucknell, is rapidly developing into a top-flight unit.

Princeton's offense in the Harvard game wasn't a total washout. The running game, in particular, was effective, as tailback Erick Hamilton '93 rushed for more than a hundred yards and broke for a pair of exciting long runs. But Sharp had a nightmarish afternoon. In the first half, he threw nine passes without completing one and was intercepted three times. Overall, he completed only five passes out of twenty-four and was sacked six times. As they have all year, the receivers dropped some passes, but there's no doubt that Sharp did not produce.

After the game, Coach Steve Tosches refused to directly blame his quarterback and said that he never contemplated replacing Sharp with the backup, Chad Roghair '92. "You win as a team, you lose as a team," Tosches said. "It was an assortment of things—some bad passes, a few dropped balls, some timing problems." (He was no doubt referring to pass plays that require exact timing by the receivers, but he might just as well have meant the Tigers' problems adhering to the twenty-five-second clock, which regulates how much time the offense has to start a play. This year, Princeton has staggered through a parade of delay-of-game penalties.)

Despite its problems, the Tiger offense scored three touchdowns against Harvard and even put Lutz in the position of kicking a game-tying field goal, but he missed. (He also missed the extra point that would have put Princeton ahead, 21-20.) "We sure gave them a lot," Tosches said. "You can't give people that many points and expect to win."

Against Bucknell, Princeton gave away very little but still lost, 14-9. The low score bucks the history of recent Tiger-Bison encounters, which have been notable for point totals that recall Pete Carril's team, not Tosches'. But for the lack of a tarp to cover the field at Christy Mathewson-Memorial Stadium, this year's contest might have gone the same way. But the night before the game, it rained heavily in Lewisburg, Pennsylvania, and the uncovered field could have qualified for federal protection as an endangered wetland. The quagmire negated the Bison's superior size on the offensive line and made for a game of ball-control offense. Princeton had a good chance to win—a first-down-

Grant A. Peacock '46
Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

*Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased*

Suite 2600
450 Park Avenue at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022 (212) 753-4640

Wanted to Buy

Highest prices paid
for American and European Art,
including paintings, watercolors
and drawings, sculpture and prints
from 18th century to present.
Please contact Stuart P. Feld, '57

Hirsch & Adler
GALLERIES INC.

21 E. 70th St. NY 10021 • (212) 535-8810
Fax: (212) 772-7237

Crapp Family Lodge

The flavor of Austria on a mountainside in Vermont

For information about one of America's most distinguished resorts, please call

1-800-826-7000
in Vermont 802-253-8511
or write Stowe, Vermont 05672

Please Send
Address Changes to the Alumni Records Section
New South Bldg.
P.M.A.R.—Box 34
Princeton, N.J. 08544

and-goal late in the game—but as has happened so often this year, the Tigers could not score from inside the opponent's 20-yard line.

Besides the strong play of the defense, the only gleam of hope a Tiger fan might draw from mid-October is the poor (some would say pathetic) play of the rest of the Ivy League. After just three games of the seven-game schedule, no teams are undefeated in the league. Princeton's two losses in the league have probably put an Ivy title out of reach, but an optimist would remember 1963, when a 5-2 record was good enough for Princeton and Dartmouth to share the title.

Before Tosches and his players can begin to contemplate such a miracle, however, they're going to have to play much more consistently. This is a young team, and it's not without talent, especially on defense. If the offense, defense, and special teams all played as well as they can—in both halves of the game—the Tigers could be the cream of the league. But so far, this happy confluence of talents just hasn't happened.

—David Williamson '84

Resurgent Harriers Recapture Winning Form

IN BIG-TIME college athletics, you'll almost never find a player who competes in two sports—regardless of what Bo Jackson knows. Even in the Ivy League, where preprofessionalism isn't as prevalent as elsewhere, undergraduates who specialize in more than one sport are rare. There are of course anomalies. A gifted athlete like Demer Holleran '89 lettered in field hockey and lacrosse, and also won the national championship in squash. But most of the time, Princeton's athletes concentrate on one season a year.

Everyone, that is, except the runners. They go year-round. Under the tutelage of coaches Larry Ellis (for the men) and Peter Farrell (for the women), the Tiger runners are in action from the beginning of September to the end of May. A distance runner like Bill Burke '91, the captain of this year's cross-country team, might find himself running five-mile cross-country races in the fall, two-mile indoor relays during the winter track season, and the mile outdoors during the spring season.

The cross-country season may be the most demanding part of the runners' schedule. There aren't any sprinters or weight-throwers or long-jumpers to bail them out in case they're overmatched. Happily for both Ellis and Farrell, the Tiger harriers this fall have been overmatching the opposition, as the men's and women's squads have rolled to impressive records. (The men are 4-1 overall, 0-1 Ivy; the women are 5-1 overall, 1-1 Ivy.)

Both teams are blessed with a top-flight runner. Burke has led the way for the men, Katy McCandless '92 has finished first or second in all her races.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

winning the individual title in three straight races. He hasn't really been pushed yet. For the women, Katy McCandless '92 has finished first or second in all her races. In a team sport like cross-country, an individual winner doesn't necessarily guarantee the team victory, but it sure helps. (The scoring system in cross-country adds the finishing positions of the top five runners from each squad, and the team with the lowest score comes out on top. A perfect score, for example, is fifteen: $1 + 2 + 3 + 4 + 5 = 15$.)

Depth, an ingredient missing from last year's harriers, has allowed the women to rack up four perfect scores and the men one. For the men, the development of sophomore Alexi Indris-Santana has been crucial to the overall improvement of the squad; in all his races, he's run a strong second to Burke. (Indris-Santana, readers will recall, is the self-taught student from Utah whose classes at Princeton last year were the first he had ever attended.) With a "pack" mentality so important in cross-country, it's been a big boost to the Tigers to have people capable of keeping close to the front-running Burke.

Farrell, meanwhile, has relied on an outstanding group of freshmen to give his team the depth it lacked. Martha Fairbanks '94 and Amanda McLenaghan '94 have been at the front of this pack so far, and they should provide Farrell with a solid nucleus for the next four years. Tellingly, the only race the Tiger women have lost this year, to Brown, took place in the absence of both Fairbanks and McLenaghan.

Admission: "What Does It Take to Get In?"

It is my pleasure to turn the president's page over to Fred Hargadon, dean of admission.—H.T.S.

Early last January, in a gesture as welcome as it was good natured, Thomas R. Willemain '69 acknowledged the arduous reading and selection process that lay immediately ahead of the admission staff by sending along a copy of "Fernando of Cordova, the Boy Wonder," to help us calibrate our evaluations.

Drawn from University Records and Life in the Middle Ages, the description of Fernando tells of the awe in which the masters of the College de Navarre held this young man who entered in 1445 at the age of 20. His talents were unsurpassed in music, painting, swordsmanship, horsemanship, and disputation; he had mastered the arts, medicine, law, and theology; he was fluent in Latin, Greek, Hebrew, and Arabic; in sum, he "knew more than human nature can bear." In other words, a pretty good college prospect—in any age.

I now think of Fernando whenever I am asked, as I frequently am, "What is it that you are looking for in prospective applicants for admission to Princeton?" As reasonable as this question appears when it comes from students and parents embarking on the college search process, it is also very nearly the most frustrating question that can be asked of anyone who has ever spent any time reading through the more than 12,000 applications received in a given year by a highly selective university such as Princeton.

Whatever list of desirable attributes one might compile, the task confronting the admission office is not that of simply admitting candidates who possess them and denying those who don't. Rather, it's having to select from among a large number who evidence such attributes only that number we can accommodate in our relatively small freshman class. The candidates to whom we offer admission each year are compelling along many dimensions and in a variety of ways, not any more easily summarized than are the contents of 12,600 individual applications. Also compelling are thousands of others to whom we are unable to offer admission because we limit enrollment.

When most people ask, "What are you looking for?" they want to know, "What does it take to gain admission?" Short of adding the ability to walk on water to the predictable list of superior academic achievement, exceptional skills and talents, good character, and so forth, how does one even begin to give a reasonably concise answer to such a question when confronted, as we were this past year, with a highly self-selective pool of 12,652 applicants of whom, to take but one sight-line, 1,547 were valedictorians? With difficulty, I can assure you.

Moreover, despite our best efforts to explain in just how many different ways it's possible for young men and women to be excellent candidates for admission, it's a Sisyphean task to persuade the public to think in terms less narrow than a few stereotypes ("nerds," "jocks," "student government types," "well-rounded," "single-focused"). Such categories make no allowance for the innumerable individual distinctions that in fact differentiate 12,600 applicants representing more than 4,700 high schools from across the country and around the world.

Fred Hargadon

In our applicant group we rarely find a candidate who does not come highly recommended. And it's difficult for anyone who has not been immersed in the contents of so many applications to appreciate fully in just how many ways it's possible to limn each candidate's highly desirable attributes. In 1964 a research and development report issued by the Educational Testing Service summarized a study conducted at eight colleges and universities in which faculty were asked to indicate valued or valuable traits of students. The result was something on the order of 300 desirable traits (for example, purposeful, tenacious, open-minded, principled) grouped into 15 categories (for example, attitudes, perception, native capacity, willingness to learn, thirst for knowledge).

As lengthy and comprehensive as that list was, it would not be unfamiliar to anyone reading our applications each year. While I can't remember any candidates for whom it was claimed they could walk on water, a surprisingly large number are described in terms that stop just short of that. But a slight exaggeration here or there aside, for the most part we really are looking at quite a large group of unusually able and interesting young men and women each year.

What makes the task of sorting among all of our applicants in a given year even more challenging is our effort not to overlook those among them who, while perhaps less distinguished at first sight, may offer evidence of potential for distinction once at a place like Princeton. Anyone charged with making critical judgments about young men and women when they are 17 or 18 should keep in mind what someone once said of Churchill, "His faults were evident immediately upon meeting him; his virtues became known only over a lifetime."

Ultimately, of course, our decisions about which highly qualified applicants to admit in a given year are informed by the multiple objectives that characterize the University. We seek to enroll a student body that is not only academically able but also marked by a variety of backgrounds, experiences, perspectives, aspirations, and special skills and talents; students who will distribute (and, we hope, distinguish) themselves across a large number of departments and programs and activities. It's a delicate balancing act, and, in the end, pretty much a zero-sum game.

Too often applicants not offered admission assume that there are specific faults or deficiencies in their applications when, in fact, that is not the case. In the materials we send to prospective applicants, we remind them that in applying to a college with more qualified applicants than there are places in the freshman class, there will be some factors (primarily, the number and nature of all the other applications) over which they have no control and for which they should not feel responsible.

In a similar vein, neither is it fair to assume when coming across an excellent young man or woman to whom we were unable to offer admission that the University is not interested in applicants of that caliber. Students who look very much like that young man or woman are undoubtedly already in the freshman class. However, if anyone does happen to run into a Fernando of Cordova out there, I hope you'll let us know.

"It's a Sisyphean task to persuade the public to think in terms less narrow than a few stereotypes ('nerds,' 'jocks,' 'student government types,' 'well-rounded,' 'single-focused.' "

FOR RENT

ENJOY THE LUXURY of your own villa, private pool overlooking the Caribbean, and staff of five to serve you. 3 BRs, 3 baths; exquisitely furnished; on one acre with terraced gardens in most exclusive residential neighborhood in Ocho Rios, Jamaica. Everyone should try this kind of living at least once. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70 (owner), 1165 Churchill Downs Rd., Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR waterfront beachhouse amid tropical gardens. Spectacular view, excellent snorkeling. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70. 1165 Churchill Downs, Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

PARIS: Elegant small studio for two just off the Seine in the 6th. 2 min. walk to the Louvre, Notre Dame. 609-924-4332.

BARBADOS: Home of the late John L. Roe Jr. '34. West Coast on bluff overlooking Caribbean. Three air-conditioned BRs, cook, maid, gardener, laundry, swimming pool. 215-527-0585.

PARIS: Rue de la Paix, Elegant apartment. Suitable for 2 or 3. 7-days preferred. $200/night. 212-838-1731.

KAUAI, HAWAII: 4 BR, NaPali Coast beach house. $650-850/wk. 703-560-7900.

STOCKING ISLAND, Exuma, Bahamas: Octagonal wood and glass home, spectacular 360-degree sea view. All modern conveniences. $1000 weekly for two with boat. Sam Burns '46, 407-231-2822. Brochure avail.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FLA.: Delightful beachfront condominium. Magnificent gulf view. Spacious 2 BR, 2 baths, loft. Pool. Tennis. Will Smith '63. 908-842-2096.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS (Virgin Gorda): Elegant new villa directly on own private snorkeling beach. Spectacular, panoramic view of North Sound including Bitter-End (dive school, etc.) Perfect weather year round. 3 BR, 2 bath, magnificent LR, wrap-around deck, full mod. kit., microwave, dishwasher, marina, fishing, pool, tennis. (Restaurant, provisioning, staff, car, available extra.) $2,500/wk. 609-921-7872.

EXCLUSIVE LUXURY 4 BR, 4 bath villa at private Tryall Club in Montego, Jamaica. Private pool, staff of four, gorgeous grounds overlook Caribbean and championship golf course. Also private tennis, scuba, beach and club house. Available at 2 or 3 BR rate off-season. 203-254-0228 (h) or Carol Shaw at 203-929-6391.

LONDON LUXURY FLATS: In Knightsbridge, Mayfair, Chelsea, Kensington, Whitehall Court. One, two, three bedrooms. Furnished and decorated by owners. Rented by day, seven day minimum; reduced rates when exceeding six months. Call during office hours: 518-686-7841.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant villa on blue Caribbean. Breathtaking views. Daily maid. All amenities. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

ITALY: Renting delightful holiday accommodations, each personally selected. Tuscan castles, Umbrian farmhouses. Seaside villas, lakeview cottages. Centrally-located apartments Venice, Rome, Florence. Week/month. 415-821-9345.

ST. THOMAS: 2 or 3 BRs on the water, spectacular downisland view. H. Macaleer. 919-942-8439.

SANIBEL ISLAND: Gulffront condominium, 2 BR with pool and tennis. Weekly/Monthly. Boozan '79, 201-522-8219.

PORT ANTONIO, JAMAICA: "Nirvana." Fully equipped, staffed, 3 bedroom, 2 bath, beachfront villa on mile-long, mostly deserted beach. Surf, few tourists. $800/wk. in season. 207-359-4447.

ST. JOHN: Off-season rates. 2 bedroom villa, pool, spectacular view. 508-668-2078.

LONDON RENTALS: Privately owned flats and houses in London's best areas offering comprehensive personal service at attractive prices. One week minimum stay. Call: A Place Like Home, London. 800-526-0215.

MAINE: Tenants Harbor and Port Clyde. Wonderful homes, fully furnished, immaculate and comfortable. $200-$2,000 per week, year round. C. Lang, POB 282, Tenants Harbor, ME 04860. 207-372-8906.

ST. BART'S, FRENCH WEST INDIES: Luxurious seaside villa surrounded by privacy, beautiful beaches and French restaurants. 412-687-2061.

PARIS. LEFT BANK APARTMENT: St. Germain, close to D'Orsay, Louvre, Rodin. Sunny. Fireplaces. Antiques. Luxuriously furnished. Memorable! 412-687-2061.

BEQUIA, GRENADINES: For rent charming beach house on Friendship Bay Beach. Sleeps four. Excellent cook/housekeeper provided. Phone 514-935-6444.

MAD RIVER SUGARBUSH AREA: Comfortable farmhouse for up to 20 skiers. $350 per day. William Iler '51, 508-922-0010.

TORTOLA. BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS: Luxury 5 bedrm., 3 bath villa. Pool. 11 island view. Every amenity. Maid, car included. Two thousand, six hundred dollars weekly. 516-283-2299.

SKI VERMONT: Spacious 4 bedroom house near Stratton/Mt. Snow. 703-522-5454.

SAIL THE VIRGINS: The best beaches, best views, best of everything. Fully equipped 40' O'Day. 2 cabins, salon, galley, 2 heads, shower, sleeps 7. Captain, provisioning available. 201-747-3976.

VAIL, CO: 3 BR plus loft. 5 min. from gondola and great skiing. $225/night. $275 during Christmas and spring break. Bruce Brookens '67; 303-761-8815.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK: Rocky Mountain seclusion, minutes from skiing. Creek-side home sleeps six. No X-mas. 303-926-3907.

ST. JOHN: Fabulous private home near beach. Peaceful. Furnished. Box 12287, St. Thomas, VI 00801. 809-775-4266.

SUN VALLEY, ID: Luxurious, spacious, ski condo at base of Mt. Baldy in Warm Springs. 3 BRs, 3 baths, fireplace. Walk one block to lifts, restaurants, shops, apres ski. Bill Travers '71, 607-257-7322.

AIRPORT LIMO

Newark
$19

609-587-6600
Hourly Service

JFK
$29

PRINCETON AIRPORTER

STAFF WRITER-ASSOCIATE EDITOR

PAW seeks a staff writer-associate editor. Chief responsibilities are covering campus news and Princeton sports and writing occasional feature stories. Candidates should have two years' experience on the editorial staff of a newspaper or magazine. An excellent opportunity for a young alumnus/a in journalism. PAW is an equal-opportunity employer.

Send résumé to: Andrew Mytelka '85/Managing Editor
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William Street, Princeton NJ 08540

EXUMA, BAHAMAS: Magnificent hilltop view. Fully equipped, 4 bedrooms, van, private beach, housekeeper available. $1,000 weekly in season. 302-428-1455, evenings.

BEQUIA: Jewel of the Grenadines. Quiet. Beautiful. Friendly. Stone house overlooking the sea. Three bedrooms with baths. Pool. Beach. Housekeeper-cook. Three-week rental $5,250. 914-763-8030.

TORTOLA, BVI: 6 acres, 4 BR, 3 bath, noted architect-designed villa with pool on spectacular promontory jutting over sea and own beach on undeveloped N.E. coast. Two-week rental minimum. Charles Sommer, 11 Upper Ladue Rd., St Louis, MO 63124; 314-982-2690(w), 314-991-5527(h).

TAOS, NM: 2 BR, 2 bath condominium overlooking Kit Carson Park. $400/week, April 15–Nov. $575/week, Dec.–April 15. Charley Brooks, ERA Taos Realtors, 13 Paseo del Pueblo Norte, Taos, NM 87571; 505-758-0112.

ENGLAND, COTSWOLDS: Thatched cottage. Near Stratford, Oxford, London, 3 sitting, 3 bedrooms, 1½ baths. Central heat. Oscarsson, Rockport, ME 04856.

3 BR, 2 BA CONDO overlooking Lido Beach, Sarasota. Beautiful view of gulf, walk to St. Armand's Circle, fine shops and great restaurants. Nov. Dec. Jan. $2,000/mo. 215-644-1296.

SPAIN: Lovely 4 BR villa (pool) overlooking Mediterranean/village. Hess '64. 203-688-9333.

VIEQUES, PUERTO RICO: 4 bedroom, 3 bath villa. Pool. 360 degree views. Beautiful beaches. Amherst '58. 508-371-7375.

PROVIDENCIALES, BWI: 3 BRs, 3 baths on private beach. $1,500/wk. 216-229-2978.

VERMONT, MORETOWN: Remodeled farmhouse sleeps 10. 15 minutes to Mad River Glen, 20 mins. to Sugarbush, 40 mins. to Stowe. For rent week, weekend, month. 802-229-0051.

CARIBBEAN PARADISE: Luxury 4 BR, 3 bath villa. Perfect 2-6 people. Enjoy heavenly views, gardens, privacy. Walk to 2 spectacular beaches. Tortola, British Virgins. Clipper Cleaver '41, Box 356, Adamsville, R.I. 02801. 401-635-4725(h), 617-742-8310(o).

VAIL/BEAVER CREEK: Well-appointed 3 bedroom, 3 bath house 15 min. to Vail, 5 min. to Beaver Creek. Available Sat. to Sat. $850/wk. Charles Gaylord '34, 303-722-3474.

PRINCETON: Furnished house near campus. 3 bedrooms, study/guest room, family room. January through July 609-921-6858.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR villa at Lagoona Point, sensational views. Weekly $840–$1260 winter; $560–$840 summer. Valentine, 8 Fern Way, Madbury, NH 03820. 603-742-3063.

NEW YORK CITY: 2 bedroom duplex in Greenwich Village. Furnished, good size and sunny. Available January–September 1991. 212-243-5637.

TORTOLA, BVI: Luxe! 3 bedrooms overlooking Smugglers Cove. Christmas/February $2500 week. Call Jane Romney 809-495-4594 for this or smaller rentals.

ELEUTHERA, BAHAMAS: Cotton Bay Club. Magnificent waterfront home. Trent Jones golf course 100 yards away. Snorkeling, tennis, 3 bedrooms, Bertram sportsfisherman boat, pool, housekeeper. 617-722-7045.

IRELAND: Charming Georgian house in beautiful County Waterford. 4 BRs, 3 baths. Available all year. Low rental Nov. to June. 914-677-9698.

FLORIDA KEYS VACATION RENTALS: Call Jannie, Sugarloaf Realty. 800-827-2230.

SAN DIEGO: 2,500 sq. ft., 3 BR, 2½ bath Bauhaus condo. Exceptional executive living on ocean and lagoon. Furnished or unfurnished 6-month + lease, or lease-to-buy. $3,000/month or terms 619-481-1548.

KENNEBUNKPORT, ME: Charming 2 bedroom, 2 bath, semi-detached cape. Quiet residential neighborhood. Woodland view. Walk to shore, Dock Square. Smoke-free, no pets. $700/week, off-season discounts. 609-683-0153.

CASTLE HYDE: On the Blackwater River, County Cork, Southern Ireland. Exceptionally lovely 18th century Georgian house on 144 acres. 6 bedrooms, 5 modern baths, classic Renaissance gardens with fresh fruit and flowers. Fully staffed. Two miles of private trout and salmon fishing. Pheasant shooting. Available year round. Richard Kroon Y'64, 201-741-5692.

ITALY. CASTLES IN THE SKY or villas in the vineyard, the best city or country rentals all over Italy. American specialist based in Rome will design the perfect holiday. INTERNATIONAL SERVICES, Piazza di Spagna 35, 00187 Rome, Italy. Fax 011-39-6-684-0943. In U.S. 212-794-1534.

FOR SALE

MANHATTAN: If selling a co-op, condominium, or townhouse, call about our unique 200 brokerage firm multi-list program. Sharon Baum w'62, S.W. Bird & Co., 331 Madison Ave., New York, NY; 212-351-2416

EASTERN SHORE OF MD: Seeking residential property in waterfront mid-shore area, convenient to Washington, Baltimore and Phila.? Call Juana Mestres w'57. Clare Hughes Real Estate, Cambridge, MD 21613. 301-228-4236 (o), 301-228-4787 (h).

ISLAND HOUSE: See "For Rent, Stocking Island."

CIRCA 1760 SALTBOX FARMHOUSE: Original fireplace and baking oven. Baking for soldiers encamped for the Battle of Bennington done here. Plank floors with rose head nails; Christian Doors and "Morning Staircase"; 5 bedrooms, 8 rooms, 2 baths. Apartment over garage, grounds include perennials, stone walls, birch cluster, apple orchard, views. 9.94 acres. $375,000. Coldwell Banker Holington Realty, P.O. Box 87, Bennington, Vermont 05201. 802-442-8337.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK, COLORADO: Unique properties. 10% of commission proceeds donated, in your name, to the Yellowstone Bighorn Research Association in memory of my father, Professor Erling Dorf, Hon. '33. Bob Dorf 303-476-2421.

EXCEPTIONAL HISTORIC, fully and authentically restored Colonial on secluded waterfront point, near the Chesapeake Bay. Elegant primary home or weekend retreat has random width pine floors, three fireplaces, three or four bedrooms, 3½ baths, two car garage, porches, mature landscaping. Marketing video available. Call Juana Mestres w'57 at Clare Hughes Real Estate, Cambridge, MD 21613, member of "Employee Relocation Council". 301-228-4236/301-228-4787.

SHORT HILLS: Magnificently and completely restored 1880's Victorian. Unbelievable craftsmanship. Brick walls surround lush trees and formal gardens. Walk to village and NYC commute. Helen Hagerman w'30, Raymond Connolly, Realtors. 201-376-5323.

EASTERN SHORE OF VA: New Chesapeake Bay waterfront home on 2 acres. Deep water. All rooms water view. $280,000. Call owner 804-787-4280. Lynn Corson '53.

EASTERN SHORE OF MD: Prestigious waterfront building lot, 2 acres, minutes from Oxford. Call Marguerite Beebe, Latham Realtors, Easton, MD 21601. 301-822-2234(w), 301-822-6248(h).

GREAT CAMANOE, BVI: Secluded home, magnificent view on private island. 2 BR, baths. Land Rover and Whaler. Doug Martin '54. 203-426-2928.

SEASHORE CONDO: Sparkling 2 bdrms., 2 blocks from ocean/boardwalk in Asbury Park, NJ's renaissance area. $350 million redev. under way. Beautiful Sunset Lake around corner. 3 yr. young bldg., central AC/heat, WD, DW, W/W carpet, custom decor. GE appl. Free kit/photos. Call Robin 201-774-0222 or 201-775-9280 owner. $79,500.

BOCA RATON, FLA., YACHTSMAN DREAM: Deep-water slip, 3,000 sq. ft. townhouse facing Boca Raton Hotel. Next to beach club and Boca Inlet. Magnificent home or investment. Phone 407-466-4219. 407-391-9072.

VERMONT BRICK SCHOOLHOUSE: C. 1890 (now charming 3-bedroom, 2-bath home). 2 acres, cherry and apple trees, brook, meadow and woods. Near Killington. $119,900. Alan Darling '81 owner. 802-468-5619.

VERO BEACH, FLORIDA: Two bedroom, two bath villa with den, private courtyard and pool. Steps to ocean. Golf Club amenities available. $330,000. Call Barbara, Sorensen Real Estate. 800-446-1338.

MANHATTAN, GRAMERCY PARK: Pied-a-terre. Modest one bedroom. Secure doorman building. $150,000. 718-NE9-6200.

FOR SALE/FOR RENT

NANTUCKET—Come join the 400 happy Princeton families. We have large and small rentals, investment opportunities, estates and commercial enterprises. AND we give your investments TENDER, LOVING CARE—PREFERRED PROPERTIES. Nancie B. Taylor, w'43, Lucy T. Eaton, d'43. 508-228-2320, 800-338-7715.

WASHINGTON, DC, METROPOLITAN area, Northern Virginia, Maryland. Sales, rentals, land, property management. Colleen Finks w'61, associate broker, Pardoe & Graham, 6729 Curran St., McLean, VA 22101; 703-734-7020; eves., 703-821-2850.

The New Princeton Club of New York

Opening floor-by-floor throughout 1990

- Attractive, "clubbier" entrance lobby.
- 3 new dining rooms, each one unique.
- 9 restyled private dining rooms.
- 48 newly decorated bedrooms.
- Women's rooms added on all floors.
- Expanded alumni activities
- Plus: squash courts, fitness center, library, lounge, varied member events.

Join during our major renovation:

- save $250 entrance fee (will not be waived again).
 - and get a free $100 dinner in the new Woodrow Wilson Room.
- Call or write: Membership Secretary
The Princeton Club of New York
15 West 43rd Street, NY NY 10036
212-840-6400

Princeton Alumni Weekly

Reaching 54,000
upscale, sophisticated
readers with every issue.

Published more frequently
than any other alumni
magazine in the world.

Why advertise with
anyone else?

For details please contact:
Ms. Lolly O'Brien/Advertising Director
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William Street
Princeton, New Jersey
08540
(609) 258-4886

FOR EXCHANGE

MONTEREY BAY, CALIFORNIA: Beach front luxury condo in exchange for like: Italy, Switzerland, France. Duke Slichter '54. 415-941-3244.

RESORTS & TRAVEL

ENJOY THE REAL NEW ZEALAND interestingly and comfortably guided by knowledgeable New Zealanders. Write: Grant Simpson, Whitianga, New Zealand.

FLORIDA KEYS, BIG PINE KEY: Fantastic open water view, Key Deer Refuge, National Bird Sanctuary, still house, 3/2, screened porches, fully furnished, stained glass windows, swimming, diving, fishing, boat basin. 305-665-3832.

"NOT ONCE did I feel like a tourist; I felt an Italian friend was showing me his ITALY, his favorite spots." La Pergola, Tours, Inc.: A special company for the special traveler. Call for 1991 tour schedule. 914-358-6035.

AFRICAN SAFARI: Deluxe photographic safari throughout Kenya. Superb accommodations: deluxe tented camps to Mt. Kenya Safari Club. Personal escort. Kathleen Colson w'79, African Safari Planners, 201-221-1854.

BED & BREAKFAST

PRINCETON AREA: Alternative lodging in comfortable private homes. Bed & Breakfast of Princeton, P.O. Box 571, Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3189.

MANHATTAN B & Bs and private apartments. Prime locations, attractive rates. AT HOME IN NEW YORK, P.O. Box 407, NYC 10185. Lois Rooks, Director. 212-956-3125; fax 212-247-3294.

D.C. AREA BED & BREAKFAST: 15 minutes from downtown. 301-229-4835.

PALLEY PLACE: A quiet retreat in Sierra foothills. 916-265-5427.

WANTED TO BUY

RARE BOOKS AND FIRST EDITIONS: We are interested in purchasing libraries or single volumes from the 15th to the 20th century. Top prices paid. Also, expert appraisals for individuals or institutions. David L. O'Neal '60, Antiquarian Booksellers, Inc., 234 Clarendon St., Boston, MA 02116; 617-266-5790.

BUSINESS SERVICES

PROFESSIONAL TAX PLANNING, ACCOUNTING, AUDIT REPRESENTATION. Personal and business. Enrolled to practice before IRS. By appointment. 212-947-6031. Virgil M. Cummins '67 (EA), 430 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10001.

GOODS & SERVICES

CRAYFISH: Shipped live. Write for prices. Pyramid Farms Crayfish, 4340 Egypt Rd., Cambridge, MD 21613.

RARE IRISH WILD SMOKED SALMON: Delivery worldwide. 800-688-6275 Giftmark (Ireland). $70/2 pound side. (Spectacular 2 ft. long fish, serves 20) Free recipes.

DO YOU LOVE YOUR WORK? If you don't, we'll help you define and find the work you want to do. We'll work with you until you've found your new career. Private sessions or small groups. Lois Schneider Career Counseling, 212-673-8861.

STEINWAY AND SONS BABY GRAND PIANO. Brown mahogany cabinet/Sheraton style/Model O. Manufactured 1909. Excellent condition. Call S. Nunnery '71. 215-794-5135.

TIGER FOOTBALL: Original game programs from the thirties through the seventies available. Other publications. College Football, 1550 Larimer, Suite 180, Denver, CO 80202. 303-534-2000.

OPPORTUNITIES

YOUNG MD with great idea seeks capital partner(s). R. Austin '84, 54 Mendosa Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94116. 415-759-6389.

EDUCATION

ANXIOUS ABOUT COLLEGE OR GRADUATE SCHOOL APPLICATIONS? Former Ivy admission officer will help you right from the start. College Planning Associates: 212-496-2656.

Classified Ads Work Better for You in the
"Princeton Exchange"

PLACE YOUR AD IN THE PRINCETON EXCHANGE

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____ State: _____ Zip: _____

Telephone, Work: _____ Home: _____

My ad should run _____ time(s), beginning the month of _____

Classification: _____

Text: _____

Payment for all insertions must accompany initial request. My check for $ _____ is enclosed. Rates per insertion: 1-5 insertions, $1.50 per word; 6-10 insertions, $1.45 per word; 11-17 insertions, $1.40 per word. Send to: Princeton Exchange, Princeton Alumni Weekly, 41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540 (609)258-4886. No phone orders please. Issues are published 17 times from September through July. Ads will appear five-six weeks after receipt. When calculating payment, multiply number of words X number of insertions X rate per word to arrive at total price. P.O. Box number counts as two words, phone number as one word. No charge for zip code or class numerals. We cannot accept P.O. box numbers. Please make checks payable to Princeton Alumni Weekly.

Class Notes

12

ARTHUR C. HOLDEN
Box 182
Washington, CT 06793; 203-868-7063

In her sophomore year, Adrienne Della Penna of Lexington, Mass., a member of the Class of 1988, picked out as exceedingly distinguished our own Class banner. It was made to summarize the athletic achievements of 1912. We, as seniors, in the fall of 1911, were football champions, having defeated both Yale and Harvard. It marked the resumption of football relations with Harvard after a long hiatus. The success of the football team seemed to inspire all of the University athletes, so that the senior year of 1912 was marked by only one defeat.

Adrienne Della Penna enjoyed carrying the banner for us oldsters and accepted our invitation to repeat the ceremony, completing her fifth year in 1990. She is expecting to be our standard bearer in June, 1991. Her performance will depend upon the ability of L'il Arthur Holden to get back to the 1991 P-rade six months after his 100th birthday. He doesn't deserve all the credit, however, because he hopes that there will be two members of the Class still alive, each at the age of 101, although not authorized to venture so far from their homes as the "wilds" of N.J. We hope that a good representation of the progeny of 1912 will also be able to march in the reunion P-rade.

13

ALISON R. BRYAN
Box F
Frenchtown, NJ 08825

This continues the list of widows and relatives who made gifts in memory of 1913 classmates. The total amount of donations was $2375. The donors included: Mrs. Ben A. Calhoun, in honor of her husband; Mrs. William D. Bickham, in honor of her husband; Mrs. Harry W. Hazard, in honor of her father-in-law, Harry W. Hazard Jr.; Lionel V. Silvester Jr., in memory of his father, L. Valdemar Silvester; Mrs. John F. Simmons, in memory of her husband; Mrs. William D. Horne Jr., in honor of her husband; Mrs. Charles L. Auger Jr., in memory of her husband; Mrs. Edward C. Page, in memory of her husband. The Class thanks them all for their generosity.

Mrs. Elizabeth Van Dyck Ford Butcher, sister of our late classmate, Rev. Edwin S. Ford, and his wife, Louise, died Sept. 9. The funeral and interment services were conducted by her nephews, Rev. Peter C. Moore '46 and Rev. Ben P. Ford '45. She was buried in the Ford family plot in Morristown, N.J. The sympathy of the Class is offered to members of the Ford and Butcher families.

17

IKE GRANGER, c/o Chemical Bank
30 Rockefeller Plaza, Ste. 6100
New York, NY 10112

The following note was received from Percy Buchanan's son Peter '56: "Please convey my thanks to the Class of 1917 for the lovely flowers they sent in the memory of my father. Princeton and particularly the Class of 1917 was a most important part of his life. I have always envied the wonderful relationships that the 'war babies' maintained over the years. The younger classes seem to be too busy and it's our loss."

Dudley Joeck's widow, Jane, sends greetings, love, and all the best to '17ers. She enjoys reading news of the Class in PAW.

Although there will be no formal gathering in connection with the Princeton-Harvard football game on Oct. 20, Whit Landon and Steve Hirsch plan to have luncheon in Jadwin Gym and then attend the game to root the Tigers on to victory.

We have memorials in this issue.

18

JARVIS CROMWELL
Meadow Lakes, Apt. 3108
Hightstown, NJ 08520

It's a "slow news day" so we thought we would pass along to you a quotation we encountered in the leaflet from St. John's Church on Lafayette Square in Washington, D.C. The rector at this lovely old church, which is known as "the church of Presidents," is a remarkably articulate man named John Harper. Each week he has a short message on the front of the leaflet which is mailed to all parishioners. Recently, in a discussion of change and transition, he had the following, which appealed to your secretary and to me, his stepson, in part because we enjoy sailing and just being on the sea:

"We do well to heed the words of one of the grand men of American letters, Lyman Abbott. Shortly before his death a century ago he wrote: 'I look forward to the Great Adventure with awe but not with apprehension. I enjoy my work, my home, my friends, my life. I shall be very sorry to part with them. But always I have stood in the bow looking forward with hopeful anticipation to the life before me. When the time comes for my embarkation and the ropes are cast off and I put out to sea, I think I shall be standing in the bow and still looking forward with eager curiosity and glad hopefulness to the new world to which the unknown voyage will bring me.'"

19

GEORGE B. LARKIN
14 Lake Forest Dr.
Charlottesville, VA 22901

We had a very nice telephone talk with Nat Aronsohn, our president. He said he has a physical problem which keeps him at home, where he has enough to do.

The University has advised us that William B. Kloppenburg died Dec. 12, 1988. The Class's deep sympathy goes to his family.

20

SALLY S. McALPIN w'20
Box 670
Princeton, NJ 08542

The photograph, only recently come to light, records a very happy occasion for the Class of 1920, celebrating its 70th Reunion last June. We were visited by President Harold Shapiro *64, and with him the first lady of Princeton, Vivian Shapiro. This was indeed a happy surprise.

Pictured (l-r) are: Julia Dane, Louise Donner,

Carl Donner, Frances Wolf, Nelson Dane, Sally McAlpin (Class secretary), Elmer Greey, Eli Wolf, and our guests. The ten very genuine smiles are for the guests rather than the photographer!

A pleasant note to pass on to you is that for the fifth consecutive year we are on the honor roll of classes that had a column in all of PAW's regular issues (excluding Reunions issues).

Congratulations to Carmen Mead for taking on the mailing of the Class birthday cards. We know what a good job she will do.

One football note: The Princeton PACKET tells us to "watch Joe Baker," who is in his fourth year of playing and has just been given the important receiver position. In the Cornell game last week Joe caught four passes for 110 yards and a touchdown, in a 17-14 loss. Tough luck that his fifth pass went out of bounds just as the game ended.

21

A. EDWARD CONOVER
331 Lower Doolington Rd., Apt. C-4
Newtown, PA 18940

John Fawcett's grandson, Brett Fawcett, is wearing John's 25th-reunion outfit. John says it doesn't fit him anymore. Is that news?

Ken Klipstein was one of those honored at the annual dinner of the N.J. Conservation Foundation. Those in attendance included N.J.'s Governor Florio and former Governor Byrne.

The following Class widows report these new addresses: Mrs. Gordon H. Curtis, 945 Oak Hill Dr., Elmira, NY 14905; Mrs. James S. McDonnell, One Glenview Rd., St. Louis, MO 63124; Mrs. G. Donald Murray, Apt. 239, 74 Pasture Lane, Bryn Mawr, PA 19010. Varney Mead died Sept. 3, 1990, after a long illness. The Class extends sympathy to his daughter, Nancy Peters, and her family. A memorial will follow.

22

JOHN CARTIER
103 East 84th St.
New York, NY 10028

I am very pleased that the 1922 Class Council has accepted my offer to work with Jack Reynolds as your assistant secretary. Jack broke his pelvis several months ago and is currently mending at the Princeton Nursing Center, 65 Quarry St., Princeton, NJ 08540. Since he will be moving in the near future, both Jack and the Council felt that my permanent address is more convenient for receiving correspondence and Class notes. Jack is doing fine and he sends everyone his best wishes. Any personal notes can be sent to the Nursing Center or I will forward them to him.

My father, Harold Cartier, who died in 1984, had a deep and abiding affection for Princeton University, the Class of 1922, and his classmates. I have known many members of the Class over the years and many of their children. Among my college roommates in 1960 was Don Morrow and many sons of other classmates were in my class. I remember several wonderful reunion brunches that my father and mother served to the Class, and I have a picture of Nassau Hall that was given by the Class to my parents to commemorate these occasions.

In recent months I have met with members of the Class Council for lunch at the Nassau Club. In attendance were Jack Lewis, Struve Hensel, and Jim Scarff. Jim Scarff submitted the following items that he had received after the 68th reunion mailing.

From W. Murray Wilshire: "Married widow of late Frederick H. Kingsbury III '29, Dec. 19, 1989. Friends for 27 years. Winter in Siesta Keys, Sarasota, Fla., and Edgartown, Mass., Box 1334. Now have 13 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren. Please extend best wishes to returnees. Wish I could be there. You and Iris have done so much for '22 over the years."

And from Donald Wilson: "Best to all the faithful. Celebrated by 90th birthday Apr. 21, 1990, with a family TV-type roast, 40 blood relatives, children, grandchildren, nephews, and nieces. Gave me a happy sleigh ride in main dining room of the Binghampton Club." Arranged by son Nick '51 and his wife, Ruth.

You should have received Jack Lewis's dues notice which includes a correspondence flap. Please return both at your convenience. News from classmates, widows, children, grandchildren, and even great-grandchildren are always welcome. Jack and I were wondering last week about the number of great-grandchildren from the Class of 1922 and we look forward to hearing from you about this particular question. Can anyone top Murray Wilshire's number?

23

LNEY GOOD
201 W. Evergreen Ave., Apt. 716
Philadelphia, PA 19118

We are pleased to report that Barbara DiMeglio was made an honorary member of the Class of 1923 at Reunions 1990. Sept. marked the last month of Mrs. DiMeglio's 48-year career with the University, 25 years of which were devoted to coordinating reunions.

Barbara DiMeglio began work with the Alumni Council during her senior year at Princeton High School. In an article in the June 14 Princeton PACKET, Mrs. DiMeglio describes her first days with the University: "After school I'd race over to the Alumni Council office on the third floor of Nassau Hall . . . I typed changes of address for the addressograph plates used to send out Class mailings and the ALUMNI WEEKLY." In those days, Mrs. DiMeglio's ultimate "boss" at the Alumni Council—she began work as a full-time secretary the day after her high school graduation—was Donald Griffin, who can claim responsibility for one of Mrs. DiMeglio's fond Princeton memories: "Mr. Griffin . . . was head of the Alumni Council then. Such a nice man. One day after a big snow he took us all for a ride in a horse-drawn sleigh, through campus, up University Place, down Nassau Street."

Mrs. DiMeglio's reunion responsibilities began in 1965 when she was talked into handling 1941's 25th reunion: "I said I'd do it if I got an electric typewriter, and I did, so there I was with the job." Although DiMeglio swears she did not know the answer to one single question anyone asked her in those days, she picked up knowledge quickly: at this year's post-reunions thank-you picnic, Mrs. DiMeglio was feted with a surprise tribute where all concerned agreed that she has been a veritable "encyclopedia of reunion information" and a great asset to Princeton.

24

RICHARD H. HOES
862 Prospect Ave.
Winnetka, IL 60093

We are indebted to Mason Lowance '60, for this photograph, taken at our 65th, of the antique Ford we have rented for many years. As shown it has traditionally followed the band and has transported some of those classmates who preferred not to walk.

Deanie and Henry Hollenberg are both well and active. He feels better than he has in years and is busy and ambitious in his 40-year hobby of oil painting. In fact he has renewed his interest and has been giving friendly pointers to a young artist who is of the Hawthorne School, of which Wally Smith was a great master. Deanie and Henry spend part of each summer at their cottage in Michigan. They are now back at their home in Little Rock.

Rosie and Bud Richardson have been enjoying a very busy life. They visited their daughter in San Francisco last spring and had a family reunion in N.Y. with their six children and their spouses. They then attended a Garden Club meeting at Greenbriar. In June they went to Greenburg, Penn., to help Jack Barclay celebrate his 90th birthday. Bud and Jack roomed together at both Hill and Princeton. They were at their place in Blue Hill, Me., for the summer. Jack Yandell stays at an inn nearby so they get together frequently.

25

JOHN L. K. JENNEY
Box 123
Montchanin, DE 19710

Hope all who can will be present at the Annual Class lunch on Dec. 6 at the Princeton Club of New York. Notify Harry Steeger. Final results of Annual Giving shows 1925, under the leadership of Buel Wear, making another record—this time for a 65th-reunion class.

The photo shows Harvey Phillips in front of the reviewing stand at the end of the Reunions P-rade, leading a locomotive for President Shapiro, remembering his call at our headquarters. Harvey writes: "It has been a busy summer. Louise and I closed up headquarters with Estelle Ives, and headed for New England, where we visited several schools. Along the way, we called on the Peckermans at their lovely house in Washington Depot. They are adding a sizable two-story addition to be Ed's 'private quarters and office.' Then on to nearby White Flower Farm garden. Following a visit with Louise's brother in Vermont, we proceeded to our granddaughter's wedding in Winchester, Mass., followed by a family gathering over a long weekend." After a busy period at home, they set forth for Toronto, where they sat at the head table at the retirement dinner in honor of Ruby Mercer (the "Miss Opera of Canada"). She had accompanied Bob Crawford, "the Flying Baritone," on his trip to Alaska in 1932, along with Harvey as manager. She later sang at the Met, and, among many other activities, organized opera companies in a dozen Canadian cities. In Aug., they were off to Santa Fe for a week, joined by son David, down from Denver for a mining conference. There they heard another opera star, Marilyn Horn, who had grown up in Bradford. Returning to Bradford, Louise had some time to get the garden in shape, before they went to Ithaca for the Cornell game.

26

ROBERT WOHLFORTH
57 Rockwell Rd.
Ridgefield, CT 06877

Dolph Schmidt, writing to Treasurer Bob Ward about the Class financial report, says, "Congratulations on staying ahead of inflation. I figure it as roughly ten times or 1,000% since 1926 or 1934. Prof. Kemmerer, chairman of the economics dept. in 1926, would be aghast. The day of reckoning must be close at hand."

Another 60th wedding anniversary celebration: Alice and Barrows Dunham last June 14. Barrows also encloses a unique memorial notice from the American Philosophical Proceedings, vol. 63, no. 7, about Sam Browne, who died Jan. 25, 1989, describing Sam as a "gentleman of the sort found on the faculties before the rapid expansion of higher education which began in 1960. He spoke carefully and wrote lucidly. He was at his best when interacting with individual students. He also achieved a certain reputation as one who could perceive and communicate with ghosts."

A reminder to all of 1926 to heed Bill Walstrum's request for correct and complete address and phone number data for our 65th reunion Class Directory—needed NOW for publication in June 1991.

The secret of Vern Muchmore's good health out in Carbondale, Ill., is that he walks two or three miles every day, does his own cooking, and keeps in touch with family members. He also claims to have forsworn all car and plane travel—perhaps a key factor in his salubrious regime.

Alex Clarke, in nearby Pennington, N.J., is in the process of surmounting a severe case of osteoarthritis, and hopes to join us at our 65th next June. We have received a letter from Frank P. Slatery Jr. '59, about his father and our Classmate Slats Slattery, a former mayor of Wilkes-Barre, Penn. Slats is in good health and definitely planning to be with us in June 1991.

We were saddened to learn of the death of Slat's wife, our Associate Member Marguerite Slattery, July 31, 1990, and we send our condolences to Slats and all family members.

27

NELSON R. BURR
36 Lexington Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06119

The hiatus in the column was due to the oculist's informing the secretary that it would be advisable for him to have cataract surgery. The result was a brief sojourn in the Hartford Hospital, and a longer one at home with limited, but not seriously impaired vision. The wonderful kindness of relatives, friends, and neighbors has made the experience far more bearable than I could have expected. A few hours before this writing, I resumed driving and went shopping.

George Strayer, writing from Seattle on Sept. 14, reports that a granddaughter, a computer operator for Boeing, is to be married Nov. 5, 1990. He is disturbed by and deplores the establishment of so many "centers" on and off campus for various groups: blacks, gays and lesbians, religious cults, and others—as if the clubs were not enough. He believes that this trend must result in a deplorable factionalization of the undergraduates. The secretary recalls that campus of the 1920s was cliquish.

Please, 1927ers, get to the mailbox with news. The till is empty and the secretary doesn't want to see a yawning gap where our news should be!

28 R. PARK JOHNSON
Box 28
Punney Farms, FL 32079; 904-284-8698

We are indebted to our tireless U.S. District Judge in Washington, Oliver Gasch, for sending a very interesting quotation telling of the wartime service in the Pacific of Benny Norris, who was missing in action in June 1942. "In Admiral Samuel Eliot Morison's monumental history of the U.S. Navy in WWII, Volume IV concerns the Battle of Midway, which is generally regarded as the turning point of the war in the Pacific. At page 137, I found this reference to our classmate Benny Norris:

"Major Benjamin W. Norris USMC, who had succeeded Major Henderson as commander of the decimated Marine bomber squadron, took off at 1900 with the squadron's few operational planes—five Vindicators and six SBDs—to make a night attack on the burning Hirya. They failed to find her, and Major Norris never returned."

"The Navy and Marine flyers turned the tide of battle. Among other things, they sunk four Japanese carriers. The predominant position the Japanese achieved following Pearl Harbor was reversed and they never again constituted the threat that they had become following Pearl Harbor. I thought our classmates would be interested in the part Benny played."

The sad word of the death of one of our Class's prominent scientists, Gairdner Moment, Aug. 25, at the Union Memorial Hospital in Baltimore, was sent by his wife, Ann. Our warm sympathy goes to Ann, their three daughters, and son, Charles '59.

Lucretia Plum Stout, widow of James Howell Stout, died in San Antonio Aug. 18. She is survived by three children, five grandchildren, and one great-grandchild. Jim died on Sept. 20, 1973. Jim's cousin, John Graham '39, of Banders, Tex., was good enough to send us this word.

29 LOUIS F. KEMP
12 Winthrop Rd.
Guilford, CT 06437; 203-453-4646

Fortunately the mailman has rung twice this past summer, bringing news from classmates. Monte Kahlo wrote from Indianapolis, "Being 80-plus is a tough time for most of us. My wife has been plagued for two or three years now with orthopedic problems plus a corneal transplant, and most of our limited travel has been to and from the Mayo Clinic. We did, however, break the routine last May to go to Boston to see our elder daughter Liz Cabot receive a Ph.D. in English from Boston Univ. As for me, I haven't been making any news fit to print, attending a few meetings of civic organizations in which I have long been active and driving 'Miss Daisy' around."

Inky Boyd, prompted by Jim Carey's obituary in the N.Y. TIMES, reminisced that he, Jim, Bill Healey, and Dan O'Day roomed together on the fourth floor (he thinks) of Patton. He and Dan are the only survivors. A card from Jack Norman tells of his hearing from Maxie Morrison and Bout McDougal once in a while, and he sees Thorton Scott—exchanges Christmas cards with Joe Quarles.

After a very active career as a Catholic chaplain and aide to Cardinal Spelman, Rev. Giles (Dud) Webster retired due to ill health to the Holy Name Friary, 2 Morris Rd., Ringwood, NJ 07456. No longer able to write, Dud would be greatly cheered by hearing from classmates. Sadly, I report the death of Rev. Leslie W. Sloat on June 14, 1988. A memorial will follow. We have a memorial in this issue.

30 HUBERT A. "RED" SCHNEIDER
8008 Westover Rd.
Bethesda, MD 20814

Skippy and Fred Frost have graciously agreed to handle the arrangements for our mid-winter luncheon at the St. Andrews Club in Delray, Fla., tentatively scheduled for Feb. 12, 1991. More precise information will be issued later.

1930's record for Annual Giving this past year was quite commendable as reported by Wally Ruckert and Bill Trimble. We led all classes up to and including 1934 in total contributions. Of the 82 classes reporting only 12 exceeded 1930's total. 129 classmates out of a Class roll of 186 contributed, for a percentage of just under 70%, well above the 55% for the total alumni body. Deserving of special commendation and thanks are the widows of deceased members of the Class whose contributions made up a substantial share of the Class total.

Bill Roberts and his daughter made a trip in Sept. from N.Y. to Montreal via the New England coast, Nova Scotia, the St. Lawrence, and Quebec.

Herewith some statistics from the questionnaire we circulated last spring: 134 persons replied. Of these 87 are still married, 38 are widowed, 5 are still single, and the rest are divorced. 47 have advanced degrees and 40 are listed in Who's Who.

Coyle, French, and Stover are tied with having the most children—seven each. Coyle leads with the most boys—four—and Forsyth leads with the most girls—four. Cravens and Cornwell have the most grandchildren—11 each. More from the questionnaire in a later issue.

Our ranks have suffered a serious breach with the deaths of Merk Beiler, Frank Johnson, Bill Johnston, Al Lightner, John Thatcher, and Ken Wilson. Memorials will appear later.

31 HUGH T. KERR
15-01-U Meadow Lakes
Hightstown, NJ 08520; 609-448-4100

Long ago William Congreve advised us that "music has charms to soothe a savage breast." Except, of course, when the band plays the "Princeton Jungle March," with its "wow, wow, wow-wow-wow, hear the tiger roar." The marching band for our 60th reunion, the "Hornets" (orange and black) also led us at our 50th and 55th. High school bands are fiercely competitive and pride themselves on their "credits." Under the direction of Karl Recktenwald, the Hornets have played at the Orange Bowl, Disneyworld, Bermuda, Myrtle Beach Sun Fun Festival, and the Annapolis Festival ("outstanding band" award).

This little interlude prompted a nostalgic look at our senior class participation in various musical groups, as follows (mentioning only those with us now): Glee Club, Dave Knowlton, Wayne Stoughton, Woody English, Harry Hurd, George Erdman, Charlie Miner, Sam Brethwaite, Frank Froment; Instrumental Club, Dick Demuth, Bill Cairns, Jack Nash; University Orchestra, Glenn Andrews, George McKee, Jul Poole; the Band, Perry Damerel (Drum Major), Don McAllen, Vern Lee. Some were in more than one group.

Maybe we can get from the above an ensemble to rehearse at our 60th reunion. Those who can't carry a tune in a bucket can take heart in the minister's advice to the congregation: "If you can't sing, at least make a joyful noise."

We regret to report the death of Henry E. Jenkins Jr. A memorial will appear in a later issue.

32 MATLAND A. EDEY
Seven Gates Farm
Vineyard Haven, MA 02568

CULTURE NOTES FROM ALL OVER: First a volume of poems, THE CHANGES, ORDERS, BECOMINGS by Peyton Houston. Peyton has been writing poetry all his life, and this volume is a triumph, rich in thought and resonance. It is published by the Jargon Society, 411 North Cherry Street, Winston Salem, NC 27101. In an entirely different vein is IN ALL HIS GLORY, a biography of William Paley written by Jim Rowbotham's daughter Salley Bedell Smith. The Sept. issue of VANITY FAIR contained a long and riveting account of what it cost the celebrated beauty Babe Cushing to be the wife of the acquisitive head of CBS, and the hollowness of life at the very top of N.Y.'s super-glitz set. If the rest of the book is anything like the magazine selection, it has best-seller written all over it. Turning to art, we encounter the late Josh Macy's widow, Maisie, whose paintings went on exhibition Oct. 1 at the Nassau Club in Princeton. All who pass that way should pause for a viewing. Finally the Bard. This also involves a wife, Don Hooker's Greenie, who has had a remarkable career in teaching English. She decided to go to college at the age of 47, made Phi Beta Kappa, became a teacher specializing in Shakespeare. Now living in Boca Grande, Fla., where her surgeon husband is retired, she continues to give marvelous lectures on Shakespeare. The fees for attending go to help fund college scholarships for local students.

Ty Kennedy's dues letter went out recently. Please pay up promptly to save wear and tear on your Treasurer, who, after a zillion years in South Orange, is busy moving into a retirement home: Meadow Lakes 15-01 L, Hightstown, NJ 08520.

We report with sorrow the deaths of Dan Walzer Aug. 31, and Chuck Henderson Sept. 15.

33 ARTHUR MOODY
600 E. Cathedral Rd., Apt. A314
Philadelphia, PA 19128

East may be East and West may be West, but the twain met in a happy reunion at the Broadmoor in Colorado Springs, Sept. 23-26. Conceived by Bob Keidel, organized by Bob Long with major input by Louise Long, Mili and Charley Tutt, and Tom La- sater, plus Tom's son Dale and his wife, the Broadmoor event is described in detail in the summer newsletter. The fact that it came off just as described shows that Bob's enormous efforts were justified. It was a magnificent party.

Eighteen classmates attended, 13 with wives, and four widows added considerably to the sociability, not only by their own charm, but by reminding us of our old and good friends, their late husbands. One of these, Lorna Terrell, Art's widow, is shown in the above photo with Bob Long. The picture was taken by Johnny Harman. We have a fine collection of snapshots taken by Johnny and especially by Peggy Pace, Frank's widow. We all knew Johnny was a pro, but did not know Peggy was so good a photographer. We expect to show a selection in next summer's newsletter.

Among the highlights: the Tutts' party at the Cooking Club, an ancient Colorado Springs institution, with a clubhouse situated on the mountainside with a spectacular view; Frank Hibben's masterful address at the Class dinner; Tom Lasater's ranch, the first visit to a working ranch for many.

Those present, besides those mentioned above, were: Peggy and Bill Cahn, Bob Clifford, Tom Creigh, Bar and Bill Crow, Seddie and Frank Dean, Mary and Miller Gaffney, Sophia Godfrey, Ellwood's widow, Ad and Dick Gordon, Marian and Brad Green, Jean Harman, Justine Keidel, Mary Marston, Ed's widow, Frank Mellinger, Becky and Art Moody, Ruth and John Renneburg, and Lenchen and Frank Townend.

We have memorials in this issue.

34

RALPH K. FITCHIE
4347 Province Line Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Winnie and Hank Miller, son David, daughter Susan, their spouses and children (shown in photo by Susan's husband), cruised from N.Y. to Bermuda in Aug., aboard the HORIZON, "a beautiful large ship only three months old." Most notable to Hank, who had been to Bermuda three times before, was "the big contrast" between now and 1933, when he was there as manager of the University Glee Club.

John Archbold, who in May 1989 gave Clemson Univ. his 190-acre Springfield Plantation on the Caribbean Island of Dominica to create the John Archbold Center for Tropical Studies, was awarded an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at Clemson's graduation exercises in Aug.

Arm Fell, who turned 78 in Aug., figures "39 was such a wonderful age that I was compelled to repeat the sequence, so here I am on the third go-round."

Fran and Ted Merwin celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in June at a party given by their sons, Theodore and Robert, after a two-week trip to Bermuda.

Maida Williams Clement, the widow of Harrison, who died in 1985, and a friend of many in the Class, died in Sept. A 1934 graduate of Miss Porter's in Farmington, Conn., she married Clem, who was Class treasurer (1947-54) and V.P. (1964-69), in 1939. We have a memorial in this issue.

35

JOSEPH C. HAZEN JR.
94 Essex Rd.
Summit, NJ 07901

CLASS LUNCHEON: Noon, Fri., Nov. 30, at the new N.Y. Princeton Club. Kidder Smith of N.Y.C. is making the arrangements, and Jim Sweeney of Westport, Conn. is helping with the details. A professional photographer as well as an architect and author, Kidder will address the gathering on "Photography for the Tourist." And, to enliven the proceedings—and to forestall picketing by Sally Frank—the ladies will be invited.

GOLD MEDALISTS. First Lady Mary and President Doug Ward celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in October. Their children surprised them with an album of notes, photos and good wishes from a hundred friends, including their neighbors around their summer home in Normandy Beach, N.J., and their winter home in Stuart, Fla., and, of course, a big batch of classmates.

DATLINE JAPAN. Hutch Cone, who died in 1986, was a career officer in the U. S. Army and the husband of Ayako, a native of Japan. Last spring she visited Japan to see her family and friends. Here are excerpts from her account of the trip: "Most wonderful of all was that Yori Terashima invited me to lunch at the Imperial Hotel in Tokyo. As you know, he was a nobleman, a count, until General MacArthur dismantled the imperial system of Japan in 1945. He and I talked about his interesting family background. (His grandfather was the first foreign minister of the newly organized Japanese parliamentary government when Japan advanced from the old feudal society in 1868. His mother was Miss Mitsui, whose family was once very wealthy.) He and I also talked about Hutch, because he and Yori were good friends since Lawrenceville School. I talked to Mrs. Terashima on the phone and was interested to learn that her nephew is not only married to one of the cousins of the new Japanese emperor but also is the adopted son of Fumi Konoe '38. Konoe, who died in a Russian prison in 1956, was captain of Princeton's undefeated golf team in his senior year.

IN MEMORIAM. John R. Caulk Jr. of Lexington, Ky., Feb. 12, 1913—Sept. 27, 1990; John F. Marchand of N.Y.C., May 19, 1913—Sept. 16, 1990.

36

JAMES Q. BENNER
24 Aylesbury Cir., Windermere
Madison, CT 06443

'Way back when: George Metcalf of Auburn, N.Y., sent us this old photo of four well-traveled classmates some 54 years ago on a trip to Europe (l-r): the late Cleve Rea, Ned Williams, Dave Greene, and Bill Edwards.

Princeton's Alumni Council, Box 291, Princeton, NJ 08544-0291, announces the spring 1991 schedule of the great Princeton Today programs for Apr. 4-6 and May 2-4. Interested classmates and wives must apply no later than 12 weeks prior to each event.

Stanford's Professor Emeritus Gordon A. Craig, former popular Princeton professor, was pictured and interviewed on the reunification of Germany for the Sept. 30 N.Y. TIMES. He is generally acknowledged as the dean of American German scholars. Recently he had been elected to membership in the prestigious Order pour le Mérite for Sciences and Arts by the then-Federal Republic of Germany. The Order was established in 1842 by King Frederick William IV of Prussia.

Mini-reunions: Hank Cross, Gus Groel, Al King, and wives last June in Manchester, Vt., near Al's summer home in Dorset. That same month, dining on lobster at the Ed Winter's summer home in South Bristol, Me., were Charlie Shain, Sam Vanneman, and wives. They made a commitment to attend our 55th next June.

Our best wishes for the recovery of Wistar Morris and Ed Yard from strokes suffered last Jan. and in 1987, respectively.

37

STANDISH F. MEDINA
250 Broadway, Rm. 2104
New York, NY 10007

Jim Sayre's clan celebrated both his 75th birthday and, separately, his and Elaine's 50th wedding anniversary in Sept. Having been presented with a two-week golfing package at Hilton Head for the former, they have decided to commemorate the latter occasion with a three-week volunteer-in-mission "safari" to Rotifunk, Sierra Leone in Jan., helping rebuild local schools. First plans were for Liberia in Nov., but dissident rebels interfered.

Sey Marvin continues his golfing peregrinations, the Masters again in Aug., for the 22nd consecutive time, the British Open at St. Andrew's, where a group from Brazil, Venezuela, and the U.S. obtained flats and houses overlooking the golf course, and then last month to New Zealand as Brazilian delegate to the World Golf Council.

Alex Armstrong's daughter Beth appeared in the new ABC-TV show "Married People" last month.

Ex-secretary Bob Edwards is still keeping track of classmates, a birthday phone call from Rod Davison last Aug. 5, with Jane and Ned Candee adding to the festivities at Henderson Harbor, N.Y. (Trudy and Sandy Wood, summer neighbors there, being unable to attend because of Sandy's illness) then a visit from Dorothy and Edgar Smith in the White Mountains. Says he climbed Mount Washington (by car, not on foot a la Dave Benson and friend many years ago) and noted on a memorial register of those who have lost their lives on the Presidential Range, going back to the 1850s, the name of Win Fowler, who died in a skiing accident near Tuckerman's Ravine Apr. 1, 1936.

Buz Dawbarn was appointed to the Virginia State Lottery Board. Incidentally, the appointment was made by a democratic governor, though Buz is proclaimed in our Senior Herald as a republican. Ted Rivinus appeared as a correspondent to the N.Y. TIMES protesting a totally inaccurate jibe at the Smithsonian as to minority representation on the staff. Last June he went birding with Brons Tweedy along the Delaware coast.

38

WILLIAM P. TAMS
Box 167
Moran, WY 83013; 307-543-2396

For those of you who don't know our recently elected honorary classmate, Ken (Bud) Underwood, here he is on the right, celebrating the occasion with Platten, George Morgan, and McLeod.

Frank Hamilton was presented with an honorary degree by Xavier Univ. in Cincinnati in May, in recognition of his longstanding excellent leadership in the corporate, civic, and cultural life of that city. An alumnus friend avers that few in that region have done more than he.

Peggy and Austin First remind us that they are living on St. Simon's Island from Jan. to June each year. They'd be glad to see any classmates marching through Georgia on their way to Florida. Look for them in the Brunswick, Ga. phone book.

When Tom Maren married Emily a few years ago, he acquired two alumni children, Catherine A. Azar '77 and Leila M. Azar '80. Catherine majored in biochemistry. Having been ignored in her attempt to try out for the freshman baseball team, she organized a softball group, which evolved into the women's varsity which ruled the Ivies from 1983 through 1989. After medical school and residency at Einstein Medical, she is now in private practice in Tucson and teaching at Univ. of Arizona. Leila majored in psychology, carried on with Catherine's glove in softball, and was food manager at Dial Lodge. After work in Europe as a medical technologist, she graduated from Hunter College's medical lab program with honors, and is headed toward teaching in that field.

For the past 16 years the first official act of Princeton's president at the beginning of the academic year has been the presentation of the Class of 1939 Princeton Scholar Award. On Sept. 17 at Opening Exercises in the Chapel, President Shapiro presented that award to Timothy Yi-Chung Chow '91, the man on the right in our photo. A mathematics major from Hong Kong, Chow was honored as that member of the senior class who has achieved the highest academic standing for the preceding three years of his work at Princeton. His name will be entered on John Gorman's Doonagoore Cup on display in the office of the dean of the college. Our Class gave him the traditional antique silver spoon as a symbol of the award and the University bestowed a $1,000 prize. The other undergraduates in the picture were honored for one year's work. At the subsequent awards luncheon attended by President and Mrs. Shapiro, our Class was represented by Sarah and Ansley Coale.

Coincidentally, announcement was recently made that Daniel R. Toll '49, the very first recipient of a Class of '39 Memorial Scholarship (42 years ago), has been elected a trustee of the University. Our Class is proud to be associated with both these outstanding Princetonians.

On Sept 15, far above Cayuga's waters, the Bourses, Boyntons, Houghs, John Johnsons, Quinns, Turners, Wynnes and Bill Robinson were on hand to witness Princeton's defeat. Outside of that, Mrs. Lincoln, they enjoyed the day.

Annual Class Dinner Princeton Club of N.Y. Dec. 6

Grandfather Joe Gilleandeau upholds 1940's glorious FOREVER FORWARD and FOREVER YOUNG tradition by proudly P-rating his triplet grandchildren, who arrived Aug. 1989. In the foreground, their mother, Gale Gilleandeau Stafford '73, keeps a watchful eye on the proceedings. Joe's armful consists of two boys, Duncan and Geoffrey, with sister Merideth in the middle. We conjecture these triplets are a first for a 1940 grandparent and also a 1973 mother. Any other classmates around who can match Joe in this remarkable feat? If so, speak up and send in a photo.

Orm Ketcham tells of a joyous "Old Boys' Boystown Reunion" at Mohonk Mountain House, N.Y., immediately preceding our 50th Reunion. It consisted of 1940ers and others who were "Boystown" housemates during Yale Law School days. Those present, in addition to Bunty and Orm, were Hazel and Dave Freeman, Kick and Bob Hazelhurst, Anne and Brooks Jones, Fish Simons, Jeffie and Syd Woodd-Cahusac. Spirited athletic competitions, merrymaking, and law school reminiscences

Riding High

WHENEVER THEY go for a bicycle ride around the campus or in a local parade, Don Peoples and Larry Davala are sure to turn heads. The two university machinists collect and restore antique bicycles, and when they ride one of their ungainly high-wheelers, they often dress in vintage outfits—knee socks, knickers, and sporty caps. "I like to ride during my lunch hour," says Peoples, who directs the machine shop in the biology department. "It's fun to ride up next to someone I know and really surprise him."

The high-wheel bicycles favored by Peoples and Davala came into vogue in the 1890s and were built for speed—perched on a high seat, the cyclist drives pedals attached directly to the main wheel, which on an adult's model measures four and a half feet in diameter. On models known as ordinaries, a smaller second wheel in the back provides stability of a sort, although the rider's high center of gravity still makes any trip an adventure. Peoples favors an Eagle, a model with the small wheel in front; this configuration prevents the rider from flipping over the handlebars if he or she stops short. These bikes give a fairly bumpy ride, because the tires are made of solid rubber, but they're much smoother than the even older "bone shakers," which had wooden wheels. Not surprisingly, the era of high-wheelers ended in the early twentieth century, when "safety" bicycles—with two smaller wheels of the same size—appeared.

Davala, who runs the machine shop in the engineering school, became interested in high-wheel bicycles in the mid-1970s, when he saw a phalanx of them riding through Newtown, Pennsylvania. Soon after, he acquired his first one, actually a modern reproduction. The first time he rode it, his two sons helped him mount the bicycle, then ran along beside him once he got going down the street. He narrowly avoided a collision with a parked car. "It was the most awkward, shaky feeling," he recalls. "You have to maintain speed so that you don't fall over, and at the same time you have to steer this big wheel." Eventually, he learned the proper way to mount an ordinary: grab the handlebars, place one foot on a peg located on the small wheel, push the bike forward, and hop on as it begins to roll. Getting the hang of this can take months of practice, says Davala.

Peoples and Davala both possess some prized antiques. One of Davala's gems is a safety bicycle owned by Woodrow Wilson 1879 when he was president of Princeton. Manufactured in 1905, it is a sturdy black bike with fat tires. It resembles a modern bicycle, but the rear wheel is driven by a metal shaft not a chain. Davala had heard rumors that Wilson's bicycle was still somewhere in the area. After years of looking, he found it in Princeton Junction, in the attic of an elderly woman's house. "Her first husband had worked for Wilson as a handyman, and the bike had been sitting around their place ever since," he says. Davala purchased the antique five years ago but has yet to find the time to restore it. Meanwhile, it hangs in his office in the engineering school for himself and visitors to admire.

Don Peoples on his Eagle.

PHOTO BY JULIA PETERSON

were shared by these resolute souls, who then moved directly on to Princeton to eagerly engage in far more of the same. At Mohonk, Walter Lord '39 was on hand to carry out his earlier law school duties as "Father Flanagan" of the group. "So much fun we plan to do it again next year," concludes Orm. Make a note of the Dec. 6 Class dinner. Dick Wells is counting on you for a good showing.

41

BILL WILSON
Box 1420
Bridgehampton, NY 11932; 516-537-2458

The sport of sailing has a way of blurring Class distinctions. Reading right to left, that's Dr. Paul Harwood '35, Commodore Valentine Worthington '42, John Stout '33, William Carl '40, and Joseph Warren '36. The distinguished gent on the far left is our own John Krou. Anne K. took the picture at the Hope Town Sailing Club in Abaco, Bahama Islands.

A non-classmate good samaritan, who wishes to remain anonymous, noticed that the Roper Trophy plaque in the Dillon lobby listed Dave Allerdice as '31, and took steps to have this grievous error of nearly 50 years corrected. We thank him.

The Lynn Tipsons and the Bill Wilsons are back from an auto tour of southern France where they paid their respects (east-west) to the Grimaldis in Monaco, the ghosts of Octavian's Actium fleet in Fréjus, the popes and antipopes of Avignon, the dark and beautiful Arlesienne ladies, the Pax Romana in Vaison-la-Romaine, crafty Mme. Carcasse in stern Carcassonne, the heretics of Albi, and the vintners of Bordeaux.

Herb Willett, who retired with Mary to Falmouth, Mass., after 25 years with Merck & Co., keeps active with volunteer work for the Visiting Nursing Assn. of Upper Cape Cod, and has put in several terms on the Falmouth Finance Committee.

Jim MacColl has retired from the Board of Trustees of the Episcopal Divinity School in Philadelphia. He had served for several decades. Jim, a D.D., retired from parish ministry in 1982 after serving in Ohio, Ill., R.I., Penn., and Mass.

42

ARMSTRONG HUNTER
R.R. 1, Box 250, Perkinsville, VT 05151
802-263-5361; FAX 802-263-9263

Al Cooke, a widower since his wife Marie's death two or three years ago, died Sept. 7 at his home in Louisville. Fellow Louisviller EJ O'Brien sent the sad word.

We've been reporting 70th birthdays often this year. Ample reason: 276 of us become/became 70 in 1990. Host Phil Sayles (N.M.) made it at the Santa Fe mini-reunion Sept. 27, with Bill Hagenah and Bob Steinhoff (both from Illinois, both 70 since Aug.) marking the event with appropriate ritual amidst the 142 '42ers there gathered. Bob Weidlein made it in Pennsylvania July 29; Ronnie and Dick Salsbury (also Penn.) and Peggy and Don Vreeland (N.J.) helped Bob and Libbet celebrate, with assorted Weidlein siblings and family along too. (Dick will be 70 Nov. 24; Don 70 last Dec. 27).

Ira Wheeler (N.Y.C., 70 Nov. 9) was honored in July for his volunteer management consulting services to Woodmere Academy on Long Island at a special awards ceremony in the N.Y. offices of the National Executive Service Corps. N.E.S.C. press release reporting the event touches on Ira's career

(V.P., planning, Celanese; consultant to N.Y.C. Transit Authority) and offices (N.Y. Princeton Club governor; Vietnam Veterans Theater board member; Canterbury Choral Society past president), but says nothing of his experience in films. We asked Ira to bring us up to date. "I think you've mentioned NAVY SEALS and QUICK CHANGE," he writes. "Only one more to come—a Woody Allen movie of which I don't [yet] know the title . . . I have only one line so it's not much to write home about."

Recording for the Blind newsletter reports that Peter Putnam (N.J., 70 since June 11) testified in March and Apr. before House and Senate committees in Washington on the merits of federal support for the organization's services to students.

At the end of 1990, 390 of us will have passed three score years and ten. In 1991, 79 go for it, in 1992 six.

43

JACK LAFLIN
10 Vardon Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06117; 203-523-8929

For those classmates dwelling outside the immediate Princeton area who probably missed it we are pleased to present a light-hearted, nostalgic letter from Bill Sloane in the Sept. 24 PRINCETONIAN:

"I was surprised to read that a young woman, who was considering bickering Ivy Club, felt that whatever reception she received from that worthy institution would at least be better than having to face members of the Class of 1943. It was not clear whether she had in mind the reception she might have received if she had bickered in the early 1940s or if she meant that present male undergraduates would be more inclined to welcome her than a group of present-day dinosaurs from '43.

"Although the Class of 1943 was not privileged to share their undergraduate experience with members of the fair sex, this in no way affected—either then or now—their feelings for them. Nor, for that matter, did it affect the insistence of women—then and over the years—to actively seek the company of members of the class. Although the constant press of this insistence has been sometimes overburdening (not to say, under certain circumstances, even embarrassing), we have never regretted this attention—but rather, eagerly awaited it.

"If one were to ask why the members of the Class of 1943 should have gone through life under the added pressures described, I would say that it was because this class, mores than any other, genuinely loved women. One of that happy throng told me that women understood this and that was why they loved us so much. We invite the young lady described in your article to come see us at Reunions or any other time. She will be met at the gate, not by barbarians, by fellow Princetonians who have made careers of trying to make up for lost years of their undergraduate days.

"Oh, to be sixty again!"

Jean and Ted Van Buren have a new winter address, 220 So. Collier Blvd., Apt. 502, Marco Island, FL 33937. "New summer address also, as soon as house sells, but market slow. See you at Yale Bowl."

44

HERVEY S. STOCKMAN
1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

Sal and I just returned from a thousand-mile run from A.B.Q. to Jackson Hole, Wyo. Our horse was a very quick, turboed car. Our route up and back north of Denver was across the same high plains that John McPhee covered so beautifully in his delightful 1986 NEW YORKER series, RISE FROM THE PLAINS. How I regret never taking Geology 101! The views along highway 287 and I-80 make our lives look puny. Savoring the Grand Tetons in every kind of light, from the bottom of Yellowstone half circle to the south on the Snake River, I wondered if Shevardnadze on his visit there was similarly charmed. Maybe Jim Baker '52 can tell us.

Bob Brown, past president and steady correspondent, in a letter awaiting my return, sent along a Jeffrey Hart piece on Hobe Baker that appeared in the Feb. 22, 1989, DARTMOUTH REVIEW, together with Dean of Admission Fred Hargadon's crackerjack response to Brownie on the article. Hart eulogizes Hobe and mourns the disappearance on the Princeton campus since the early 1960s of "the Baker style and distinction." Hargadon doesn't buy Hart's view, writing that change is in everything and that "walking today on Princeton's paths are some of this nation's best and some who are less than that." Coincidentally, with Bob's letter was one from Brooks Hall's widow, Jackie, enclosing material for our memorial of the 'Cowboy.' Reading her words on his life and in my own memories of Brooks I don't see a Baker image, but he epitomized the same right stuff, Baker's and the "specials" found in every class. Heroes aren't a dying breed; despite romance some live on to develop wrinkles and all sorts of failings.

Gordie Odell wrote months ago, laughing at our column's error identifying him as a president of the Tournament of Roses. It never was, but he liked it, so leave it. This past year "Odell" has sold the old home, moved to a condo, had two children married, expanded his consulting wisdom to the Midwest, tolerated back surgery last Nov. and a new hip this May. Dined in Florida with Jamie Fentress's widow, Barbara, who is doing fine. Please get in your dues and news.

45

WARREN W. EGINTON
U.S. Courthouse, 915 Lafayette Blvd.
Bridgeport, CT 06604

Photo of Chick Cole arrived too late for appearance in the last column, but depicts Chick receiving the Charles D. Cole trophy from former Pomfret headmaster Gerrit Keator.

Continuing to record professorial achievements, Bob Schofield, whose impressive teaching career has been detailed in our 25th and 40th yearbooks, has devoted the last decade to building a graduate program in history at Iowa State Univ., after doing the same for many years at Case Western Reserve. Bob was recently honored by the Midwest Junta for the History of Science for his founding leadership of that organization and for his more than three decades of "wise teaching and creative scholarship." Bob has also been elected a Fellow of the American Physical Society, which he joined while a Princeton undergraduate. Turning to business rather than professional accomplishment, somewhat belated congratulations to Don Durgin, who has returned to the media communications arena as vice chairman of NEWSWEEK.

Bill Scheerer expresses appreciation to classmates who assisted him with telethons so vital to his major gift solicitation effort. Manning phones were Dave Baird, Dave Dodge, Bert Lippincott, Rufus Page, Bob Peers, Tom Ramseur, and Bill Schill. The Class joins Bill in thanking them and in thanking Bill for his efforts for the Class.

46

ROBERT CAMPBELL JR.
Investors Security Services
636 Morris Tpk., Short Hills, NJ 07078

A stunner of a Class news item from Bill Hammer states that his children, Grant (4) and Merritt

(2½) are about to enter kindergarten and nursery school this fall. Also, he says, the brokerage business outlook for the 1990s is terrific. Such optimism, obviously, has been rewarded.

John Rea says that he retired this year from Regent Univ., where he has been professor of Old Testament for the past eight years. Elaine and John live in Virginia Beach, but hope to move back to Southern Calif. where they lived in the 1970s. He expects his latest book, THE HOLY SPIRIT IN THE BIBLE to be published later this year.

Bill Fewell says he is "still hanging in there at Temple Univ. as a teaching professor of medicine despite pressures in the academic medical community to retire 'early'." The daily association with students and staff are major highlights for my life." Last May the Temple graduating class honored Bill with the Golden Apple award for "outstanding dedication, ability and zeal in furthering the education of the medical student." Larry Goznell urges those who are hospital trustees to join an organization founded by hospital trustees endeavoring to preserve the non-profit hospital. Larry lives in Wellesley Hills, and has been a trustee of the New England Baptist Hospital in Boston for 19 years. He has served on the National Board of Volunteer Trustees for Nonprofit Hospitals. Besides saving us all some tax money, he says, he has made some great friends and enjoys his association with the hospital profession.

Bob Goldemberg recently bought into Ringwood Travel, Inc., in N.J., and offers expert planning at competitive rates. Also competitive, in the grandchild department, is Ossie Aaron, with five girls and two boys.

47

ASA BUSHNELL
Box 7034
Tucson, AZ 85725; 602-741-4715

SAN FRANCISCO: The Megablast by the Bay (Sept. 19-23) was '47's first West Coast muster—the largest-ever off-campus gathering of the clan. Thanks to committee perfectionists Finical, Berglund, Madden, Markus, and Tom McCann, it proved an incredible experience for 49 classmates (10 more than our 43rd reunion), 35 significant others, and two Class widows. Commemorating the 47th anniversary of our matriculation at Old Nassau, we came from 17 states and maintained the only annual mini-reunion schedule among all Princeton classes, according to prexy Eggers.

How sweet it was (as you can see from the smiles flashed by Judith and Bud Lethbridge): the elegance of the Pacific Union Club on Nob Hill, the joy of perfect weather, the exhilaration of Napa Valley wineries, the historic beauty of "Filoli" (where Frank Henry marveled at "the new meaning to box lunch" and Parsons introduced his sister, Diana Scholle, who appeared as a docent), the magnitude and mystery of Deputy Director Drell's Stanford Linear Accelerator Center, the luxury of the World Trade Center (where warm applause greeted Sandie Walsh, widow of our beloved Gordie, as she accepted the long-distance prize), the redwood grandeur, and the climactic cruise aboard the motor yacht, CALIFORNIA SPIRIT."

Though '47 has mustered since Held's reign (1973), we welcomed 15 classmates for the first such event: Berglund, Decker, Dillon, Drell, Finical, Fletcher, Henry, Lethbridge, Markus, McCann, Palmer, Pritslaff, Spoehr, Stockly, and Trimble. Frequent attendees Haerther, Oates, and Windsor worked the crowd tirelessly to plug Kohler-Chicago, next year's dual destination.

Others who clearly "left their hearts" included

Angier, Bennett, Bonsall, Boyle, Bradley, Brucker, Bushnell, Campbell, Cote, Faunce, Fischer, Fraiman, Gallagher, Goldstein, Henderson, Hendrickson, Hodapp, Bill Jackson, Kean, Pearson, Vrooman, Val Wagner, Whytlaw, Wilson, Winant, Wohlforth, and Bill Wright.

48

DAVID K. REEVES
106 Snowden Ln.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3340

It would seem that we are getting to be that age when retirement is an option. Some of us are opting for it, but don't seem to be very good at it.

Bill Lorenz has spent the past 20 years with the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in D.C. and St. Louis. In Feb. he started a new career as pastor of Berea Presbyterian Church, the oldest African-American Presbyterian Church in St. Louis.

Joy and Dick Unsworth have moved back to Northampton, Mass., but Dick continues to "shake my tambourine among alumni" for Northfield Mt. Hermon, and function as president, at least until June. Future plans to be announced, but Joy has retired as director of special education for the Greenfield public schools. At this writing Dick is debating the wisdom of a Nov. trip to Saudi Arabia.

After 34 years of dormitory living and math teaching at Andover, Skip Eccles et ux have finally moved into their own house in Andover. Retirement means "a variety of paid and unpaid jobs in the area of education."

Ed Reichenbacher expects "to retire for good in about one-and-a-half years." After many years at N.J. Bell, he has spent the past five years of "retirement" as a consultant to Prudential Property Co. Ed and Gloria have been married for 41 years—three sons and one grandson.

Walter Johnson has got it right with the best of all worlds, summer and winter. He has homes in Beach Haven, N.J., and Venice, Fla., with boating, fishing, and tennis at all seasons. He claims not to miss Sun Co.

49

ALVIN R. KRACHT
Limerick Lane Poetryworks®, 5 Birch Ln.
Chappaqua, NY 10514; 914-238-0352

Apart from his chairmanship of James D. Wolfensohn, Inc., investment bankers; economics professorship at Princeton; and corporate board memberships; former Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker continues to make meaningful contributions in other areas. He is chairman of the Arthritis Foundation's Senior Advisory Board, a counseling group to a cause of deep personal interest to Paul, since his wife, Barbara, has suffered with severe rheumatoid arthritis for over 20 years. Paul's efforts and concerns were covered in a major article in ARTHRITIS TODAY magazine, the journal of the Arthritis Foundation, which seeks a cure for the disease that afflicts 37 million Americans today.

As part of another area of involvement, Paul—in an Op-Ed piece entitled "The Endangered Civil Service," published in the N.Y. TIMES, Aug. 5—urged presidential signature on legislation creating a National Advisory Council on Public Service. This council (with legislation now approved) will have as its goals improving the image of government service as a worthwhile and challenging career; increasing pay scales and the number of professionals vs. political appointees; improving morale and alertness in overview responsibilities; and involving the private sector's help to bring these improvements about. In closing the article, Paul wrote: "Nations everywhere seek to emulate our democracy, our freedoms and our economic success. How tragic it would be if at this time of unparalleled challenge and potential success, we let the ordinary processes of democratic government erode—and put the whole enterprise at risk."

Bob Kress has moved from senior counselor at Right Associates to be senior V.P. of Drake Beam Morin in charge of the Philadelphia area offices. D.B.M. is the largest of the international career counseling firms specializing in out-placement and organizational change, "a very busy and valuable service in this period of business adjustments," says Bob.

With great sadness we must report that "Rich" Tracy died on June 3. A Class memorial is being prepared. We have memorials in this issue.

50

PETE BUCHANAN
151 West St.
Beverly Farms, MA 01915; 508-922-1650

As election 1990 rolls around it's appropriate, if tardy, to recount Bill Schluter's re-election in 1989 to the N.J. Assembly, bucking a strong statewide Democratic trend. Two years earlier Bill had been the top vote-getter in the assembly, taking more than 70 percent of the vote in his race.

Elsewhere in N.J. Jack Gerry's remarks from the 1989-90 Vanderbilt lecture in West Orange were reported in the Harvard Law School alumni magazine. Jack, chief judge of the U.S. District Court for N.J., spoke on the national drug policy and its impact on the federal trial courts.

Trial lawyer Don Cohn opened his own office on Park Ave. this summer. This does little to change his commute as it comes after a number of years as a partner at Webster & Sheffield, all on Park Ave. Fellow football lineman Jack Crites had a recent job change as well, retiring from Northwestern, where he had been a professor in counseling psychology. Jack accepted an appointment as distinguished professor at Univ. of Colorado. In 1989 he moved to Boulder, where he married Norma Briggs McGee. He has established the first Crites Career Center for career decision-making and career adjustments.

Bob Fowler, still living in Houston, has been appointed honorary consul general by Sweden. Tony Fryer has long filled the same role for Japan in Buffalo.

Many classmates and other Princetonians were among the large outpouring of family, business colleagues, and friends who gathered in Winchester, Mass., on Sept. 20 to pay final respects to the memory of Tom Raleigh. The Class of 1950 was represented by Bob Cronheim, Fred Danforth, Liz Dawson, Peter Erdman, Gus Fleischmann and Una, Sid Fox, Dick Gamble, Dan Golden, Don Hammonds, Joe Holman, Hank Rentschler, Art Sells and Jeannie, Bob Smith, Joan Wilson, Pete Buchanan and Joan. A full memorial will appear in a subsequent issue.

51

RICHARD K. PAYNTER
49 Wilson Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-921-6720

The Persian Gulf crisis has Washington, D.C. law firms in turmoil. John Ellicott, a partner in Covington & Burling, has been burning the midnight oil (so to speak) fielding questions from clients regarding our freezing of Kuwaiti assets and the U.N. embargo on all shipping and aircraft to and from Iraq.

Giff Malone, although he plans to resume teaching at U.Va. next spring, is deeply involved in a program called the Emergency Committee for Aid to Poland.

Jim Gorter has been elected chairman of the board of trustees of Lake Forest College in Illinois.

Toby and Bill McDowell's Nina was married July 7. That called for a reunion of roommates (l-r): Bill de Rham, McDowell, Franklin Pepper, and Newby Strong. De Rham is running his Rock Bottom Ranch in Gallatin Gateway, Mt.; McDowell heads an architectural firm in Philadelphia; Pepper recently retired from careers in the state dept. and the C.I.A.; Strong is a V.P. of Smith Barney stockbrokers in Philadelphia.

Reminder: Stuart Johnson (Dartmouth '51) invites all of us who come back for the P-D game Nov. 17 to a buffet at his house outside of Princeton after the game, on your way home. This is a generous idea. Call him (609-448-3170) or me (609-921-6720) to R.S.V.P. and get directions.

52 DON OBERDORFER
4630 30th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20008

Bill Knox has been appointed head of the Dept. of Sociology at U.N.C.-Greensboro. Bill has been at U.N.C.G. since 1963. He specializes in social psychology and sociology of higher education. With a colleague, he is working on research on the long-term consequences of higher education.

Bud Foulke goes back to Cambridge, England, to continue work on the Odyssey Project, a study of ancient seafaring in relation to the Odyssey epic. His wife, Patty, will be writing two travel guides.

Bob Oakley and Phyllis were recently on home leave from his post as ambassador to Pakistan, visiting Bob's home town of Shreveport as well as his adopted home of D.C. While in the capital, Bob addressed the Asia Society and kicked up a short-lived ruckus in Islamabad with his candid remarks.

Bill MacIvaine has moved from his post with Marshall & Isley Bank in Milwaukee to the vice-presidency of an affiliated bank in Naples, Fla. He enjoys the climate, the work, and the recreation in Florida, and finds that family reunions seem to materialize there more easily than in Wisconsin.

Lots of wedding bells recently: Porter Hopkins was married last June in Northeast Harbor, Me., to Patricia Lucas after 12 years of bachelorhood. Patricia and her daughter, Kelly (8), moved to the Hopkins farm in Cambridge, Md. Meanwhile, Porter's youngest daughter presented him with twin grandsons. While in Maine for the festivities, Porter met Jefferson Platt, one of our 'lost' members, who is living in Northeast Harbor.

Jay Sherrerd's daughter, Susan '86, married Steve Vogel '83 in Sept. Four of the ushers were Princeton classmates of Steve's and the matron of honor was Susan's sister Anne, who has a Princeton graduate degree. The bride wore white—or was it orange and black?

53 PIERCE J. LONERGAN
Box 18
Blawenburgh, NJ 08504

As you probably know, the Class of '53 offers two scholarships each academic year. We received a nice note from Mary Redican, one of our recipients. Mary, a chemistry major, is a member of Tower Club and plays intramural sports. When not sequestered in Frick Lab, she can be found working for food services at the grad college. She adds that both of her parents teach in alternative high schools and she is extremely proud of their accomplishments in that field. We look forward to Mary's presence at our Class dinner on Alumni Day (more later).

Old friend Si Spengler Y'53 contacted us last week by howler. It seems that we are invited to another football game party. This time we have a collective bid to assemble at a communal tent outside The Bowl on Nov. 10.

Y-P '52, '53, '54, '55 will gather pre- and post-game to snarl at one another. Si adds that Don Sutherland is reluctantly welcome despite the fact that he hates Yale and seems to approve of flag burning. Suds always had a liberal tilt.

54 DICK STEVENS
1 Valley Sq., Ste. 101
Blue Bell, PA 19422

As undergraduates, one member of the Class of '54 seemed to have more commitment, more dedication, and more energy than anyone else. He was the guy that ran 2 miles AFTER practice . . . the one we elected our first president . . . the one that '54 deemed "most respected." If you think he walks on water . . . Homer Smith does! He is back in the news at U.C.L.A. with banner headlines like this: "After a Dismal '89, U.C.L.A. Rehires a Proven Offensive Mastermind." Homer has led the Bruins out of the wilderness twice before and it looks like it's working again. Armed with an M.B.A. from Stanford and a master's degree in theology from Harvard working together with a fierce competitive spirit, Homer blends it all together into one of the finest football minds in the nation. He is simply . . . the best.

After a career in banking, Bill Austin has switched to the Resolution Trust Co., the institution established to pick up the pieces of the S. & L. debacle. Bill runs a failed thrift in Worcester, Mass., but he could probably work out a Silverado condominium for 30 cents on the dollar if you're interested. Bob Schmaltz has taken a leave of absence from a lucrative law practice in New Haven to attend Bangor Theological Seminary. He finds both the academic life and the beautiful Maine climate invigorating. Here's a big change. Bob Cook has moved permanently to Reykjavik, Iceland where he is a professor of English at the university. Having written his dissertation on a 17th-century Icelandic poem, married Berit, an Icelandic lady, and then having taught Old Norse at Tulane, Bob couldn't resist the pull back to a "safe, sane democratic society." Make your plans to go salmon fishing in Iceland and stay with the Cooks.

Dick Steinmetz majored in geology and went on to get a Ph.D. in petrography. His peers from the American Assn. of Petroleum Geologists recently awarded him their Distinguished Service Award. Steve Ulman dissolved his old law firm and became a new partner of Payne, Wood and Littlejohn in Glen Cove, L.I., probably to settle Teddy Roosevelt's estate.

55 MIKE ROBBINS
40 E. 88th St.
New York, NY 10128; 212-722-7447

Gordon Douglas' wife, Ann, receives word at our 35th that his duties as major gifts chairman are completed!

The N.Y. TIMES chronicled Art Burton's ascension to the office of the chairman of Prudential-Bache Securities. Art, a senior V.P. of parent Prudential Insurance is no stranger to the brokerage side. He worked at P.B. in 1988. His responsibilities include mutual funds, administration, and arbitration.

Richard G. Smith of Carrollton, a member of the law firm of Bone, Vassy, Pyles & Smith, and a Carroll County (Ga.) magistrate judge has been placed on the faculty of the Magistrate Court Training Organization. Congratulations Judge Smith!

Larry Mitnick has two children who are starting out on medical careers. Shelly Berger-Mitnick '84 and David '83.

Austin George was spied at the St. George's Dingham and Sports Club this summer with several "Baltimore financial types" sailing the sloop, Moxie. Electro-mechanical problems aborted the sail and Austin flew home.

This year has been very eventful for the Peter Hawryluk family in Indianapolis: latest business venture is purchase of an equal controlling share of Dart Controls, Inc., a rapidly growing manufacturer of motor speed controls and instrumentation; traveling to the Soviet Union and visiting Moscow, Kiev, etc.; son Kent '90 is president of The Foundation for Student Communication, publisher of BUSINESS TODAY, circulation over 200,000, daughter Jetta (Denison '85) is with Kraft in marketing in Chicago.

Pete Van Gytenebeck is making his way eastward where he will be joining NYNEX.

Yale Game—Nov. 10: Yale's Class of 1955 invites Princeton's '55 to a reception at the Lawn Club, 193 Whitney Ave. in New Haven (across from the Peabody Museum) from 4:30 to 7:00; cash bar, hors d'oeuvres, parking available.

56 DAVID M. JORDAN
410 Rodman Ave.
Jenkintown, PA 19046

A July 31 article in the WINE SPECTATOR features Bill Turnbull's other hat, the grape-growing, wine-making hat he wears when he turns aside from his Sausalito architectural practice. The Johnson Turnbull Vineyards, which Bill owns in partnership with a San Francisco attorney, receive high marks for the Cabernet Sauvignon which they have been producing, at an average of 5,000 cases a year. The vineyards consist of 20 acres in the heart of the Napa Valley.

Sandy McNally, who used to be in the wine business, just returned from a trip to Estonia, Russia, and Austria. He and wife, Tina, visited her brother in Estonia and musk/dance festivals in Vienna and Salzburg. Sandy comments on the tremendous contrast between conditions in the Soviet sphere and those in Austria.

Several years ago, the Princeton Club of Philadelphia sold its club building at Locust and Camac streets. Itchy Jones, whose father resided in the clubhouse in the 1920s, decided to purchase and preserve the distinctive leaded stained-glass window in the Camac Street door. After some two years of arduous negotiation, Itchy bought the window, had it removed and restored, and now has it on display in his office, suitably lighted. Upon his death, he plans to donate the window, which is estimated to be about a hundred years old, to the University. A suitable outcome for a unique item of Princetoniana.

We have a memorial in this issue.

57 JACK SCHLEGEL
Box 6177, Yorkville Station
New York, NY 10128; 212-427-3575 (H)

Bruce Rosborough: "Assume you saw Johnny Eaton received a 'genius' award from the McArthur Foundation, and will have something appropriate to say about it."

Bill Ridgeway: "Having left N.J. government when Tom Kean did, we are building a house in Old Lyme, Conn., and leaving N.J. to Gov. Florio!"

Howard Gordon: "Professor and chairman of ob./gyn. at West. Va. Univ. here in Charleston since Feb. 1990." Bill Goldstein: "Son Adam '81 engaged to Chery Hollander. Both are executives at Royal Caribbean Cruise Lines in Miami."

Arthur Bellinzoni has edited the three-volume English edition of Edouard Massaux's THE INFLUENCE OF THE GOSPEL OF ST. MATTHEW ON CHRISTIAN LITERATURE BEFORE ST. IRENAEUS. He spent July and Aug. on safari in Kenya and Tanzania, and sailed in Oct. on a 50-day cruise around South America.

Jerry Mulder: "Married to Leslie Eustace, former actress and animal shelter worker, on Aug. 12, 1989, with three brothers, three sons, and many friends in attendance at Grace Church, Brooklyn Heights, N.Y.; reception at new apartment, also in the Heights." John Nevin: "After 33 years with Intl. Paper, Joy and I decided to head south. I am now senior V.P. of strategic services for James River."

The Natl. Symphony Orchestra went on a $900,000 whirlwind tour of Europe last month, giving concerts in nine cities of Belgium, France, Germany, and Switzerland, Oct. 11-21. Orchestra President Albert J. Beveridge credited Kennedy Center Chairman James D. Wolfensohn for securing tour underwriting from Northern Telecom: "He really hustled this one."

58

RALPH L. DEGROFF
7 Gracie Sq.
New York, NY 10028

"Nets think Casciola can be their rebuild"—headline of article in the Aug. 22 Trenton TIMES. Bob Casciola was brought in three years ago to "straighten up" the problem-plagued basketball franchise. Bob has brought the Nets front office into the modern age, a spokesman for the organization commented. "We weren't really sales-oriented . . . and didn't serve our customers very well. Bob's changed all that with innovative ideas he brought from his position at the bank (First Fidelity)." One of the principal owners of the Nets said, "Bob is a strong man, one who can make important decisions and effectively represent our ballclub."

Arthur Cotton Moore had an exhibition last March in N.Y. of his furniture and paintings, representative of his designs which he calls industrial baroque. In one of his paintings, aluminum bars welded to the painting's steel frame seem to fly up into a tumultuous sky ringed with clouds of urethane foam. Arthur said, "It's my version of the prefabricated Baroque sky, but without the feet of angels going up to heaven."

Bruce Wilson's daughter Caroline '89 is now an admissions officer at the University.

Paul Abeles is living in the hills of Adelaide, South Australia, married to Robyn, with two children—Hew (19) and Kim (16).

David Grundy is a classical music writer for the Gainesville (Fla.) SUN.

Loyal Updegrave is still living the "good life" in Salt Lake City and is a grandfather three times.

59

JAY M. SIEGEL
11321 Rolling House Rd.
Rockville, MD 20852

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO: We were among 46,000 spectators in Palmer Stadium, cheering Princeton to a 13-0 upset victory over Yale. It was the eighth time in nine years that the Elis had been beaten by the Tigers. The capacity crowd included then-N.J. Governor Robert B. Meyner and Margaret Truman.

Tony Marshall has been named a senior V.P. at

Diplomats Discuss Defense

IN MID-AUGUST, with war clouds hanging over the Persian Gulf, Secretary of State James A. Baker III '52 and Prince Saud al-Faisal '64, the foreign minister of Saudi Arabia, met in Kennebunkport, Maine, at the summer home of a certain Eli. The Boston Sunday Globe reported that the crisis in the Middle East was the topic of their talks, but we're pretty certain that they also discussed Princeton and Yale's prospects of retaining the Ivy League title in football they shared last year. Why else would they both be smiling?

PHOTO © BOSTON GLOBE

U.S. Trust Company of N.Y. Tony will retain his position as manager of U.S. Trust's estate planning department. Peyton Norville, recently elected president of the 3,000 member Birmingham (Ala.) Assn. of Realtors, has apparently decided to create his own inventory. Peyton is developing a new town at Blount Springs, Ala. Harry Begier, who took down his shingle in 1986, has had enough of retirement. Harry has opened a "boutique" law office in Philadelphia, specializing in insurance law litigation. Bill Wenrich has left his post as chancellor of the San Diego Community College District. Bill's work at San Diego was praised by colleagues, who noted his ability to bring people together.

One-third of one percent of our legal population become fellows of the American Bar Foundation—a prestigious group indeed. The Class of '59 appears to have disproportionate representation, boasting at least nine members of that select group: George Beall, John Bingler, Tony Cotter, Mike Kelly, Seth Montgomery, Mal Moore, Mac Plant, Al Pogarsky, and Jim Robertson.

ON THE GO: Dave Appleton, from Alameda, Calif., to Sugar Land, Tex.; Sam Ho, from Vancouver, B.C., to Cambridge, Mass.; Mike McCarthy, from Merion, Penn., to Chicago, Ill.; Denny Miller, from Chatham, N.J., to Brooklyn Heights, N.Y.; Fred Richman, from Las Cruces, N.M., to Boca Raton, Fla.; Don Teegarden, from Stow, Mass., to New York, N.Y.; and Rodney Williams, from Portola Valley, Calif., to Greenwood, Calif.

60

MASON LOWANCE
100 Lincoln Ave.
Amherst, MA 01002

The pictures from reunions are now coming in, and here's one from Art Goldstein, who appears in the photo with Gordy Silcox and Clark Gesner. Note that Clark is holding his grandfather's reunion pennant, from 1890! Art is an ob./gyn. specialist in Calif. whose talented daughter, Samantha, is in our graduate English program at the Univ. of Mass. Tod Peyton wrote that he was "sorry to miss the 30th reunion, but we promised friends to celebrate a big birthday on a trip to France together." The Peytons were in Paris during our big bash. Paul Warren writes from the West Coast: "Now that I have conquered 'Deaning' in the East, I have moved to San Francisco and am testing my hand as dean of the School of Education at the Univ. of San Francisco. This is quite a change!" Peter Prugh, who resides in Des Moines, Ia., has helpfully gathered news of classmates and forwarded it. Much of this was conversation at the reunion, which Pete has carefully reported. Ron Barks, he notes, a resident of Santa Fe, has a position with the Los Alamos national atomic energy laboratory. And George Peyton, still practicing law in Oakland, was back in Princeton from his home in Berkeley. Waterloo, Ia. lawyer Rick Miller got a chance to visit with his Princeton student son Andrew, who helped set up our reunion before heading off to Alaska for summer work. Matthew, Scott, and Stephanie Karchmer also helped with our reunion work. Clark Gesner re-

Princeton Clubs and Alumni Associations

PAA OF GREENWICH: Sat., Nov. 10: All tiger fans are invited to attend a reception at 11 A.M. prior to the Princeton-Yale football game in New Haven. The location will be Parking Lot C at the corner of Derby Ave. and Central Ave. B.Y.O.L. The Princeton band will attend. For further info., call Tom Bennevil '77 212-850-2816.

PAA OF EASTERN CONNECTICUT (New Haven): Sat., Nov. 10: The association will sponsor a post-game party after the Princeton-Yale football game. Time: 4-6 P.M. Location: Grill 368, Audubon St., New Haven. The Yale Banjo Band and the Princeton marching band will perform. Plan to attend and celebrate the win over the Elis! For further info., call David Greenberg '58 203-453-6543.

PAA OF NORTHERN OHIO (Cleveland): Sat., Nov. 24: The association will host a symposium on higher education with Professor of Sociology Marvin Bressler. The symposium will precede an appearance by the men's basketball team in the North Coast Basketball tournament Saturday evening. For info. on the symposium and tournament, please call Barbara Rose '77 216-621-3300.

PAA OF LONG ISLAND: Thurs., Nov. 29: President Harold T. Shapiro '64 will speak at the annual dinner. For info., call Harold German '63 516-271-8700.

Notice of activities for inclusion in this column should be submitted at least eight weeks prior to the date on which they will occur.

Please send information to Elizabeth Hunt, Alumni Council, Maclean House, Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 08544-0291; 609-258-3351.

HELP US TRACK YOUR PAW ISSUES

Delivery dates of PAW vary across the country. The magazine's actual production and printing often are completed well before the cover date on the issue, but the magazine is not reaching many of you until several weeks later.

In order to find the distribution problems, it would help us if readers could send us a postcard after receiving an issue and tell us:

- 1) the cover date of the issue.
- 2) the date the issue arrived.
- 3) the address, including town and especially zip code, on the mailing label.

We need to hear from readers from around the country through the February 21st issue.

For those of you who participate, many thanks.

Send postcards to:
CIRCULATION TRACKING
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 WILLIAM STREET
PRINCETON, NJ 08540

ported that he was off to play Watson in a production of Sherlock Holmes at a summer theater in New England, while Art Rosenblatt has been working on a guidebook about Connecticut inns.

61

GEORGE BRACKLEY III
98 Winfield Ln.
New Canaan, CT 06840

Prexy Mike Iseman asks for nominees for the 1991-96 Class presidency. Send names (your own or others') to the secretary. And while you're at it, send Larry Brennan a check for dues.

Last May the first annual Frank DeFord Award was presented at Williams College to Jeff Friedman (Williams '90). The press release says "The editor-in-chief of the NATIONAL sports daily and six-time winner of the National Sports Writer of the Year award visited Williams to present an award in his name to the top student sports assistant at the College." Why Williams, you might ask? Well, it seems that Frank's favorite color is purple, he once wrote in SPORTS ILLUSTRATED that purple-clad teams never win, and purple is Williams' official color. Additionally, the daughter of Williams' sports information director has cystic fibrosis, and Frank is natl. chairman of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. Thus the award, which will be presented each May henceforth by a nationally known sports personality.

Following the Challenger disaster, a panel established by the Natl. Research Council oversaw the redesign of the shuttle solid rocket boosters from 1986 to 1988 under Project Director Myron Uman. Unbeknownst to Myron, his wife, Sandy, has sent us copies of the Sept. 26, 1988, Senate Resolution 486, which lauds Myron and his colleagues; and the coveted "Silver Snoopy" Award, the recipients of which are decided by the astronauts themselves for a given mission—in Myron's case the STS-26 Discovery mission. The N.J. senatorial race has a '61 flavor on both sides. Bob Myslil, on leave of absence from the University until Election Day, is a full-time volunteer for incumbent Bill Bradley '65, while Christine Todd Whitman, Dan Todd's sister, is "this year's Republican David vs. the Democratic Goliath."

62

ERIC W. JOHNSON
2221 Craig Ct.
Vienna, VA 22182; 703-280-9080

ASBESTOS I CAN, HIKE: Many classmates last Apr. surely read in the N.Y. TIMES, the WALL STREET JOURNAL, etc., etc., of Drew Barry's enormous legal victory for Owens Illinois Inc. over its insurers in an asbestos-liability case—$960 million! It was a huge setback for the insurers. Although Drew has been litigating "enormously complicated" asbestos cases for over a decade, the N.Y. TIMES also reported that Drew represents the N.Y. Giants football team, as in cases where a couple are divorced and fight over who owns the tickets, or defending the Giants against irate fans. The Giants rewarded him with a pair of tickets to the Super Bowl on the 50-yard line. Says his law partner, Joe Irenas, "Of course, I recognize that these accolades bestowed on Drew pale in significance when compared to the honor he received as a winner of the Class of 1962 Distinguished Merit Award at our annual N.Y. Class dinner this past winter."

RUBBER RAFTS, THE DALAI LAMA AND THE MEANING OF LIFE: Gene Humphrey and wife, Peg, spent an exciting two weeks in four-person rubber rafts on the Colorado River in the Grand Canyon last summer. "Literally the ride of your life, and it was magnificent." Last Oct., he and Peg attended a conference in Newport Beach organized by the East-West Foundation and featuring meetings between world religious leaders and Western psychotherapists. Highlight for them was nine hours of dialogue with the Dalai Lama during the three days prior to the announcement he was to receive the Nobel Prize for Peace. Finally, that same month, Gene completed his dissertation, "Searching for Life's Meaning," and earned his doctorate in clinical psychology.

63

SILDEN S. EDWARDS
Elgin Academy, 350 Park St.
Elgin, IL 60120

Whenever you watch Hugh Downs and his pals on ABC's 20/20 you probably don't realize that our own Colin Hill is the popular show's chief film editor. Colin lives in Princeton with real estate broker Maggie and their four children. N.Y.C. urologist Reid Pitts reports, "Will, our older son, entered St. Paul's School in Concord, N.H. as a tenth grader. Bradley is in the seventh grade at Collegiate School here." And Dr. Jeff Ribner is president of Twin Tier Neurology in Binghamton, N.Y. He and Deborah have a son Joshua (14).

UNIVERSITY NEWS: Boston Univ. professor Fred Foulkes has edited a book, STRATEGIC EXECUTIVE COMPENSATION: GUIDELINES FOR THE 1990s to be published by Harvard Business School early next year. Jim White reports that he is still teaching political science at U.N.C., where he just finished a three-year stint as associate dean of the Graduate School. He is now beginning a term as chair of the Committee on Japanese Studies of the Social Science Research Council. He and Marion have three children: Jamie (20), Erin (17), and Christopher (13). Paul Kirk is still teaching physics at Louisiana State Univ., and George Fallon still lives in Burbank, Calif., and teaches at Cal State-L.A.

And from Scarsdale, Michael Otten writes that his son, Daniel, just entered Princeton as a freshman. John Andreus is still with the Strategic Decisions Group in Menlo Park, Calif. Dick Hornquist is V.P. of Comerica Bank in Detroit. His wife, Lois-Ann, is a writer, and they have Erika, a Princeton senior, and David, in his last year at Grosse Pointe South H.S.

We have a memorial in this issue.

64

JOTHAM JOHNSON
Box 12
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

An article in a recent Rutgers football program, saluting the late Dick Colman and twelve other 1990 inductees into the Natl. Football Foundation Hall of Fame, included this photo of Dick flanked by captain Bill Guedel and his successor, Cosmo Iaccavazzi '65, the current president of Friends of Princeton Football. Bill is in the construction business in the great Northwest and now makes his home in Snohomish, Wa., just north of Seattle.

Carl Ferenbach, a general partner in Berkshire Partners, a Manhattan investment firm, is the newly-elected president of the Brooklyn Historical Society. An expert in L.B.O.s, Carl expects to use his skills as a negotiator to attract millions of dollars for the renovation of the society's headquarters, a landmark building built in 1881 and one of the city's great architectural treasures.

Also named: Phil Abrams as V.P.-Product Development for Health Innovations, Inc. in Reston, Va.; Howie Cox as a director of Affiliated Publications, Inc. in Boston; Hugh Manke as a partner in the New Haven law firm of Updike, Kelly & Spellacy, specializing in real estate development and municipal law; Stew Pinkerton as asst. managing editor of FORBES magazine; and Class Prexy Rob Kuser to a three-year term on the Alumni Council's Executive Committee as one of four elected class presidents.

Nice note from John Machledt, long active in scouting, who camped this spring with ten Boy Scouts on the beach in St. John, Virgin Islands, and then took the group on a white-water canoe trip in Maine this summer. "Still trying to find some time to practice a little medicine on the side!"

65

J. MICHAEL PARISH

Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts
1 Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004

"It was all straight and flat, nothing but blueberry bushes everywhere. It had all these electrical sirens that would whoop and wail, and flashing lights." This is Byron Brooks at the age of 18 delivering his first fire truck somewhere up in the north of Maine and then... "He gets out and cocks his Smokey the Bear hat and he walks up to the cab, hooks his thumbs in his belt, you know, and then he says, 'I don't see no fi-uh.'" The story ends with the trooper giving By a siren escort into the town, which had never seen the machine before. So who could be surprised that By's Blanchard Apparatus Corp. in Hopkinton, Mass., now does over one percent of the fire truck business in the entire country, all as recounted in the recent feature in the Boston Sunday TELEGRAPH by Andrew (son of Bill) Wolfe.

Paul Boorstin called to say that the TV movie "Angel of Death," starring, among others, Jane Seymour, and written by Paul and his wife, Sharon, was being featured on CBS on Oct. 2 and will be rerun, so keep an eye out for it. Dan Kleinman continues to run his Friday evening directors' series at the N.Y.U. Film School, featuring screenings and question and answer sessions with, among others, Spike Lee, Sidney Lumet, and John Patrick Shanley (author of MOONSTRUCK).

Bill Hardy keeps out of trouble these days by managing the computer-aided design and manufacturing system for Boeing in Philadelphia, and trying to keep tabs on his two sons at Penn, as well as his younger one whom he keeps talking to about Princeton.

The typographical error in Pete Whitney's new address label "American Embassy Kingston/Dept. of State, Washington, D.C. 20521-3210" will presumably not keep classmates from writing to him and getting return mail describing his life down in Jamaica as deputy chief of mission or full of travel tips about an island less dangerous than Manhattan, and that, according to Pete, "has been one of the better performers under the Caribbean Basin Initiative and... cooperative on the issue of drugs."

66

JEFFREY N. McCOLLUM, A.T.&T. Products
5 Wood Hollow Rd., Rm. 1J19
Parsippany, NJ 07054

Class of 1966—The Overall Class 25th Reunion—June 6-9, 1990

By now you should have received your copy of the class poll for our 25th reunion book. Lanny Jones emphasizes the "total anonymity" of the poll—results will be published only in aggregate. Lanny has prepared a questionnaire for any spouses and "significant others" who wish to participate; write or call him at 20 Hibben Rd., Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-1420.

An unsolved mystery is now solved. In 1984, the Sixty-Six-Super-Sleuth Award was announced for the person or persons locating Lyman Miller, who had slipped from the scopes of Alumni Records.

Thanks to a note from Rick Ryan, and a press release from the Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced Intl. Studies (located in Washington, but a fully integrated graduate division of Johns Hopkins), Lyman is back on the scope.

In Sept., he joined that organization as associate professor and director of the China Studies Program. The release also filled in some of the "missing" data on Lyman's progress through the 1970s and 1980s. Lyman has been associated with the Foreign Broadcast Information Service, where he was a senior analyst. He is the author of numerous articles on Chinese history, politics, and foreign policy, and has completed a book, THE POLITICS OF KNOWLEDGE: IDEOLOGY, SCIENCE AND AUTHORITY IN POST-MAO CHINA, which will soon be published.

Also in Washington, Mike Burrill reports that "miraculously" he remains employed as a community planner in the face of a depressed real estate market. He recently spent the better part of a day with Ted Meeker, who had "floated in from Honolulu." Mike also reports that he has heard from Ed Coe, who was soon to depart on "another sojourn somewhere in the Caribbean or South America."

With Lyman Miller rediscovered, the next Sixty-Six-Super-Sleuth Award will go to the person discovering the whereabouts of Reggie Ungern.

67

PETER J. TURCHI
6503 Masefield St.
Worthington, OH 43085

Steve Wright is this issue's photo opportunity. Steve recently joined Index Technology Corp. as senior V.P., field operations. He had previously been corporate V.P., intl. operations, for McCormack & Dodge (now Dun & Bradstreet Software).

Bob Ehret "finally settled down" in Winnetka, Ill., as senior V.P. for Dun & Bradstreet's consumer marketing division in human resources. Luke Buxton writes that he is still working for Digital Equipment Corp. as an information systems consultant, specializing in educational issues related to technology transfer. On the personal side, he is "married for the second time, since 1983, to Loretta Rossetti," who also works for D.E.C. Luke's daughter, Anne, from his first marriage "is now 22 and working as a horse trainer." John Pitts was off to Mexico City last Aug. to work in the embassy as deputy chief of the economic section.

On a very sad note, we received word from Ted Todd that his "son Stuart drowned as a passenger in his own car at the Alexander St. D. & R. Canal bridge." Lack of guard rails, combined with power windows and locks, excess speed and inexperience led to his death at age 19. We extend our inadequate sympathy to Ted's loss.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO, Moscow: Soviets say Peking is threat to intl. communism. Peking: Chou accuses Soviets of undermining world revolutionary struggle. Rolling Stones sing "Get Off My Cloud," displacing Paul McCartney's lament for "Yesterday."

68

JOE KLIMEK
Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour St.
Hartford, CT 06115; FAX 203-524-7057

John Ragazzini's son, Jeffrey Miles, arrived on Halloween last year. John observed that '68ers may be getting too old for 3 A.M. feedings and diaper changes, but they do manage to keep us young.

Randy Zisler is managing to keep young and deal with his fifth decade by running 10K races. During working hours, Randy chases bulls and bears at Goldman, Sachs on Wall Street.

Larry Linden highlighted his fifth decade by marrying Dana Wechsler at the Quilted Giraffe in Manhattan. Dana is a Harvard grad and an associate editor of FORBES magazine. Larry is a partner in the N.Y. office of McKinsey and Co., a management consulting firm.

Jack Linville and his wife, Anne, also live in the Big Apple and have a one-year-old and a two-year-old. Jack reports that he is enjoying late fatherhood as much as he has enjoyed anything.

How about enjoying a football weekend? The Princeton-Yale football game will be broadcast live by ESPN at 12:30 E.S.T. For all of you who aren't within driving distance of New Haven, here's a chance to get your classmates together in a relaxed setting to enjoy the game. Consider someone's home or a local gathering spot—an inexpensive and great opportunity to visit friends.

69

PAUL GEORGE SITTENFELD
1854 Keys Crescent
Cincinnati, OH 45206

One of our favorite photographers, Connie Cone, shares this photo of Mike. The skipper is behind the helm of ACTAEA. The new-to-them yawl will live on the Sassafras River in Georgetown, Md., near their Wilmington, Del. home.

More wifely information, this gleaned from a copy of WELLESLEY. Denise Fletcher, formerly treasurer of the N.Y. TIMES, has started Fletcher Associates to provide investment banking services to the communications industry. She and Bob and their David (15) and Kate (12), live in Larchmont, N.Y.

An Apr. issue of FINANCIAL WORLD provides a very positive update on Thacher Brown. In 1988, when Drexel decided to sell Drexel Burnham Lambert Investment Advisors, Thacher and a few colleagues purchased it and renamed it 1838 Investment Advisors. Lloyd and Thacher and their Quincy (16), and Lee Lee (13), live in Devon, Penn.

Please respond to Chuck Freyer's and Murphy McCarthy's request for Class dues in support of the Class scholarship. Meanwhile, a Tasty Turkey to all.

70

JAN KUBIK
113 Laurel Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

With pleasure we turn this space over to Barnacle Bill the Sailor, for some Nautical Notes: Shiver me timbers! It's many a week I've been at sea, and in every port I'm doin' a jig with the Class O' Seventy.

Kirk Unruh and Bruce Walton were recently spotted off the starboard bow of the U.S.S. CONSTITUTION in Boston Harbor, at the change of command for the U.S.S. OLIVER HAZARD PERRY, a guided missile frigate, whose alternate crew is commanded by Unruh. Weekend Warrior Unruh is director of Development Relations at the University, while Bruce is exec. director of Russell Reynolds Associates in Boston.

Sailing to the warmer waters of Puerto Rico, one finds Commander Matt Dillon, a U.N. representative for the Caribbean and South America, residing on a sailboat, responsible for pollution control and port safety. Pass me the sunscreen.

One of the proudest captains on the sea is Dr. Andrew Hendricks, who spearheaded an effort to recreate the HALF MOON, Henry Hudson's 85-foot vessel that plied the waters of N.Y. in 1609, as a part of the quest for a "Northwest passage" to China.

Mc spyglass spotted another intrepid crew in the Newport-Bermuda, with Gene Sydnor '39 at the helm of the ETOLE, and our own Jim Bimch (second mate), and Tad Thompson, watch mates. When the last ration of grog was finished, the Etoile was second place overall and first in its class, which is what we expect from a Class with class!

71

STUART E. PICKERSON
Gracie Station, P.O. Box 1142
New York, NY 10028

RÉSUMÉS: In 1987 Alan Usas left Princeton, where he had served the Campaign for Princeton staff, overseeing the information systems operation, and lectured in the computer science department. Karen, Jennifer, Melanie, and Alan are now settled in northern Calif., where he manages the development of information security products for Tandem Computers. Alan also serves on the Schools Committee and is involved in other alumni activities. Mary Azoy is living in Mexico City currently, where she designs jewelry and attends graduate school in psychology. Keeping her life full are her two sons, Nicky and Robin, and her husband, Bob Earle '72, who is a foreign service officer at the U.S. embassy.

Bruce Beckner left his old firm to start a litigation practice at a communications "boutique" firm, Fleischman & Walsh, in the nation's capital. Frank Demmler has become an adjunct professor of entrepreneurial studies at the Carnegie Mellon Univ. graduate business school. He teaches second-year students about venture capital. The "Bopper," Bob Schiffner, was promoted to V.P. for corporate development by R.J.R. Nabisco.

Folksinger Ben Tousley was honored by Greater Boston Beyond War for the music programs he's brought to local schools, libraries, hospitals, and churches in the last five years. He was especially cited for his work with children in teaching values of peace and multicultural understanding. His second album of original songs, "I'll Take You Home," was recently released.

Mark Mazo, who had been the head of the corporate practice section at Crowell & Moring since he became a partner there in 1981, has joined another leading D.C. law firm, Hogan & Hartson. Mark says that he has no hard feelings about his years at Crowell, it's just that the new firm has a commercial group ten times the size of his former firm, which, in turn, will offer a better place for him to work on even larger deals.

73

R. GREGORY FLEMPTON
Box 14545
North Palm Beach, FL 33408

Janet Norris and her husband Tom hold twins Amanda and Blair, born last Nov. 7. Janet is an attorney in San Francisco, now with a little extra case load. Betsy and Steve Pearson's second boy, Andrew Naylor, Dec. 2, 1989, and Rick Lawrence's son David Andrew, who arrived last Oct. 5.

Bob Wilson is a partner in the Axial Group, a Morristown, N.J. real estate development company. Currently, Axial owns and manages 21 projects from N.Y. to Fla. Bob occasionally flies with long-time Class Treasurer Bill Kapler between N.Y.C., and Rochester, N.Y.

To our computer types, "go" is how you start a batch file. To Rick Mott, "GO" is a new passion. Rick has been working to revive the ancient oriental game in Princeton. The Princeton GO Club sponsored the fifth U.S. GO Congress at, of all places, Rutgers. Rick would like to hear from any alumni GO players at RD2, Box 676, Ringoes, NJ 08551. If Sally Fields and Phil Abram weren't so darn busy, they might join Rick's club. The couple still lives in Princeton with their two sons, Stuart (6) and Peter (4). Sally is a deputy attorney general and tried the Jersey City School takeover case. Phil is a manager in financial planning at A.T. & T.

74

JOHN STRYKER
15 Woodbine Rd.
Kendall Park, NJ 08824

TSAR NICHOLAS?: Despite all appearances to the contrary, Nick Allard, pictured here, claims he is not making himself available in case the new Russian revolution leads to the restoration of the imperial family. And there is no truth to the rumor that Maria is planning to change her name to Alexandra. Rather, Nick and son Nate (10), spent two weeks this Aug. in the Soviet Union as part of a youth all-star baseball squad sponsored by Spalding and the Vince Lombardi Foundation. The group conducted seminars and held exhibitions in Moscow and Tbilisi to introduce baseball to Soviet youth.

CCCCP

HOMEcoming QUEEN: Martha Keeney Heyburn, whose medical practice is in Louisville, Ky., returned to her high school, the Springside School in Chestnut Hill, Penn., to receive an award as the Distinguished Alumna of 1990. Later, she was invited back by the senior class to be their commencement speaker. She says that "multiple copies" of her commencement address are available on request.

KING OF THE DEEP: Doug Lennox finished the 1990 season of masters swimming in the 35-39 age group by winning six of twelve events (including relays) in the Ill. state championships. At the Y.M.C.A. nationals, he was a member of the victorious 200-yard freestyle relay which just missed the national record by 8/100ths of a second. He also took second in the 100-yard backstroke, and third in the 100-yard butterfly and 50-yard backstroke. Doug met John Kalmbach '66 and wife, Sally, who both swam superbly in state and natl. championships.

75

MELISSA KISER MESROBIAN
940 Riverside Ave., Berkeley Square
Trenton, NJ 08618

In Apr. Theresa D. Brown joined the staff of the N.J. State Dept. of the Public Advocate, where she will be involved in handling special litigation and legislative projects. Previously she had been asst. city attorney for Camden, N.J.

Giles Scofield has left his position as director of legal services with Concern for Dying, and is taking a one-year fellowship in bioethics at the Cleveland Clinic. "The fellowship gives those of us who profess to know about law and medicine a dose of clinical reality, so that our work and recommendations will be more meaningful," he says. "And I am certain the doctors are looking forward to getting their hands on an attorney."

Charles Rissel has moved back East from Houston with his two sons, Chris (6) and Sean (4). He is now living in Bucks County, Penn., and working with Rohm & Haas.

Bill Baumbach recently became a senior research biologist at the agricultural research division of American Cyanamid in Princeton. He is working with others to investigate the molecular biology of the growth hormone receptor as it relates to efficiency in farm animal production.

Under the headline "Llongyfarchiadau, Griff!" Y DRYCH, a newspaper for Welsh Americans reported this spring that Bill Griffith is now practicing law in Rome, N.Y., with the firm Griffith and Engelbrecht. He is also completing requirements for a Ph.D. in legal history and teaching an "undergraduate course in American history at Syracuse Univ."

Debra Meloy Elmegreen has been promoted to associate professor of astronomy at Vassar. She has also received recently a natl. astronomy award from Dudley Observatory for her research on galaxies.

With sadness we report the death of Robert V. Parmele on May 30. A memorial will follow.

76

JAMES L. MARKETOS
Lane & Mitzendorf, 919 18th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20006

Pictured is John William O'Neill IV, the first child of Jeanne and Sean O'Neill, born Sept. 4, 1989. The same year, Sean received a master's degree in education from Harvard and is now teaching English at Tabor Academy. Jeanne is working on a Ph.D. in classics at Harvard. Also pictured (below) are Lauren and Joelle Lichtman, the daughters of Stu and Gwen Setman Lichtman. Stu is an asst. prof. of medicine at Cornell. They live in Melville, N.Y.

Beth Cookson is now senior instructor in the dept. of psychiatry at the Univ. of Colorado medical school and staff psychiatrist at Fort Logan Mental Health Center. She and her partner, Carolyn Keene, have a delightful 17-month-old son, Sam.

Juanita Burch and her husband, Jack Clay '75, who both teach at a school in the Swiss Alps, hosted the Nassoons there last fall. They look forward to contacts by other groups planning European trips and can be reached at the Leysian American School. They have two children, Alexander and Caitlin.

A DISSENTER IN THE HOUSE OF GOD, published this year by St. Martin's Press, is the first novel by Dorothy Levine Rosenfeld's husband, Alvin (Harvard Med. '70). Their second child, Samuel Aaron, was born last Jan. They live in Stamford, Conn.

Phyllis and Paul Mottola report the birth of two daughters, Allison on June 9, 1987, and Jennifer on Mar. 30, 1989. Sam Perkins's second son, Lukas Hall, was born Mar. 8, 1990.

77

JAMES BARRON
15 W. 72nd St., Apt. 24-B
New York, NY 10023

BACK FROM BEIJING: Foreign Service Officer Martha Suiberland Cheng was scheduled to return to Washington after two "quite interesting" years at the U.S. embassy in Beijing that gave her an eyewitness view of the democracy movement in China and the Beijing government's efforts to crush it. "My husband Mark and daughter Emily are both looking forward to suburbia after living in a compound which was shot up in June 1989," she says. "Our apartment received eight rounds, but luckily no one was injured."

BAY AREA BABIES: Elise Van Oss reports that pediatrician Becky Kerr and her husband became parents on Jan. 29 with the birth of daughter, Lauren Gabrielle. They and fellow San Francisco resident Anne Adams made it through the big earthquake in fine shape. So did Rich McNally's third child, Oliver Rodes (pictured), who weighed in at nine pounds on Nov. 21, 1989. A few years from now Oliver may be a big man on campus, but for now he's a big guy in the playpen: he's 30% bigger than his older brothers (Peter, 4, and Alexander, 2) were when they were his age. Rich continues as senior V.P. of The Gap.

ONCE AN ATHLETE, ALWAYS AN ATHLETE: David Tickners says he is "still attempting to play lacrosse" and is in a tournament in Vail, Colo. He lives in Darien, Conn., with wife, Margaret, and daughters Laura (5), Marcy (3), and Alexandra (1). Cathy Tiedemann Morra says she's swimming again and heard through her sisters (Liz '78 and Charlotte '82) that Charlie Norelli won two events at the recent Masters Nationals at U.S.C.

78

BOB PASHIN
Box 886
Middlebury, VT 05753

'78ers in the news: Roy Kessler was profiled in the Aug. 1990 NATION'S BUSINESS. He is the founder of PC Globe, Inc., which makes a "versatile, computerized atlas at an affordable price. The program... offers an integrated package of maps and graphics giving instant, detailed profiles of 177 countries." First introduced in 1987, the software was enhanced in Nov. 1988, and a companion, "PC USA," program was added to the line in Aug. 1989.

And alert readers of SMITHSONIAN magazine noticed this photo of Mitch Resnick in an article about M.I.T.'s media lab. The photo caption read, "The Media Lab's Mitchel Resnick plays with a Lego merry-go-round driven by a Logo computer program. The Lego/Logo lab shows school-age children how to write their own programs, thus demonstrating that even child's play can turn into an art of invention."

Writing from Paris, Jodie Einbinder Cohen-Tanugi shares the news of the birth of her second son, Samuel, who arrived on Feb. 6, 1990. He joins older brother David, born Mar. 8, 1987. Jodie writes that she will be a partner in the law firm of Baudel, Sales, Vincent & Georges as of Jan. 1, 1991.

And in N.Y.C., Al Klingenstein left the developer with whom he was working to join Bankers Trust as an associate in the real estate capital markets group. Recently promoted to V.P., Al writes that he is "enjoying the job, despite challenging times."

79

MARTHA KRAMER
27 Northhill St., Apt. 6-R
Stamford, CT 06907

'79, J.D.: Jeffrey Segel had the rare opportunity to argue a case before the U.S. Supreme Court, particularly noteworthy because he lived in Guam at the time. In "Ngringas v. Sanchez," Jeff argued for the right to sue the territorial government of Guam because of mistreatment by police. While the court as a whole did not decide in Jeff's favor, he did earn a dissenting opinion signed by Justices Brennan and Marshall. Pictured are Jeff and his wife, Marilyn Seipp, on the steps of the Supreme Court. Married in Aug., Jeff and Marilyn now live in California.

EXOTIC PLACES: Margot Kent Timbel is supervising exploration projects in Zaire, Madagascar, and East Africa for Amoco, while her husband (also an Amoco employee) travels to Burma. At home in Houston, their toddler son, Carter, is full of teeth, smiles, and his own adventures. While his destinations are not quite as exotic, Gary King has been on the move during the last year. He has been to much of the East Coast, sprinklings of the Midwest, and many times to Dallas, which he calls his "I.B.M. home away from home."

ON THE MOVE: Bruce Miller has moved from the Washington, D.C. area to New Orleans for the third year of his cardiology fellowship. He completed a stint at the Bethesda Naval Hospital and is now at the Ochsner Clinic; this leg will be followed by two more years in the Navy. Traveling with Bruce are his wife, Audrey, and children, Rebecca and Joshua. After ten years in the reinsurance industry, George Wood has directed his energies to helping the environment. Specifically, he is involved with trying to get energy from solid waste. He and his family, which includes a son born in May, are happily settled in his hometown of Haverford, Penn.

80

PHIL D. PARKER
25 Farmhouse La.
Philadelphia, PA 19225

If you recall, the recent newsletter from Sbaron Keld introducing the new Class officers referred to the Class Agent simply as "a player to be named later." That player has been named, and the job is now in the capable hands of Margaret Moore Miller. I am sure that we can all look forward to some persuasive arm-twisting on behalf of the University.

Florence DiStefano Hudson had the opportunity to conduct a series of mini-reunions this spring when she traveled to the West Coast. She visited with Jim Shay, a lawyer in the San Francisco area, Helen Stevenson, who just completed her master's in engineering in San Diego, and Donna Powell Ogilvie and her husband, Greg, also in San Diego. Donna and Greg were married in July 1989, and Donna works for Hewlett-Packard. Cameron Stout checked in to say that he is living in Berkeley, Calif., with his wife, Pamela, and daughter Kelly (2), while working as a securities lawyer with Keesal, Young & Logan in S.F. Laurence Manson was promoted to V.P. in the merchant banking group of Prudential-Bache earlier this year and continues to work on L.B.O.s and managing portfolio companies.

CLASS ISSUE: From Ann Arbor, Mich., Paul Judge reports that his wife, Jody, gave birth to their first child, Hannah Morgan, on May 12, and, as a result, they were prevented from making the scene at Reunions. Paul now works in the Detroit bureau of the N.Y. TIMES, reporting on automotive developments and other business news. Jody is a second-year resident at a large community hospital in Ann Arbor, doing internal medicine. Giving birth didn't stop Wendy Gerber Friedman from going back to Old Nassau for our tenth. Wendy and husband, Joe, had their second child, Samantha Tracey, on June 6, the Wed. before Reunions, but Wendy still managed to show up at the Class dinner on Sat. night.

Young Alumni Activities

PC OF MICHIGAN: Sat., Nov. 10: Princeton beats Yale in Ann Arbor. Fri., Dec. 14: Holiday Party 8 P.M. Call George Corser at 313-647-0054 for more information.

PCNY: Nov. 28: Night at comedy club—Stand Up, New York. For more info., contact Mary Ciepiel at 212-840-6400.

WHAT IS A YOUNG ALUMNUS?

A Young Alumnus is a member of one of the ten most recently graduated classes. Representing these young alumni are Young Alumni Committees, part of the over 125 regional alumni clubs, which sponsor social and cultural events. Additionally, your class has regional representatives and regional V.P.s to work with the local Princeton clubs. Further, the Alumni Council's Committee on Young Alumni and Undergraduates works with young alumni class and club officers to improve communication with each other and the University.

WHAT ELSE DO I NEED TO KNOW?

Whenever your address changes, contact Alumni Records immediately at 609-258-3114. If you have any other questions, call the Alumni Council at 609-258-3353. Lastly, Class dues are the only funds your Class has to cover its operating costs: newsletters, mailings, tailgates, Reunions, scholarships. Dues also pay for your subscription to PAW.

81

JEAN AMABLE TELL-JOHANN
50 Riverside Dr., #9F
New York, NY 10024

Frank Packard writes: "Drexel sank but I did not. I was based in the Tokyo branch of Drexel Burnham Lambert when the company went bankrupt. Now I am at Chase Manhattan Bank in Tokyo doing the same thing—mergers and acquisitions." Frank met his wife, Keiko Imai, in Tokyo. The couple was married on Apr. 22, 1989 in the University Chapel. Rob Buchanan was best man. Alumni from the Class of '23 to the Class of '89 were represented.

Rick Smith was married on Feb. 3, 1990 to Ann Jenemann (Miami Univ. of Ohio '82; master's, Ohio State '84). Rick is still living in Cincinnati, where he and Ann just bought their first house.

Princeton roommates Kathy Krettlar Hodge, Robin Bennett Osborne, and Jody McNeil Lewis lived together for three years at Princeton and it seems that they are still doing things together! Their children were all born within four months of each

Superstring Theorist

EDWARD WITTEN *76, a leading theoretical physicist and a former member of Princeton's physics department, was one of four scientists recently awarded a Fields Medal, the most coveted international award in mathematics. The medal, which is presented every four years by the International Congress of Mathematicians, is equivalent in prestige to a Nobel prize but carries no monetary reward.

The award recognizes Witten for his work on the theory of superstrings, hypothetical subatomic particles that, some physicists hope, may resolve some of the most baffling questions about the nature of matter and energy. In particular, this hypothesis promises to unite the four observed types of energy—electromagnetism, the weak and strong nuclear forces, and gravity—into a single unified theory, a task on which Einstein spent the last thirty years of his life.

The theory posits that, at the most basic level, all matter takes the form of superstrings, tiny strings of vibrating energy. If they exist, superstrings are thought to be unimaginably small—in relative size, a superstring would be to an atom what an atom is to the solar system. The prefix "super" refers not to size but to the "supersymmetry," or unity, of the four types of energy at the instant of the Big Bang, when the universe came into being some fifteen billion years ago.

Witten's father, Louis, a gravitational physicist, introduced him to science. At the time of his son's birth, in 1951, he was associate director of the Martin Marietta Research Laboratories, in Baltimore. "I always thought he was a smart kid," the elder Witten—now a professor of physics at the University of Cincinnati—told the Star-Ledger of Newark, New Jersey. "I used to talk to him on a fairly advanced level about abstract subjects when he was quite young, and he understood." In first grade, he spotted an error in an astronomy book his father had given him.

The prodigy maintained his interest in science through high school, but as an undergraduate at Brandeis University, he majored in history and thought about becoming a political journalist. In 1972, he campaigned for George McGovern, and later, he wrote articles for The Nation and The New Republic. For reasons he cannot fully explain, Witten found himself drawn again to physics and applied to Princeton's Graduate School. Despite the gaps in science and mathematics on his undergraduate transcript, the Department of Physics accepted him, and he went on to complete his work for a Ph.D. in just two years. He stayed on at Princeton as a member of the faculty, becoming a full professor at age twenty-eight. The MacArthur Foundation honored him with one of its coveted "genius awards," and an Alan T. Waterman [13 *16] Award from the National Science Foundation recognized him as one of the nation's leading young scientists. Three years ago, Witten left the university to accept a faculty appointment at the nearby Institute for Advanced Study, but he continues to work with his former colleagues in the physics department, a world center for superstring theory.

The potential of superstring theory to unite the forces of nature into a single coherent scheme has excited physicists like few other developments in their discipline. But much hard slogging remains. Superstrings still exist only in theory, and the energy required to observe them is far beyond the power of any particle accelerator that could ever be built. The task of Witten and other physicists is to refine the theory so that parts of it, at least, can be tested experimentally. Witten believes that this could take fifty years, and he is prepared to devote the rest of his life to the task. "I think it's going to be very interesting to see how the real world emerges from string theory," he told PAW several years ago. "Physics has rounded a bend, and we're at the beginning of a process whose end we can't imagine."

—J. I. Merritt '66

Ed Witten *76

PHOTO BY ROBERT P. MATTHEWS

other. Pictured (l-r) are Kathy with her daughter, Kelley (born Aug. 12, 1989), Robin with her son, Carry (born June 14, 1989), and Jody with her daughter, Gracie (born Oct. 27, 1989). The group is pictured at a mini-reunion held on June 16, 1990, which was also attended by Terry Osborne, Mary Munkenberg Bennett, Jay Bennett '79, and Eliza Bennett, Marv and Jay's two-year-old girl.

82 TERI DOOLEY KOGUT
12409 Sadler Lane
Bowie, MD 20715

Has anyone noticed the credits on CBS's "Top Cop"? If you had, you may have seen Susan Wagner's name listed as one of the series' consultants. She also has some say in USA's "Counterstrike," with Christopher Plummer. Last winter Susan's projects were NBC's "True Blue" and "A Family for Joe" (which unfortunately were canceled). Also working in the medium is Dave Williams. Dave left his job as V.P. of marketing for CNN to work as director of television programs for Disney in L.A.

If Susan or Dave ever needs legal advice, maybe they can call on Sam Johnson in a couple of years. Sam is through "slugging it out" as a keyboardist in bars and clubs across the U.S. He says music was great fun but he's no George Michael. Now it's off to law school at Golden Gate Univ., where his interests are in public interest law and mass media.

Keep those wedding pictures coming in. Shown is the "Princeton picture" taken at Jeff Gluck's wedding to Carrie Freedman (B.U. '84) on Feb. 25, 1990, in Great Neck, N.Y. Pictured (l-r) are Michael Richman '85, Shmuel Weinberger (former faculty member), Michael Bayme '85, Mark Heiligman '81, Steven Weiss '83, Charles Walter, Sharon Lubash Rubin '83, Elaine Golden Robison ('06 or '07?) (who's barely visible), Carrie, Burt Rubin '84, Jeff, Shari Minkoff, Alan Minkoff '80, Paul Quintas '83. Also there but not seen is Stuart Gluck '70. Jeff is a professor in E.E.C.S. at the Univ. of Illinois and Carrie is an occupational therapist.

83 GAIL FRANCK
345 West 87th St., Apt. 3F
New York, NY 10024

Benjamin O'Sullivan Stearns was born to Susanne O'Sullivan Stearns and Steve Stearns '84 on July 19, 1990. He was only one day old when this photo was taken, and weighed in at nine pounds, one ounce, and 22 inches. The Stearns live in Dorchester, Mass.

Kari Dolan provided this quick update from Paris, where she is working as an environmental consultant of O.E.C.D., while taking time off from grad school at Berkeley: Natalie Bocock—third year at Yale law; Linda Riefler married Kit Boyatt; India Cutler is in N.Y.C. with a new business; Henry Fischer is in Palo Alto with a real estate company; and Kathryn Mitchell is at U.C.-Berkeley in a geography Ph.D. program. Francis Freeman married Sue Copley (Michigan '83) in Buffalo on June 9, 1990. "It was," he said, "a major party!"

Marc Gorelick writes that he is chief resident in pediatrics at Children's National Medical Center in Washington, D.C., and intends to go on to pediatric emergency medicine. Marc and his wife, Lynn Broadus '81, had their first child, Evan Alexander, in Dec. 1989. Lynn is an evolutionary biologist. Marc and Lynn recently attended the wedding of Fred Scialabba and Annette Schoeffel (Duke '82). Fred is doing a radiology residency at Mass. General. Other classmates at the wedding included John Briggs, Doug Elmendorf, Bob Zielinski, Dave Roberts, Magda James, and Maria Garrida.

84 TIMOTHY C. WU
Beacon Court, 175 Beacon St., Apt. 413
Somerville, MA 02143

WELL, IT STARTS LIKE THIS... David Hunt became engaged this fall to Noriko Suzuki, a graduate of Seishin Univ. of Tokyo. The couple met while in graduate school at U.Penn. Dave is currently working as an associate at the consulting firm of McKinsey & Co., while Noriko is director of intl. strategy and corporate planning for the venture capital company, Nambu Intl. A spring wedding is planned.

THEN, IT GOES ON LIKE THIS... John Torell married Margaret Johnson, a graduate of Randolph-Macon Woman's College, on Sept. 22 in Anniston, Ala. The couple live in N.Y.C., where John is an investment banker at Merrill Lynch, and Margaret recently completed a position as a legal assistant at the law firm of Shearman & Sterling.

AND BEFORE YOU KNOW IT, THIS STARTS HAPPENING... Amy Yerkes Johnson and her husband, Doug, are the proud parents of their second child. Reid Baldwin Johnson was born Sept. 15, and tipped the scales at an athletic eight pounds, nine ounces, and 21½ inches. Reid's older sister Emily was born just over a year earlier, on Aug. 13, 1989. The Johnsons are happily settled in Darien, Conn.

MEANWHILE, ELSEWHERE IN THE WORLD OF '84, KUDOS GO TO... Teresa Lane, who, as product manager for Perrier, found herself having to completely revise marketing strategies and sales and advertising programs, following the discovery of benzene in Perrier samples. Following the crisis, Perrier applauded Teresa for "product-and-project-champion style of leadership, to which many aspire and few achieve." And extremely belated kudos to Bonnie Crater Buja, who placed among the top ten women in the nation during the Natl. Short Track Speed Skating Competition held in L.A. in April. Congrats to all!

85 ROB JURANEK
1578 Oak Ave., Apt. 1
Evanston, IL 60201

THE SYMPHONY OF WEDDING BELLS: Who made off with the clapper during freshman week in 1980? Most agree it was Jake Smith. If so, then it was returned from Alabama and hasn't stopped ringing since in celebration of our Class's myriad weddings.

Princetonians pictured from the Aug. 4 marriage of Margaret Niemann and David Rost (St. Lawrence '82) are: Wendy Lang, Terri Suleski Vercillo, David and Margaret, Anne Lee '87, softball coach Cindy Cohen, Rachel Mann Cohen, and Michael Nelson.

On Aug. 26, Jennifer M. Brown married John Philip Irwin (Williams) in Muskegon, Mich. The following weekend Alexander Walter Joel married Hilary Ann Weston '84 in Summit, N.J. On Sept. 9, Caroline J. Brokaw and Robert S. Tucker (Middlebury) exchanged vows in Montpelier, Vt. And David Hal Bernstein wed Kimberly Ann Grillo (Central Conn. State) on Sept. 16 in Newfane, Vt. Congratulations and best wishes to all newlyweds.

Now your task will be to match Chalmer S. Taylor (officially Class of 1985—don't let him tell you otherwise) and his wife, Kathy, who recently announced the imminent arrival of their third child. It appears as if the Taylors are intent on harvesting a corps of youngsters who will inherit Palmer Stadium and secure our noble football tradition well into the next century. If they continue at their current pace, Kathy and Chal will have 24 children by our 40th reunion, enough to host both an offensive and defensive unit, with remainders for special teams. The challenge for the Class, then, is to get busy.

86 SALLIE KIM
2645 California St., #303
Mountain View, CA 94040

Kathryn Kemp-Griffin and Christian Kemp-Griffin sent in this photo of their wedding in 1989 in Kingston, Ontario, Canada. Pictured are (standing l-r): Ned Sparrow '87, Todd Laurence, Melissa Marks-Sparrow, Roberta Conner, Julia Boblen, Greg Jenko, James Fischer, Christian, Ben Webster, Kathryn, Hope Andersen, Brian MacFarlane, Scott Scharfman, Greg Gilbooly, Mike Denham, Don Miller, Martha Lemons '85, Dena Denham, Margaret Laus, Caroline Coleman, Nancy Margolis, and (kneeling) Rosa Hallowell, Mike Cragg, Clayton Lewis, Julia Hicks, Sarah Morrison '87. Christian and Kathryn are moving to Paris for two to five years.

Wedding bells also rang for Christine Barney and Ken Cook on Dec. 2, 1989, (pictured). Christine is a director of marketing for a mortgage services company and is working on a novel. Christine reports about guests at the wedding: Tracy Morgan has graduated from Harvard Business School and is working at DuPont. Penny Edgell Becker is still studying at the Univ. of Chicago. Steve Copes is in L.A. trying to break into screenwriting. Andy Lockhart lives and works in Brooklyn. Andy Bose works for G.E. in N.J. Tim Kastle (now Class of '89) is working in L.A. for a business supplies company. Krisbna Jain and Diane Brongo have been working on a prototype for an electric car.

87 MARY TAYLOR DENKO
1935 Seville St.
Santa Rosa, CA 95403

RANDOM MEETING IN JAPAN: Some '87ers and other Tigers bumped into each other last fall in a Tokyo nightclub. Pictured are (starting second from left)

Laurie Killackey, Jim Tucbler, Andy Rosen '86,

Nancy Easton '88, and Sbep Rogers. Jim reports that the night was great fun: the group ended their time at 5 a.m. in Tokyo's famous fish market. Also in Japan last year were Emily Thornton, a writer for the Japan Times, and Jon Guistein and Sue Finch, who were with Morgan Stanley. Jon has since started B-School at Harvard. Others new on the H.B.S. scene are Phil Hammarshjold and Suzanne Hamlin. Suzanne traveled to Europe last spring and visited Thanis Iliadis in Greece. Thanis hopes to take his world-class horses to the '92 Olympics. Suzanne was also an extra in a Sam Shepard movie shot in Athens. You'll recognize her if you look for a woman clad in orange and black.

Joe Hong writes that "life is a blast!" He took a break from work in the N.Y.C. area and went to the Caribbean with Dave Miller, Sharon Robines '88, Mike Edge, and Lizbeth Piel. Joe and Dave also ran the Long Island half-marathon, and Belinda Lob joined Joe for some hang gliding.

NEWS FROM MAINE: Eden Bowlby, living in Windham, married William Waldron Jr. in Sept. 1988. They are rebuilding their 150-yr. old house from the cellar up. James Cohen spent his summer in hometown Portland between his second and third years at Columbia Law.

88 CHRISTOPHER LU
206E Holden Green
Cambridge, MA 02138

WHAT A PARTY—Andy Jobanni and Cathy Kovac were married last spring in Columbus, Oh. No less than 38 Princetonians (including 23 from the Class of '88) attended the wedding. Andy writes, "Ten of the guys came from Princeton in a 'Bago.' My parents were bestowed much honor when they were requested to ride from the church to the reception in the mighty beast. My mother will never recover from her 30 minutes as a 'Bago Betty.'" Cathy is starting her Ph.D. in anthropology at Ohio State, and Andy is an engineer for Turner Construction.

AND ANOTHER—Marc Fagel writes that he and Julie Lubetkin were recently engaged and plan to marry next Sept. Julie is a first-year student at Harvard Business School, after working at Booz Allen in N.Y. for two years, and Marc is in his third year at Univ. of Chicago Law School.

HELPING HAND—Connie Betterton was profiled in the PRINCETON WEEKLY BULLETIN for her work with the homeless. Recently appointed to the Lawrence Township Mayor's Task Force on the Homeless, Connie volunteers her time at the Crisis Ministry's program to provide one solid meal a day to the area's homeless. Connie is an assistant director of admission at Princeton.

REMINDER—Please send in your Class dues if you haven't already done so. The dues not only pay for your PAW subscription but also fund Class activities, including our fifth reunion.

89

DAVID MILLER
4698 S. 36th St.
Arlington, VA 22206

Ted O'Neal (standing, 10th from left) was married Aug. 12, 1990, to Tracy Leonardo '90 (11th from left) in Northport, N.Y. Among the 26 Princetonians in attendance were '89ers: Christa D'Alimonte (6th from left), Ellen Friedman (7th), Nancy Friedman (9th), Jane Hunter (12th), Dina Castiellucci-Flitban (kneeling, 3rd from left), and Amy Carro (kneeling, 4th). This fall, Ted entered S.M.U. Law School in Dallas, having worked for a year at a law firm in Spokane, Wash. Nancy is a second-year law student at Harvard. Jane is moving to L.A. to open a new office for her public relations firm. Christa is a first-year law student at Georgetown Univ.

KONNICHITA: Anna Verdi and John Macintosh send greetings from Japan, where they both finished their first year as systems analysts for Impex, Ltd., in Tokyo. John and Anna share the current record for longest distance traveled to attend an '89 reunion, and report

"it was well worth the time, money, and effort."

Seth Cameron is pictured here from last spring learning "parapente," a "hybrid of mountain climbing and hang-gliding." Seth is hoping to finish his master's in optical sciences at the Univ. of Arizona by Dec.

90

BRETT GOODMAN
22 Berkeley Terrace
Livingston, NJ 07039

Part of being a Princeton alum is getting together with Princeton friends, and that's where regional V.P.s come in. These folks have generously volunteered their time and enthusiasm to organize Class events all over the country and world. Following is a list of those who have signed on to help: Boston—Paul Ringel, 617-876-9179; Conn.—Dave Phillips, 914-698-6816; England—Howard West, 011-44-0223-333572; Fla.—Jon Gerber, 904-371-7063; Lynn Mannarino, 305-667-9928; France—Brian Keare, 331-40290431; Germany/Austria/Switzerland—Garrett Duarte, 49-8821-750838; Houston—Mark Herzfeld, 713-286-0216; L.A.—Shane Brooks, 714-593-5028; Mich.—Eric Boyd, 313-763-1619; Minn.—Maia Battin, 612-935-9644; N.J.—Jim Armstrong, 201-461-9225; N.Y.—Paul Biddinger, 212-481-0166; Nick Franklin, 212-580-1720; Christine Larson, 212-749-6881; Karla Usalis, 212-786-1026; N.C.—Pavan Heard, 919-419-0236; Penn.—Jawabhar Nayak, number T.B.A.; Philadelphia—Mamta Khandekwal, 215-573-4365; D.C.—Lori Jo Smith, 703-378-2955; and West Africa—Joe Gersman, no number!

We are still looking for lots of classmates to step forward and get involved. If interested, contact Brett as soon as possible. Sometime in the next few weeks, your regional V.P. should be contacting you about an event in your area. Finally, a word about this column—contribute to it! Please send me updated news about you or your friends, and send bright, interesting pictures as well.

91

BECKY JOHNSON
152 Little Hall
Princeton University Campus

The Class of 1991 officers, elected last spring, are President Stephan Roche, V.P. Marco Sorani, Secretary/Treasurer Becky Johnson, and Class Delegates Ann Boulis, Greg Dicum, and Sanjay Patel. The officers, along with a steering committee of sixty members, have some great ideas for events to make our senior year outstanding and unforgettable.

GS

VINCE G. HENSHAW JR. '45
1573 Kirkley Rd.
Columbus, OH 43221

*01-*59

ECONOMICS: David A. Bridewell '32 reminds us that he became a lawyer rather than an economist, and has practiced law in Chicago since 1940. In addition to a busy practice, David writes, "I was, for 15 years, a lecturer in business law at Northwestern Univ. and have written four books on legal subjects. Recently, I was elected chairman of the senior lawyers' committee of the Chicago Bar Assn. and a member of the Council of the Senior Lawyers Division of the American Bar Assn., and have served as moderator of a number of seminars on "Planning for Retirement" of those assns." To David go our heartiest congratulations for having served 50 distinguished years as a lawyer. And we learn from SELECTED REFERENCES, INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS SECTION, Mar. 1989: "In recognition of Richard A. Lester's ('36) distinguished service to the Industrial Relations Section, we are pleased to announce the establishment of a prize for the outstanding book in industrial relations and labor economics. This year's winner of the Richard A. Lester Award is John P. Hoert for AND THE WOLF FINALLY CAME: THE DECLINE OF THE AMERICAN STEEL INDUSTRY." Our heartiest congratulations also go to Richard! Meanwhile, from Claremont, Calif., Randall Hinsbaw '44 tells us, "My wife and I drove in May (1989) from Claremont to Montreal, where I delivered a paper at a McGill Univ. Conference on 'Global Disequilibrium.' I have recently received a foundation grant to stage the 11th symposium in the 'Bologna-Claremont' series of monetary conferences, which began in Princeton in 1967. The symposium is scheduled to take place in Claremont in late Jan. 1991." And, as Matthew A. Kelly '46 relates it, "Continue to teach, as Cornell Univ. professor emeritus, a graduate course in labor relations and one in arbitration in the Cornell/Baruch joint M.S.I.L.R. graduate degree program." Likewise, we learn that Norman B. Ryder '51 retired from Princeton in June 1989 and that he will continue to do demographic research in Princeton. Last year Norm received two honors. In the spring, the Univ. of Wisc. named an endowed professorship for him, and, in the fall, the Free Univ. of Brussels gave him an honorary doctorate in demography. Our heartiest congratulations to Norm! Meanwhile, Walter P. Blass '52 says that his teaching of M.B.A.s at Fordham Univ. ended last spring (1990), but that he will continue to lecture at French and Swiss universities. Besides that, he writes, "my strategic planning consulting practice continues unabated. Retiring early from A.T. & T. in 1985 was the best thing I could have done." And from Warwick, R.I., Will E. (Bill) Mason '52 writes: "As members of the Economics Delegation to the Soviet Union, sponsored by the People-to-People Citizens Ambassador Program, my wife and I spent two weeks last Aug. (1989) in Moscow, Kiev, and Leningrad, conferring with cabinet ministers, their deputies, and advisers at the natl. and republic levels. We shared their hopes for perestroika, but not their optimism about how quickly it could manifest the expected results."

Finally, Lionel W. McKenzie '56 writes, "My retirement dinner was held in May 1989. There were many leading economic theorists present (Harvard, Yale, [and 20 other schools]), but no Princeton!" A prophet is not without honor . . .

GS

CHRISTOPHER KEANE '86
31183 Lakemont Dr.
San Ramon, CA 94583

*76-*90

BIOLOGY: Donna Bozzone '83, currently asst. prof. of biology at St. Michael's College, Colchester, Vt., was presented a faculty appreciation award in May by the graduating class of 1990. She helped create and teaches in the college's innovative freshman studies program, and is a member of the campus culture committee. We also hear that Terry Root '87 has had her book ATLAS OF WINTERING NORTH AMERICAN BIRDS: AN ANALYSIS OF CHRISTMAS BIRD COUNT DATA published by the Univ. of Chicago Press.

ECONOMICS: Rev. John J. Piderit '79, S.J., assumed the position of V.P. of Marquette Univ. effective Aug. 15, 1990. Previously, he had served as associate professor of economics as well as faculty member in residence and master of Queen's Court residential college at Fordham Univ.

GERMANIC LANGUAGES AND LITERATURES: James A. Rusbing Jr. has been named asst. prof. of German at Rutgers Univ.—Camden. Previously, he had taught at Texas Tech. Univ. and Princeton. He has also been a Fulbright scholar, studying in Germany. Worcester Polytechnic Inst. recently announced the appointment of David B. Dollenmayer '77 as assoc. prof. in the humanities dept. Since 1988, he had been a visiting asst. prof. at W.P.I. Previously he had taught at Middlebury, Smith, and M.I.T. He has also studied in Germany under a Fulbright-Hayes fellowship.

MATHEMATICS: Frank Morgan '77 writes that "he has been enjoying his years as chairman of the Williams College mathematics dept." he is currently spending a year on sabbatical at the Inst. for Advanced Study.

PHILOSOPHY: Gregory George Harding '84 is currently visiting asst. prof. of philosophy at Carleton College, and has been an asst. prof. of philosophy at Chapman College. He has also taught in Singapore and Indonesia.

PHYSICS: Mark B. Schneider '83, currently asst. prof. of physics at Grinnell College, has been awarded an additional grant from the N.S.F. to augment his ongoing studies of the weak interaction. Prior to joining the Grinnell faculty in 1987, he was a lecturer, visiting asst. prof., and visiting research associate at U.N.C., and the Triangle Univ. Nuclear Laboratory.

POLITICS: Alvin Felzenberg '78 has been senior deputy chairman of the Natl. Endowment for the Arts since Feb. 1, 1990. Previously, he had served since 1982 as asst. secretary of state for N.J., where he played a significant role in increasing the state's support for the arts by 800% from 1982 to 1988. He also spent the fall, 1989, semester at Princeton as a visiting lecturer in the Politics dept.

SOCIOLOGY: Carol J. Auster '84, currently associate prof. and chair of the sociology dept. at Franklin and Marshall, has been elected second V.P. of the American Assn. of University Professors (A.A.U.P.) for a two-year term. She has served the A.A.U.P. in a number of other capacities in recent years. Robert Nelson Hill '73 reports that he is on loan from Chevron Oil Corp. to the Saudi Arabian Natl. Oil Co. and is living in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia.

Percy H. Buchanan '17

PERCY BUCHANAN died of pneumonia Sept. 8, 1990. He was born in Elizabeth, N.J., lived in or near Elizabeth his whole life, and graduated from Pingry School there. At Princeton he was a member of Campus, and roomed with Al Behrer. Senior year he was voted one of the wittiest in the Class. He served in WWI as first lieutenant, Infantry, and in WWII as a major, Air Corp. From 1919 until retirement in 1961, except for a brief period with Chevrolet Motor Co., he worked in N.Y.C. as an investment banker and security analyst with Guaranty Trust Co., Lazard Freres, General American Investors Co., and Morgan Stanley, where he was director of the research dept. when he retired. He was a director of the N.Y. Society of Security Analysts. He was also a trustee of Pingry School, Janet Memorial Home, Elizabeth, and Eastern Union County Red Cross. He was secretary of the Class, and his notes in the RAW were always a joy to read. He was Class president for five years.

We have lost a very dear friend. He is survived by a son, Peter, of Madison, N.J., and two grandsons, to whom we send our deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1917

Stacy G. Fine '17

STACY FINE died Feb. 11, 1990, in Trenton, N.J. He was born in Trenton Mar. 16, 1895, and lived there all his life. He attended Trenton High School and at Princeton lived off campus all four years in his uncle's home in Princeton. In WWI he served in the U.S. Naval Reserve from Oct. 1917 until Jan. 1919. He immediately went to work for the N.J. State Highway Dept., where he was occupied in civil engineering and clerical duties until he retired in July 1958. He stated that during retirement his "interests, aside from family, have been music, electronics, and reading, especially history and biography."

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Philip Holcombe, and a son, Robert, to whom we send our sympathy.

The Class of 1917

Mortimer Edgerton Newcomb Jr. '29

EDGE DIED Sept. 8, 1990. He had prepared for college at Westfield High School. At Princeton he played lacrosse and was on the pistol team, band, glee club, and Theatre Intime.

Edge started working in a family business, then changed to Gimbel's and later Saks. He received a master's in 1933 from N.Y.U.'s school of retailing, then went to Marshall Field as inventory controller. In 1938 he became controller for Colonial Drapery Fabrics, and after two years went to Moore Business Forms. His work in methods engineering took him to Bell Aircraft and the Carborundum Co.; and then he went into data processing and systems analysis for the U.S. Navy. He thought of retiring in 1982, but the Navy wanted Edge to take over direction of a project in Kuwait. Edge's fine bass voice took him into choral singing, and he was active in the Westfield community players. He traveled extensively. He was an officer of the Camp Hill area chapter of A.A.R.P., and was active in the Presbyterian Church of Camp Hill. Cruising was a favorite sport.

In 1938 Edge married Kathryn Taylor, and she survives, as do their two children: Peter, and Mary N. Parker. The Class extends sincere sympathy to Edge's family.

The Class of 1929

Lucius H. Bingham Jr. '33

LOU BINGHAM, who had moved to Honolulu many years ago, died there May 19, 1990. A memorial service was held at the Atherton Chapel.

Lou was born in Portland, Me., Sept. 16, 1911. He later lived in N.Y.C. He prepared at Bordentown Military Inst. In college he was on the electrical board of the Theatre Intime.

In 1938, Lou joined Hawaiian Gas Products, Ltd., now known as Gaspro, as a chemical engineer. He later became president, and retired in 1978 as chairman.

Lou was a prominent citizen of Honolulu. He had served as president of the Pacific Club and the Navy League. He was a member of the Waialae Country Club, and had served as chairman of the Hawaiian Open. He was especially interested in the Salvation Army, and had been active in Princeton alumni affairs.

On Sept. 30, 1944, Lou married Betty Clark, who survives him, as do their three children, Anne Kreucher, Barbara Barte, and John K; and four grandchildren.

Because he lived so far away, we did not see as much of Lou as we would have liked. To Betty and the children, the Class of '33 expresses its sympathy.

The Class of 1933

George Harold Wegener '34

GEORGE (WEG) WEGENER, a longtime resident of Ridge-wood, N.J., until he moved to Va. in 1980 when he retired as national account executive in the packaging division of Podlatch Corp., died Aug. 11, 1990, in Leesburg, Va. He was with Podlatch for 16 years; earlier he worked in sales for several other packaging companies.

A witty and popular member of the Class, George never forgot his college days. "In my heart and mind," he wrote not long ago, "Princeton will always be the fall of 1930 through the spring of 1934—my time, my guys, my Princeton." In 1986 he won the admiration and gratitude of nearly 100 of the '34 family with the way he managed, with help from Kayo Lewis and Jack Palmer, our memorable mini-reunion in Williamsburg.

George's wife, Trudy (Salzmann), a friend of many in the Class, died of cancer in 1985, five years after they had moved to their retirement home in Virginia. He is survived by three daughters, Betty Ann Elliott, Gretchen Hull, and Merry Ellen Korpan; seven grandchildren, and one great-grandchild. To them we offer our sincerest sympathies.

The Class of 1934

Allen Partridge Burr '49

AL BURR passed away peacefully Jan. 27, 1990, at his home in East Orange, N.J., at age 64.

Born July 18, 1925 in Jersey City, Al attended East Orange High School where he was on the varsity tennis team and participated in dramatic and glee club activities. Following high school, he served in the Army from Sept. 1943 to Nov. 1945 as an Infantry sergeant in the E.T.O. At Princeton Al majored in history, graduating with high honors, and was a member of Quadrangle. He was president of the Nassoons, vocalist with the Princeton Tigers Dance Band, a member of Triangle Club, and worked on a number of Student Aid squads.

Al began a lifetime career in personnel administration and executive search in 1953 with the California-Texas Oil Co. in their N.Y. office. That same year he married Elizabeth Claire Yeomans, but they divorced some 20 years later. During those years Al became director of personnel services for George Fry & Associates, management consultants, later a partner in Burr, Lucey & Co., Burr, Dowd & Associates, and principal of International Management Advisers, Inc.

Al is survived by a sister, Esther Burr, and a brother, Robert Burr. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to them on losing their brother.

The Class of 1949

Raymond Hayden Compton '49

THE CLASS lost one of its most dedicated members when Ray Compton died of cancer, Sunday, Aug. 12, 1990, at his home in Woodstock, Vt.

Ray was born in Elizabeth, N.J., July 12, 1927, and prepared for college at Pingry, where he was actively involved with the school publications, student government, and the dramatics club. Following a stint in the Army, Ray entered Princeton, where he majored in politics and was a member of Elm. Leaving Princeton, he took up a career as a writer, living in Greenwich Village, N.Y.C., and after three years moved on to printing sales. This led him to the buyer's side of the desk at Carter-Wallace, Inc., where he enjoyed a 33-year career, recently as V.P. of materials management.

A resident of both Pennington and Plainsboro, N.J., Ray served on the board of the N.J. Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Assn., and was a member of the Princeton Club of N.Y. He was a most loyal classmate, and served '49 on its executive committee and as chairman of our major 25th reunion. He was president of the board of trustees of Elm Club 1978-87.

We extend our deepest sympathy to Ray's survivors, his wife, Patricia Carroll Compton; their daughter, Ann-ette, and his brother, George Jr. '45.

Ray's wish is that any memorial contributions be sent to St. Mark's in the Bowery, Second Ave. and 10th St., New York, NY 10003.

The Class of 1949

Rowland Holbrooke Smith Bedell '56

AN OPHTHALMOLOGIST and an aviation enthusiast, Rowland H. S. Bedell died of a heart attack April 4, 1990, in Bethesda, Md. A native of N.Y., Rowland came to Princeton from Choate. He majored in biology, managed the lightweight crew, and joined Dial.

Rowlie graduated from Cornell medical school in 1960 and served his residency at Georgetown Univ. Hospital. A licensed pilot since he was 16, he worked summers during med school as a pilot with Northeast Airlines. A major in the Army Natl. Guard Medical Corps, Rowlie was chief of the accident prevention branch of the Federal Aviation Administration 1965-70 and later headed the F.A.A.'s occupational health branch. He maintained a private practice in ophthalmology in Bethesda from 1975 to the time of his death and visited Princeton frequently. Rowlie was a member of the Flying Physicians Assn.; as a certified flight instructor he taught his sons to fly.

Rowland was married for 33 years to the former Julie Claire Huck. To Julie and their four children, Catherine, William, Rowland, Jr., and Peter, the Class extends its sympathy for their untimely loss.

The Class of 1956

Frank McCormick Nesbitt '63

FRANK DIED of cancer July 15, 1990, at his home in Upper Marlboro, Md. An Emmy-winning filmmaker who had produced documentaries for Natl. Geographic and the Public Broadcasting Service, he covered subjects ranging from the environment to the economy.

Some of the best work of his life came toward the end, when he chose to keep working, despite the obstacles posed by his illness. Frank's last program, a show on coastal pollution for the Geographic and Natl. Audubon societies, narrated by actor Ted Danson, will air on PBS stations this fall.

Born Jan. 29, 1942, Frank grew up in Minneapolis (his father was the late Samuel Nesbitt '31), attended Portsmouth Priory, and majored in history at Princeton. He was a jazz disk jockey on WPRB and ate at Terrace. A classmate characterized him as one who "just loved life," was extremely bright, and was ahead of his time in his concern for the environment.

After Army service in South Korea, Frank became a news cameraman at TV stations in Washington and Philadelphia, then worked at the Educational Film Center in Annapole, Md., until he became a freelance cinematographer in 1978. His 1989 PBS documentary on New Deal architect Harry Hopkins was narrated by Walter Cronkite and won several awards. A 1986 special on the economy won a Chris award at the Columbus (Ohio) Film Festival.

The Class extends its deepest sympathy to his wife, Sandy; two sons, Andrew (7), and Graham (2½), a brother, Samuel Jr., and sister, Marie.

The Class of 1963

A high-contrast, black and white aerial photograph of Manhattan, New York. The image shows the dense grid of streets and buildings, with Central Park visible as a large, dark, irregularly shaped area in the center. The Hudson River is on the left, and the East River is on the right. The overall tone is gritty and urban.

ABSOLUT MANHATTAN.

TO SEND A GIFT OF ABSOLUT VODKA (EXCEPT WHERE PROHIBITED BY LAW) CALL 1-800-243-3787.
PRODUCT OF SWEDEN. 40 AND 50% ALC/VOL (80 AND 100 PROOF). 100% GRAIN NEUTRAL SPIRITS. © 1989 CARILLON IMPORTERS LTD., TEANECK, N.J.

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

November 21, 1990

FROM FILE CARD TO DATABASE

The Princeton University Lamp In Hand Cast Bronze

An exclusive offer to University Alumni

The enduring beauty of bronze. A stately reminder of the tradition and excellence that mark the heritage of the University. The Princeton University Lamp, crafted of hand-cast, lacquered bronze by a respected American founder, is a symbol of these fine qualities and of your achievement.

Offered by Alumni Unlimited, the Princeton University Lamp weighs 7 lbs., stands 27" high and features a detailed bronze re-creation of the University Seal on its base. The Belgian Linen shade — a fully fabric-lined, piped, cut-corner square design, available in Antique White and Natural Linen — is manufactured by Roseart, one of America's finest shade houses. A high/low socket offers the convenience of two-way illumination with any standard single-wattage bulb.

The bronze Princeton University Lamp can be yours for $250.00 (includes shipping & handling).

Order today.
Enjoy it for a lifetime.

To order, call toll-free
1-800-800-6989.
Mastercard, Visa accepted.
Or order by mail.
PA residents include 6% sales tax.
Send check or money order payable to:
Alumni Unlimited
300 E. Market St.
Hellam, PA 17406

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

CONTINUING THE ALUMNI PRINCETONIAN, FOUNDED IN 1894

FEATURE

9 FROM SLIP TO CHIP

How Evolving Techniques of Information Gathering, Storage, And Retrieval Have Shaped The Way We Do Mental Work
by Edward Tenner '65

DEPARTMENTS

3 LETTERS

5 PRINCETON NOTEBOOK

Tiger Inn Remains All-Male; Fusion Lab Nears "Break-Even"

8 ON THE CAMPUS

Craving the Consummate Cheesesteak, Students Head for Hoagie Haven
by Matthew T. Henshon '91

15 BOOKS

16 SPORTS

Football Falls to Columbia but Beats Penn; Men's Soccer Thrives on Tough Schedule

23 CLASS NOTES

38 MEMORIALS

39 FIRST PERSON

Diversity and the Primitive Peoples of New Guinea
by Lynn Heller '88

On the Cover

The file cabinet was one innovation of the nineteenth century's information revolution. Our story on the evolution of data management begins on page 9.

Professor of History Walter P. "Buzzer" Hall attracted seven hundred students and faculty members to his final lecture, presented in Alexander Hall in the spring of 1952. Renowned for his course on modern European history and consistently voted Princeton's most popular teacher throughout his thirty-nine-year career, Hall advised his listeners to put up "a good scrap" against tyranny—"and do it with a merry heart."

PHOTO BY ALAN W. RICHARDS

J. I. MERRITT '66, Editor

ANDREW C. MYTELKA '85, Managing Editor
NUALA O'CONNOR '89, Assistant Editor
STACY M. WISZOLA, Art Director
NANCY S. MACMILLAN, Business Manager
LOLLY O'BRIEN, Advertising Director
R. T. HOWELL, Production Manager
LORRAINE DOMEKER, Graphic Assistant

BOARD OF EDITORIAL DIRECTION

EDWARD R. WEIDLEN '68, Chairman
LEA B. BELKIN GELB '82 • CHRISTOPHER V. CONNELL '71
LONDON Y. JONES '66 • ELLIOTT D. LEE '74
PATRICIA H. MARKS '72 • JOHN A. MCPHIE '53

PUBLICATION BOARD

DOROTHY L. BEDFORD '78, Chairman
ROBERT K. DIKKEE '69 • ROBY HARRINGTON III '51
WALTER H. LIPPINCOTT, JR. '60 • PETER O. PRICE '62
PETER G. SMITH '46 • DANIEL N. WHITE '65

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE

ROBERT F. SINNOTT, JR.
Ivy League Magazine Network
254 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001 • (212) 684-5603

LOCAL ADVERTISING/PRINCETON EXCHANGE

LOLLY O'BRIEN (609) 258-4886

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is an independent magazine supported by alumni class subscriptions and by paid advertising. Its purpose is to record news of the alumni and at the same time to review without partiality the achievements and problems of the administration, the faculty, and the student body of Princeton University. The views expressed in the Alumni Weekly are those of signed contributors or the editor and do not necessarily represent official positions of the university.

PUBLISHED BY

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540
Telephone (609) 258-4885

TWX 510-685-2306 UNIV PRESS PRIN • FAX (609) 258-6305

ELECTRONIC PAW BBS: (609) 258-3602

Materials can be transmitted to our offices via telecommunications, using the upload facility in the file-transfer section of the Electronic PAW computer bulletin board system. Its protocols are 300/1200/2400 baud, eight data bits, one stop bit, and no parity. It is online 24 hours a day.

PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY (ISSN 0149-9270)

Vol. 91, No. 5, November 21, 1990

Printed by William Byrd Press, Richmond, Va. Annual subscription $19.50 (foreign postage $5 extra); single copies $1.50. All orders must be paid in advance. Copyright © 1990 Princeton University Press. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Second-class postage paid at Richmond, Va., and at additional mailing office.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to PAW Address Changes, 3175 Princeton Pike, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

Geology and River Running

Exploring the Grand Canyon

June 29-July 7, 1991

*"The relief from danger,
and the joy of success, are great...
The river rolls by us in silent majesty;
the quiet of the camp is sweet;
our joy is almost ecstasy."*

John Wesley Powell, August 29, 1869

No other place in the world displays such an elaborate and profound record of Earth events as the Grand Canyon. In a single glance the visitor can see how the Earth's crust has been built up from rocks 4,000,000,000 years old, and how it has been torn down, cut and eroded a mile deep. Our Alumni College, June 29-July 7, 1991, will raft the Colorado River and explore the Earth history of this awesome geologic work of art. We will study how the canyon formed, how it has survived, and what is happening to it now.

With expert river guides steeped in the lore of the Colorado, we will run 225 miles through the heart of the Grand Canyon in six days, traversing 19 rapids enroute. We will hold precepts in the hidden side canyons and on the sandy beaches that we encounter. We will camp under the stars and enjoy the peace and solitude of nighttime in northwestern Arizona. No prior camping or rafting experience is necessary — both novice and seasoned campers can enjoy this wilderness study adventure.

The Director of the Alumni College will be Bill Bonini '48, George J. Magee Professor of Geophysics and Geological Engineering who has led many colleges on geology at Red Lodge, Montana. Joining him are Sheldon Judson '40, Knox Taylor Professor of Geology and Engineering, Emeritus, and Joe Nadeau, Professor of Geology at Rider College.

Don't Delay. Enrollment is limited (28). Tuition is $1895; it includes all meals (except the final day in Las Vegas); lodging; ground, river, and air transportation from Las Vegas to the river and return.

Please return this form to the Alumni Council, Box 291, Princeton University, Princeton, New Jersey 08544-0291 (Telephone: 609-258-5854; fax: 609-258-1281)

Geology and River Running: Exploring the Grand Canyon June 29-July 7, 1991

Name(s) _____

Address _____

Telephone (day) _____ (evening) _____ Princeton class or affiliation _____

Please reserve _____ places ☐ Single ☐ Double ☐ Please send additional information

I enclose a check payable to Princeton University for $ _____ ($100 per person deposit).

ALUMNI COLLEGE

"Learning is the enterprise of a lifetime." —Woodrow Wilson, Class of 1879

Alumni Children

Charles F. Huber '51, whose letter on admissions policy concerning alumni children appeared in the October 10 PAW, is entitled to his opinion, but I dispute the statistics he marshals to support his case. The Freshman Herald for the Class of 1946 listed all members of the class who were sons of alumni; approximately 19 percent were in this category. Contrary to Mr. Huber's assertion, I seriously doubt if the Class of 1951 had twice that percentage of alumni sons. The percentage of alumni offspring in my son's Class of 1987 was about 17 percent. It would appear, therefore, that the percentage of alumni offspring has not changed greatly over the years. Let's stick to the facts and not fantasy.

DONALD H. BALLEISEN '46
Louisville, Ky.

Eyes for the Blind

I was delighted with Peter B. Putnam '42 '50's article on Recording for the Blind, "Breaking the Sight Barrier" (PAW, October 10).

Some twenty years ago, I began recording for R.F.B. in Palo Alto, California. Because of my medical background, I was assigned to read medical textbooks—I was apparently the only reader who could pronounce the likes of Tsutsugamushi fever without hesitation. The job also included the difficult task of describing all photographs, charts, and anatomical drawings. I read other types of materials, too. Sometimes, it was frustrating to complete all but the last few chapters of an absorbing novel, then, at my next recording session, to find that they had been assigned to someone else! But I took comfort in the knowledge that the purpose of this reading was not my own pleasure but assistance to students fulfilling their course requirements.

Now, after many years of this kind of volunteer work and hundreds of hours of reading in soundproof booths, I am gratified to know that the time I expended not only helped to further the careers of others but also validated my Princeton experience.

DONALD M. TRAEGER '53, M.D.
Carmel, Ind.

Eric Rogers

Your obituary on Eric M. Rogers (Notebook, November 7) made me recall this much-beloved and sometimes feared professor of physics, through whose course many premedical students passed in the 1950s and 1960s. Along with biology professor Colin S. Pittendrigh and chemistry professor Hubert N. Alyea '24 '28, Rogers made the two underclass years of premed work stimulating and interesting rather than a tedious grind. His lectures were well-orchestrated demonstrations. He was a remarkable teacher who forced students to think through the principles of physics rather than learning them by rote. I vividly recall his jeremiad on the morning the Russians launched Sputnik. He damned the American press for belittling this achievement and scrapped his planned lecture to give a fully illustrated presentation on satellite orbits. The demand for "relevance" in the classroom was never heard when Eric Rogers lectured. Like many of Princeton's faculty members, he was a remarkable and gifted educator who energized his lecture-demonstrations with a unique vitality.

MASON I. LOWANCE, JR. '60
Amherst, Mass.

Books to the Gulf

The current national drive to send books to our forces in the Middle East stirs one of my favorite Princeton memories. In 1943, when many of us

"The Smile Of God Is Victory" Whittier

- Harry Weber's (class of '64) sculpture, as commissioned by a class of '71 Salisbury School Crew Team member, captures the exhilaration and camaradery of the rowing victory.
- Weber is internationally known for his sporting sculptures filled with movement and life. Harry's works derive primarily from his years as a horseman and Master of Foxhounds with the Bridlespur Hunt near St. Louis, Missouri.
- Manufactured in the "lost wax" process, this magnificent work in solid bronze, set on deep green marble and attached to a 4" walnut base measures 40" x 26" x 12" in height and weighs approximately 70 lbs.
- Each commission can be customized to match your school or rowing club's blade design.
- Limited edition: Twenty (20).
- Cost: $9,500. (includes hand delivery, please allow 6-8 weeks or call to place a rush order if you are contemplating a bronze for Christmas)
- A deposit of $2,500. is required to reserve your custom rowing bronze.
- Please call or write: "Team Pursuits" • c/o Bronze Fox Farm • P.O. Box 47 • Bowling Green, MO 63334 • (314) 324-5587.

Princeton by Robert Gambee

People who love Princeton will cherish this extraordinarily beautiful book. By far the most comprehensive, full-color portrait of Princeton ever published, it delights and astonishes on every page. 272 pp, 9 1/4" x 12", fully indexed, with an introduction by Robert F. Goheen. Newly reissued in hardcover at $34.95, or in paperbound at $19.95. Add $4.25 shipping; New Jersey residents add 7% tax.

the
PRINCETON
University Store

36 University Place, Princeton, NJ 08540

Call toll-free: From N.J., 1-800-624-4236

Elsewhere in the U.S., 1-800-631-0137

Charge my ☐ U-Store ☐ VISA ☐ MasterCard ☐ AmEx

Acct. # _____ Exp. Date _____

Name _____

Address _____

City/State/Zip _____

were in the service, the university wrote to us and offered to send us our choices from a long list of books. I think we could order up to three. They were hardcover books, and many were from the great Modern Library series. My earnest choices were Benjamin Franklin's autobiography, William James's The Varieties of Religious Experience, and Pascal's Pensées and The Provincial Letters. I guess I didn't know about P. G. Wodehouse yet. I still have those prized books.

Princeton's action was such a surprise and so appropriate. I was proud of the university.

PHILIP MURPHY '44
Cos Cob, Conn.

What's in a Name?

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is excellent, but I think you should name it properly. It's no longer a weekly, so why not call it the Princeton Alumni Magazine? Alumnae and women undergraduates singing about Princeton "boys" and "sons" is fog enough.

J. LYNDON SHANLEY '32 '37
Evanston, Ill.

EDITOR'S NOTE: It's true that PAW, which is published biweekly during most of the school year, ceased weekly publication in 1977. The current editor has also pondered the illogic of his magazine's title, and at a meeting of his editorial board last spring, he made the same suggestion as Mr. Shanley. The board opted for tradition. The title is indeed an anachronism—whether charming or ridiculous is in the eyes of the beholder—but it's not likely to change. The Princeton Alumni Magazine, of course, would have an acronym similar to those of the Brown Alumni Magazine (BAM), the Dartmouth Alumni Magazine (DAM), and the Yale Alumni Magazine (YAM). Think of the letters we'd get if PAW became PAM.

PAW's New Look

Shame on you! Your repugnant redesign of PAW has taken a simple and elegant magazine and turned it into a black-lined horror, full of the most aesthetically displeasing typefaces this former publishing person has ever seen. And as for the boxed and shrunken logo—there are no words to describe this abomination!

DALTON DELAN '76
Westport, Conn.

Congratulations on the new format and style. PAW is much more readable and enjoyable!

STEPHEN B. RICHER '68
Atlantic City, N.J.

Gay Yuppies?

The advertisement for the investment firm Nuveen, headlined "Now we know why GUPPIES eat their young" (PAW, October 10), is offensive. "Guppies" is a commonly used shorthand for "gay yuppies." Although guppies may have, as the ad states, "a rather unique way of handling the problems of parenthood," eating their young isn't it. Please drop the ad.

J. NEAL MOBLEY '84
Jacksonville, Fla.

Princeton

SUPPORT THE PRINCETON SPIRIT WITH TERVIS TUMBLERS

Mrs. John C. Winslow — President of Tervis Tumbler Company
Spouse — Class of 1934.

For a limited time only, the TERVIS TUMBLER COMPANY is offering sets of their famous tumblers carrying the Princeton insignia. Our double-wall G.E. Lexan insulation keeps drinks hot or cold longer, are microwave-able and dishwasher safe (top rack). The TERVIS TUMBLER quality construction is protected by an unconditional "LIFETIME GUARANTEE" against manufacturer defects. Don't wait...order your sets today while supplies last. Holiday shipments guaranteed in time for Christmas.

12 oz. set of 4 — $24.95 16 oz. set of 4 — $26.95

MASTERCARD AND VISA ACCEPTED.

TERVIS TUMBLER COMPANY

"Quality and design since 1949."

P.O. Box 917 • Osprey, FL 34229 • 1-800-237-6688

Tiger Inn Remains All-Male, Appeals to Supreme Court

As many as seventy-five protesters demonstrated outside Tiger Inn against the club's male-only admission policy on October 20, the same day members and alumni of T.I. celebrated its centennial.

PHOTO BY JON THOMPSON '93

REVERSING their decision of last spring, undergraduate members of Tiger Inn, Princeton's last all-male eating club, voted on October 9 to continue the club's gender-oriented admission policy. In a secret ballot, the members voted to bar women from T.I.'s next bicker, in February. Although the club's officers declined to release exact results, the vote against admitting women reportedly carried by a large majority; by contrast, last spring's decision in favor of coeducation passed by a margin of five votes. Tiger Inn's bylaws require that any change in the membership rules be approved by undergraduates in two consecutive academic years.

The vote contravenes the New Jersey Supreme Court's unanimous decision last July that requires Tiger Inn and Ivy Club to admit women. Unlike Tiger, Ivy in September held a fall bicker in which it admitted fifteen women. The state Supreme Court's ruling brought to a climax Sally B. Frank '80's eleven-year-old suit against Princeton's all-male clubs. A week prior to the undergraduate vote at Tiger Inn, the club's lawyer, Russel H. Beatie, Jr. '59, filed a petition with the United States Supreme Court appealing the judgment of New Jersey's top court. Frank, the State of New Jersey, and other interested parties have until the end of the year to file responses. If the Supreme Court has not heard (or agreed to hear) the case before Tiger Inn's February bicker, the club will be legally bound to admit women at that time, unless the nation's high court grants a stay of the state court's ruling.

The vote by Tiger Inn's undergraduate membership provoked criticism from various elements of the campus community. Thomas H. Wright, Jr. '62, a university vice-president and its general counsel, said he was "disappointed" by the decision. The Daily Princetonian editorialized against the vote, and 114 faculty members signed a petition that urged the club to change its policy.

The Women's Center and the ad hoc Organization for Coeducational Eating Clubs organized a protest outside Tiger Inn following the Harvard football game, on October 20. The hour-long demonstration, which coincided with a celebration of T.I.'s hundredth anniversary, was generally peaceful, although there were some sharp words between protesters and people enjoying the centennial festivities on Tiger Inn's front lawn. One T.I. supporter jostled a protester and tore up her sign. The picketers also carried placards expressing such sentiments as "Boys will be boys, but men should know better," "My father joined

STEWARDSON-DOUGHERTY
Real Estate Associates
 366 Nassau Street
 Princeton, N.J. 08540
 PHONE: 609-921-7784

ELEGANT FRENCH COUNTRY
TUDOR PRINCETON

Located in the heart of the Western Borough is a spectacular four bedroom house designed by Ralph Baughn. Recently updated with the finest materials in keeping with the integrity of the structure. $890,000

Robert Dougherty '50 Julie Douglas w/'41
 Paul Douglas '41 Betsy Stewardson Ford w/'54
 Georgia Graham w/'52 J. B. Smith '45
 Diane Unruh w/'70 Barbara Broad w/'38
 Betty McClelland w/'50 Judy Perrine s/'69

For no obligation—Information about real estate in the Princeton area call (609) 921-7784 or Out-side of New Jersey 1-800-542-0067.

REALTORS
 Representing Previews Executive Homesearch

ST. CROIX

Everything you expect from a vacation paradise.

Beaches, Tennis, Golf, Dining,
Entertainment, Shopping,
Relaxation

Ralph Locke Islands, Inc.
 P.O. Box #800
 Waccabuc, N.Y. 10597
 Toll Free Nationwide
 (800)-223-1108

The Buccaneer
 ST. CROIX, U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS

Smart stock move...

You bought the stock at 21... and gave it to Princeton at 43.

You deducted it at 43 (not 21)...
and avoided having to pay any capital gains tax.

You got more mileage for your gift money, even though the market's not at an all-time high.

For more information, call 609-258-3381
during business hours or write to Smart Gift, Box 46, Princeton, NJ 08544.

Annual Giving pays for quality at Princeton

TI—why can't I?" and "Why do your members need members?" At its peak, the demonstration attracted about seventy-five marchers, most of them undergraduate women. They concluded the protest by singing "Happy Birthday, Dear Sexists."

Fusion Lab Nears "Break-Even" Point, But Has Budget Cut

PHYSICISTS AT Princeton's Plasma Physics Laboratory, who have labored for decades in the quest to produce cost-effective energy from fusion reactions, are closing in on the elusive "break-even" point—when the amount of energy emitted in a fusion reaction equals the amount needed to start it. By extrapolating from the results of recent experiments with the Tokamak Fusion Test Reactor, P.P.P.L. researchers have demonstrated the feasibility of reaching the break-even range within three or four years.

These results were announced at a scientific conference in Washington, D.C., on October 1, but twelve days later, a joint appropriations committee of Congress recommended that the federal government spend 15 percent less on fusion research next year. Despite efforts by the university and other fusion advocates to have the funds restored, the House and Senate approved the committee's recommendation. The cuts will trim $50 million from the proposed national fusion budget of $324 million.

P.P.P.L., the nation's largest center for fusion research, has an annual budget of $96 million. The Department of Energy (D.O.E.) will now determine how this reduction will affect P.P.P.L. and other national fusion laboratories.

The experimental results announced at the Washington conference showed that a "Q" value—the ratio of fusion power to heating power—of .6 was possible with the existing Tokamak. Any result between .5 and 1 is considered within the range of breaking even. But Q values of 25 or 30 would be necessary for a fusion reactor to be economically viable, so not surprisingly, commercial applications of fusion technology are still perhaps a half-century off.

"Don't confuse 'break-even' with 'breakthrough,'" warns Anthony R. De-meo, Jr., of P.P.P.L. "But to have achieved these values has set a milestone for the project and indicates that we've made substantial progress. It gives us the green light to go ahead."

Because no ordinary material can withstand the temperatures generated in fusion reactions, the Tokamak employs a magnetic field to contain the reaction. Atoms of deuterium, a heavy isotope of hydrogen, are heated until they break down into a plasma, a mixture of free electrons and free nuclei. Contained in a vacuum by the magnetic field, the plasma is further heated. P.P.P.L. has achieved a world-record plasma temperature of four hundred million degrees Centigrade, but that's still not hot enough to initiate a self-sustaining fusion reaction.

A change in the fuel, however, could push the Tokamak past the break-even point, say the physicists. By switching from deuterium to a combination of deuterium and tritium, an even heavier hydrogen isotope, the researchers could produce a reaction three hundred times more powerful than they have now. Using deuterium fuel alone, the Tokamak generated a record fifty thousand watts of power.

But the real challenges lie ahead. The first deuterium-tritium tests are scheduled for 1993-94 and will be the last series of experiments using the old Tokamak reactor. Physicists hope that the new Compact Ignition Tokamak, scheduled for completion in 1998, will achieve Q values of at least 5, and perhaps more. The budget cut casts a shadow over the the C.I.T.'s schedule for construction, which was supposed to begin in 1993.

In the midst of this mix of good news and bad for P.P.P.L., a new director of the laboratory took over on November 1. He is Ronald W. C. Davidson '66, a former professor of physics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Davidson, who directed M.I.T.'s Plasma Fusion Center from 1978 to 1988, will be the Princeton laboratory's fourth director, succeeding Professor of Astrophysics Harold P. Furth. Prior to joining M.I.T.'s faculty, Davidson worked for two years in the D.O.E.'s Office of Fusion Energy. Born in Norwich, Ontario, he graduated from McMaster University in 1963 and was on the faculties of Berkeley and the University of Maryland before going to the D.O.E.

The new director's experience in both academia and the D.O.E. was a factor in his appointment. Provost Paul Benacer-raf '52 '60 notes that Davidson "understands from an insider's point of view the functioning of the government agency responsible for energy research and development in the United States."

The New Princeton Club of New York

Opening floor-by-floor throughout 1990

- Attractive, "clubbier" entrance lobby.
- 3 new dining rooms, each one unique.
- 9 restyled private dining rooms.
- 48 newly decorated bedrooms.
- Women's rooms added on all floors.
- Expanded alumni activities
- Plus: squash courts, fitness center, library, lounge, varied member events.

Join during our major renovation:

- save $250 entrance fee (will not be waived again).
- and get a free $100 dinner in the new Woodrow Wilson Room.

Call or write: Membership Secretary
The Princeton Club of New York
15 West 43rd Street, NY NY 10036
212-840-6400

Director of Health Services

Applications invited for board certified M.D. for Director of McCosh Health Center, a comprehensive AAAHC accredited primary care facility serving 7,000 male and female students and dependents. Administrative responsibilities include executive management of operations, including supervision of 85 professional and support staff.

Service units include: ambulatory care, inpatient service, reproductive health, counseling including alcohol/drug program and office for sexual harassment/assault, athletic medicine, occupational health and safety. Significant clinical experience and understanding of young adult contemporary health care, health education, and counseling issues along with proven administrative leadership skills.

Appointed Executive Officer of Princeton University. Twelve-month position with excellent benefits. Applications should be sent to: Thomas H. Wright, Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary, 318 Nassau Hall, Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 08544.

Equal Opportunity Employer M/F

Craving the Consummate Cheesesteak, Students Head for Hoagie Haven

PRACTICE WAS running late. As it finally ended, my thoughts turned to food, because I knew that my club stopped serving dinner at 7 P.M. Barely pausing to consider my dining options, I headed for Hoagie Haven. I arrived there at 7:46, and by 7:52 I was sitting outside, enjoying a fresh, hot hoagie on a fourteen-inch roll. (For the uninitiated, hoagies are torpedo-shaped sandwiches made of deli meats, cheeses, and a variety of vegetables; they're also known as submarines, heroes, or grinders.)

Hoagie Haven lies to the east of the main campus, about half a mile from Firestone Library along Nassau Street. Inside, the décor is a dirty institutional white, with exposed aluminum venting and a grimy linoleum floor. Make no mistake: this is an old-fashioned grill and deli. The store is split into two parts by the main counter. In the front, customers wait in line, order, briefly wait again, pay, and leave with their food; in the back, employees buzz with activity, frying meats, shredding lettuce, and assembling, wrapping, and bagging orders. You can eat inside (although there are no chairs), but few people do, especially when the weather is mild.

"The Haven," as undergraduates commonly refer to it, is a cultural phenomenon at Princeton. Despite a line that sometimes stretches out the door and its relatively distant location (a block further east than the Engineering Quadrangle), dozens of Princeton students make the fifteen-minute trek each day for a meal or a snack. Its most frequent customers from the university seem to be engineers—because of the E-Quad's proximity—and club members either dissatisfied with or tardy for their evening meals. In addition, a number of freshmen and sophomores venture to the Haven for relief from the mundane fare served up at the residential colleges.

The Haven's menu is straightforward: listed on four signs are the choices (most of them numbered) and the prices. On the menu are hot hoagies like veal parmigiana (#25), cold hoagies like roast beef (#8), unusual hoagies like Western omelette (#19), and unnumbered specialties like Greek souvlaki and fried chicken. To wash down your meal, the Haven offers four refrigerators full of beverages ranging from Pepsi, 7-Up, and Coke to Yoo-hoo chocolate drink, Soho vanilla cream soda, and Alet mineral water. Potato chips, pretzels, and desserts fill three stands, and there is a little-used cigarette machine in one corner.

ILLUSTRATION BY STACY M. WSZOLA

But there are dozens of eateries a short walk from the campus, offering the full spectrum of cuisines and prices. From Victor's Pizzeria to Burger King, from the Tempting Tiger to Cox's Market, Hoagie Haven has plenty of competition in Princeton's short-order marketplace. Why then does it inspire such fanatical loyalty from its undergraduate customers?

"A lot of food, really good, really cheap," answers Adam Steidley '93. Before he sets out for the Haven, he admits, he has to be in a "special mood"—a craving for a hoagie and a willingness to make the hike—but the unique taste of its bacon cheesesteak (#16) draws him thither once a week. Steidley can get a fourteen-inch hoagie and a Coke for less than five dollars.

Like Steidley, most Haven aficionados have a standard order, a sub they request every time. This order defines the Haven experience for them. Dave Curtis '92 always has a cheesesteak (#14) with lettuce, onions, ketchup, and mayonnaise. "In fact," he says, "I've never walked all the way out there and not ordered a cheesesteak with those toppings." Curtis reckons that he journeys to the Haven twice a week, but he has never wavered in his desire for the cheesesteak. "The potential opportunity cost of walking all the way there and then getting something that's not as good as a cheesesteak is just too high. I can't afford to take the chance."

A few regulars do experiment with different dishes. "I used to get hot pastрами (#26) with hot peppers," says Doug Trevor '92, "but I found that eating it took too much out of me. So now I usually get a cold meat like roast beef or turkey (#7)." Trevor also visits about twice a week.

But this sort of unflinching fidelity to the Haven seems limited to one gender. Few women students are Haven regulars, and most women I talked to said that they rarely eat there more than once a month. The Haven's proprietors claim that sales are split evenly between men and women, but among the university customers, who amount to perhaps 40 percent of the Haven's business, males outnumber females by three or four to one. Trevor concurs. "A lot of times," he says, "it's a male-bonding experience to walk out there with some guys, pick up some hoagies, and sit down and eat them on the steps in front of the bookstore [the Lamplighter Christian Bookstore]. In fact, I can't remember the last time I went there with a woman."

But even as a meal at the Haven has acquired a cult status in certain circles of students, two undergraduates may be rendering the whole expeditionary concept obsolete. In mid-October, B Williams '91 and Doug Anderson '91 started a service that delivers food from the Haven onto the campus. Their business has been a big success, averaging eighty deliveries per night. But there is still a core group of students who believe that the Hoagie Haven experience is not complete without the expedition. One told me that he bought a bicycle last summer "just so I could go to the Haven quickly." Another said that the first thing he does after arriving back in Princeton from a vacation is to go to his room, drop off his luggage, and say hello to his roommates; the second is to head to the Haven for a cheesesteak.

—Matthew T. Henshon '91

Matt Henshon plays on the varsity basketball team and is a twice-a-week regular at Hoagie Haven. He always has a cheesesteak with lettuce, salt, pepper, and oregano, and to drink, either milk or orange juice.

FROM

How Evolving Techniques of Information Gathering, Storage,

SLIP TO

and Retrieval Have Shaped the Way We Do Mental Work

CHIP

by Edward Tenner '65

WE USED TO THINK OF ELECTRONIC data processing as a substitute for paperwork. Now we know better. More often than not, an electronic file is merely a stage on the way to a printout, and by making hard copy cheaper and more convenient than ever, computers are ensuring that we generate more and more of it.

There is another side to paper's preeminence in managing information. It is the remarkable persistence of the folio—the sheet or slip of paper—in organizing mental work.

The designers of computer software, understanding the force of our habits, have returned again and again to that humble and ubiquitous rectangle, the file card. A brochure from Oberon Resources, of Columbus, Ohio, advertises the abilities of its text database program, Notebook II Plus, to store, sort, retrieve, and cross-reference note cards. The Wall Street Journal reports a new product called HyperPad, an I.B.M.-based version of the Macintosh software HyperCard: "Using images of cards and push buttons that can be drawn on screen, it can link files to create a Rolodex-like directory that one can 'flip' through." Three of the world's largest computer companies are litigating the right to use in their software a set of graphic symbols that feature file folders, sheets of paper with folded-back corners, and wastebaskets—a graphic user interface, as it is called.

It isn't surprising that a new medium should use the metaphors of the old; we still "drive" our automobiles, for example, long after the retirement of buggy whips. And that is just the point. Mental techniques, like transportation or manufacturing technology, grow on a framework. Many of the habits and skills crucial to the use of computers, whether in commerce or scholarship, rest on a paper-based revolution of the nineteenth century.

In 1948, at the dawn of the computer age, the architectural historian Sigfried Giedion wrote in Mechanization Takes Command: "The slow shaping of daily life is of equal importance to the explosions of history; for, in the anonymous life, the particles accumulate into an explosive force. Tools and objects are outgrowths of fundamental attitudes to the world. These attitudes set the course followed by thought and action. Every problem, every picture, every invention, is founded on a specific attitude, without which it would never have come into being."

The deeper the change, the more elusive the records sometimes are—especially when the shift involves the form of the records themselves. Fortunately, there is enough evidence, from counting houses and libraries alike, to draw the outlines of the change. Objects like desks and filing cabinets—and their manufacturers' claims—tell something about what people were thinking. The paperwork revolution may not have depended unconditionally on any nineteenth-century invention, but it flourished in league with industrializing societies and expanding economies. New processes for papermaking and paper finishing, for woodworking and metalworking, for high-speed printing, for duplicating outbound letters, and ultimately for typewriting brought down the cost of producing and storing paper records.

Still, the greatest changes were conceptual, not material. They reflected a new European and American way of working with data. It is not hard to understand because it is part of our lives. What takes more effort is to appreciate what the Old Information Regime was like. The attitudes that prevailed before about 1750 did not prevent experiments in the use of slips of paper—by Catholic churchmen, for example, monitoring parishioners in early-seventeenth-century France. But these techniques do not appear to have spread.

Objects like desks and filing cabinets—and their manufacturers' claims—tell something about what people were thinking.

LOOK AT SOME ILLUSTRATIONS of the paper environment of merchants, officials, and scholars from the late Middle Ages to the late eighteenth century. Of course they worked with individual documents—letters, bills of exchange, deeds, charters—and scrupulously preserved enough of them to support centuries of humanities dissertations. But more often than not, they kept their master records in bound books, usually recording events and transactions as they happened. Firestone Library recently ran an exhibit on Greek life in the Ottoman Empire, based on materials from the Benaki Museum in Athens. On gins of books. Professor Owen Gingerich, of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics, has some beautiful early books on astronomy in which ample space was purposely left for this kind of note taking. Princeton University Press recently published two volumes of Samuel Taylor Coleridge's marginalia, a mine for current scholars of his work. Some early notebooks were journals in which whole volumes might be abstracted, but other savants used the technique of the commonplace book.

Thomas Hobbes, according to Aubrey's Brief Lives, "had in the head of his staffe a pen and inke-horne, carried alwayes a note-booke in his pocket, and as soon as a thought darted, he presently entred it into his booke, or otherwise he might perhaps have lost it. He had drawne the designe of the booke [Leviathan] into chapters, etc. so he knew whereabout it would come in. Thus that booke was made." Even a work as learned and magisterial as Edward Gibbon's History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire seems to have been composed from the author's memory and large personal library, probably supplemented by notebooks. Here was a literary concept of intellectual production on the threshold of the industrial age.

By the early twentieth century, most professional scholars had committed themselves to a more systematic recording of facts. Many businesses were introducing new types of standardized systems for handling information on paper. The governments of the United States and imperial Russia were even using Herman Hollerith's early punch-card systems in census tabulation.

FROM ABOUT 1775 TO 1914, the information habits of men and women changed in four related ways. The paper environment changed from hierarchical to alphabetical, from closed to open, from hidden to visible, and from individual to collective. The change was usually quiet and not always conscious; it is easier to discern in manufacturers' catalogues and student manuals than in the great theoretical works of the day.

Alphabetization was hardly the invention of the Enlightenment or a consequence of the age of the democratic revolution. But alphabetization is not a bad barometer of egalitarianism. Before the nineteenth century, most library catalogues were not the uniform alphabetical variety with which we are familiar. Libraries were divided into classes, and to find a book, you needed some idea of how it fit into the classifier's categories. If you wanted the biography of a churchman in one eighteenth-century catalogue, for example, you would have had to learn by trial and error that the proper rubric was "Historia: Historia Ecclesiastica," and then to read through twenty-five pages of the catalogue until you came upon the book. There might have been an index to the catalogue, but you would have needed to know the name of the book's author to use it. Of course there were no national or international cataloguing standards.

Some lists of people have always been in alpha-display was a single manuscript codex of a monastery in Pontus that spanned more than 250 years, from the middle of the seventeenth century to the eve of the First World War. Cash accounts, minutes of meetings, catalogues of manuscripts at Mount Athos and neighboring monasteries, and other information follow each other with apparently no attempt to separate the different kinds of entries. And why should there have been? Ships, too, keep a single running log for each day's navigational records and events. The "black box" recorders on commercial airplanes are an electronic variation of the same idea, although they usually are inspected only in the event of an accident.

A merchant's counting house, from Edward Hazen's Panorama of Professions and Trades (Philadelphia, 1837). The bound book and the unique document still reign.

A special kind of journal was the commonplace book. I should say is, because men and women still keep them and, occasionally, publish them. They contain personal selections of memorable passages, either transcribed as they are read or entered under headings in a blank book divided for the purpose. Commonplace originally wasn't a fighting word; in ancient rhetoric, it simply meant an idea of wide application. But as originality grew in esteem, commonplaces seemed, well, commonplace. The old-fashioned schoolchild's copybook, with its headings, was a late survivor of this practice.

When the learned made notes before the late eighteenth century, they often wrote in the mar-

TUMEUR.

Obf. fur les tumeurs & engorgemens de l'épiploon, par
M. PORTAL.....p. 541. H. p. 36.

A.D.S. 1771.

The index card,
as proposed by the
abbé Rozier in 1775.

FROM THE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION RECORD

betical order, naturally, but there seem to have been relatively fewer of them in the eighteenth century than there are now. I am not aware of any college or university that still lists its students publicly by their class rank; in fact, the Ivy League universities are probably unusual in categorizing their student lists by graduating class to the extent that they do.

In the eighteenth century, precedence was a serious matter. Until around 1770, students in each entering class at Harvard and Yale were "placed" on a list that reflected less their ancestry than their families' positions in church and state and their ties to the institution. Scholarship and conduct could move a student up or down the hierarchy. According to Samuel Eliot Morison's Three Centuries of Harvard, the final blow came when one Samuel Phillips protested that his son had been ranked below a student whose father, a justice of the peace, had less seniority than he did. But, Morison points out, processions and other ceremonials continued to be conducted in order of seniority. It was the paper record that was alphabetized. Here is one foundation of the nineteenth century's information order: bureaucratic expediency displacing unmanageable custom.

The link between alphabetization and record-keeping innovation became even more apparent in 1886, when, according to Theodore Schellenberg's History of Archives, a man named Fred C. Ainsworth became the head of the record and pension division in the office of the U.S. surgeon general. Ainsworth introduced alphabetical files for war veterans, using "index-record cards" to list medical claims and identifying each man by regiment. Gathering cards from many sources, he assembled a master file on each veteran.

Books, like people, were also more likely to be placed in strict alphabetical order. The history of library catalogues in the nineteenth century also indicates a shift away from hallowed categories—and even from separate author and title catalogues—toward single, dictionary-like catalogues like that first used by the Boston Mercantile Association in 1844.

Catalogues of books also pioneered the second great change in the file-card revolution: openness. The Mercantile Association's catalogue was still printed and therefore fixed in time. Before the late eighteenth century, all catalogues we know of were intended as complete works, with some space left for adding a few items between the lines. Eventually, a supplement would be produced. The idea of indefinitely expandable knowledge had not yet arrived.

Librarians compiled these catalogues with slips of paper. Sometimes they retained the slips for future editions, but the catalogue itself, like the scholar's journal or the merchant's account book, was supposed to be complete, self-contained, and fixed in order.

The earliest known proposal for a true card catalogue dates from about the same time as Harvard's decision to go alphabetical. In 1775, the abbé Rozier, an agricultural scientist, published an index to the papers of the Paris Academy of Sciences in which he introduced a new medium of information storage: the playing card with an alphabetical heading. To create updated versions of the index, the abbé proposed using cards instead of repeatedly recopying manuscripts. As an illustration, he showed how a single item could be catalogued under four headings (using four

A brochure from William S. Wooton's furniture business in the 1880s declared that "With this Desk one absolutely has no excuse for slovenly habits in the disposal of numerous Papers."

FROM WOOTON PATENT DESKS

cards): tumeur, engorgement, épiploon, and the author's name (Portal). Because the index was printed on only one side of each page, information from new cards could be transferred ultimately to the blank pages. Two hundred years ago, the abbé Rozier recognized what we call a record and a field. But he could not conceive of James A. H. Murray, editor of the Oxford English Dictionary, in his Scriptorium, circa 1908. He used five to six million citation slips in compiling the dictionary.

FROM LOST IN THE WEB OF WORDS

A typical citation slip for the O.E.D. This one was submitted by Beatrice Webb, née Potter.

FROM LOST IN THE WEB OF WORDS

knowledge as being so fluid that a card (much less its electronic equivalent) could be a substitute for a printed book.

With the onset of the French Revolution, the nationalization of monastic and aristocratic libraries provoked the next step in openness: the idea of a card catalogue meant to be consulted as such and probably never printed. In 1791, the Constituent Assembly issued to the curators of these collections rules for numbering the books in their libraries. Then, using the playing cards recommended by Rozier, they were to make a uniform catalogue entry for each book, including its author, title, format, publisher, and date and place of publication—everything but the subject classification we would expect in a catalogue entry today. Each library was to retain one copy of every card and send a duplicate to a new national catalogue. One sign of the slow progress of file-card thinking was that many librarians sent traditional bound catalogues instead.

Why did card catalogues gradually triumph in the nineteenth century, at least in the United States? An explosion of information was one reason. Between around 1850 and 1875, the number of U.S. collections with more than 25,000 volumes increased from nine to a hundred, and those with more than 100,000 grew from zero to ten. The librarian's ideal was still the printed catalogue, but it was becoming a costly luxury, especially because readers wanted title and subject entries as well as listings by author. The most recent books—those in greatest demand—would always be missing from a printed catalogue. Librarians, who kept records of these books in card files to prepare for the printing of new catalogues, reluctantly began to let readers consult their files. In the 1850s, Harvard was one of the first universities to have a public card catalogue. (Princeton, with its smaller collection, followed several decades later.) In 1877, the American Library Association adopted the present 75 × 125 mm standard. Outside the library profession, these dimensions were almost immediately mistaken for 3 × 5 inches, infuriating the cataloguing genius and metric fanatic Melvil Dewey to the end of his life.

The standardized card reflected a new, alphabetized, paper-based information order: endlessly expandable, boundlessly flexible, always open to new entries, and equally convenient for removing old ones without a trace. A collection of books was always in process.

This attitude proved contagious, as businesses looked to scholarship for information-handling techniques. The Library Bureau, established in 1876 to supply equipment to librarians, soon found eager customers in banks, insurance companies, railroads, and publishing houses. In the late 1880s, the secretary of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, in Iowa City, wrote the Bureau, with all the zeal of a present-day computer convert, that he had first seen a card-file system in the Iowa State University library in 1882 and had applied the idea to the forty thousand animals in the Holstein-Friesian Herd Book. "We are now using about ten thousand new cards per year, which henceforth must double every two years." Here was a cattle-log in the truest sense.

VISIBILITY, ALONG WITH uniformity and openness, was a third watchword of the nineteenth-century paper revolution. That century had a passion for the overview, the survey, the panorama. Jeremy Bentham's celebrated panopticon, a radially designed prison in which overseers could see without being seen, is only an extreme case.

In paperwork, the passion for visibility and oversight appeared at first not in card-filing systems but on the desktop. The nineteenth century was a great age of desks, and one of the most glorious was the 1874 invention of William S. Wooton, a furniture maker in Indianapolis. Wooton's patent secretary, "The King of Desks," which was possibly used by Queen Victoria herself, let captains and even sergeants of industry survey all their papers at once. As decorative-arts historian Betty Walters first observed, the Wooton desk reflects the high point of the personally managed company, before the triumph of modern departmental management. Wooton's dealers in London advertised in 1884: "One hundred and ten compartments, all under one lock and key. A place for everything and everything in its place. Order Reigns Supreme, Confusion Avoided. . . . With this Desk one absolutely has no excuse for slovenly habits in the disposal of numerous Papers. . . . Every portion of the desk is immediately before the eye" (emphasis added).

Although the stand-alone filing cabinet replaced Wooton's pigeonhole principle by the end of the century, visibility was still the byword of paper-based information systems and a goal of early organizers and systematizers of business methods. The most lasting innovation of this period is the familiar tab card, which separates a series of index cards or files with a projecting letter. Its inventor, James Newton Gunn, began his career with the Library Bureau and, as a leading management consultant, became in 1908 one of the first faculty members of the newly formed Harvard Graduate School of Business.

The rise of the tab-separated file and the decline of the Wootton desk reveals yet another side of the new paper order: collaboration and collectivism. Samuel Johnson composed his dictionary in the eighteenth century with the help of assistants who transcribed the passages he had marked, but the plan and selection were his. (Indeed, he originally intended to write everything himself.) By the 1840s, when Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm were compiling their German dictionary, creating a multivolume dictionary was already a team effort based on uniform citation slips. In their original preface to Industrial Democracy, composed in 1897, the social reformers Sidney and Beatrice Webb described their method of using "separate sheets of paper, uniform in shape and size, each of which is devoted to a single observation, with exact particulars of authority, locality, and date." And they linked this style of taking notes to a collective method of inquiry: "A closely-knit group, dealing contemporaneously with one subject, will achieve far more than the same persons working individually."

The acme of paper information management in the old style, the first edition of the Oxford English Dictionary, was directed by an editor of genius, James A. H. Murray, but it was also the product of more than twelve hundred volunteers in the United Kingdom and North America, readers who sometimes ripped pages from their own books to provide usage citations—the original deconstructionism. Between five and six million slips of paper were finally used. In France around 1908, there was even an "affair of the file cards" (or fiches, as they have been known in French since about 1865). The scandal involved a war minister who was revealed to have been using cards—compiled by a circle of anticlerical free-masons—that detailed the political and religious sentiments of military officers.

By around 1900, card-file thinking was beginning to influence all paper management. During most of the nineteenth century, people stored their paper records horizontally. Most antebellum records of the U.S. government, for example, were kept folded and bundled; the Navy used chests. The index card presented a different model: information on one subject, in a standard format, stored upright (not flat) in a drawer, divided by alphabetical guides (usually), equally ready for additions or deletions, and usable by a number of people at once. The Library Bureau displayed its first models at the World's Columbian Exposition, in Chicago in 1893, and by 1912 the vertical file had the official approval of the U.S. government.

TOGETHER, ALL THESE CHANGES were revolutionary, because for better or worse they replaced a literary or craftsmanlike model of mental work with a mechanized one. Gone was the union of memory, a personal library, and notes in the form of book-sized digests. In its place was a pack of facts, often one fact to a standard-sized piece of paper: literally, knowledge à la carte. Diminished, too, was the separation of learning from industry; thinking was industrialized, and manufacturing was rationalized, with people like James Newton Gunn working on both sides. As a French manual for students declared in 1900, "File cards are indispensable for learning. All learned people use them. Nothing is retained without them. . . . It is not difficult to be educated, thanks to this means. The learned know this, and are modest because of it." This outbreak of humility evidently subsided, but the card file remained, in France as elsewhere; the word fichier (card index) entered the French language around this time.

Today the card file remains a surprisingly durable hard-copy database. Few people still believe in the power of assembling facts, but many still dutifully Above: The Library Bureau's splendidly built card files of the 1890s occasionally remained in use until the 1950s. Below: A European (probably French) archivist of about 1900 amid his files, stored flat in the traditional way.

FROM L'EMPIRE DU BUREAU

inscribe one fact per card as though they did. At least one library that has computerized its catalogue is retaining file cards to supplement its electronic records of editions of the Bible, Shakespeare, and other works that exist in many versions. There is a brisk trade in continuous-form file cards that will convert a computerized telephone directory to hard copy; the Rolodex company sells software for just scientists and inventors have been among the most tenacious believers in the old method of recording information: continuously, as it is acquired, in bound books. John A. Wheeler, the distinguished emeritus professor of physics at Princeton, has for this purpose. Some people have their business cards printed on paper stock that has been notched for ready insertion in Rolodex-style rotary directories. Even looseleaf organizers marketed under trademarks like Filofax and Day Runner use the file-card principle and format.

Right: Filing room of the National Police, Berlin, 1935. Below: A page from a laboratory book recorded by Calvin D. MacCracken '40. Inventors and scientists have stayed with traditional note-taking techniques.

RIGHT: FROM L'EMPIRE DU BUREAU
BELOW: FROM A HANDBOOK FOR INVENTORS

The index card and the vertical file, like many other technologies, have been morally neutral. Consider the office of the National Police in Berlin in 1935; it is very possible that the vertical file in the picture, like the room's International Style architecture, dates from the Weimar Republic. Both liberal welfare states and dictatorships of the twentieth century have depended on these alphabetical systems. (According to a recent review in The Times Literary Supplement, Britain's MI5 counterintelligence service had a card index of 900,000 "suspects and other doubtful personalities" in June 1939, and 4,500,000 by the end of July 1940.) Ronald Reagan may be the most celebrated politician to use note cards for briefings, but he is surely not the only one.

There is a final irony in the rise of the index card and its immortalization in software. The decomposition of reading into notes and the reassembly of these facts in support of an argument has won wide acceptance as a scientific approach to writing. Yet decades filled a series of large, hardbound notebooks, recording business conversations as well as scientific ideas as they have occurred. To him, the openness of a card file would impair the historical value of a record maintained in strict chronological order and—of equal importance—not organized around what data are supposed to mean. To businessmen and women, of course, there are also obvious legal advantages to the scientist's bound journal.

The file card is almost certainly not our last metaphor for the organization of learning. Surely the application of artificial intelligence to searching large texts will soon permit much richer and subtler access to knowledge, not only to personal notes but also to huge textual databases. I would not be surprised if these new information technologies led to a quicker, electronic version of the old-style notebook that could be indexed or reindexed at any point as a reader's or researcher's project evolved. But for now, we are still living in a house of cards.

Edward Tenner is an executive editor at Princeton University Press and a regular contributor to PAW. This article, which is appearing simultaneously in Harvard Magazine, is adapted from a lecture he gave last spring while teaching Humanities 354, "The History of Information: Records, Commerce, and Culture in the Modern West."

Pictures from "The Good War"

IMAGES OF WAR: THE ARTIST'S VISION OF WORLD WAR II

Ken McCormick and Hamilton Darby Perry '46, eds. • Orion Books, $65.00

WAR ART, I learned while devouring this superb book, is more than just posters asking you to enlist or warning that "loose lips sink ships." Images of War presents more than four hundred full-color pictures of the Second World War as it was painted and sketched by artists from all the warring powers. Not surprisingly, scenes of combat—on land, sea, and air—predominate, and they are often quite powerful, but some of the most moving images are those of the civilian victims, from the Russian peasants forced at gunpoint to harvest for German tables, to the survivors of the Belsen death camp (paintings more affecting than any photographs), to the pitiful Garden at Hiroshima (an unforgettable painting by Standish Backus '33).

Complementing these paintings are captions that provide brief histories of the events portrayed, technical information on the armaments and equipment, and biographical details about the artists. The editors' tone is neutral, neither glorifying war (even if a picture does) nor disparaging its costs. As they promise, the text is "nonpolitical and nonnational"; their only partisanship is toward the book's dedicatees, "More than 64,000,000 dead." The only major shortcoming of these captions is the absence of data on the pictures themselves: it's difficult to fully appreciate a painting if you don't know its dimensions.

Beyond the striking scenes recorded on these pages, what's most impressive about Images of War is the quality of the artistry. To be sure, some of these paintings are cheap propaganda and some are Rambo-like paeans to conquest (replete with lurid, comic-book colors), but the vast majority are works of art. In fact, several "name" artists—Henry Moore and Thomas Hart Benton, among them—contributed to this genre, and it's interesting to view these works in the context of their other wartime production. But the artists represented here are generally little known: G.I.s who had a talent to draw, painters commissioned by their governments to record the war, sketchers sent by magazines to the front lines. Little known, but not amateurs. Some of their works are as good as any by Picasso, Leger, or Henri Rousseau, and the influence of artists such as these is sometimes evident.

The book's cover painting is Thomas Hart Benton's Score One for the Subs.

Thanks probably to Britain's government-sponsored War Artists Scheme and the length of time it was at war, British artists seem to outnumber those from other countries, but dozens of artists from the Soviet Union, the United States, Canada, Australia, France, Japan, and Germany are represented. (One of the editors' many achievements was their obtaining the use of a number of paintings from the Soviet Union never before seen in the West.) Of all these images, poignant and triumphant, horrible and graphic, one stands out in my mind: Too Many, Too Close, Too Long, the portrait of a shell-shocked Marine who "hasn't stopped ducking and fighting long enough," the artist wrote, "to discover that he has malaria." As the war correspondent John Hersey points out in the book's foreword, images like these are reminders that warfare is not an abstraction "buyable" through high-tech weapon systems. "The cost is in human values and human lives." His thoughts and this book certainly make for worthwhile reading as we wait for the kettle to boil over in the Persian Gulf.

—Andrew C. Mytelka '85

Books Received

A PHYSICIAN'S WITNESS TO THE POWER OF SHARED PRAYER

William F. Haynes, Jr. '50, M.D.

Loyola University Press, $8.95 paper

THE RANDOM CHARACTER OF INTEREST RATES: APPLYING STATISTICAL PROBABILITY TO THE BOND MARKETS

Joseph E. Murphy, Jr. '52

Probus Publishing, $37.50

LUCIUS D. CLAY: AN AMERICAN LIFE

Jean Edward Smith '54

Henry Holt, $35.00

FINANCE AND ACCOUNTING FOR GENERAL MANAGERS

Henry H. Beam '60

Kendall/Hunt, $14.95 paper

GAJIN KAISHA: RUNNING A FOREIGN BUSINESS IN JAPAN

Jackson N. Huddleston, Jr. '60

M. E. Sharpe, $24.95

JANUARY SUN: ONE DAY, THREE LIVES, A SOUTH AFRICAN TOWN

Richard Stengel '77

Simon and Schuster, $19.95

Erratum

IN OUR ISSUE of October 10, we incorrectly reported the title of Joseph S. Frelinghuysen '34's new book, a memoir of his wartime experiences. The correct title is Passages to Freedom: A Story of Capture and Escape (Sunflower University Press, $17.95 paperback). We apologize for the error.

Football Falls to Columbia but Beats Penn in Sloppy, Penalty-Filled Contests

PRINCETON'S VARSITY footballers are not among the millions who "love New York." Over the years, the Tigers have lost to Columbia only ten times in sixty games, but a fifth of those losses have come in their last two trips to Wien Stadium, at the northern tip of Manhattan. In both contests, the Tigers out-bungled the perennially woebegone Lions, each time knocking themselves out of the Ivy League race. The latest debacle, a 17-15 loss on October 27, was a virtual replay of the one two years ago: a penalty again stymied a last-gasp Princeton comeback in a game that should have been called because of mutual incompetence. Even in a surprisingly strong victory (34-20) over Pennsylvania a week later in Palmer Stadium, the home team owed its success as much to the Quakers' ability to turn into oatmeal as to its own snap and pop.

Just take a look at the bottom half of the statistical sheets, where all the detritus of poor play collects. In the game against Columbia, played on a fine day for football, each team gave away three fumbles, and the Lions generously lofted an interception, but only two of the seven turnovers resulted in scoring; just as many resulted in turnovers themselves. Columbia started the second half by fumbling the ball to Princeton three times in a row. Only on the third recovery were the Tigers able to put the ball in the end zone, whereupon Jason Scott '92 (who replaced the slumping Chris Lutz '91) missed his first varsity attempt at an extra point; the P.A.T. would have tied the score. In the fourth quarter, the Tigers flubbed two drives in a row by fumbling when they got too close to the goal line. True to the game plan, Columbia accumulated only twenty-seven yards off Princeton turnovers.

In the Penn game, the major contest was to determine which team could rack up the most penalties. The Quakers edged out Princeton here, 14-12 in number of fouls and 121-117 in yards penalized. In fact, the Tigers gained more than twice as much yardage from Penn penalties as they did from their own passing game. But the Quakers were much more skilled at killing their own drives with infractions, and they handily won the turnover contest as well, 4-0.

By halftime of the Columbia game, it was clear that an upset was again in the making. The Lions scored first and led the whole game. They converted the game's first fumble into a twenty-nine-yard drive for a touchdown, giving the record homecoming crowd of nearly eleven thousand reason to believe that history would repeat itself. Running backs Dan Bents '91 and Erick Hamilton '93 averaged six yards per carry in the first half, and Princeton got inside the Columbia 20-yard line twice, but the Tigers ended up with only three points before the intermission. Early in the second quarter, Scott succeeded on his first varsity try at a field goal, a thirty-four-yarder, but he missed from thirty-seven yards out later in the period. That was the game's turning point, as the Lions consumed the remainder of the half in a controlled drive that ended with a forty-two-yard field goal and a 10-3 lead.

Against Columbia, quarterback Joel Sharp '91 completed twenty-one of thirty-one passes for 230 yards and no interceptions. Two of the linemen who helped make this performance possible were guards Michael Davis '91 (left) and Anthony Cicia '92 (right).

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

The fumbling contest began in the second half, but the teams' Chip-and-Dale civility prevented the scoring from getting out of hand. After Scott's point-after failed to tie the game, the Columbia defensive line suddenly became impervious to the Tigers' rushing attack, which only gained three yards in the second half. And late in the third quarter, Columbia upped its lead to 17-9. Just as it happened two years ago, the Lions gave the visitors many opportunities to get back into the game, but they remained eight points ahead with less than four minutes to play, when Princeton got the ball on its own seven. Quarterback Joel Sharp '91 worked the sidelines well, completing eight of ten passes on the way to the Lions' twelve. But he missed on the next two. Facing third down and defeat, Sharp handed off to running back Michael Lerch '93 on a reverse that aimed at the right goal-line marker. The Lions read the play instantly, but they got stung when Lerch spotted tight end Marin Gjaja '91 uncovered and lofted the ball into his hands for a touchdown. On the attempt at a two-point conversion to tie, Sharp's pass was wild, and the officials called a penalty on Princeton as well.

It seemed at first as though the Penn game, too, should have been stopped by the referees—and after only six minutes had elapsed. By then, Princeton had scored three touchdowns, all the points it would need to win. For the rest of the afternoon, however, the Tigers politely kept the Quakers in the contest, squandering numerous opportunities to put them away. Not until Penn's fourth turnover did what Mark Twain once called "the curtain of charity" draw over what Grantland Rice once called "the bewildering panorama spread on the green plain below."

The game's first minutes were the most bewildering, and when Penn was at its most charitable. Bents returned the opening kickoff eighty-two yards for a touchdown—the first time that had happened to Penn since the Cuban missile crisis. After the Quakers failed to gain a first down on their next possession, Princeton took just four plays to score again. Nearly duplicating Bents's run, Hamilton aborted a dive up the middle, bounced off a wall of tacklers, and ran fifty-eight yards for a touchdown. The third score was considerably easier. Penn again relinquished the ball after three downs, but it lost thirteen yards

One of the eight receivers Sharp connected with in the Columbia game was tight end Marin Gjaja '91. Moments after he made the reception in the picture, he scored the touchdown that brought Princeton to within two points, 17-15.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

when the punter saw the snap nearly sail over his head; he recovered in time to boot the ball out of bounds. Once again Princeton scored in just four plays, and once again Hamilton carried the ball.

In the second half, Penn piled up 224 yards of offense (Princeton amassed only 135), and several times it threatened to pull within a touchdown. But three of its turnovers occurred after halftime, and the Tigers ran down the clock with an excellent ball-control offense that featured inspired play by the line, Hamilton (the Ivy League's Sophomore of the Week for his 122 rushing yards and three touchdowns), and fullback Chris Hallihan '91. This game was a complete reversal of Princeton's play all season: the Tigers scored early and often, then sat on their lead and stymied the opponent's attempt at a comeback.

—Stephen R. Dujack '76

Steve Dujack is the editor of The Environmental Forum, in Washington, D.C.

Men's Soccer Plays Tough Schedule and Thrives

THEIR FINAL RECORD may not reflect it, but the men's soccer team has had a fine season. At this writing, with one game yet to be played, the Tigers have a 7-7 record (5-2 Ivy). What the record does not show, however, is the strength of the team's schedule. Of the Tigers' fifteen opponents, ten were, at one time or other during the season, ranked among the nation's top twenty soccer teams.

The Tigers' season reached its climax on the weekend of October 13, when the team played in a mini-tournament against U.C.L.A. and the University of Virginia. At the time, U.C.L.A. was undefeated and ranked first in the nation, and Virginia was ranked fifth and was the defending national co-champion (with the University of Santa Clara).

Princeton entered the tourney with a 4-4 record and was decidedly unranked. In their first game, against U.C.L.A., the Tigers battled the Bruins to a 1-1 tie at the end of regulation time, but succumbed when U.C.L.A. scored with ten minutes to play in the second overtime period. (Each period of overtime is fifteen minutes long, and a draw is declared if the tie remains unbroken after two overtimes.) A critical factor in U.C.L.A.'s victory was its depth. During the game, the Bruins shuttled reserve players into their lineup, so when overtime began, they were relatively fresh. The Tigers, meanwhile, were desperately holding on, hoping for a tie. Princeton's goalie, Tom McCabe '91, played brilliantly and snared twenty saves, many of them acrobatic diving catches.

You might have expected this kind of game to have exhausted the Tigers, both physically and mentally, but it only seemed to exhilarate them. The next day, they beat Virginia easily, 2-1. The Cavaliers' only goal came late in the game, when Princeton was ahead, 2-0. On this weekend, the Tigers proved that, despite their won-loss record, they could compete with any collegiate soccer team in the country.

In the Ivy League, the Tigers seem destined to finish the season in a tie for second place. They played particularly well against Dartmouth, defeating the Big Green, 2-0; against Yale, dramatically coming from behind to beat the Bulldogs, 3-2; and against Harvard, routing the Crimson, 4-0. Princeton had a shot at the Ivy title, but in their last league game, the Tigers were beaten soundly by an excellent team from Columbia, 2-0. At the time, the Lions were ranked thirteenth in the country.

Throughout the season, two Tigers in particular have set the tone for the team, playing selflessly and relentlessly: center halfback Jimmy Barlow '91 and defender Pat White '91, both of them all-Ivy selections in 1989. Barlow, the team's playmaker, frequently has made the artful passes from midfield that have set up scoring opportunities. He's also played doggedly on defense. White, along with Shawn Pierson '93, has regularly drawn the assignment of shutting down the opponent's most dangerous attackers. As he has during his four varsity seasons, White has done so brilliantly, using a mixture of speed, muscle, and deft footwork.

A very pleasant surprise this year has been the play of midfielder Joey Thieman, the only freshman to crack the starting lineup. At this writing, Thieman, a superb passer, was the team's second highest scorer, with five goals and six assists.

Center halfback Jimmy Barlow '91, an all-Ivy player in 1989 and one of the team's captains this year, led the Tigers against the top-ranked Bruins of U.C.L.A.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

TARA

THE POWER BEHIND
THE NETWORK™

Tara Enterprises of Princeton, Inc.
Computer Network Sales 609-987-8778
Technical Services 609-683-9464

Grant A. Peacock '46
Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

*Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased*

Suite 2600
450 Park Avenue-at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022 (212) 753-4640

SUMNER RULON-MILLER III '61
261 Madison Avenue, Suite 1200
New York, New York 10016
212-661-8660
executive financial planning
RULON-MILLER, INC.

Wanted to Buy

Highest prices paid
for American and European Art,
including paintings, watercolors
and drawings, sculpture and prints
from 18th century to present.
Please contact Stuart P. Feld, '57

Hirsch & Adler
GALLERIES INC.

21 E. 70th St. NY 10021 (212) 535-8810
Fax: (212) 772-7237

Great efforts, like midfielder Matt Reece '92's play here, made the game against U.C.L.A. a tight defensive struggle.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

David Hocher '92, an active player with an excellent sense of when to make his runs on the goal, is the leading scorer, with twelve goals. Forward John Jeans '91 has also had a good season, often passing off to a loosely defended Hocher at moments when he seemed to have legitimate shots on the goal himself.

Princeton's attack has been aided by its strong defenders, most of whom, having played together for two seasons, have a good sense of what their mates will do in a given situation. The defenders have also been surer of their ability to control the ball, and as a result, they have often helped the midfielders out of jams. Princeton has thus been able to maintain control of the ball and attack with greater frequency and vehemence.

Monday-morning midfielders will undoubtedly wonder why the Tigers don't play an easier slate of opponents. If they did, they would probably have a better record, and perhaps have a better chance of copping a bid to the postseason N.C.A.A. tournament. Coach Bob Bradley disagrees. "When you play weaker teams," he says, "you can get away with a lot of mistakes. When we play the best, it forces us to play our best." The soccer teams of Virginia and U.C.L.A. would certainly concur.

—Marvin Zim '57

Marvin Zim is director of corporate communications at Union Pacific Corporation, in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

SCOREBOARD

Varsity Football

(3-5 overall; 2-3 Ivy)
Bucknell 14, Princeton 9
Harvard 23, Princeton 20
Columbia 17, Princeton 15
Princeton 34, Penn 20

FRESHMAN FOOTBALL

(4-1 overall; 4-1 Ivy)
Princeton 35, Dartmouth 34
Princeton 23, Cornell 21
Harvard 38, Princeton 36
Princeton 34, Columbia 14
Princeton 21, Penn 14

150-POUND FOOTBALL

(2-4 overall; 1-3 E.L.F.L.)
Cornell 7, Princeton 0
Princeton 7, Navy 6
Penn 17, Princeton 7

Men's X-COUNTRY

(4-1 overall; 0-1 Ivy)
MAC Invitational—1st place
Harvard/Yale—3rd place
Heptagonals—9th place

WOMEN'S X-COUNTRY

(5-1 overall; 1-1 Ivy)
Harvard/Yale—2nd place
Heptagonals—5th place

FIELD HOCKEY

(8-8 overall; 3-3 Ivy)
Penn 2, Princeton 1
(overtime)
Princeton 3, Yale 0
Princeton 2, West Chester 1
Harvard 2, Princeton 1
Penn State 4, Princeton 0
Stanford 4, Princeton 2
Princeton 4, U. of California 0
Lafayette 3, Princeton 1

Men's Soccer

(7-8 overall; 5-2 Ivy)
Princeton 3, Yale 2
U.C.L.A. 2, Princeton 1
(overtime)
Princeton 2, Virginia 1
Princeton 4, Philadelphia
Textile 2 (overtime)
Princeton 4, Harvard 0
Columbia 2, Princeton 0
Rutgers 2, Princeton 0
Hartwick 4, Princeton 2

WOMEN'S SOCCER

(8-6-1 overall; 3-4 Ivy)
Yale 2, Princeton 1
Princeton 1, Colgate 1
Princeton 2, Columbia 0
Harvard 1, Princeton 0
Princeton 6, La Salle 2
Princeton 2, Villanova 1
Princeton 8, Penn 1

Volleyball

(18-4 overall; 7-2 Ivy)
Princeton 3, Towson State 1
Princeton 3, Delaware 2
Princeton 3, Cornell 0
Princeton 3, Towson State 1
Princeton 3, Delaware 0
Princeton 3, Fairleigh Dickinson 0
Princeton 3, Rutgers 2
Brown 3, Princeton 1
Drexel 3, Princeton 2
Princeton 3, Fordham 0
Princeton 3, Columbia 0
Princeton 3, Penn 1
Princeton 3, Lehigh 0
Princeton 3, Brown 1
Princeton 3, Harvard 2
Yale 3, Princeton 0
Cornell 3, Princeton 2
Princeton 3, Dartmouth 1
Princeton 3, Harvard 1
Princeton 3, U. of Massachusetts 0
Princeton 3, Yale 1
Princeton 3, Hartford 2

TARA

THE POWER BEHIND
THE NETWORK™

Tara Enterprises of Princeton, Inc.
Computer Network Sales 609-987-8778
Technical Services 609-683-9464

Grant A. Peacock '46
Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

*Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased*

Suite 2600
450 Park Avenue-at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022 (212) 753-4640

SUMNER RULON-MILLER III '61
261 Madison Avenue, Suite 1200
New York, New York 10016
212-661-8660
executive financial planning
RULON-MILLER, INC.

Wanted to Buy

Highest prices paid
for American and European Art,
including paintings, watercolors
and drawings, sculpture and prints
from 18th century to present.
Please contact Stuart P. Feld, '57

Hirsch & Adler
GALLERIES INC.

21 E. 70th St. NY 10021 • (212) 535-8810
Fax: (212) 772-7237

Great efforts, like midfielder Matt Reece '92's play here, made the game against U.C.L.A. a tight defensive struggle.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

David Hoher '92, an active player with an excellent sense of when to make his runs on the goal, is the leading scorer, with twelve goals. Forward John Jeans '91 has also had a good season, often passing off to a loosely defended Hoher at moments when he seemed to have legitimate shots on the goal himself.

Princeton's attack has been aided by its strong defenders, most of whom, having played together for two seasons, have a good sense of what their mates will do in a given situation. The defenders have also been surer of their ability to control the ball, and as a result, they have often helped the midfielders out of jams. Princeton has thus been able to maintain control of the ball and attack with greater frequency and vehemence.

Monday-morning midfielders will undoubtedly wonder why the Tigers don't play an easier slate of opponents. If they did, they would probably have a better record, and perhaps have a better chance of copping a bid to the postseason N.C.A.A. tournament. Coach Bob Bradley disagrees. "When you play weaker teams," he says, "you can get away with a lot of mistakes. When we play the best, it forces us to play our best." The soccer teams of Virginia and U.C.L.A. would certainly concur.

—Marvin Zim '57

Marvin Zim is director of corporate communications at Union Pacific Corporation, in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

SCOREBOARD

Varsity Football

(3-5 overall; 2-3 Ivy)
Bucknell 14, Princeton 9
Harvard 23, Princeton 20
Columbia 17, Princeton 15
Princeton 34, Penn 20

Freshman Football

(4-1 overall; 4-1 Ivy)
Princeton 35, Dartmouth 34
Princeton 23, Cornell 21
Harvard 38, Princeton 36
Princeton 34, Columbia 14
Princeton 21, Penn 14

150-Pound Football

(2-4 overall; 1-3 E.L.F.L.)
Cornell 7, Princeton 0
Princeton 7, Navy 6
Penn 17, Princeton 7

Men's X-Country

(4-1 overall; 0-1 Ivy)
MAC Invitational—1st place
Harvard/Yale—3rd place
Heptagonals—9th place

Women's X-Country

(5-1 overall; 1-1 Ivy)
Harvard/Yale—2nd place
Heptagonals—5th place

Field Hockey

(8-8 overall; 3-3 Ivy)
Penn 2, Princeton 1
(overtime)
Princeton 3, Yale 0
Princeton 2, West Chester 1
Harvard 2, Princeton 1
Penn State 4, Princeton 0
Stanford 4, Princeton 2
Princeton 4, U. of California 0
Lafayette 3, Princeton 1

Men's Soccer

(7-8 overall; 5-2 Ivy)
Princeton 3, Yale 2
U.C.L.A. 2, Princeton 1
(overtime)
Princeton 2, Virginia 1
Princeton 4, Philadelphia
Textile 2 (overtime)
Princeton 4, Harvard 0
Columbia 2, Princeton 0
Rutgers 2, Princeton 0
Hartwick 4, Princeton 2

Women's Soccer

(8-6-1 overall; 3-4 Ivy)
Yale 2, Princeton 1
Princeton 1, Colgate 1
Princeton 2, Columbia 0
Harvard 1, Princeton 0
Princeton 6, La Salle 2
Princeton 2, Villanova 1
Princeton 8, Penn 1

Volleyball

(18-4 overall; 7-2 Ivy)
Princeton 3, Towson State 1
Princeton 3, Delaware 2
Princeton 3, Cornell 0
Princeton 3, Towson State 1
Princeton 3, Delaware 0
Princeton 3, Fairleigh Dickinson 0
Princeton 3, Rutgers 2
Brown 3, Princeton 1
Drexel 3, Princeton 2
Princeton 3, Fordham 0
Princeton 3, Columbia 0
Princeton 3, Penn 1
Princeton 3, Lehigh 0
Princeton 3, Brown 1
Princeton 3, Harvard 2
Yale 3, Princeton 0
Cornell 3, Princeton 2
Princeton 3, Dartmouth 1
Princeton 3, Harvard 1
Princeton 3, U. of Massachusetts 0
Princeton 3, Yale 1
Princeton 3, Hartford 2

FOR RENT

ENJOY THE LUXURY of your own villa, private pool overlooking the Caribbean, and staff of five to serve you. 3 BRs, 3 baths; exquisitely furnished; on one acre with terraced gardens in most exclusive residential neighborhood in Ocho Rios, Jamaica. Everyone should try this kind of living at least once. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70 (owner), 1165 Churchill Downs Rd., Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR waterfront beachhouse amid tropical gardens. Spectacular view, excellent snorkeling. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70. 1165 Churchill Downs, Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

PARIS: Elegant small studio for two just off the Seine in the 6th. 2 min. walk to the Louvre, Notre Dame. 609-924-4332.

BARBADOS: Home of the late John L. Roe Jr. '34. West Coast on bluff overlooking Caribbean. Three air-conditioned BRs, cook, maid, gardener, laundry, swimming pool. 215-527-0585.

PARIS: Rue de la Paix, Elegant apartment. Suitable for 2 or 3. 7-days preferred. $200/night. 212-838-1731.

STOCKING ISLAND, Exuma, Bahamas: Octagonal wood and glass home, spectacular 360-degree sea view. All modern conveniences. $1000 weekly for two with boat. Sam Burns '46, 407-231-2822. Brochure avail.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FLA.: Delightful beachfront condominium. Magnificent gulf view. Spacious 2 BR, 2 baths, loft. Pool. Tennis. Will Smith '63. 908-842-2096.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS (Virgin Gorda): Elegant new villa directly on own private snorkeling beach. Spectacular, panoramic view of North Sound including Bitter-End (dive school, etc.) Perfect weather year round. 3 BR, 2 bath, magnificent LR, wrap-around deck, full mod. kit., microwave, dishwasher; marina, fishing, pool, tennis. (Restaurant, provisioning, staff, car, available extra.) $2,500/wk. 609-921-7872.

EXCLUSIVE LUXURY 4 BR, 4 bath villa at private Tryall Club in Montego, Jamaica. Private pool, staff of four, gorgeous grounds overlook Caribbean and championship golf course. Also private tennis, scuba, beach and club house. Available at 2 or 3 BR rate off-season. 203-254-0228 (h) or Carol Shaw at 203-929-6391.

LONDON LUXURY FLATS: In Knightsbridge, Mayfair, Chelsea, Kensington, Whitehall Court. One, two, three bedrooms. Furnished and decorated by owners. Rented by day, seven day minimum; reduced rates when exceeding six months. Call during office hours: 518-686-7841.

KAUAI, HAWAII: 4 BR, NaPali Coast beach house. $650-850/wk. 703-560-7900.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant villa on blue Caribbean. Breathtaking views. Daily maid. All amenities. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

ST. THOMAS: 2 or 3 BRs on the water, spectacular downisland view. H. Macaleer. 919-942-8439.

ITALY: Renting delightful holiday accommodations, each personally selected. Tuscan castles, Umbrian farmhouses. Seaside villas, lakeview cottages. Centrally-located apartments Venice, Rome, Florence. Week/month. 415-821-9345.

SANIBEL ISLAND: Gulffront condominium, 2 BR with pool and tennis. Weekly/Monthly. Boozan '79, 201-522-8219

CENTURIES OLD FARMHOUSE at edge of Sabine hill town. Easy reach of Orvieto, Perugia, Assisi, Spoleto, Florence, Rome. Magnificent setting on 4 acres. Restored recently. Architect Ellen Jawdat of Washington, D.C., M.Arch. Harvard. Work executed by Valentini Ristauo of Rome. All modern comforts. C. Joseph, 1 Lincoln Plaza, New York, NY 10023, 212-873-5104.

ST. JOHN: Off-season rates. 2 bedroom villa, pool, spectacular view. 508-668-2078.

LONDON RENTALS: Privately owned flats and houses in London's best areas offering comprehensive personal service at attractive prices. One week minimum stay. Call: A Place Like Home, London. 800-526-0215.

MAINE: Tenants Harbor and Port Clyde. Wonderful homes, fully furnished, immaculate and comfortable. $200-$2,000 per week, year round. C. Lang, POB 282, Tenants Harbor, ME 04860. 207-372-8906.

KAUAI LUXURY CONDO on the ocean in sunny Poipu. Fully equipped. 2 BRs, 2 baths, free tennis at Waiohai Tennis Club. $600/700 per week. 213-681-6869.

ST. BART'S, FRENCH WEST INDIES: Luxurious seaside villa surrounded by privacy, beautiful beaches and French restaurants. 412-687-2061.

PARIS. LEFT BANK APARTMENT: St. Germain, close to D'Orsay, Louvre, Rodin. Sunny. Fireplaces. Antiques. Luxuriously furnished. Memorable! 412-687-2061.

ROME, ITALY: 18th century villa amidst vineyards. Splendid views and location. 609-921-8595.

BEQUIA, GRENADINES: For rent charming beach house on Friendship Bay Beach. Sleeps four. Excellent cook/housekeeper provided. Phone 514-935-6444.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS: Our secluded beach house on beautiful Brewers Bay, Tortola. 3 baths, maid, bunk room. Weather perfect all year. Rates: R. H. Smith '42, Westover Park, Stamford, CT 06902; 203-323-2294.

MAD RIVER SUGARBUSH AREA: Comfortable farmhouse for up to 20 skiers. $350 per day. William Iler '51, 508-922-0010.

MONHEGAN ISLAND, MAINE: 4 BR, 2 bath. Panoramic island, ocean view. Available June-September, $700/wk. Bill Walker '64. 215-687-3271.

SKI VERMONT: Spacious 4 bedroom house near Stratton/Mt. Snow. 703-522-5454.

SAIL THE VIRGINS: The best beaches, best views, best of everything. Fully equipped 40' O'Day. 2 cabins, salon, galley, 2 heads, shower, sleeps 7. Captain, provisioning available. 201-747-3976.

VAIL, CO: 3 BR plus loft. 5 min. from gondola and great skiing. $225/night. $275 during Christmas and spring break. Bruce Brookens '67; 303-761-8815.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK: Rocky Mountain seclusion, minutes from skiing. Creek-side home sleeps six. No X-mas. 303-926-3907.

ST. JOHN: Fabulous private home near beach. Peaceful. Furnished. Box 12287, St. Thomas, VI 00801. 809-775-4266.

SUN VALLEY, ID: Luxurious, spacious, ski condo at base of Mt. Baldy in Warm Springs. 3 BRs, 3 baths, fireplace. Walk one block to lifts, restaurants, shops, apres ski. Bill Travers '71, 607-257-7322.

EXUMA, BAHAMAS: Magnificent hilltop view. Fully equipped. 4 bedrooms, van, private beach, housekeeper available. $1,000 weekly in season. 302-428-1455, evenings.

ENGLAND, COTSWOLDS: Thatched cottage. Near Stratford, Oxford, London, 3 sitting, 3 bedrooms, 1½ baths. Central heat. Oscarsson, Rockport, ME 04856.

SPAIN: Lovely 4 BR villa (pool) overlooking Mediterranean/village. Hess '64. 203-688-9333.

VIEQUES, PUERTO RICO: 4 bedroom, 3 bath villa. Pool. 360 degree views. Beautiful beaches. Amherst '58. 508-371-7375.

PROVIDENCIALES, BWI: 3 BRs, 3 baths on private beach. $1,500/wk. 216-229-2978.

VERMONT, MORETOWN: Remodeled farmhouse sleeps 10. 15 minutes to Mad River Glen, 20 mins. to Sugarbush, 40 mins. to Stowe. For rent week, weekend, month. 802-229-0051.

CARIBBEAN PARADISE: Luxury 4 BR, 3 bath villa. Perfect 2-6 people. Enjoy heavenly views, gardens, privacy. Walk to 2 spectacular beaches. Tortola, British Virgins. Clipper Cleaver '41, Box 356, Adamsville, R.I. 02801. 401-635-4725(h), 617-742-8310(o).

TORTOLA, BVI: Three bedrooms overlooking two beaches. Maids, snorkeling, unspoiled. Bell, Box 3678, Greenville, DE 19807. 215-388-2241.

VAIL/BEAVER CREEK: Well-appointed 3 bedroom, 3 bath house 15 min. to Vail, 5 min. to Beaver Creek. Available Sat. to Sat. $850/wk. Charles Gaylord '34, 303-722-3474.

PRINCETON: Furnished house near campus. 3 bedrooms, study/guest room, family room. January through July 609-921-6858.

HANA, MAUI: One-bedroom executive getaway house with panoramic ocean/mountain views on 7.5-acre orchard/flower garden. $95/day, 4-day minimum. 213-654-2765.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR villa at Lagoon Point, sensational views. Weekly $840-$1260 winter; $560-$840 summer. Valentine, 8 Fern Way, Madbury, NH 03820. 603-742-3063.

ELEUTHERA, BAHAMAS: Cotton Bay Club. Magnificent waterfront home. Trent Jones golf course 100 yards away. Snorkeling, tennis, 3 bedrooms, Bertram sportsfisherman boat, pool, housekeeper. 617-722-7045.

IRELAND: Charming Georgian house in beautiful County Waterford. 4 BRs, 3 baths. Available all year. Low rental Nov. to June. 914-677-9698.

FLORIDA KEYS VACATION RENTALS: Call Jannie, Sugarloaf Realty. 800-827-2230.

NOVEMBER 23

The Christmas Stroll by Candlelight-5:30 p.m. From Princeton High School through the streets of the Borough. 609-921-7500.

The Annual Christmas Tree Lighting-6 p.m. on Palmer Square. 609-921-2333.

New Jersey Symphony's Chamber Orchestra-8:30 p.m. at the University's Richardson Auditorium. 1-800-ALLEGRO.

Princeton Ballet - "The Nutcracker" through Dec. 9-2:30 p.m. & 7:30 p.m. Sundays, 1 p.m. & 4:30 p.m. at McCarter Theatre. 609-683-8000.

NOVEMBER 28
"A Holiday Luncheon"-11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Palmer's at the Nassau Inn to benefit the YWCA's Friday Club. 609-497-2100.

NOVEMBER 29
Princeton Madrigal Society in Concert - 8 p.m. at Princeton University's Taplin Auditorium. 609-258-4239.

DECEMBER 2

International Music and Dance - 8:30 p.m. Sponsored by Princeton University's International Center at Forbes College Dining Room.

Holiday Readings by the Fire with Storytellers of Princeton-2 p.m. at the Nassau Inn. 609-921-7500.

DECEMBER 4
Christmas House Tours - 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sponsored by the Association of North Princeton Developmental Center. 609-466-1047.

DECEMBER 5
Holiday Readings by the Fire with Governor and Mrs. Florio-6:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Nassau Inn. Public invited. Limited seating. 609-921-7500.
Drumthwacket presents "A Christmas Open House" - 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. 609-924-3044.

DECEMBER 6
Poetry Readings at the Arts Council - 8 p.m. Sponsored by the Arts Council of Princeton. 609-924-8777.
A Lecture by Novelist John Updike - 8 p.m. at McCosh 50. Sponsored by Princeton University's English Department.

DECEMBER 9

Holiday Readings by the Fire with Storytellers of Princeton - 2 p.m. at the Nassau Inn. 609-921-7500.

The Nassau Presbyterian Church Choir sings "The Messiah" with the Philadelphia Concerto Soloist-11 a.m. 609-924-0103.

DECEMBER 10
Dreidel, Dreidel- 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. at the Y's Home Economics Center. Sponsored by the Princeton YWCA. 609-497-2100.

DECEMBER 11
Richardson Recital Series- 8 p.m. at Princeton University's Richardson Auditorium.

DECEMBER 12
Holiday Readings by the Fire with actor/playwright Larry Holfocener-6:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Nassau Inn. Limited seating. 609-921-7500.

DECEMBER 16

Holiday Readings by the Fire with Storytellers of Princeton- 2 p.m. at the Nassau Inn. 609-921-7500.

The Princeton University Chapel Choir-"Christmas Vespers"-2 p.m. 609-258-3048.

First Baptist Church-"Annual Christmas Concert"-6 p.m. Voices and Teamwork Dance - "Laud to the Nativity"-7:30 p.m. at Princeton United Methodist Church. 609-737-9383.

DECEMBER 19
Holiday Readings by the Fire-6:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Nassau Inn. Limited seating. 609-921-7500.

The American Boychoir School in Concert-8 p.m. at Princeton University's Richardson Auditorium. 609-258-4241.

Herbert McAneny reads selections from Dickens' "Little Dorritt" and "A Christmas Carol"-10:30 a.m. at the Princeton Public Library. 609-924-9529.

DECEMBER 23

Holiday Readings by the Fire with Storytellers of Princeton- 2 p.m. at the Nassau Inn. 609-921-7500.

First Baptist Church-"Annual Christmas Play"-9 a.m.

DECEMBER 24
Nassau Presbyterian Church-"A Christmas Pageant"-5 p.m.; Bell Choir in Concert-4:30 p.m. & 9:30 p.m.; Lessons in Carolling - 10 p.m.

DECEMBER 28
The New York Chamber Symphony-"Brandenburg Concerti" at McCarter Theatre. 609-683-8000.

DECEMBER 31
The Arts Council of Princeton-"Curtain Calls"-8 p.m. to Midnight. Strolling New Year's Eve celebration with performances at 5 locations: musicians, mimes, town criers, dancing and desserts. 609-924-8777.

O F E V E N T S

NOVEMBER 30

Westminster Choir College
Opera Theatre - "Amahl and the Night Visitors" - 7 p.m. at the Playhouse. 609-921-2663.

Princeton University's Gilbert
and Sullivan Society - "The Mikado" - 8 p.m. at the University's Richardson Auditorium.
609-258-5000.

DECEMBER 1

Trinity Church's Annual Christmas Fair at Pierce Hall -
9 a.m. to 4 p.m. 609-924-2277.

Westminster Choir College
Opera Theatre - "Amahl and the Night Visitors" - 2 p.m. &
4 p.m. at the Playhouse.
609-921-2663.

Westminster Concert Bell
Choir - "Christmas Concert" -
8 p.m. at Bristol Chapel.
609-921-2663.

Princeton University's Gilbert
and Sullivan Society - "The Mikado" - 8 p.m. at the University's Richardson Auditorium.
609-258-5000.

DECEMBER 7

A Tree Lighting and Reception at the Lewis School - 7 p.m.
609-924-8120.

DECEMBER 8

Holiday Cookies! - 10 to 11:30 a.m. at the Y. Sponsored by the Princeton YWCA.
609-497-2100.

McCarter Theatre - "A Christmas Carol" Saturdays,
2 p.m. & 7:30 p.m. Sundays,
1 p.m. & 5 p.m. through
Dec. 23. 609-683-8000.

Westminster Choir College
Singers - "A Christmas Concert" - 4 p.m. & 8 p.m. at Bristol Chapel. 609-921-2663.

DECEMBER 14

Princeton University
Orchestra - 8 p.m. at the University's Richardson
Auditorium. 609-258-5000.

DECEMBER 15

"A Visit from St. Nick"
Children's Breakfast - 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. in the Nassau Inn's
Prince William Ballroom.
609-921-7500.

Princeton YWCA's Holiday
Gift Workshop - 10 to 11:30 a.m.
at the Y's Craft Room.
609-497-2114.

"An Old-Fashioned Gift Drive" - 9:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at Palmer Square. In conjunction with Princeton
Social Services. 609-921-7500.

Princeton YWCA's
Continental Breakfast with Santa Claus - 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.
at the Y's Bramwell House.
609-497-2114.

DECEMBER 20

Princeton High School -
"Winter Concert" - 8 p.m. at the Princeton University
Chapel. 609-683-4480.

DECEMBER 21

Princeton Opera Theatre -
"Hansel and Gretel".
609-882-3142

DECEMBER 22

Princeton Pro Musica -
"Christmas Oratorio" - 8 p.m. at Princeton University's Richardson Auditorium.
609-258-4241.

JANUARY 1, 1991

Reorganization meetings for Borough Council and Township Committee - Noon at Borough Hall and Township Hall. Community reception to follow at Harrison Street Firehouse.

EVERY SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

Beginning November 24, St. Nick will be in his antique sleigh on Palmer Square, for picture taking. Horse and carriage rides, chestnut vendors and live entertainment at 12:30 p.m., 2 p.m. and 3:30 p.m. Petting zoo December 8 & 15.

*The Nassau Inn, The Borough
Merchants for Princeton, and McCarter Theatre invite you to share in "An Old-Fashioned Holiday in Princeton", to take place from November
23 through New Year's Eve. It will include a variety of family events and activities.
Imagine if you will:*

- Horses and carriages carrying children of all ages past gaily decorated shops and homes.
- The scent of roasting chestnuts,
wassail and gingerbread.
- Storytelling at the Inn, by the fire.
- An Old-Fashioned Christmas Stroll through the streets of town, led by local notables, representatives of service and civic organizations, musicians, and Princeton Ballet's Nutcracker.
- Live musical entertainment along
Nassau Street.

I would like to personally invite you to spend a December weekend with us here at the Inn. Enjoy the holiday festivities and then join us for cocktails by the fire and a tempting New American menu in Palmer's, before retiring to the comfort of your special room in our historic Colonial Wing. I look forward to welcoming you.

Wishing you the happiest of holidays...

Nelson Zager
Innkeeper
The Nassau Inn

Special Holiday Rates are available at the Nassau Inn, beginning November 2, 1990.
For more information or reservations, please call 1-800-922-3432.

SAN DIEGO: 2,500 sq. ft., 3 BR, 2½ bath Bauhaus condo. Exceptional executive living on ocean and lagoon. Furnished or unfurnished 6-month + lease, or lease-to-buy. $3,000/month or terms. 619-481-1548.

CASTLE HYDE: On the Blackwater River, County Cork, Southern Ireland. Exceptionally lovely 18th century Georgian house on 144 acres. 6 bedrooms, 5 modern baths, classic Renaissance gardens with fresh fruit and flowers. Fully staffed. Two miles of private trout and salmon fishing. Pheasant shooting. Available year round. Richard Kroon Y'64, 201-741-5692.

SKI CHALET, MAD RIVER GLEN, VT: Adjacent to lift, extremely comfortable and tasteful accommodations for twelve, all modern conveniences, available over Christmas holidays: 5 December to 8 January. Rate $250 daily. Contact owner: Francis Woods, 426 W. Cleveland, Bozeman, MT 59715. 406-586-3489.

HISTORIC SKI HOUSE, TELLURIDE, COLO.: Fully renovated landmark home. 4 bedrooms, 3 baths. Historic section of town, 3 blocks from lift. $450 per night including maid service. Call during office hours. 212-369-9210.

PROVENCE, FRANCE: 40 km. Avignon, rent beautiful restored farmhouse, furnished with antiques, all comfort and modern appliances, heating, 2 open firepl., 3 bedrooms, inner courtyard with fountain, gardens, calm, full view on Mt. Ventoux. Contact: B. Aldor, Le Rieufroid, 84340 MALAUCENE, France. Tel. 90-65-22-71.

FOR SALE

MANHATTAN: If selling a co-op, condominium, or townhouse, call about our unique 200 brokerage firm multi-list program. Sharon Baum w'62, S.W. Bird & Co., 331 Madison Ave., New York, NY; 212-351-2416.

EASTERN SHORE OF MD: Seeking residential property in waterfront mid-shore area, convenient to Washington, Baltimore and Phila.? Call Juana Mestres w'57. Clare Hughes Real Estate, Cambridge, MD 21613. 301-228-4236 (o), 301-228-4787 (h).

ISLAND HOUSE: See "For Rent, Stocking Island."

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK, COLORADO: Unique properties. 10% of commission proceeds donated, in your name, to the Yellowstone Bighorn Research Association in memory of my father, Professor Erling Dorf, Hon. '33. Bob Dorf 303-476-2421.

SHORT HILLS, NJ: Magnificently and completely restored 1880's Victorian. Unbelievable craftsmanship. Brick walls surround lush trees and formal gardens. Walk to village and NYC commute. Helen Hagerman w'30, Raymond Connolly, Realtors. 201-376-5323.

GREAT CAMANOE, BVI: Secluded home, magnificent view on private island. 2 BR, baths. Land Rover and Whaler. Doug Martin '54. 203-426-2928.

BOCA RATON, FLA., YACHTSMAN DREAM: Deep-water slip, 3,000 sq. ft. townhouse facing Boca Raton Hotel. Next to beach club and Boca Inlet. Magnificent home or investment. Phone 407-466-4219. 407-391-9072.

VERMONT BRICK SCHOOLHOUSE: C. 1890 (now charming 3-bedroom, 2-bath home). On Historic Register. 2 acres, cherry and apple trees, brook, meadow and woods. Near Killington. $119,900. Alan Darling '81. 802-387-5509 (day), 802-468-5619 (evening).

MANHATTAN, GRAMERCY PARK: Pied-a-terre. Modest one bedroom. Secure doorman building. $125,000. 718-NE9-6200.

MANHATTAN, EAST 70s: Beautifully appointed 1 bedroom co-op. Completely renovated, modern appliances and windows, hardwood floors. Doorman. Perfect for personal or corporate use. $155k, low maintenance charge. 212-772-7135.

MANHATTAN/BATTERY PARK CITY: Two bedroom high floor corner condominium with spectacular Hudson River views. Walk to work downtown. Luxury doorman building. $335,000, maint. $621. Jennifer Jordan '78. Office: 212-969-6259, home: 212-945-3113.

STUNNING CONTEMPORARY: Enjoy the serenity of five acres midway between NY and Phila. Panoramic 15-mile views; 9 rooms, 4 baths; library; 2 fireplaces; wine cellar; custom pool; gardens. $625,000. J. Wilk, Weidel Realty, 201-782-0100.

FOR SALE/FOR RENT

NANTUCKET—Come join the 400 happy Princeton families. We have large and small rentals, investment opportunities, estates and commercial enterprises. AND we give your investments TENDER, LOVING CARE—PREFERRED PROPERTIES. Nancie B. Taylor, w'43, Lucy T. Eaton, d'43. 508-228-2320, 800-338-7715.

WASHINGTON, DC, METROPOLITAN area, Northern Virginia, Maryland. Sales, rentals, land, property management. Colleen Finks w'61, associate broker, Pardoe & Graham, 6729 Curran St., McLean, VA 22101; 703-734-7020; eves., 703-821-2850.

FOR EXCHANGE

MONTEREY BAY, CALIFORNIA: Beach front luxury condo in exchange for like: Italy, Switzerland, France. Duke Slichter '54. 415-941-3244.

WANTED TO RENT

FRANCE, PROVENCE: House sleeping 6-8, May 25—June 22, 1991. Robert Lilien '48. 212-876-0733.

RESORTS & TRAVEL

LONDON, ENGLAND: Luxury self-catering apartments in the heart of Mayfair. We offer you the comfort and privacy of a recently converted period Georgian town house. British Breaks, Ltd., P.O. Box 1176, Middleburg, Virginia 22117. Telephone 703-687-6971. Fax 703-687-6291.

FLORIDA KEYS, BIG PINE KEY: Fantastic open water view, Key Deer Refuge, National Bird Sanctuary, still house, 3/2, screened porches, fully furnished, stained glass windows, swimming, diving, fishing, boat basin. 305-665-3832.

"NOT ONCE did I feel like a tourist; I felt an Italian friend was showing me his ITALY, his favorite spots." La Pergola, Tours, Inc.: A special company for the special traveler. Call for 1991 tour schedule. 914-358-6035.

ARIZONA GUEST RANCH: Riding ranch-bred horses, tennis, pool, fantastic birding, shooting, all in a verdant valley surrounded by historic mountains. Season, Nov. 1 to May 15, limited to 40 guests. Brochure, Circle Z Ranch, Box 194 P-2, Patagonia, AZ 85624, winter 602-287-2091, summer 814-425-3768, Don Simmons P'49 manager.

AFRICAN SAFARI: Deluxe photographic safari throughout Kenya. Superb accommodations: deluxe tented camps to Mt. Kenya Safari Club. Personal escort. Kathleen Colson w'79, African Safari Planners, 201-221-1854.

SCOTLAND: Ardsheal House, historic home of the Stewarts of Appin, now a country house hotel owned and run by Jane & Bob Taylor (Princeton '53). Located on coast in magnificent West Highlands. Superb food. Brochure: Ardsheal House, Kentallen of Appin, Argyll PA38 4BX, Scotland. Tel.: 44-63174-227. Fax: 44-63174-342. Open Easter to Nov.

BED & BREAKFAST

MANHATTAN B & Bs and private apartments. Prime locations, attractive rates. AT HOME IN NEW YORK, P.O. Box 407, NYC 10185. Lois Rooks, Director. 212-956-3125; fax 212-247-3294.

Princeton Alumni Weekly

Reaching 54,000
upscale, sophisticated
readers with every issue.

Published more frequently
than any other alumni
magazine in the world.

Why advertise with
anyone else?

For details please contact:
Ms. Lolly O'Brien/Advertising Director
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William Street, Princeton, New Jersey 08540
(609) 258-4886

D.C. AREA BED & BREAKFAST: 15 minutes from downtown. 301-229-4835.

PALLEY PLACE: A quiet retreat in Sierra foothills. 916-265-5427.

WANTED TO BUY

OLD TRAINS: Private collector interested in sets and collections. Contact David A. Hoffman, M.D. '54, 1330 Penn Ave., Wyomissing, PA 19610. 215-373-4271.

RARE BOOKS AND FIRST EDITIONS: We are interested in purchasing libraries or single volumes from the 15th to the 20th century. Top prices paid. Also, expert appraisals for individuals or institutions. David L. O'Neal '60, Antiquarian Booksellers, Inc., 234 Clarendon St., Boston, MA 02116; 617-266-5790.

BUSINESS SERVICES

PROFESSIONAL TAX PLANNING, ACCOUNTING, AUDIT REPRESENTATION. Personal and business. Enrolled to practice before IRS. By appointment. 212-947-6031. Virgil M. Cummins '67 (EA), 430 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10001.

YOUR MEMOIRS FOR YOUR FAMILY: Experienced author will help you organize and write your life and reflections. Details: Humanities Council, Princeton University 08544.

GOODS & SERVICES

CRAYFISH: Shipped live. Write for prices. Pyramid Farms Crayfish, 4340 Egypt Rd., Cambridge, MD 21613.

DO YOU LOVE YOUR WORK? If you don't, we'll help you define and find the work you want to do. We'll work with you until you've found your new career. Private sessions or small groups. Lois Schneider Career Counseling, 212-673-8861.

STEINWAY & SONS BABY GRAND PIANO. Brown mahogany cabinet/Sheraton style. Model "O" manufactured 1909. Excellent condition. Stuart Nunnery '71. 215-794-5135.

PLACE YOUR AD IN THE PRINCETON EXCHANGE

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____

State: _____ Zip: _____

Tel.#, (W): _____ (H): _____

My ad should run _____ time(s),

beginning the month of _____

Classification: _____

Payment for all insertions must accompany initial request. My check for $_____ is enclosed. Rates per insertion: 1-5 insertions, $1.50 per word; 6-10 insertions, $1.45 per word; 11-17 insertions, $1.40 per word. Send to: Princeton Exchange, Princeton Alumni Weekly, 41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540 (609)258-4888. No phone orders please. Issues are published 17 times from September through July. Ads will appear five-six weeks after receipt. When calculating payment, multiply number of words X number of insertions X rate per word to arrive at total price. P.O. Box number counts as two words, phone number as one word. No charge for zip code or class numerals. We cannot accept PAW box numbers. Please attach this coupon to text and make checks payable to Princeton Alumni Weekly.

Class Notes

12

ARTHUR C. HOLDEN

Box 182

Washington, CT 06793; 203-868-7063

We have heard from Donald Kruse that his father, Reverend W. Roberts Kruse, died Sept. 23 at the Presbyterian Home in West Philadelphia. A memorial will appear in due course. This reduces the living members of 1912 to two, Eef Gordy and the Class president who was last elected at our 65th reunion in June 1977, namely, L'U Arthur Holden.

The Class constitution states that the officers shall serve until their successors are elected. It would take a constitutional amendment to hold an election without a quorum. We shall merely attempt to carry on and continue to invite the progeny of the Class, whether they went to Princeton or not, to visit Princeton at reunion time. Suggestions will appear in this column respecting the reassembly of the class family as defined by our former president, "Duke" Medina.

13

ALISON R. BRYAN

Box F

Frenchtown, NJ 08825

The Class has received a letter from the daughter of our classmate Charles C. Dunlap, Mrs. John C. Weeks. She loves to recall Reunions such as the ones in the 1920s and 1930s, when her father, "Bush" Dunlap, carried her on his shoulders in the P-rade.

Happy Thanksgiving to the Class and all our kin.

14

C. EARL MOORE

Rosemont Plaza, Apt. 117

Rosemont, PA 19010

An interesting letter was recently received from Nancy Rogers, one of our loyal widows. Nancy's husband was our classmate Midge Rogers. Nancy states that she moved to Hilton Head, S.C., about a year ago and is thoroughly enjoying life in this retirement resort, and as she says, it is well run, and has good food and excellent service. Her youngest son and his wife live nearby, and they thoroughly enjoy the advantages and atmosphere of Hilton Head. Nancy's other son lives in Cincinnati. Nancy says she has so many grandchildren spread along the East Coast that she can't count them all. Her daughter died last Nov. and Nancy misses her dreadfully. She was 69 and Nancy is 93.

Our classmate Norman Rogers studied law by himself, and in 1918 set himself up in the practice of law in Trenton, N.J. His legal career led from one official position to another, and in 1949, he was appointed judge of the superior court of the State of N.J., by Governor Driscoll.

17

ICE GRAMMER, c/o Chemical Bank

30 Rockefeller Plaza, Ste. 6100

New York, NY 10112

We were saddened to receive word from Leila Poullada that her father, our beloved classmate, Norrie Jackson, died Sept. 29 from injuries following a fall at his home. Our deepest sympathy is extended to Leila and her sister, Catherine Wise, and their children and grandchildren. Norrie was a devoted member of the Class and attended most of our Class functions with his wonderful wife, Betty.

A most interesting letter was received from Sarah

Sayed, a recipient of the Cabell Breckenridge Ten Eyck War Memorial Scholarship, expressing her deep appreciation to the Class for this grant. She graduated in June 1990 with honors in sociology.

Pam and Kent Cokwell had a busy summer entertaining friends from England at their home in Morristown, N.J. They also received visits from Jack Stoltze's daughter, from a son who resides in Calif., and from several grandchildren. One of their grandsons made front-page news in Boise, Id., following his successful rescue of a woman who was trapped in her car in water. The governor of Idaho wrote them a letter of appreciation following this life-saving effort.

19

GEORGE B. LARSEN

14 Lake Forest Dr.

Charlottesville, VA 22901

The Sept. 12 issue included a statement that Stan Quay had died. That is not so. Stan is doing quite well, and his address is Chambrel at Island Lake, 160 Island Ct., Ste. A, Longwood, FL 32570; 407-830-9190. This information was provided by his nephew, Richard D. Quay. We are very sorry we made the mistake in Sept.

We have a memorial in this issue.

20

SALLY S. McALPIN w'20

Box 670

Princeton, NJ 08542

Did everyone hear my buttons popping when I opened the Princeton folder that reports the Class giving records for Annual Giving in 1989? At the top of the list, the very top, two words stood out—"Nelson Dane," and, next to it, "100%." Besides doing the treasurer's work, Nelson took over when Bill Savage died and solicited the whole Class for A.G., continuing Bill's record of five years of 100% giving by the Class of 1920. That is something for us to shout about and Nelson, right on top of our notes, looks as though he were accepting our cheers! We are also on the honor roll for having a column in each of PAW's 16 regular issues from Sept. 1989 through June 1990.

Probably it will be a cold November day when this column is read. Let's warm up a bit by thinking back to some of our summer holidays. Ed Pulling added another summer to his forty years on the shores of Nantucket. All seven of his children joined him. Frank Dixon was in his usual skyscraper apartment in Chicago, sitting in a nice breeze watching the lake and its activities: boats, beaches, and Wonderview Pier. All we know of Nelson is that he celebrated Carmen's birthday, but that is good news to us oldsters. Carl Donner goes every summer to Colorado Springs to join his son and family. Then they are joined by his daughter and her family who come from Hawaii, and a son-in-law with three sons. My telephone notes when I spoke to Carl are annoyingly brief, so forgive me Carl if I have endowed you with too many progeny.

21

A. EDWARD CONOVER
331 Lower Doolington Rd., Apt. C-4
Newtown, PA 18940

We have heard from John M. Hamilton that he is writing a book on the life and times of Richard Halliburton. If any reader of this column has any memories or anecdotes of those years write to Mr. Hamilton at 8809 Stockton Pkwy., Alexandria, VA 22308, or phone him at 703-360-6297. He would greatly appreciate your contribution to his project. Richard Halliburton was lost in the Pacific 51 years ago when the Chinese junk he was sailing to San Francisco was caught in a severe typhoon.

No doubt all classmates, their wives, and children remember reading THE ROYAL ROAD TO ROMANCE.

Varney Mead's daughter remembers that her father saved the DAILY PRINCETONIAN article about his winning a contest for the best slogan for a current endowment fund campaign. It was "If money talks, let's hear the tiger roar."

Now that we are all over 90 here is a clue how to live to be 100: after ninety, live very carefully.

William L. Barclay still lives in Rye, N.Y., but has moved to 17 Rockridge Rd.

We have a memorial in this issue.

22

JACK REYNOLDS, JOHN GARTNER
103 East 84th St.
New York, NY 10028

We recently received a letter from Frank Corcoran. Frank is living in Locust Valley, N.Y., plays golf frequently and has wonderful memories of Princeton and his classmates. Frank enclosed a copy of the recent tombstone about the Japanese purchase of an interest in Rockefeller Center, and wrote, 'After the restoration of Williamsburg, Va. by Todd & Brown, Mr. John D. Rockefeller engaged Webb Todd and his father, the founder of Todd & Brown, to develop Rockefeller Center. Todd & Brown was in charge of construction. Nelson A. Kenworthy was in charge of maintenance of the original buildings. The writer, a member of the original renting staff during the depths of the depression, was later a V.P. and director of R.C.I. in charge of renting the original buildings, and a V.P. and director for the Time-Life building. These positions held until retirement in 1961. Dick Mansfield, a director of Chase Bank, was head of the Chase branch in the center. This branch was the largest in deposits in the city next to the Met Life branch further south. Bill Irons was a member of the construction firm Barr, Irons & Lane. The Todds awarded this firm the construction contract for, I recall, the R.K.O. building, and possibly the center theater—later demolished to provide an addition to the U.S. Rubber Building. Bill's brother Clay '21 was also a member of the firm. Irons's father was a trustee of Princeton, as was Webb Todd's father.'

Webb Todd and Harold Carter each received a lovely '22 bell as a gift from Clark Hungerford when the Frisco Railroad was converted from steam. Dwight D. Eisenhower also received the same for his farm in Gettysburg. Are there any others?

23

LARRY GOOD
201 W. Evergreen Ave., Apt. 716
Philadelphia, PA 19118

Although this year's Oct. 20 Harvard game was something of a disappointment, the weather could not have been more perfect. Notably, members of the U.S. Army Golden Knights Parachute Team, jumping from an altitude of 13,000 feet, were on hand to bring the game ball onto the field for the opening of the game.

Donald Griffin was among the many orange-and-black-clad fans who filled Palmer Stadium to marvel at the world-champion jumpers, watch football, and bask in the autumn sun.

Griffin reminisced about earlier football games, and, in particular, the Princeton-Harvard game in the fall of 1921, when Ralph Gilroy dashed from a "West Virginia split formation" for a winning touchdown. At the end of that 1921 season, Gilroy was elected captain of the team for his senior season.

Later, however, Gilroy was declared ineligible to play for a violation of a scholarship agreement (he was accused of having secured financial support from outside of University channels). Mal Dickenson '22 was then elected captain to replace him. Although he was unable to play with the team, Gilroy proved himself an extraordinary person, who, according to Don Griffin, "came down to practice with the team every single day, and supported the team nothing short of magnificently."

We have a memorial in this issue.

24

RICHARD H. HOMES
862 Prospect Ave.
Winnetka, IL 60093

The University combines the income from the Class of 1924 and the Henry Kirkland Scholarships to send students to foreign countries for study during their spring semester.

In 1989 seven students benefited from these scholarships, while in 1990 the following eight were recipients. The students and their locations abroad were: Paul Burns '91, Rome; Erendira Fabian '91, Rome; Estuardo Farrera '91, Spain; Peter Fishkin '91, London; Diane Lyndon '91, Australia; Teresa Ramirez '90, Paris; Marveta Ryan '91, Ecuador; and Philip Steinlauf '91, Israel.

We received a very nice letter of thanks from Marveta Ryan, which reads in part: "My semester abroad was my first time traveling outside the U.S. I learned so much from the studies and gained plenty of valuable experience. I now understand more about the structure and functioning of society, more about the relationship between the U.S. and Latin America, and more about Ecuadorian and Puerto Rican culture... Now that I have traveled abroad, I feel capable of traveling on my own to continue preparing myself academically. I have been awarded two travel grants to study in France and the Dominican Republic this summer." Marveta hopes to teach romance languages.

25

JOHN L. K. JENNEY
Box 123
Montchanin, DE 19710

LAST NOTICE: Don't fail to notify Harry Steeger if you can attend the Class lunch in N.Y. on Dec. 6.

Jim Nields, having finally given up flying his own plane, flew commercially to New Orleans in early Oct. to attend a dinner given by the Intl. General Commission of the Fédération Aéronautique Internationale at which Jim received the "highest honor within its power," the Lindbergh Diploma for 1989, which is given for "significant contribution to the progress of sporting and transportation aviation." He is only the second American to receive this award. We do not have a copy of his well-received acceptance speech.

The George Kennans, having spent a pleasant summer in Norway, left Oct. 1 for a visit to Russia. The Sept. 20 N.Y. Times included a selection of letters published in the op ed column over the past 20 years, one by George in 1981. Like so many of his published writings, it is especially interesting in retrospect: "It is not that there is no truth in many of the things people say and believe about the Russians... a great deal of exaggeration and simplification is involved... Soviet society is made up of human beings like ourselves." Pete Street advises that George's signature now achieves an established fee from autograph dealers. This suggests that other classmates who have attained this distinction and some who may feel it not yet too late in life to do so, promptly sit down and send in much needed information for this column, over their full signature. Proceeds of any fees obtained from autograph dealers will go to Annual Giving Agent Buel Weare, whose new address is 204 Fair Haven, 7200 Third Ave., Sykesville, MD 21784.

Thelma and Gordon Groth celebrated their 62nd wedding anniversary in the large dining room of the Standforth Court Retirement Home in La Mesa, Calif., where they recently moved.

26

ROBERT WOHLFORTH
57 Rockwell Rd.
Ridgefield, CT 06877

First and last motorcycle ride! That was how Fritz Kellogg celebrated his 86th birthday in part in Denver, Colo., at a family party in his honor, when his young grandson turned up with a new two-wheeler and gave Fritz a spin around the block. Reports Fritz, "That's the first time I've ever been on a motorcycle—which I think are dangerous—and I'm sure it will be the last." Lucy and Fritz are off to Europe and are planning a hop from London to Vienna on the Orient Express.

Classmates in their youth! The upcoming SUMMER SUMMARY, scheduled to appear at our 65th reunion next June, needs pictures of classmates in their salad days, of Class events in the 1920s, of undergraduate University functions, of weddings and anniversaries. So dig into your family albums, select the best and clearest prints, have copies made, write complete data and identification on the back, and send in promptly. Absolutely the final call on this project!

Celebrating his 86th birthday last Aug. 28 was Marsh Harrington, who, with Lil, was in residence at his Mitchellville, Md., retirement home.

Gus Lobo, our star peregrinator, who claims both youth and health, is planning another world cruise in 1991. The only difference between Stew Peyton's golf game and that of his club pro is that Stew takes as many strokes for his first nine holes as his pro takes for the whole eighteen.

Out in Uniontown, Penn., the birthplace of General George C. Marshall, a prominent member of the organization establishing a memorial to the distinguished statesman and Army officer is our Ed Dumbauld, senior U.S. judge for western Penn.

One reason why Ed Wilson's grandson, Tom, (son of Ken '67) was a star third baseman and pitcher on the St. Alban's School team in Washington, D.C., last spring was Grandpa Ed doing the honors in the cheering section both at home and on the road.

We have a memorial in this issue.

27

NELSON R. BURN
36 Lexington Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06119

Jack Sands, combating severe spinal problems, was hospitalized for several weeks, but is making a good recovery. In a Sept. 20 letter to Kuich Mayers, he happily described a visit from Bernie Thulin, who presented him with a watermelon from a place his son cultivates in the vicinity of Richmond. Says Jack "IT WAS GREAT!" Jack says that Damerel has always been enthusiastic about '27 socializing in Richmond. Sure, he makes a lot of it.

Attention, all '27ers! Before the Brown game there was an important meeting of Class officers in Fine Tower, attended by President Jim Westfall, Ted Bachran, George Denniston, and Kutch Mayers, together with officers of about every functioning class. The purpose was to explain the plans to steam up the efforts of all classes to inspire the largest possible gifts to A.G. in the years of major reunions. Remember when the 65th gets here!

The secretary is slowly recovering from cataract surgery on his left eye, can read large print, and even drive on short errands. He wishes that he could be as upbeat about the reception of Class news. The little in this column is all that has come in for weeks. How about some accounts of summer vacations and travels? Special thanks to Kutch for his faithful reporting.

28

R. PARK JOHNSON
Box 28
Penney Farms, FL 32079; 904-284-8698

These days there is apt to be more news being made by the children of '28ers than by their octogenarian parents. John Harris Harbison, son of our late classmate Jinx Harbison and his wife, Janet, is a distinguished musician and composer, a professor at M.I.T., and a winner of many awards. He played the viola, which has been described as "a fairly bashful instrument," as a boy, but turned to the piano when he found he could earn more money for college by playing jazz.

Harbison's "Concerto for Viola and Orchestra" was commissioned by the N.J. Symphony as part of a project shared by the St. Paul and Los Angeles chamber orchestras. The premiere was played by the N.J. Symphony in Richardson Hall on May 18. The composer says, "I learned music as a violist, it taught me a great deal about composition. When it came to writing a concerto for viola, I wrote for the instrumental timbres I felt to be the most typical of the instrument, its tenor and alto voice, rather than its rather unnatural treble." Harbison also explains, "For this concerto there is only one section of violin, no first/second violin. The violins are scored high and low, leaving the middle as the area where the viola shines."

The annual Class luncheon will be held at the Princeton Club of N.Y. on Mon., Dec. 3. Don Liddell will be sending notices and reservation cards. Wives, families, and guests are welcome. This is always a sociable and enjoyable occasion.

Jack Goodwin died Oct. 9 at the Stamford Hospital. Jack was the faithful treasurer of our Class for a long time, and our sympathy is with his wife, Polly, their daughter, Lynne, and son, John Jr.

29

LOUISE F. KEMP
12 Winthrop Rd.
Gulford, CT 06437; 203-453-4646

A bounteous Thanksgiving to all in the Class. Dutch Brodhead, who had been active in the Crusader Club (founded in 1912) during our undergraduate years, was dismayed to learn at our 60th reunion that it had not had a reunion since 1979. He wrote, "Deciding to do something about it, I wrote to 218 living members. The response was so encouraging that I took responsibility for a get-together last June 9 and could not let the boys (and now six women members) down."

Win Gottschalk leads a quiet life in Belmont, Mass., but goes down to Harvard once in a while to keep up somewhat with physics. (Win was a dedicated physicist, hold an M.S. degree from Cal.Tech. and a Ph.D. from Harvard.) He and wife Ruth took in the Princeton Night at the Pops concert, mainly run by the Class of 1957. Every other year he takes his son and son-in-law to the Harvard-Princeton game, where, as his son says, they get the best seats in the house. Win was married only four days after graduation and has had a wonderful life.

Rev Chapman is enjoying retired life. "Good health, good friends, Colorado weather! What more could anyone ask!"

After a long confinement on the Cape due to fragile health last spring, Margaret and Bob McNamara took off and visited Princeton, Meadow Lakes in Hightstown, and Ireland for a month.

Sadly, I report the death of Dr. Merritt Burnham Low on June 25, 1990. A memorial will follow.

30

HUBERT A. "RED" SCHMIDT
8008 Westover Rd.
Bethesda, MD 20814

The Class directory which you have all received includes a totally erroneous list of Class officers. It includes names which should not be there. It omits names which should be there. It leaves out a number of important positions and puts some people in the wrong slots. Your secretary has not the slightest idea how this occurred and would apologize were he in any way responsible for what went wrong in the printing process up at Princeton. As is he can only express his regret that some members of the Class were embarrassed by this foul-up. So just rip that page from the directory and forget it. The correct list of Class officers was published in the July 18 Reunions issue of the WEEKLY.

Lou Klauder spent an interesting July in Austria with a group of trolley buffs. They visited some 20 places where they rode trollies still in operation. Following that, Lou left the group and visited Prague, Dresden, Leipzig, East Berlin, and Erfurt, where he looked up some relatives. In Sept. Lou and Betsy enjoyed a cruise in the Greek islands.

Speaking of Lou Klauder, our new treasurer, don't overlook his dues notice. We have a record of about 70% dues payers, which is pretty good, but there are still some of you out there whose receipt of the WEEKLY and whose participation in Class affairs is being subsidized by those who pay dues.

John Gorman and his wife visited Blue Mountain Lake in the Adirondacks and were entertained at the homes of Hobie Brinsmade and Paul Maloney.

Last May, Chuck Baton had a gall bladder removed which kept him off the golf course for six weeks. However, he and Fran did cruise from Copenhagen through the Baltic to Leningrad, back to London and N.Y. via the Azores.

We regret to report the death of Ed Brown's wife, Norma, after 55 years of marriage.

31

HUON T. KIM
15-01-U Meadow Lakes
Hightstown, NJ 08520; 609-448-4100

Anyone identify "the beautiful spitfire" pictured here and her young son? She was listed in the fall 1990 LIFE among the 100 most important Americans in the 20th century. She had ten brothers and sisters; on her first nursing assignment watched a woman die of a self-induced abortion; coined the term "birth control"; was arrested and jailed many times. It is, of course, Margaret Sanger, and, nestling gently in his mother's arms is none other than our late Grani Sanger. Immensely proud of his mother, Dr. Grant up to the time of his recent death was speaking on behalf of Planned Parenthood to large audiences all over the country.

HERE AND THERE: Mike Bosak, along with Desna and Steve Lewis, took in an Alumni College session in Alsace (Dan White '65, also on hand, sends a photo of Mike nattily attired with beret). Bill Cairns, our Bronx twinkle-toes dance instructor, teaches folk dancing classes at local senior centers. Everyone is urged to harken to Arthur Crocker's dues letter even though he says he prefers "Crock" to "Art." Bill Ferguson sends a folder about son John and his award-winning metal sculptures. John has exhibited his massive figures in Baltimore, Washington, New Hope, Oak Park, and Lake Forest. Pictures show him at work with welding visor, ear protectors, and nose mask. Dave Lavender advises that he and Muriel were married last Feb. and that they both plan to be at our 60th. Jens Tellefsen made his usual summer Scandinavia trip and announces that in addition to himself, three of his tribe (Jens '62, Dag '66, and Jens '94) will attend the 60th. That should make a picture!

After Thanksgiving, the holidays. But, as they say, for anyone over thirty, the thanksgiving comes afterwards.

32

MATLAND A. EDEY
Seven Gates Farm
Vineyard Haven, MA 02568

Don't Forget: Class dinner, cocktails Nassau Club, Princeton, Dec. 11.

Buck Rauson, who has spent his life in trucking and has received many industry awards over the years, is now officially retired. But he has not entirely severed his connection with the American Truck Historical Society, whose birth he attended when it had 200 members (present membership 11,000), and whose magazine he founded in 1974 and to which he still contributes. For all those years of support and guidance Buck recently received the society's highest award for doing the most for "furthering its goals." All this, Buck points out, has come about despite the fact that he has never owned a truck and only occasionally driven one. But he has spent 65 years writing about them. Oh the power of the pen.

A long article in the Lancaster (Penn.) INTELLIGENCER JOURNAL is devoted to the athletic prowess of John Ranck. We remember him, of course, as an outstanding pole vaulter on the track team, but we knew nothing of his skills as a tennis player, baseball player, golfer, and three-cushion billiards player. Those other skills he didn't have time for at college, but he honed them later, won many local tennis and golf championships, and single-handedly nagged his club, the Hamilton Club, into building squash courts. He then became the dean of squash in Lancaster City and taught a generation of younger members how to play. Voted one of the smoothest and best dressed of '32 by his classmates, John kept up his sartorial standards, and some years later could be seen at horse-racing events in England wearing a cutaway coat and a gray top hat. Pictures of him in that garb exist, but, alas, we have been unable to get our hands on one.

We have memorials in this issue.

33

ARTHUR MOODY
600 E. Cathedral Rd., Apt. A314
Philadelphia, PA 19128

There have been a number of 80th birthday parties recently. Next they will come thick and fast, so we won't be able to cover them all in this column, but among those in recent months have been: Miller Gaffney, in June; recently, in Baltimore, Fife Symington, attended by Oren Root, Griswold, Constable, Ketdel, and their wives; and at this writing (Oct. 15) Ray Carter, scheduled for Oct. 17. Don't hesitate to send news of such parties. We have room in the summer newsletter. Also, any classmates who still send Christmas letters are urged to put Art Moody on their list. Some already have.

A two-part item from Ez Eberhardt: one, his son Henry, most recently director of the Dartmouth Alumni Fund, is leaving for Halifax, Nova Scotia, where he will be V.P. of Dalhousie Univ. for development, alumni affairs, and public relations—quite a portfolio; two, Ez has published a genealogy of the Hudson family prepared jointly with Bob Hudson, and is working on a history of his father's firm, Gould and Eberhardt.

A sidelight on the Broadmoor event: Bob Clifford brought along a copy of TIME magazine, Sept. 15, 1952, featuring a cover picture of Soapy Williams, bow tie and grin, with a cover story entitled "Prodigy's Progress."

From Bill Heuson: Art Campbell was the first dues payer, followed by 75 more. We need at least 200 to remain solvent, so keep those checks coming in. Everyone seems delighted with the summer newsletter, but it does cost money.

We are very sorry to report the death on Oct. 11 of Walt Compton in Elkhart, Ind.

Don't forget the Christmas Luncheon, with ladies, on Dec. 20 at the Nassau Club.

We have memorials in this issue.

34

RALPH K. FITCH
4347 Province Line Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Bill Eisenbart was roundly applauded for his on-site management of our thoroughly enjoyable mini at Skytop in the Poconos last month. From our arrival and opening cocktail party to our departure a couple of days later, Bill and Hazel arranged everything perfectly. Betty and Fred Kafer, from Hudson, Ohio, drove eight hours on their 54th wedding anniversary to be with us; Ralph Hubbard brought his new wife, the former Mary Gibson of Conroe, Tex., a splendid addition to the group; and John S. Evans, who doesn't drive, made it from Atlanta, via Princeton, Mercersburg, Winchester, Va. (where he spent the night with Fenton and Johnny Scully), Washington, Newark, and Englewood. The other happy Skytoppers included Lonnie and Gordy Brown, Barbara and Frank Constantine, Middle and Churub Eisenbart, Mary and Gene Gerhart, Ruth and Tom Hamilton, Janet and Mal Johnson, Alex Keer, Doris and Norm Kennedy, Addie and Ralph Ruchie, Weasel and Bayard Roberts, and Margie and Frank Van Dusen.

Cbet Botts, a resident of St. Petersburg for the last 17 years, owns and operates John Botts Associates, a management and marketing consulting business, and devotes spare time to volunteer work, travel, and tennis. He is a trustee and the secretary of a 450-bed hospital and does business counseling with SCORE (Service Corps of Retired Executives). In the last few years he was on assignment in India for SCORE and the U.S. State Dept., and in Sri Lanka on assignment for I.E.S.C. (International Executive Service Corps). On both occasions he was accompanied by his wife, Peggy. Last year he and Peggy celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with their three children and six grandchildren.

Remember Annual Giving.

35

JOSEPH C. HAZEN JR.
94 Essex Rd.
Summit, NJ 07901

KUDOS. Hugh Sweeny of Westport, Conn. has been honored by his colleagues in Junior Achievement, an organization that administers a nationwide, nonprofit education program. They have established a scholarship in Hugh's name which will go each year to a college student who does special volunteer work, and last summer they brought Hugh to Indiana Univ. to present the award to the first recipient. Before his retirement in 1978, Hugh had been associated with Junior Achievement for 32 years and was its natl. program director. Similarly, the former colleagues of Art Bowen in the Princeton Assn. of New England have honored him with a special award for his role in establishing the association's schools committee and for "the many innovative ideas he brought to the association in its formative years." Arthur Jr. accepted the award for his father, who died in 1980.

THE GRANDEST. Vying for top honors among grandfathers, Tom McCabe announced the birth of his 14th in Aug. Tom and Martha, the parents of four children, live in Mendham, N.J. (Meanwhile, Bob Whaley's claim to "the greatest" goes unchallenged. As reported earlier, he is the great-grandfather of nine.)

LIKE FATHER . . . In the fall of 1933 Kurt Ladenburg transferred from the Univ. of Berlin to Princeton, where his father was a professor of physics. Today, Kurt, too, is a professor: adjunct professor of bio-engineering at Clemson College in S.C. He took that assignment in 1979 after distinguishing himself in chemical research and engineering for several large industrial companies. Kurt, who earned a Ph.D. at Princeton as well as his B.A. in chemistry, is now applying his research talents to environmental and energy-related fields.

36

JAMES Q. BENSON
24 Aylesbury Cir., Windermere
Madison, CT 06443

Last June at our 54th, Sid Silleck snapped this picture of Jack Strazza, wife, Eileen; daughter, Nona; and spouse, Cris.

On Oct. 3 at Prospect, Princeton, the Class executive committee had an important meeting with the main agenda items being our 55th reunion and our A.G. campaign to celebrate that milestone. Those attending: Bensen, French, Glibby, Glassmeyer, Groel, Hancock, Hemingway, Jesser, G. S. Jones, Menand, Nebr, Osborne, Richard, Ryan, Schelde, Severance, Trevor, and E. M. Williams.

Dr. Fritz Hummel reports he and Ruth were in England last May. Always on the lookout for erotic beer cans for making his terrific waste baskets, he found some 40, enough for two more baskets.

David A. Robertson, now living at 55 Woodside La. in Princeton, spent last Mar. and Apr. visiting the U.S.S.R. Roger Walke states his health is generally good. He plays some tennis, walks, reads, writes, and does what his wife, Maryann, tells him to do. He concludes he would willingly get into mischief if he could!

Traveler Ed Dawson spent a great summer in Maine. George Stewart still almost daily goes to his office. John W. Thompson spends some time each winter in Florida. George Onken, following doctor's orders, feels quite well.

We regret the death Sept. 17 of Robert H. Alford.

37

STANISLAV F. MEDINA
250 Broadway, Rm. 2104
New York, NY 10007

Yes, that's our latest Class child, "wonderful" Miriam Elizabeth, at age six months, born to Martha, age 37, and Irving Segal last Jan. 7, so he now has two sons and two daughters. Of course, he cheats on the rest of us, as he's only 72, but the information has been authenticated, even over the telephone hearing her crying in the background. Speaking of age, Brons Tweedy, age 76, invited Newt Cutler to the Edgartown Golf Club for a driving contest for the geriatric, over-75 group, and Newt told him indignantly that he was not over 75.

Coming to more usual occurrences, Naomi and Cbet Fairlie's Wendy was married to Nicholas Wallick III Sept. 15 in Hartford, with Sarah and Bob Edwards, Eleanor and Ed Mosebauer, and Sarah and Charley Rob in attendance. Bob noticed another Princeton touch, the hymn sung, "Joyful, Joyful, We Adore Thee," was written by Henry Van Dyke, Class of 1873.

We hasten to correct that Gar Lotspeich's wife, Grace, had all the hip operations, not Gar, as evidenced by a postcard showing location of their home on beautiful Walloon Lake, Gar's rowing habitat, just off Lake Michigan.

Hear ye, hear ye. Ferenbach is looking for something to do besides running our 55th reunion as he has just completed two years of work running the Curtis Cup ladies' golf held at Somerset Hills Country Club last July 28-29. He was treasurer and what he calls logistics chairman, i.e., being the only one retired, running 26 committee chairmen and, naturally, ending up with a substantial profit, of which, Percy Pyne and Brad Cochran take note, as it just "might" reduce the Club's dues and assessments.

We have a memorial in this issue.

38

WILLIAM P. TAMS
Box 167
Moran, WY 83013; 307-543-2396

Last winter Francie and Lloyd Lockbridge did Southern California, during the course of which they joined the Bill Watsons and Bill Halseys for lunch at the La Jolla Beach and Country Club. Bill Watson has long since discarded his crutches, which were the result of two-and-a-half years of hip replacements, and now uses only a cane. The Watsons now spend about half the year in La Jolla and the other half in San Francisco at 1998 Broadway, Apt. 1503, zip 94109, tel. 415-346-4604.

Jean and John Stoddard's European trip in March included, in addition to more conventional destinations, Czechoslovakia and Poland. John writes: "Traveling alone and by train, it was fascinating to visit these finally-liberated lands. Prague is truly beautiful and Warsaw an interesting study in restoration techniques, but both were sad and depressing. The Poles, in particular, seemed to be well on their way to achieve a market economy and hopefully things will finally improve for them. Gould Jones visited us briefly here in Connecticut upon our return from Europe. It was great to see him."

Our Class Notes editor, Nuala (say Noola) O'Connor '89 is also serving as assistant master of Wilson College. She has an apartment in 1938 Hall, which she says is lovely and which she promises to take good care of for us.

IN MEMORIAM: Walter Hankin of Trenton, Aug. 9, of cancer. A memorial will follow.

39

RICHARD R. UHL
12 Charlotte Ct.
Briarcliff Manor, NY 10510

Eight years ago when Brud Harper swam from England to France, he became the oldest person to do so. Since then an older man took up the challenge and did it. So this past summer our 73-year old classmate tried once again to regain that distinction. He was halfway over and going strong when the English Coast Guard intervened, forcing him out of the water because of poor visibility—about 100 yards—right in the middle of the shipping lanes. The Coast Guard thought a solo swimmer and his entourage in a small fishing boat would be no match for a cargo ship bearing down out of the fog. A great disappointment for Brud. But he partially made up for it a few days later when he and a team of five other New Mexican swimmers did complete a relay crossing of the channel. The rest of us can only wonder what it is about landlocked New Mexico that produces these long-distance ocean swimmers.

Brud's story came to us from Johnny Cline who credits "our Class clipping agent in Albuquerque, my brother-in-law Ed Peeples." While Brud took the hard way in the Atlantic, the Clines tackled the Pacific in more leisurely fashion aboard the VISTAFORD. John had long hankered to revisit the scenes of his WWII service with his ship, PORTLAND, in the South Pacific, and P.J. looked forward to seeing it all with him. The VISTAFORD obliged, taking them to Australia by way of Honolulu, Tarawa, Guadalcanal, and New Caledonia. Along the way John renewed acquaintance with people and places from long ago.

40

BENJAMIN FULLER
6119 Vernon Terr.
Alexandria, VA 22307; 703-329-1961

BRAND NEW NEWS: Our thanks to Tracy and John Boozan '79 for issuing this splendid photo of Charlie "Buzzer" Boozan taking delight in his first grandchild, Peter Meehan Boozan, who joined Grandpa Buzzer's thriving Princeton descendants on May 23, 1990. In addition to father John, there are two other Princeton sons/brothers—Bill '77 and James '81. With three sons all graduating so closely together, Buzzer has undoubtedly accomplished a feat unmatched by any other classmate. Not only is Buzzer a brand-new grandfather, but he is to become our brand new reunion chairman for the next five years. We are grateful to him for taking on this position and promise our full support and attendance. A brand-new Class Travel Committee has been installed, headed by Bucky Turner, assisted by Chiz Anderson, Nick Biddle, and Brooks Jones. Before too long you will be receiving trip suggestions from them.

Two brand new holders of the Class of 1940 War Memorial Scholarship have been chosen. They are: Stephanie Detlefsen '92 from Colusa, Calif., in pre-med studies and women's softball; and Eric Arnault '94 from Hornell, N.Y., a pre-med student and freshman football candidate.

Princeton resident Charlie Kuebner states that classmates traveling in the area on the first Friday from Sept. to June are invited to lunch with the '40 Princeton contingent. They assemble in "the Nass under Dick Kazmaier's picture" at noon.

We have a memorial in this issue.

41

BILL WILSON
Box 1420
Bridgehampton, NY 11932; 516-537-2458

The position of Class V.P. has languished vacant ever since the incumbent was demoted to Class secretary early this year. No longer. On Oct. 6 President Paul Douglas's Executive Committee ratified the appointment of Stuart A. Young Jr., esq., to this increasingly vital post. Stu lives in nearby Rumson, N.J., which is a blessing now that Paul and Julie have moved to their retirement nirvana in Chapel Hill, N.C.

Henry Hillman's wife, Elsie, continues to support Princeton's Westminster Choir College both with her talent and her substance. She herself studied there before Henry married her. Together they recently gave the college $1.4 million from the Hillman Foundation. Many readers may know that Elsie ran President George Bush's election campaign in Penn.

Fred Williamson has retired from being C.E.O. of the Goodall Rubber Co. in Trenton, an industrial mill which had been used to turn out Civil War uniforms for the Union Army. Fred started out there at $16 per week in 1940. He and his wife, Kit, live in New Hope, Penn. Dick Poole no longer teaches French and tennis at the Princeton Country Day School but continues to live in Princeton.

Earlier this year the N.Y. TIMES printed a picture of Ned Chase in the company of Mrs. Brooke Astor, perhaps N.Y.C.'s leading charity lady, and certainly its most gracious. Ned was mentioned as the editor of several distinguished published biographies as well as being the proud father of Hollywood's Chevy Chase.

There is happy news that a gentleman named Garnett Y. Clark ("Maryland born and bred, St. John's College, and an old salt") has found, courted, won, and married our own Mary Jane Thacher. The ceremony was on Aug. 10, 1990, and they are living in Crab Town—otherwise known as Annapolis. All best wishes to them.

42

ARMSTRONG HUNTER
R.R. 1, Box 250
Perkinsville, VT 05151; 802-263-5361

LOTTERY

LOTTO

Sat. August 11

6-10-17

18-19-42

Bob Mayer's sharp eyes spotted That Number, ever a winner, in a Fla. newspaper in Aug.

Bob and Helen Cooper and Jim and Dinna Howley were signed up for the Santa Fe mini-reunion but didn't get there.

Bob's Skaneateles, N.Y. doctor scheduled him for a lung operation instead; Jim was home in Fla. nursing a foot fractured during a visit to Long Island the week before—doubly sad because the Howleys planned to go on from Santa Fe to Calif. to meet a great-grandson born in Apr. At Oct. column deadline, both Bob and Jim are well on the mend. Not signed up for Santa Fe, but holding a mini of their own in Maine were residents Jack and Jane Staman and George and Alice McAdams, who welcomed newly-married Bill and Patsy Munger (N.J.) and Bud and Tina Vivian (summer, Mass.; winter, N.J.).

A Sept. change-of-address notice from the University indicated that Tom Doyle had moved from Boynton Beach, Fla., to Somers, N.Y. In these "retire to the sun" days this seemed unusual enough to warrant a call. The call brought some catching up. Tom, widower since wife Muriel's death in Jan. 1988, married June Meder in July 1989. He is fully retired now from the real estate business in Bronxville, and except for summers the Doyle's live in Boynton Beach (we'll expect another address-change notice from Princeton soon). Small world item: June (who has a Princeton son-in-law) said her sister lives in a tiny town in Vermont named Baltimore. Baltimore, Vt. is tiny, all right, but I can see it from our mailbox.

Steve Steinbauser (Fla.) reports an Apr. item: "Had pleasant visit from Topper and Nancy Cook discussing the '42 video. They were down this way for a croquet tournament in Boca Grande."

43

JACK LAPLIN
10 Vardon Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06117; 203-523-8929

Our Dr. John Seed, chairman of the Princeton Medical Center's department of family practice, has had his 30-year mission of reducing heart attack risk through lowering of cholesterol levels recognized by the prestigious Univ. of Chicago Medical Center. This recognition is in the form of an agreement to carry out a joint, lengthy clinical trial of the effects of radical cholesterol reduction on patients with established heart disease. John's brother, Randolph, a Chicago physician, will also be involved in the project.

Ward Chamberlin, V.P. of WETA-TV, D.C.'s PBS station, has been elected to the natl. board of directors of Recording for the Blind. Jean and Ted Van Buren's new winter address is: 220 So. Collier Blvd., Apt. 502, Marco Island, FL 33937. "New summer address," notes Ted, "as soon as house sells, but market slow."

From Dick Hord: "In Oct. 1989 I flew my Mooney solo to Va. and back from Alliance, Neb. Saw daughter Carrie in Richmond and son Andy's family in Charlottesville. Overnights at Galesburg, Ill.; it hosts Stearmans each year in Sept."

Some "Names in the News": Lew Reisner has been fully retired since June 28, 1989; John Sheperdson has been made a lifetime Kiwanis member—he had already received the Legion of Honor for 36 years of service; Eileen and Bob Rock spent a busy summer of 1990 with visits to their N.C. retreats from Cathy and Hockey Walker; Doris and John Brinster, plus the Rocks visited Jody and Jim Roberts in Akron, Oh., on the eve of Jim's retirement from his medical practice; the Ken Reads hosted Bob Hugins overnight on his way to another Peace Corps job in Lesotho.

We regret to inform you of the death Sept. 9 of Dr. John A. Williams.

44

HURVEY S. STOCKMAN
1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

Distinguished present and past Class Officers meeting at Nassau Club Sept. 21, 1990: MacDonald, Hobler, Thomson, Grace, Woodbridge, Wagenseller, Kraft, Comwell, and Ware.

Memorial correction: Brooks Hall left us July 7, 1990.

DUES NEWS: Stretch Ewing, whose worldwide travel specials with the Society of Newspaper Editors appear in his paper, the DAILY MESSENGER, has just completed another such trip to Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and the eastern half of the F.R.G., with a personal add-on in Vienna and London. Dave McCallie was teamed with John Sien-

past summer our 73-year old classmate tried once again to regain that distinction. He was halfway over and going strong when the English Coast Guard intervened, forcing him out of the water because of poor visibility—about 100 yards—right in the middle of the shipping lanes. The Coast Guard thought a solo swimmer and his entourage in a small fishing boat would be no match for a cargo ship bearing down out of the fog. A great disappointment for Brud. But he partially made up for it a few days later when he and a team of five other New Mexican swimmers did complete a relay crossing of the channel. The rest of us can only wonder what it is about landlocked New Mexico that produces these long-distance ocean swimmers.

Brud's story came to us from Johnny Cline who credits "our Class clipping agent in Albuquerque, my brother-in-law Ed Peeples." While Brud took the hard way in the Atlantic, the Clines tackled the Pacific in more leisurely fashion aboard the VISTAFJORD. John had long hankered to revisit the scenes of his WWII service with his ship, PORTLAND, in the South Pacific, and P.J. looked forward to seeing it all with him. The VISTAFJORD obliged, taking them to Australia by way of Honolulu, Tarawa, Guadalcanal, and New Caledonia. Along the way John renewed acquaintance with people and places from long ago.

40 BENJAMIN FULLER
6119 Vernon Terr.
Alexandria, VA 22307; 703-329-1961

BRAND NEW NEWS: Our thanks to Tracy and John Boozan '79 for issuing this splendid photo of Charlie "Buzzer" Boozan taking delight in his first grandchild, Peter Meehan Boozan, who joined Grandpa Buzzer's thriving Princeton descendants on May 23, 1990. In addition to father John, there are two other Princeton sons/brothers—Bill '77 and James '81. With three sons all graduating so closely together, Buzzer has undoubtedly accomplished a feat unmatched by any other classmate. Not only is Buzzer a brand-new grandfather, but he is to become our brand new reunion chairman for the next five years. We are grateful to him for taking on this position and promise our full support and attendance. A brand-new Class Travel Committee has been installed, headed by Bucky Turner, assisted by Chitz Anderson, Nick Biddle, and Brooks Jones. Before too long you will be receiving trip suggestions from them.

Two brand new holders of the Class of 1940 War Memorial Scholarship have been chosen. They are: Stephanie Detlefsen '92 from Colusa, Calif., in pre-med studies and women's softball; and Eric Arnault '94 from Hornell, N.Y., a pre-med student and freshman football candidate.

Princeton resident Charlie Kuebner states that classmates traveling in the area on the first Friday from Sept. to June are invited to lunch with the '40 Princeton contingent. They assemble in "the Nass under Dick Kazmaier's picture" at noon.

We have a memorial in this issue.

41 BILL WILSON
Box 1420
Bridgehampton, NY 11932; 516-537-2458

The position of Class V.P. has languished vacant ever since the incumbent was demoted to Class secretary early this year. No longer. On Oct. 6 President Paul Douglas's Executive Committee ratified the appointment of Stuart A. Young Jr., esq., to this increasingly vital post. Stu lives in nearby Rumson, N.J., which is a blessing now that Paul and Julie have moved to their retirement nirvana in Chapel Hill, N.C.

Henry Hillman's wife, Elsie, continues to support Princeton's Westminster Choir College both with her talent and her substance. She herself studied there before Henry married her. Together they recently gave the college $1.4 million from the Hillman Foundation. Many readers may know that Elsie ran President George Bush's election campaign in Penn.

Fred Williamson has retired from being C.E.O. of the Goodall Rubber Co. in Trenton, an industrial mill which had been used to turn out Civil War uniforms for the Union Army. Fred started out there at $16 per week in 1940. He and his wife, Kit, live in New Hope, Penn. Dick Poole no longer teaches French and tennis at the Princeton Country Day School but continues to live in Princeton.

Earlier this year the N.Y. TIMES printed a picture of Ned Chase in the company of Mrs. Brooke Astor, perhaps N.Y.C.'s leading charity lady, and certainly its most gracious. Ned was mentioned as the editor of several distinguished published biographies as well as being the proud father of Hollywood's Chevy Chase.

There is happy news that a gentleman named Garnett Y. Clark ("Maryland born and bred, St. John's College, and an old salt") has found, courted, won, and married our own Mary Jane Tbacher. The ceremony was on Aug. 10, 1990, and they are living in Crab Town—otherwise known as Annapolis. All best wishes to them.

42 ARMSTRONG HUNTER
R.R. 1, Box 250
Perkinsville, VT 05151; 802-263-5361

LOTTERY

LOTTO

Sat. August 11

6-10-17

18-19-42

Bob's Skaneateles, N.Y. doctor scheduled him for a lung operation instead; Jim was home in Fla. nursing a foot fractured during a visit to Long Island the week before—doubly sad because the Howleys planned to go on from Santa Fe to Calif. to meet a great-grandson born in Apr. At Oct. column deadline, both Bob and Jim are well on the mend. Not signed up for Santa Fe, but holding a mini of their own in Maine were residents Jack and Jane Staman and George and Alice McAdams, who welcomed newly-married Bill and Patsy Munger (N.J.) and Bud and Tina Vivian (summer, Mass.; winter, N.J.).

A Sept. change-of-address notice from the University indicated that Tom Doyle had moved from Boynton Beach, Fla., to Somers, N.Y. In these "retire to the sun" days this seemed unusual enough to warrant a call. The call brought some catching up. Tom, widower since wife Muriel's death in Jan. 1988, married June Meder in July 1989. He is fully retired now from the real estate business in Bronxville, and except for summers the DoYLES live in Boynton Beach (we'll expect another address-change notice from Princeton soon). Small world item: June (who has a Princeton son-in-law) said her sister lives in a tiny town in Vermont named Baltimore. Baltimore, Vt. is tiny, all right, but I can see it from our mailbox.

Steve Steinbauser (Fla.) reports an Apr. item: "Had pleasant visit from Topper and Nancy Cook discussing the '42 video. They were down this way for a croquet tournament in Boca Grande."

43 JACK LAPLIN
10 Vardon Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06117; 203-523-8929

Our Dr. John Seed, chairman of the Princeton Medical Center's department of family practice, has had his 30-year mission of reducing heart attack risk through lowering of cholesterol levels recognized by the prestigious Univ. of Chicago Medical Center. This recognition is in the form of an agreement to carry out a joint, lengthy clinical trial of the effects of radical cholesterol reduction on patients with established heart disease. John's brother, Randolph, a Chicago physician, will also be involved in the project.

Ward Chamberlin, V.P. of WETA-TV, D.C.'s PBS station, has been elected to the natl. board of directors of Recording for the Blind. Jean and Ted Van Buren's new winter address is: 220 So. Collier Blvd., Apt. 502, Marco Island, FL 33937. "New summer address," notes Ted,

"as soon as house sells, but market slow."

From Dick Hord: "In Oct. 1989 I flew my Mooney solo to Va. and back from Alliance, Neb. Saw daughter Carrie in Richmond and son Andy's family in Charlottesville. Overnights at Galesburg, Ill.; it hosts Stearmans each year in Sept."

Some "Names in the News": Lew Reisman has been fully retired since June 28, 1989; John Sheperdson has been made a lifetime Kiwanis member—he had already received the Legion of Honor for 36 years of service; Eileen and Bob Rock spent a busy summer of 1990 with visits to their N.C. retreats from Cathy and Hockey Walker, Doris and John Brinster, plus the Rocks visited Jody and Jim Roberts in Akron, Oh., on the eve of Jim's retirement from his medical practice; the Ken Reads hosted Bob Hugins overnight on his way to another Peace Corps job in Lesotho.

We regret to inform you of the death Sept. 9 of Dr. John A. Williams.

44 HERVEY S. STOCKMAN
1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

Distinguished present and past Class Officers meeting at Nassau Club Sept. 21, 1990: MacDonald, Hobler, Thomson, Grace, Woodbridge, Wagenseller, Kraft, Conwell, and Ware.

Memorial correction: Brooks Hall left us July 7, 1990.

DUES NEWS: Stretch Ewing, whose worldwide travel specials with the Society of Newspaper Editors appear in his paper, the DAILY MESSENGER, has just completed another such trip to Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and the eastern half of the F.R.G., with a personal add-on in Vienna and London. Dave McCalfee was teamed with John Sienklewicz '55, in a U.S. seniors golf tournament at the Kittansett Club in Marion, Mass. They lost out in the finals of the second flight in spite of Dave's "ace" on the last day. Jack Wagenseller retired July 1, 1990, after eight years as assoc. director of Princeton's Alumni Council, but continues on the Alumni Committee on Reunions, while squashing at Dillon Gym and attending a University lecture course, "History of Germany, 1850-1990." Check your notes with George, Wag. Christy Wilson will continue teaching for two more years as prof. of world evangelization at Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary, South Hamilton, Mass. Marshall Noble made his 50th at Culver Military Academy, commenting "THAT has changed!" At home he's moved from treasurer to president at the Wadawanuck Club of Stonington, Conn., and is still active as a computer consultant.

45

WARREN W. EGINTON
U.S. Courthouse, 915 Lafayette Blvd.
Bridgeport, CT 06604

Rip Burns, long retired in bucolic Center Sandwich, N.H., lures many classmates year round, sharing skiing, fall foliage, or summer beauty. Amateur photographer Rip sent along several fine photographs taken at these mini-mini-reunions. Herewith the smiling features of Dr. Karl Rugart (libation in hand), Bill Speers, and host Rip. More photographs from this locale will appear in subsequent columns.

Dr. Rugart's smile reflects the birth of his and Patsy's first grandchild, Robert Turner Rugart, born to son Eric and daughter-in-law Nancy. Not surprisingly, this year, opening another decade, has featured retirements and grandchildren. Secretary Edge Eginton is enjoying his and Marjorie's first grandchild, Katherine Helen Seaton, born to daughter Andrea '77 and son-in-law Mike.

Bill Haley has quietly endowed a lecture series for the Dept. of Art and Archaeology in memory of his brother Jim '50, enabling that dept. to offer an annual art history lecture by a noted scholar in the field and providing an opportunity for Princeton students to meet with scholars of international reputation on visits to the University.

Texan Charlie Maddox reports that his heart is still in the Northeast despite his more than 40 years in the Lone Star republic. Since little news of Charlie has appeared in our Class directories, he now supplies details. He lost Pat back in 1961 after four children, but is now happily married to the former Ann Rusk. Charlie reports that he and Ann are planning to spend time with Mary and Claude Williams, who have deserted Texas for Santa Fe, N.M.

46

ROBERT CAMPBELL JR.
Investors Security Services
636 Morris Tpk., Short Hills, NJ 07078

Jack Muller joined many of us, who, as undergraduate engineers transferred to Cornell in the summer of 1943. He followed this with Harvard Business School and recently retired as C.E.O. of General Housewares Corp. which he founded 23 years ago. The WALL STREET JOURNAL recently reported Jack's candor as he confessed, "Housewares is a very difficult business, and I didn't realize how difficult when I got in." Fluctuations in interest rates, changes in lifestyles, plus competition from the U.S. and overseas created roller coaster results for General Housewares. However, Jack continues "one of the saving graces for a C.E.O. comes with his selection of those with whom he works. The selection of my successor may be the smartest thing I ever did." Taffy and Jack are well and Jack's golf has improved, a protected source reports.

After 19 years as president of the Natl. Retail Merchants Assn., the nation's largest retail trade group, Jim Williams is stepping down to form his own consulting business. "In the face of so many mergers in the retail field, Jim remarked, "the basics of the business, particularly merchandising and operations, seem to have been forgotten. There are many emerging growth companies in the country," he continues, "that face real challenges. Perhaps we can help them on a consulting basis." The disappearance of trade barriers in Europe in 1992 will also "present great opportunities for American retailer. There are few American retailers that have so far succeeded on the continent."

Also consulting, in the plastics industry, is Joe McDonald, who retired six years ago as V.P.-operations at Maryland Cup.

47

ASA BUSHNELL
Box 7034
Tucson, AZ 85725; 602-741-4715

Accomplished piano player John Leonard (pictured) will retire Dec. 31 after 24 years as exec. director of the Arizona Assn. of Industries. He'll then spend four months annually aboard his trawler, BONNIE LASS, anchored in Friday Harbor, and eight months in Scottsdale, performing with the Aristocrats, writing music, and corraling ten grandchildren. Pictured at a spring jam session with the maestro are brother-in-law Ace Bushnell, an off-key but spirited singer from the Pima County Sheriff's Dept., and Calif. visitor John Côté, an old-fashioned "gut bucket" virtuoso of Palm Springs fame, as well as active owner of Minute King Markets in Orange Cty.

On the subject of "retirement," we should all be as satisfyingly productive as former businessman and headmaster Chuck Callanan, a self-described "educational consultant" in Yarmouth and president of the Trout Foundation, which is "concerned with education in remote areas of Maine." Chuck recently authored SINCE OWEN, a compelling book that evoked this tribute from columnist George F. Will '68: "Charles Callanan has written what every parent of a handicapped child needs and only such a parent could have written. Thanks to him there now is, at long last, a brisk, detailed, immensely practical guide to the world such parents inhabit."

Don Campbell and Ken Stevenson took over in Oct. as co-hosts of the "First Wednesday" luncheon series in N.Y.C., replacing long-time chairman Bob Wohlforth a work-week Princeton transplant. Held as usual at the Princeton Club, their initial endeavor attracted John Bennett, George Eggers, Arnie Fratman, and Pete Struby. Rather than rest on his laurels, Bob immediately launched a "First Friday" series in the Princeton area and welcomed Charley Biddle, Eggers, Jack Hughes, Koke Kokatnur, Ted Palmer, and George Pearson to the Nassau Club.

48

DAVID K. REEVES
106 Snowden Ln.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3340

For many of us our avocations are a special and cherished part of life. Relatively little of this sort of endeavor has been chronicled in this space. This situation will be remedied as classmates relate their interests and passions. There must be those with exploits to be recounted whether it be hunting, fishing, sailing, collecting, what have you.

For openers, Beau Williams responded gallantly when queried about equestrian adventures. Beau got hooked on steeplechasing when his Curator was Maryland steeplechaser of the year in 1969 and went on to win stakes races at Belmont and other major tracks over the jumps. He has at present about 25 horses (weanlings, yearlings, in training, etc.) in the barn and hopes to have another top one.

Humpty Stump, in quasi-retirement, has been an avid fox hunter for years with the Green Spring and even pops off to Ireland on occasion to pursue the wily fox. His better half, Louise, not only hunts but is active on the three-day-eventing circuit. This demands horsemanship of the highest order.

Gene Haring is a regular with the Monmouth Cty. Hounds.

Peter Winants, for many years editor of the CHRONICLE OF THE HORSE, has only now relinquished the reins to take on freelance, horse-related photojournalism. His first assignment is with the Galway Blazers in Ireland. He is a regular with the Middleburg Hounds and on occasion with the Piedmont. Peter, too, is into dressage and eventing.

49

ALVIN R. KRACHT
Limerick Lane Poetryworks®, 5 Birch Ln.
Chappaqua, NY 10514; 914-238-0352

Dave Doyle has accomplished a most unusual feat in having two compelling books—one non-fiction, one fiction—published by two different publishers this year. Both works are outgrowths of his 28-year career in the O.S.S., C.I.A., and U.S. Foreign Service, much of it in highly clandestine operations. In Apr., Ohio Univ. Press published his translation of Soviet defector Boris Bazhanov's book on Stalin, a serious work on Soviet history, covering the inner workings of the Politburo in the 1920s, and their plans to destroy Western civilization. Bazhanov was Stalin's assistant and concurrently secretary of the Politburo—Dave met him in France during WWII when Doyle was with a team preparing to jump into Germany.

His latest book, AN ACCURATE WATCH, was published June 19 by William Morrow, Inc., N.Y. It is a novel of espionage, set in Central Africa in 1972-73, and concerns a gripping search for a Soviet mole in the C.I.A., involving experiences similar to those Dave himself had, not the least of which was his wife, Hope, then also a C.I.A. agent, saving his life. Reviews of the novel have been extremely favorable—the STAR BULLETIN in Honolulu, where the DoYLES now live, ran a full page picture story on him. The N.Y. TIMES Book Review said "the author knows his procedures well"; Chicago TRIBUNE said "expertise shows forth on every page"; and Lyman B. Kirkpatrick, Jr., former executive director of the C.I.A. and professor emeritus at Brown, rated it "a masterful job of leading the reader into the netherworld of espionage...fascinating." Dave is now well on his way through writing his next novel, a sequel, entitled A POCKETFUL OF CHANGE.

Class dues envelope flaps bring the following news. From Pete Cannell we hear: "Anne and I have built a house at Peacock Point on the North Shore of Long Island. Still have an apartment in N.Y.C. Still president of Peter B. Cannell & Co."

50

PETE BUCHANAN
151 West St.
Beverly Farms, MA 01915; 508-922-1650

The smiling photograph of Hugh Scott and his family at the 40th belies his election as "greatest woman-hater" in the Class poll in the 1950 NASSAU HERALD. Admittedly he only got nine votes in contrast to 312 for George Sella as best athlete. Wife Sandy is a talented photographer who takes the annual calendar pictures of the gardens for the National Cathedral. Daughter Liza is a senior at Brown, Zander a junior at Princeton, and Laura is a sophomore in her second year at the newly coed Deerfield. Laura first won Class notoriety as the last born before our 25th.

Much better candidates for Hugh's title are two rare swans that have a permanent hatred of all women and attack on sight. These are early residents of Hugh Noyes' Isle of Wight Rare Breeds and Waterfowl Park. The park was Hugh's response to the European Community's agricultural policy restriction on his farm's milk output and has been met with enthusiasm as one of the most outstanding tourism projects on the island. Rare breeds of domestic animals are the mainstay of the park, although he hopes to have llamas as well. Wife Judi and the youngest two (Robert, 23, and Clare, 19) of their five children work together.

Also from England comes the first word from Birdie Quaille in many years. He now splits his time between London and Austria, having lived abroad for almost 30 years. Virtually retired, he helps his English fashion agent wife in London, where he still has a daughter in school. In Austria he has sold the hotel which he owned for many years, and now pursues a bit of skiing and golf.

51

RICHARD K. PAYNTER
49 Wilson Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-921-6720

"Life Begins at the Fortieth" Plan now to be there—June 6-9

As you now know, plans for our Fortieth Reunion are well under way. The enthusiasm has begun. The McKay we used to know as Shaky writes, "Sign me up." Ed Tilden: "Looking forward to 40!" and being at '51's mini-reunion in St. Louis last Apr. so moved Ed Reed and Ford Van Hagen that they can't wait. Joe Howell, reunion chairman, and Rube Shau, attendance chairman, have written you. Complete the stuff and mail back ASAP.

Does anyone born on the Fourth of July have a lifelong "burden"? Fireworks and parades forever? Pat and I welcomed on that date the arrival of Samuel Jacob, our first grandchild, son of David and Tamar Paynter.

David Coleman is active in Princeton schools work in Puerto Rico. He is impressed with the caliber of the applicants. Some 20 were accepted into the Class of 1994 and most are now freshmen.

George Lewis, a V.P. of Eisenhower Exchange Fellowships, reports that a convocation this fall celebrating Ike's 100th birthday brought back 250 fel-

The Art of Structure

DAVID P. BILLINGTON '50, a professor of civil engineering and operations research at Princeton, received a Charles A. Dana Award in early November for his development of curricula, texts, and related materials that integrate the study of engineering science and technology with the liberal arts. The award is worth $50,000, and Billington is the first Princeton professor to receive it.

Billington, who also directs the Program in Architecture and Engineering, was cited for "scholarship and teaching that have awakened liberal-arts students to the beauty and significance of modern structural engineering and offered future engineers a keener insight into the history and values of the society within which they will pursue their profession." The award also lauded him "for showing that the triumphs of technology can be triumphs of the human spirit."

Billington received his B.S. in engineering in 1950. He joined the faculty in 1960 without the benefit of an advanced degree and, since 1961, has had joint appointments at the School of Engineering and Applied Science and the School of Architecture. The award cited two of Billington's current courses at Princeton, "Structures and the Urban Environment" and "Structures and Machines in Urban Society," for giving students in the liberal arts the conceptual tools for constructive criticism of modern engineering and technology. Engineering students in the courses learn that engineering is a social process, engaging politics, economics, and the larger community, and that engineering has a sophisticated aesthetic element. Billington uses historical readings and numerical exercises in the courses to set engineering in the context of the natural and social sciences.

Both humanists and engineers have praised Billington's books, which include The Tower and the Bridge: The New Art of Structural Engineering and Robert Maillart's Bridges: The Art of Engineering (both available from Princeton University Press), and other universities use his teaching materials and methodology.

The Charles A. Dana Foundation, which presents the award annually, is a private philanthropic foundation established in 1950 by the New York State legislator of the same name. The foundation distributes the grants primarily in the fields of health research and liberal-arts education.

David Billington '50

PHOTO BY MICHAEL PIRROCCO

lows from 70 countries. Noble Carpenter has been a widower since Aug. 1987. He married Sherry D'Atri this past Aug.

Don Stokes spent this summer (winter under the Southern Cross) in Australia with Pete Spruance. Pete "has established himself as a shrewd expatriate American barrister and continues to have warm Princeton thoughts."

The late Doc Frame's daughter Wendy was married to Christopher Blackman in Lake Forest, Ill., and Esther and Frank Beatty were there.

Johnny Preston died Aug. 16 and Jim Anderegg died Oct. 9. There will be memorials.

52

DON OBERDORFER
4630 30th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20008

About 50 classmates and 35 spouses or special guests attended the '52 Foreign Affairs Forum and mini-reunion at Princeton the weekend of Oct. 12-14. Not all the problems of the world were handily solved, but the overwhelming judgment was that it was success in every way.

Bill Murdoch, for the supervision and hospitality which he and Mary extended; Bruce Coe, for arrangements and communications; and Art Collins, for special arrangements at the Nassau Inn, including lodging, a dinner, and a dinner-dance, deserve special thanks. Three panels of classmates and faculty were organized by Ed Tiryakian and your secretary. At the outset came a written message from our eminent foreign affairs expert, Jim Baker, who said, "There is nothing like having people you know gather for a whole day to discuss what you do for a living—without you there."

Among the many notable things that were said: Mike Ely on the new era: "The Cold War ended unlike any other war. The opponent unilaterally declared defeat before conflict was ever really joined."

Roger Kirk on Eastern Europe: "Ahead is a period of trial and tribulation and suffering. It is going to be difficult for those countries. But I submit it will be a great deal better than the silence of the graveyard—what they had for the past 40-45 years."

Mike Kennedy on the Middle East: "There is a lasting feeling that the West can do everything and

"My second retirement plan? It's with Princeton."

How does a "Princeton retirement plan" work? Here's how: A gift to one of the University's Life Income Plans supplements your retirement income by giving you (and your spouse) the following:

- income for life
- a current income tax deduction
- tax-free compounding of principal
- management as part of Princeton's endowment

In addition, you can "fund" these trusts with appreciated stock and avoid a capital gains tax (pension plans can only be funded with cash), which is especially advantageous if you are considering selling stock or face a takeover situation.

For more information on how you can increase your income for retirement—while helping to keep Princeton strong, call or write the Planned Giving Office.

Planned Giving Program
Princeton University
Box 39
Princeton, NJ 08544-0039
(609) 258-6318
(609) 258-6320

Director
Daniel H. Jamieson, Jr. '74

Associate Directors
Jane Rae Bradford
Robert B. Turner

is responsible for everything. This is the terrible psychological impact of colonialism."

Steve Rogers on South Africa: "Whites now recognize the old system is dead... That they can no longer put off that time when the evolution, the change, will take place... They always hoped it would happen on the next generation's watch."

Al Ellis on Mexico: "Two great walls are disappearing, the Berlin Wall and now the wall of ignorance, distrust, and deep cultural differences between the Mexico and the United States."

53

PRINCE J. LOMMEAN
Box 18
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Al Sher, our old carrelmate (we never met) of 37 years ago, has resurfaced. Al was named in June as C.E.O. of Bateman Eichler Hill Richards, one of five brokerage firms owned by the Kemper Securities Group. His Wall Street year has been hectic to say the least—Jan.: named Vice Chairman of Drexel Burnham; Feb.: Drexel files Chapter 11; June: new job. Keep plugging, Al. We hope you got your dough out.

Jersey shore-bound Jack Middleton checks in. Daughter Nina was married in June to fellow bond traveler Lars Toomre. Jack just wound up his 20th year diddling around with government securities with Discount Corp. of N.Y. and will probably bail out next year.

Evan Gray, who deserted Princeton and headed south, was married in Apr. to Angie Mowjoodi. Although it was a small family wedding, including Evan's four daughters, Matt Bender managed to horn in as best man.

54

DICK STREVEN
1 Valley Sq., Ste. 101
Blue Bell, PA 19422

Walt Corson is a recognized authority on ecology. He recently published THE GLOBAL ECOLOGY HANDBOOK, a herculean effort on the environment, population, and development issues. Now he has just completed a discussion guide for community groups to supplement the ten-part TV series "Race to Save the Planet," airing now on public television. As a senior associate with the Global Tomorrow Coalition in Washington, Walt is one of the few that has the intellectual capacity to sort out some tough environmental issues.

Pictured here are Sandy Nemitz and Joyce and Jerry Keiser full of knockwurst and Vosges Mountain Riesling enjoying the Alumni College in Alsace, France (where German people speak French). Colmar is a sister city to Princeton and there is a fair amount of traffic back and forth. As you would expect, they received a little extra red carpet treatment. Alumni Colleges are great experiences with just the right mix of stimulating education and vacation fun.

Beautiful grandchildren have arrived to Hooker Talcott's Princeton family... a boy to Barbara Talcott Borchard '83 and another boy to Julia Talcott Meigs '80. Bill Flury has a granddaughter Emily Bell and get this... Bob Fast has a granddaughter, Linda Fast Jodvic, just one year older than his youngest daughter Meredith.

Tom Davinroy has done it all... beach erosion problems in N.J., consultant to the Peace Corps in Tanganyika, research engineer on BART, transportation consultant on N.Y. airports. Now after 27 years as a civil engineering prof. at Penn. State, he's packing it in. On to the next adventure...

55

MIKE ROBBINS
40 E. 88th St.
New York, NY 10128; 212-722-7447

Here are Princeton Project 55 interns Adrienne Wheatley '92 and Paula Gill '91 reviewing plans with their mentor, John Fish. They worked this summer with the Neighborhood Inst. in Chicago.

We were unable to publish photos in last month's inaugural issue of the Project 55 newsletter, since our budget did not permit the luxury of offset printing. We utilized donated photocopier facilities. If any classmate would care to donate offset printing facilities for future issues of the newsletter, please contact the editor or Project 55 President Pete Milano at 609-921-8808.

The Middle States Tennis Assn. directory lists Don Altmaier and Walt Milbourne as permanent directors of their local tennis assns., the Dela. T.A. and Philadelphia T.A., respectively. Youthful Walt still competes impressively in Men's 45 doubles! Gerald Rosen does not appear to be ranked in the directory, but we understand he is a top competitor. He prefers singles for aerobic reasons, and will accept challenges anytime the temperature is above 40°F. Although he no longer frequents the courts in this area, Roger Campbell's name is enshrined in gold letters in the Merion Cricket Club for winning an intercollegiate championship circa 1955.

Class Secretary Mike Robbins, who normally powers the Class notes mill, is traveling and has asked and me to grind out a column in his absence. His column will resume when he does.—John Paul

56

DAVID M. JORDAN
410 Rodman Ave.
Jenkintown, PA 19046

Herewith part of a gathering of '56ers before the Brown game: (l-r), Charlie Elliott, Dave Jordan, Fraser Lewis, Jack Thompson, Tom Meeker, Mike Maltz, and Reunions Chairman Bob Rodgers, who reminds all of us that time is marching along to our big 35th this coming June. We will be headquartered in Holder Hall—shades of 1976, our 20th, or even of 1953, when many of us lived there!—and a gala program is planned.

A number of classmates participated in a Princeton Today program in early Oct., including most of those pictured above and George Easter, Dave Gaurin, Bob Hut, Royce Flippin, John Gewali, Ed Gray, Larry Leighton, Jim Markert, Bob McCartney, Bill McCandless, Joe Nishimura, Nell Rudenstine, Sol Rosenthal (who took the long-distance prize, winging in with wife, Diane, from L.A.), Neil Steigbigel, Paul Woo, Jerry Weiss, and John Hill Wilson.

The high point of the program, other than the fire alarm which caused the evacuation of the Ramada Inn at 2 A.M. Fri., was the thoughtful Sat. morning talk of our honorary classmate Harold Shapiro.

Frank Peabody reports that he is now retired from full-time consulting and is moving to West Windsor, Vt., where he has built a home. Frank is going to keep his hand in, with part-time consulting and directorship activities, while hosting classmates passing through his part of New England.

Retired from teaching, Jeff Albert is pursuing a second career as deputy prosecuting attorney in Honolulu.

58

RALPH L. DEGRUFF
7 Grace Sq.
New York, NY 10028

Denny Thompson's daughter Jennie '90 is pictured receiving in-depth advice on her first P-grade from Prof. Fortenbaugh, an acknowledged expert on the subject.

Rod Johnstone has designed a winner with his new two-person sailing craft, the JY15. "Johnstone has earned the respect of the yachting community since he began designing boats in the early 1970s. His latest creation is innovative in both design and material," writes one reporter. The boat is designed to appeal to both young and old and has produced 400 sales with many more expected. The boat's thermoplastic outer skin is vacuum formed and placed over an injection-molded body filled with urethane foam, producing an inch-thick hull which is five times stronger than fiberglass.

In "How Dual-Income Couples Cope," FOR-TUNE, Sept. 24, 1990, Jim Schroeder and wife, Denver Congresswoman Pat, are featured in picture and text. Jim, who married Pat while at Harvard Law School, states, "I expected I would support the family; but when you get married there's no roadmap. Everyone has the expectations of his parents, but all life is a learning experience. I knew I was marrying a lawyer who wanted to practice."

Ace Bober, who writes the Men column for PLAYBOY, comments about children of dual-income families: "men are as stressed out as women over family issues. They want to be good fathers, and out of necessity they are changing their patterns of fatherhood." (Several years ago, upon the death of your Class Secretary's father, Ace sent me some extremely well-written and moving articles about his own father. From my standpoint, Ace has great literary talent.)

59

JAY M. SIEGEL
11321 Rolling House Rd.
Rockville, MD 20852

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO: We braved blizzard-like conditions in Palmer Stadium to watch Princeton defeat Dartmouth and take undisputed possession of the as-yet unofficial Ivy League title. It was the Tigers' seventh unofficial title since 1900.

Even though the caption refers to him as "Ben" Harbin, it was easy to recognize the young (and dapper) Banny Harbin and a young (be-dinked) Bob Schanzer in the "From the Archives" photo on the masthead page of the Oct. 10 PAW. Are we really old enough to qualify as archival material?

Move over, John Lemp. Bob Duff has claimed a share of top honors in the "most grandchildren" race and seems poised to leap ahead, reporting that he "also has five—and counting." Moving up a generation, proud papa Gerd Keuffel notes that son Eric '94 has joined son William '91 at Princeton.

Bob Bushnell has left N.Y. and now resides in Pawlet, Vt., where he has somehow managed to

Twilight Rowers

THIS PRINT, "Late Fall Practice," made the late Jim Anderegg '51 famous among generations of rowers, no matter what college or club they represented. He created it when he was a sophomore at Princeton, and for forty-two years it has been a bestseller. With more than seven thousand impressions made, it has become the most popular rowing print in the United States.

In this lithograph, which measures about twenty inches by sixteen inches, the sky and its reflection are a twilight blue. The line of trees and its reflection are black. The resting shell and crew are highlighted against the lake. The blades of the four starboard oars are orange and black in Anderegg's original rendering, but he subsequently marketed the lithograph by offering to print the buyer's college or club colors on the blades.

The scene means a great deal to any rower who has sweated during interminable practices. Rowing back to the boathouse, sometimes at high counts, reminds crews everywhere that theirs is one of the few sports in which much of their conditioning comes from engaging in the sport itself.

Anderegg fought multiple sclerosis for twenty-seven years. He died on October 9 of this year. Owners of "Late Fall Practice" are fortunate, for on Anderegg's instructions, all copies remaining in his family's possession have been destroyed.

—Richard K. Paynter '51

continue trading in commodities and options. Jonathan Rickert has moved from the state dept. to "the Hill," where he is on Sen. Bob Packwood's staff. Jon is looking forward to a second tour at the U.S. embassy in Bucharest next summer. Tom Foxworth is flying the U.S. to Europe route on 767s.

Jim Bennett has joined Connair Corp. of Stamford, Conn., as counsel. Jim travelled to Grand Haven, Mich., last summer for a mini-reunion with undergraduate roommates Sandy Brown, Tony Cotter, and Bill Volckhausen.

You can catch the men's varsity basketball team in several tournaments this winter: the North Coast Basketball Tournament in Cleveland, Oh., Nov. 23-24; the Iona-Hanover Manufacturers Tournament in New Rochelle, N.Y., Dec. 7-8; and the Cable Car Classic in Santa Clara, Calif., on Dec. 28-29.

ON THE GO: Dick Bodman, from Washington, D.C., to Chatham, N.J.; Steve Robin, from Waterford, Va., to Leesburg, Va.; Charles A. Smith, from Glendale, Oh., to Morrow, Oh.

60

MASON LOWANCE
100 Lincoln Ave.
Amherst, MA 01002

Alex Irvine, who practices ophthalmology in the San Francisco area, writes that "this month my son, Matt, and I, followed the route of my great grandfather along the old Mormon trail on motorcycles, for a fascinating study of history and the countryside."

David Dodge has been elected to the executive committee of the Alumni Council, having served several years as the regional Annual Giving chairman in Ohio, then in the same position for four years in Ariz., where he is also president of the Princeton Alumni Assn. of Northern Arizona. He writes: "my first meeting last fall was the first time I had been officially back on campus since June 1960. With the exception of a few new buildings and a lot more women, it looked exactly the same as I had remembered it."

I regret to report that Richard Louie was tragically killed by an automobile while he was walking in Washington, D.C., on Oct. 7.

61

GEORGE BRAKELEY III
98 Winfield Ln.
New Canaan, CT 06840

A moving note from Lars Hummerbeilm: "My neurologist, to whom I owe my life, is Dr. James Stewart, who has a very successful practice here in Miami." Vince Menna reports he's a grandpop, his eldest daughter Nina having produced Amy Lynn last Jan. McKamy Smith reports that his son Mac is a senior at Ol Miss. Papa Mac is looking forward to our 30th next June. Sad news from Kirby Gale: His wife of 20 years died last year after a long illness. Kirby has since remarried and moved from Berkeley, Calif., to Santa Fe, N.M., to begin a new life. His wife teaches at St. John's College in Santa Fe, and Kirby is returning to the private practice of medicine after six years with a large Bay-area H.M.O. In N.Y., attorney Ted Kurz is representing Greta Garbo's estate in Manhattan surrogate court, and is fending off a guy who says he is her nephew and wants to overturn her will—this from the Trenton Times, sent in by indefatigable correspondent Ken Scasserra.

Recently we were working on a list of our varsity team captains, just for the record. Because BRIC-A-BRAC was always a year behind on spring sports, we lacked the spring captains' names. Off went a note to Rob Walker, who promptly reported that Jack Huiskamp captained an undefeated team and thus earned a white letter sweater. "The rest of us thus went unnoticed in our final spring on the links," Rob jokes, referring to himself, Paul Earle, Lynn Adelman, and Ned Longson. The five of them had gone undefeated as freshmen and formed the nucleus of the varsity for three years thereafter. Jack hosted the 1990 team in Calif. this past spring, played with them, and proceeded to embarrass them by coming in as low man.

62

ERIC W. JOHNSON
2221 Craig Ct.
Vienna, VA 22182; 703-280-9080

CORRECTION: In the Nov. 7 issue, Drew Berry's name was misspelled Barry. I didn't catch my mistake until it was too late to make the correction. Especially because this is the second time it has happened, I feel I owed it to Drew to make special mention and to make my apologies.

DUES: If you haven't paid your Class dues, before you read one word further, put this magazine down, get out your checkbook, and send your payment to our treasurer, John Hoffmann, along with some news for the column. Pause. Now that you have done that, you are permitted to read on. Shortly, if not already, those of you who have pledged to contribute annually to the Class of 1962 Memorial Scholarship Fund will be receiving this year's solicitation. Dick Butsch and Terry Shultz in particular will appreciate your prompt response.

The Apr. 6 N.Y. TIMES ran a lengthy article on the Wall Street investment banking firm of Morgan Stanley, a largely employee-owned company that is enjoying record profits. Prominently quoted is Lewis Bernard, Morgan's managing director and the firm's chief planner. Says the N.Y. TIMES: "Its Wall Street competitors may be suffering—laying off thousands, reporting huge losses and even collapsing altogether—but at Morgan Stanley & Co. the tune is strikingly upbeat." Says Lewis: "I have never been more optimistic about the future." Analysts say that Morgan is building "the prototypical investment bank of the 1990s," as it sharply breaks with its traditional way of doing business and begins exploiting new overseas opportunities.

Arnold Zwicky reports that he is spending a sabbatical year in Palo Alto, "enjoying some of the fruits of my professorship at Ohio State." In Jan. he will become V.P. of the Linguistic Society of America, and in Jan. 1992 will become presideo civilization by reunion time.

63

SILDEN S. EDWARDS
Elgin Academy, 350 Park St.
Elgin, IL 60120

The Oct. 10 PAW included a piece about the retirement of Joe Bolster '52 as director of Princeton's Annual Giving program for the past 25 years. His replacement, a 19-year veteran in the office himself, is none other than Class hero Bill Hardt. Upon reading the news, Jay Schroeder reports being euphoric. "I can't think of anyone more deserving," says Jay. "Bill is a super guy and a major talent." A little-known fact about the retiring Bolster is that in the spring of 1959, as assistant director of Admissions, he admitted Bill and the rest of us.

The White House has just announced that George Dewey was one of four teachers in Virginia to receive the prestigious Presidential Award for Excellence in Science and Mathematics Teaching. George, who lives in Fairfax, Va., is a high school science teacher at Chantilly H.S. in Chantilly, Va. John Murphy, who also lives in Fairfax, is a teacher and counselor at Lake Braddock Secondary School in Burke, Va.

This past summer the N.Y. TIMES ran an article about the increase of clinical tests in Europe in its section, science times, with a first-page photo of Boston doctor Tom Stossel. Earlier in the year Tom wrote an article for the NEW ENGLAND JOURNAL OF MEDICINE about his study tracking the volume of research on drugs in prestigious European journals in the past decade, showing a disturbing increase on the continent matched by a decline in U.S. research. Mike Henderson is still manager of the Wilbur Theater on Tremont St. in Boston. And from Houston comes word that Jack Carter has been elected managing partner of the law firm Hutcheson and Grundy. He recently chaired the Harris Cty. Democratic Party, currently is chair of the Municipal Arts Commission and serves on the Host Committee of the Houston Economic Summit. Dave Gouldin, partner in the firm of Levene, Gouldin & Thompson and president of the Broom County Bar Assn., has recently become a fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers. And Bill Lynne is president of Atlantic Coast Spas, in Sculville, N.J.

64

JOTHAM JOHNSON
Box 12
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Jay Boris, chief scientist and director of the laboratory for computational physics and fluid dynamics at the Naval Research Lab in Washington, is this year's recipient of the Captain Robert Dexter Conrad Award for "outstanding contributions in the field of research and development for the Department of the Navy." The citation commends his leadership that has "shown the way nationally and internationally toward practical use of the latest generation of supercomputers for commercial applications in aerospace, weapons system, and engine development." Jay, who holds three Princeton degrees, joined N.R.L. in 1970 and holds the N.R.L. chair in computational physics.

"In addition to his faculty position at the Univ. of Idaho, Dennis Horn is now finishing up his year as chair of the Army Science Board in Washington," writes wife, Tricia, from Moscow, Ida. Dennis is, she reports, also working in strategic planning for the Corps of Engineers and is overseeing the transfer of technology in the water resources field to the eastern bloc nations. "We're also running the Twin Peaks bed and breakfast in Moscow and all classmates are welcome!"

The Octel Communications Corp., a fast-growing leader in supplying computerized phone-answering and routing systems for business, has named Doug Chance, who was exec. V.P. at Hewlett-Packard, as its new president and C.E.O., according to the N.Y. TIMES. Doug was quoted as saying that he wanted to work for Octel "because it is the biggest new business opportunity that exists in our electronics industry."

"Youngest daughter Alison started at Lehigh this fall and Elaine and I are now empty-nesters," writes Fred Gebrie. "We're planning to attend the Yale game as guests of my partner and hope Yale will be as hospitable to us as we were to them last year... Would Terry Hopmann let himself be heard from?"

Don't forget the New Orleans mini-reunion Apr. 11-14, 1991. Call Rick Price weekdays at 504-523-3534 for more info.

65

J. MICHAEL PARESH
Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts
1 Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004

As we enter our 26th year after graduation, a profile of our new Class president, Rush Haines, seems appropriate.

After graduating from Northwestern Law School in 1968, Rush joined the Philadelphia law firm of Drinker, Biddle & Reath, where he is now a partner (along with John Fischer and Bruce McConnell) and practices real estate and banking law.

Rush and his wife, Susie, are currently working on anniversary number 25 and have, among other items to be proud of, a daughter, Jennifer '92. According to Rush, "In Susie's spare time, she has tried her hand at painting, horses, computers, volunteer work at Bryn Mawr Hospital (having lived in Haverford since law school) and tutoring for the Delaware Cty. Literacy Council, where she is now employed as regional coordinator. In mine, I have been president of our local civic assn., on the board of governors and president of the Princeton Club of Philadelphia, on the Princeton Alumni Council, and secretary and member of the board of the Episcopal Academy. All of those activities have been enjoyable and rewarding, but the work with Episcopal has been the most satisfying, in part because contact with the students is stimulating and rejuvenating and in part because the institution is small enough that I feel my contribution makes a difference." Also on the Philadelphia front, Walt Gerber has left academia for the private practice of urology ("a specialty most people prefer to encounter socially rather than professionally.")

Josie (Bob) Taylor and Lydia (Steve) Unfried have become members of the Class of '94.

66

JEFFREY N. McCOLLUM, A.T.&T. Products
5 Wood Hollow Rd., Rm. 1J19
Parappany, NJ 07054

The "One and Only" 25th Reunion June 6-9, 1991 BE THERE

The rolls of those planning to attend our "one and only" 25th reunion are beginning to swell. As of Oct. 20, the following classmates had registered for next year's big event: Tom Armstrong, Viggo Boserup, Bill Childress, Larry Cromwell, Jay Cross, Steve Dunham, Terry Eakin, Ord Elliott, John Fischer, Charlie Gogolak, Bob Goldie, Nelson Hendler, Steve Hermann, John Hoerster, Larry Horn, Frank Kilpatrick, Henry Lynn, Jim MacGregor, David Marshak, Jim Mettler, Barry Metzger, Ben McCleary, Stephen Newman, Tom Norris, Ken Oboz (first to register), Charles Olstein, Rich Reints, Charles Shaver, John Simpson, Richie Thomas, James Timble, Henry Von Koborn, Sankey Williams, and William Young.

The Reunions Committee, chaired by Tiny Morgan and staffed by Ernie Cruikshank, Thomas, Bud D'Avella, Carl Eastwick, Don McCabe, Glen Goltz, Kearny Shanahan, Steve Krum, Bob Nabas, and Terry Seymour has been hard at work planning a Reunion which will be a "cut above" any that we—or any other class—has held in the past.

SOCCER SONS: Two sons of '66 are on the varsity soccer team. Tiny Morgan's son, Richard, and Don McCabe's son, Tom, are both playing for the Tiger varsity. As of this writing (Oct. 20), the team needed a win over Columbia on Oct. 27 to qualify for the N.C.A.A. tournament.

UP THE LADDER: In May, C.S. First Boston appointed Anthony Grassi as its chief financial and administrative officer.

REUNION CHECKLIST:

- ___ Completed and mailed in registration.
- ___ Completed and mailed in biographical info.
- ___ Completed and mailed in Class poll.
- ___ Scheduled photo at Bachrach.
- ___ Called roommates/clubmates to join you.

67

PETER J. TUNICH
6503 Masefield St.
Worthington, OH 43085

Bill Spence writes, "I am presently living in Singapore with my wife, Nancy, and two children, Samantha (3) and Nicholas (11). The work involves funding research, and presently much travel in Laos, Vietnam, and China." With Carl Widell on hand, John Boslough married the former Susan Raehn in McLean, Va. "After braving the aftermath of Hurricane Hugo for the outdoor ceremony, we sailed across the Atlantic, its seas rough from the same hurricane, to Europe, where it was more tranquil." Susan runs a real estate firm, and John is beginning a new book, GROWING UP STRAIGHT IN A WARPED UNIVERSE, based on science-related articles that he wrote for NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC.

Schuyler Henderson reports that his son, Schuyler, "went the early admission route to Dartmouth," despite his father's urge toward Princeton. "Wife, Paula, finishing her Ph.D. from Courtauld Inst. in London." A note from Bill Evans records that he is "still headmaster of the Dublin School in Dublin, N.H."

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO: Yaleman John Lindsay elected mayor of N.Y.C. Nine Northeastern states and parts of Canada plunged into darkness by worst power failure in history. The Supremes' "... Hear a Symphony." but Fontella Bass says "Rescue Me." Comedians have a field day.

68

JOE KLUENK

Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour St.
Hartford, CT 06115; fax 203-524-7075

Some of us are still practicing medicine, among other things. Bruce Hulgren is a cardiovascular anesthesiologist in Santa Cruz, Calif. When not passing gas, Bruce is enjoying family life with wife, Marianne, Andy (4), and newborn Emily Joy, described as "very smoochable" and "the most beautiful little girl in the world" (see photo).

Woody English left Princeton and got his medical stripes in N.Y., Nashville, and Atlanta, and then circumnavigated the globe to experience infectious diseases first hand in third world countries. Woody's base is now Portland, Oreg., where he runs a busy ID practice, teaches physicians in training, manages intensive care units, and administers a hospital infection control program and a community-based AIDS research center. Woody has invited anyone with similar interests to join him in the Pacific Northwest.

Ray Baxter is heading for the West Coast where he has just been appointed director of public health for the City of San Francisco. Ray and wife, Aida Alvarez, will be translocating from N.Y.C. with their new baby girl.

Tom Baranowski got a new wife and a new job this summer. They have moved to Augusta, Ga., where Tom will head a new research unit within the Prevention Inst. at the Medical College of Ga.

69

PAUL GEORGE SITTENFELD

1854 Keys Crescent
Cincinnati, OH 45206

Class officers and board met on campus, prior to the victorious Brown game Oct. 6.

Murph McCarthy presided. Patricia Lin '91, our Class scholar, reported on her impressive activities and achievements. Treasurer Chuck Freyer reported a strong start in Class dues. Annual Giving Chairman, Andy Brown, noted that last year had gone well and he looks forward to the generous participation of classmates this year. Memorial Fund Drive Chairman Jim Gregoire noted almost $450,000 in hand toward our 25th Reunion M.F.D. goal of $700,000+.

Class events are in the works for Washington, D.C., and N.Y. Robin and Murph McCarthy hosted a Class dinner at their Princeton place Oct. 20.

The Class voted to participate with a number of individual classmates in supporting the gift of a piece of sculpture, "Moonpot," by Toshiko Takaezu to the Princeton Univ. Art Museum. Ms. Takaezu has been part of the creative arts staff at the University for more than 20 years. This idea came to us through the efforts of Dan Massad.

Others at the meeting included your secretary, Dick Bott, Bill Charrier, Jim Johnson, Joe Marshall, Marc Miller, Sandy Rea, and Larry Lamade. By acclamation, Larry was elected to the Class board.

Present, but not voting, were progeny Jamie Gregoire, Emily Miller, and P. G. Sittenfeld.

70

JAN KUBIK

113 Laurel Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Why are these people smiling? Pictured above (l-r) are three-fourths of our impressive A.G. leadership team: Charlie Wood, Mickey Pohl, and Bill Heyman with President Shapiro. Along with an absent Steve Forbes, these fund-raisers extraordinaire reported that the Great Class of 1970 established a new 20th reunion record of $1,200,650 from 73% of the Class.

Kudos to all who volunteered their time and energies for the campaign, and thanks to all our contributors whose gifts made this possible. Almost 100 people answered the frantic call that last week (and some were reached that final weekend) to put us over the top! This was truly a broad Class effort, and every donor should be proud of his or her role in our success.

Charlie and Mickey have turned the Class agent duties over to the hero of the P-rade, John Loose, to guide our efforts for the next five years. Please don't ignore his appeals or those from Bill for the Class memorial fund or the Class dues notices from Steve Davidson. Your dues fund the Alumni Weakly [sic], and various Class activities, while the memorial fund and A.G. help Princeton achieve its educational goals. The University is first and foremost a great educational institution, paid for in part by support from alumni like us!

71

STUART E. RICKERSON

Grace Station, P.O. Box 1142
New York, NY 10028

The "proud parent" section of the Class of 1971 certainly includes Lois and Sherm Bristow. Their daughter, Jenny, is a member of Princeton's Class of 1994. She hopes to play field hockey and lacrosse. Lois is the school nurse at Bryn Mawr School, while Sherm is associate headmaster, English teacher, and football coach at Gilman School. Sherm was wondering how many of his classmates have children at Old Nassau now? (Ed. note: Good question. Drop a line to let your classmates know of their children's classmates.) Louisa Tyson Vache "Tysie" Whitman '93, whose father is Bill Whitman, is another current legacy. Bill says she is "thinking of majoring in English or bartending (yes, that's a real course). Ah, Princeton in the Nation's Service!?"

Résumés: Tony Davenport teaches sculpture and ceramics at Ohio Univ. in Lancaster, where he lives with Kathleen and their son Marc (9) and stepson Ben (17). Two older stepchildren, Michelle and David, are now out on their own. In addition, Tony takes a group of students from the Northwood Inst. on a yearly study trip to Europe. This year's trip includes stops in France, Germany, Poland, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Austria, Italy, and Greece. Tony also provided information on Marc Rosenthal, who is a freelance illustrator, living with wife Eileen and son Willem in Malden Bridge, N.Y., near the Massachusetts border, "keeping in touch with his studio in the Big Apple via fax and Federal Express." Tony reports that Bruce Altsbuler is presently happily engaged in researching a book on early modernist exhibitions.

Doug Replogle recently founded a company called Applied Vehicle Sciences, which provides engineering and testing services to the motorsports industry. James Henderson has been named superintendent of schools for Montgomery Township, N.J. He says, "This appointment is like a homecoming for me." Mitch Daniels has left as head of the Hudson Inst. to become V.P.-corporate affairs for Eli Lilly in his hometown of Indianapolis.

72

KIP HENWITT

21 Wildcat Rd.
Darlen, CT 06820

Though a year late in being the printed, the accompanying picture shows Hank Bjorklund (l) with Walt Snickenberger '75, Dick Kazmaier '52, and Cosmo Iacavazzi '65 on the field during halftime of the Cornell game in 1989. Hank, who is a lawyer and V.P. of Chase Manhattan Bank, was being recognized for holding Princeton's all-time rushing record for 18 years.

Bob Stack has joined Cadbury Schweppes in Stamford, Conn. as V.P., human resources, after spending ten years at Primerica (formerly American Can). Bob will have global responsibility for human resources, public relations, and communications for Schweppes' worldwide beverage business. He and his wife, Stephanie Federici, and their daughter Carolyn (9), live in Ridgefield, Conn.

Meanwhile, Bob Saunders, who joins the Intl. Leasing Group of Deutsche Credit Corp, a subsidiary of Deutsche Bank A.G., will be traveling frequently to Frankfurt to learn the intricacies of German cross-border leasing. Bob, who had previously been with Xerox Credit Corp., will be based in Manhattan. However, traveling in the opposite direction is Prescott Wurltzer, who, until recently, had been with the U.S. embassy in Bonn. Prescott writes: "After experiencing history on my watch—the inner-German economic and monetary union and defacto German unification—I will begin a ten-month sabbatical at the Natl. Defense College at Fort McNair in Washington, D.C."

73

R. GREGORY PLUMPTON

Box 14545
North Palm Beach, FL 33408

The two gracefully aging gentlemen pictured this week are Mike French (l) and John Northrup (r). Mike has joined Yourdon, Inc., a Kodak company which markets software and consulting services. He is V.P. for all North American operations.

John has been appointed assistant controller for the Boston Thermal Energy Corp. B.T.E.C. markets steam as an alternative energy source to 250 major buildings in downtown Boston. John was a lecturer at Northeastern Univ. College of Business Administration. John lives in the picturesque suburb of Lynnfield, which is also home to Brad Shingleton and his lovely harem.

Two weddings to report: Avid readers of our NASSAU HERALD remember Peter Simpson as the au-

Princeton Clubs and Alumni Associations

PAA OF NORTHERN OHIO (Cleveland): Sat., Nov. 24—The association will host a symposium on higher education with Sociology Prof. Marvin Bressler. The symposium will precede an appearance by the men's basketball team in the North Coast Basketball tournament Sat. evening. For info, please call Barbara Rose '77 at 216-621-3300.

PAA OF LONG ISLAND: Thurs., Nov. 29—President Harold T. Shapiro '64 will speak at the annual dinner. For info., call Harold German '65 at 516-271-8700.

PAA OF WESTERN PENN.: Tues., Dec. 18—Associate Provost Mimi Coffey will speak at a luncheon. For further info., call Peggy Joy '74 at 412-566-6157.

PC OF NORTHERN CALIF.: Sat., Dec. 29—The association will host a symposium on higher education with Sociology Prof. Marvin Bressler. The symposium will precede an appearance by the men's basketball team in the Cable Car Classic Basketball tournament Saturday evening. For information on the symposium and tournament, please call Matthew Quilter '74 at 415-324-7029.

Notice of activities for inclusion in this column should be submitted at least eight weeks prior to the date on which they will occur. Send info. to Elizabeth Hunt, Alumni Council, Maclean House, Princeton Univ., Princeton, NJ 08544-0291; 609-258-3351.

STAFF WRITER-ASSOCIATE EDITOR

PAW seeks a staff writer—associate editor. Chief responsibilities are covering campus news and Princeton sports and writing occasional feature stories. Candidates should have two years' experience on the editorial staff of a newspaper or magazine. An excellent opportunity for a young alumnus/a in journalism. PAW is an equal-opportunity employer.

Send résumé to:
Andrew Mytelka '85/Managing Editor
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William Street, Princeton NJ 08540

Barge Beautiful Canal du Midi or Burgundy aboard "La Tortue". Spacious, comfortable. Large sundeck, lounge, 3 twin staterooms/baths. Notable cuisine, 10-speed bikes, minibus. Seasoned, agreeable British crew. Weekly charters Apr.-Oct. Color brochure: "LaTortue", Dept. P, Box 1466, Manchester, MA 01944 thor of our Class Poem. Peter was married last Apr. 8 to the former Nancy Lynn Zajac (Rutgers '75) in St. Patrick's Cathedral in N.Y.C. Nancy works at Rothschild investment bankers in N.Y.C. Peter has turned his writing talents to business, as a freelance financial writer and consultant.

Nancy Eisner Schoenberg married Clifford Schoenberg June 11, 1990, in Waccabuc, N.Y. They are both partners in the N.Y.C. law firm of Miller, Singer, Raives & Brandes.

Before things started to heat up in her part of the world Queen Noor (Lisa Halaby) was at Wheaton College to receive an honorary degree. She was honored for her efforts to enhance the quality of life in Jordan and for her work in overseeing the many projects of the Noor Al Hussein Foundation.

74

JOHN STRYKER
15 Woodbine Rd.
Kendall Park, NJ 08824

MOTLEY CRUE OR THE SUPREME COURT? These nine distinguished '74 gentlemen gathered at last year's Yale game. Shown from left are: Peter Walkingshaw, age 3; Steve Crandall, San Diego attorney; Keith Stock, of McKinsey & Co. in N.Y.; Rob Walkingshaw, general partner of A.B.S. Ventures in Baltimore; Andy Cowbird, of Salomon Brothers in N.Y.; Bob Delist, of Marsh & McLennan in Denver; Dave Sfara, Waterbury, Conn., attorney; Roger Mebner, Summit, N.J., attorney; and Matt Singleton, of Arthur Andersen in N.Y.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER: Bob Jurko writes that he "would like to lay claim to being the last member of the Class of '74 to graduate—in June 1981! Classmates will recall that I spent my last two years at Princeton in the Class of '75. This upset me so much that I was able to complete only half of my thesis by June '75. Six years later, after medical school and internship and in a year of 'cushy' 40-hour weeks as an emergency room M.D., I dusted it off and finished it. I returned then to my residency training, and thereafter built Churchland Internal Medicine in Chesapeake, Va."

Maurya Meenan writes, "Some members of the Class of '74 might be interested to know that I finally finished my thesis and am at long last an honest-to-goodness Princeton grad! It is a great feeling, needless to say, made all the sweeter by the 15-year wait. Thanks to all my Princeton friends for encouragement over the years."

75

MELISSA KERN MESROBIAN
940 Riverside Ave., Berkeley Square
Trenton, NJ 08618

Kevin and Charlotte Smart Rogan became parents three times over on Jan. 25, 1990. Pictured with Charlotte are the triplets (l-r): Stephanie Jordan, Nicholas James, and Olivia Elise. The babies are "wonderful and healthy." David Lax and his wife, Ilana Manolson, now have a son, Eric Tobias, who is "the joy of our lives and the enemy of our sleep." David has left teaching at Harvard B.-School for a while and is working at a Canadian merchant bank, First City Capital Corp. Phil and Esther Costel Tamplin made it home to Louisville, Ky., from Reunions in good time for the birth of William Costel Tamplin, named for Esther's father, on June 22. Wallace Ruckert '30 kindly sent a note with the good news.

Banthoon Lamsam and his wife, Usa, had their first child, a daughter, Songkanda, Apr. 13, 1990. Banthoon is with Thai Farmers Bank in Bangkok.

Stanley Lucas has been made a principal at Systems Research & Applications Corp. in Arlington, Va. He is currently director of the division of software development. He and his wife, Lisa Gok '76, live in Chevy Chase, Md., with daughter, Emily (5).

Angie Del Graco has sold her airplane but still flies as a club member. She is now associate director of laundry product development at Procter & Gamble. She and her husband, Harry Chamberlain, are keeping very busy with their new passion, golf, and moved into a new house Reunions weekend.

76

JAMES L. MARKETOS
Lane & Mitterdorf, 919 18th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20006

FALSETTOLAND, a sequel to the William Finn musical, MARCH OF THE FALSETTOS, continues the story of Marvin, who, in "Falsettos," left his family for a man named Whizzer. The sequel takes up the issue of AIDS, and according to the N.Y. TIMES reviewer (Sept. 17, 1990) is "by turns entertaining and devastating to witness." The review also notes that "the terrific lead actors [from 'Falsettos'] are back in place (looking no worse for wear)." Among them is Steve Bogardus, playing Whizzer, who "caps an altogether superlative performance with the ferocious, unsentimental blues of a man in his prime facing mortality."

When the Lee Cty. (Fla.) Board of Commissioners decided to restore their natl. landmark county courthouse, they put Fort Myers resident Howard Gold in charge. The project was completed in Sept. 1989 and won a natl. award for "Excellence in Achievement." Another happy event for Howard and his wife Jane last year was the birth of their son Benjamin July 20, pictured (top) wearing the appropriate protective and prospective apparel. Howard is now the construction manager for BancFlorida, which serves southwest Florida from Bradenton to Marco Island along the Gulf coast. He's also the youngest member—by 20 years—of the Princeton Club of S.W. Florida. The second tiger pictured is Paul Gordon Molyneux, the son of Michael Molyneux and Dr. Lisa Matthews. Paul was born Mar. 9, 1990, at St. Joseph's Med. Center in Stamford, Conn. Lisa has an ob/gyn. practice there; Mike is chief copy editor of the N.Y. TIMES magazine.

77 JAMES BARNON
15 W. 72nd St., Apt. 24-B
New York, NY 10023

MAGAZINE RACK: The NEW YORKER took note of a movie that Phil Hartman made with Doris Kornish, with whom he also owns the Two Boots restaurant at 37 Ave. A in Manhattan. "The cuisine is Italian/Cajun," the magazine said. "Phil is the guy waiting to take your name, wearing basketball shoes and with a pencil behind his ear. He'll suggest that you wait at the bar, and if you do you can order a boot of Rolling Rock on tap (the glass is actually shaped like a boot and holds more than a regular mug)." Phil wrote and directed the movie, NO PICNIC, shown at the Anthology Film Archives on Second Ave. The Dec. 1989 issue of WORKING WOMAN magazine carried a letter to the editor from Cheryl Lechok of Tarrytown, N.Y., telling how she had married a co-worker. "We had known each other for nine years and had dated for two," she wrote. "We are uniquely qualified to share each other's interests and joys and to understand each other's problems." The only detail the letter omitted was her husband's name: Mark Nowatarski. He told Class Treasurer Doug Coppi that he works in applications research at Union Carbide and has a couple of patents in electronic soldering. The latest is for a process that eliminates chlorofluorocarbons used in cleaning. "Cheryl is my marketing counterpart," he said. "My group invents it and her group sells it."

THE CLASS OF 2010 or 2011—Peter Angelica's first child, Nancy, was born Nov. 26, 1989. "Life hasn't been the same since," he reports. Gerard Vetter's third child and second daughter, Margaret Eileen, was born Jan. 12, joining Andrew Gerard (7) and Margaret Kathleen (5). Charles Peavey, manager of the group developing computational fluid dynamics technology for Northrop's B-2 division, reports that daughter Sarah Kim weighed in at 7 lbs., 3 ozs. Feb. 19. Brother Russell (5) was "thrilled." Kris Kollevoll writes that Kennett Dane Kollevoll arrived Apr. 27, joining Steffan (4). N.Y. surgeon James Clarke's third child, Emma Chandler Clarke, arrived May 29.

78

BOB FRANK
Box 886
Middlebury, VT 05753

After 12 years at IBM, Jonathan Smolow has recently been named V.P., Mid-Atlantic sales, for Bottomline Technologies. He lives in Doylestown, Penn., with wife Candace (Univ. of Vermont '75) and their two sons.

Molly Pollette Story writes, "I've quit my half-time teaching job at Georgia Tech (in product design studio courses) to manage the home front for awhile. My husband Joe's son, Matt (14), has come to live with us. Our daughter, Hanna (nearly 3), is delighted that her big brother and best friend is here to stay." Molly's husband is the natl. marketing manager for Raychem Corp.

Bob Sturtz claims that he has built his career backwards. "After P.U., retired; then consulting; now, Miller and Chevalier paralegal and evening law school to begin 9/91."

Mike Wert has been appointed an assistant clinical professor of medicine at the U.N.C. Teaching Hospital in Greensboro. His specialty is pulmonary and critical care medicine.

BABIES: Janet Mohr and Tim Hunsucker are the proud parents of Hunter, a nine-pound boy who arrived Aug. 23, 1990. Hunter's parents are psychiatrists in Sugar Land, Tex. And born Mar. 3, 1989, to Mary Louise (Djorup) and Larry Krakauer, was Caryn Elizabeth.

Charles Dale writes, "After a two-year run as the saucier at Le Cirque in N.Y.C., I have now opened my own restaurant in Aspen, Colo." The restaurant, Renaissance, specializes in modern French cuisine, "treading lightly on creams and fats." Charles is enthusiastic about the restaurant's success, and extends an invitation to any classmates who may be passing through to stop by a visit.

79

MARTHA KRAMER
27 Northhill St., Apt. 6-R
Stamford, CT 06907

NUPTIAL NEWS: Richard Newcomb Stillwell has married Katherine (Trina) Eastwick Jones. "Newc" is an associate with the Boston law firm Ropes & Gray. Trina works in communications at the Boston Consulting Group. Stephen Engelberg has married Gabrielle Christina Glaser. Steve is the Warsaw bu-

Patron of the Avant-Garde

CHARLES B. WRIGHT '77 had been practicing corporate-finance law in Seattle for five years when, in January 1987, he decided to "jump ship," as he puts it, and move with his wife and three children to New York City, where he was to head the Dia Center for the Arts.

It was an inspired decision—both for Wright and for Dia. As an undergraduate at Princeton, Wright had taken time off to work at the Whitney Museum of American Art. Later, while a law student at Stanford, he had taken off more time to work in the legal counsel's office at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Indeed, he had grown up in a family of supporters of the arts. The Seattle Repertory Company's home is the Bagley Wright Theater, named for his father, C. Bagley Wright, Jr. '46.

In 1987, Dia, the nation's largest institution devoted entirely to contemporary art, was experiencing widely publicized financial and legal difficulties. Founded in 1974, Dia was largely underwritten by oil heiress Philippa de Menil. It had been spending some $5 million a year—most of it generated from her oil revenues—to provide long-term support to artists, to buy vast quantities of art, and to sponsor permanently installed avant-garde projects like Walter De Maria's Earth Room, a large room whose floor is covered with nearly two feet of dirt.

By 1983, however, slumping oil prices had begun to reduce the flow of funds to Dia, which suddenly found itself deeply in debt and fighting lawsuits filed by artists it had been supporting. In response to this crisis, Dia's board of directors sold off some of the center's art and a lot of its real estate. It also brought Wright aboard to keep Dia functioning by consolidating operations, cutting overhead, and starting a fundraising effort to broaden its sources of income. What he calls an "intense restructuring" put Dia back on a firm financial footing. "It's a great feeling to be involved professionally in something you believe in passionately," he says.

Dia owns exhibit spaces in Soho and a huge facility at 548 West Twenty-second Street, in Chelsea, where it presents year-long exhibitions on a scale that would not be possible at mainstream museums. Its projects have included ambitious installations by artists like Jenny Holzer, John Chamberlain, Robert Ryman, and Francesco Clemente. Dia also maintains some long-term, sited projects outside New York, among them De Maria's work of land art The Lightning Field, in New Mexico.

Wright also manages Dia's permanent collection of art. Last year, he worked out a deal to establish an Andy Warhol Museum in Pittsburgh. The museum, which is scheduled to open in 1992, will bring together a large collection of paintings, drawings, prints, photographs, and films by Andy Warhol, including Dia's holdings and works from the artist's estate. "The Andy Warhol Museum is a partnership, initiated by Dia with the Carnegie Institute of Pittsburgh," Wright explains. "The Warhol will be the first of many planned collaborations involving Dia's great collection of art."

Of Dia's penchant for placing pieces of its permanent collection in different parts of the country rather than consolidating them in New York, Wright says, "If you go to Italy, you would expect to go to several destinations—to Siena to see Duccio, to Florence to see the Uffizi, and to the Veneto to see Palladio's churches. You would make a pilgrimage. Why should we shy away from decentralization? It's easy now to get to places, so why don't we spread it around a bit?"

He is also an eloquent advocate for the avant-garde art that Dia sponsors. Regarding De Maria's Earth Room, he says, "The entire planet is in one room. It has smells, associations of the most profound kind. It's intellectually dishonest to regard it as trivial. De Maria is one of the great artists of our time."

Charles Wright '77

PHOTO BY ANN WALDRON

reau chief for the N.Y. TIMES, and Gabrielle is a freelance journalist, also in Warsaw. While their interfaith wedding ceremony recently took place in Alexandria, Va., they were married in a civil ceremony in St. Thomas, V.I., last spring.

FAMILY ADDITIONS: Andrew Stephens has adopted a third child, William Lee Stephens. Pictured are William with his older brother, Ben, and older sister, Hannah. Janice Nieman also reports the birth of a third child, Scott, who joins siblings Lindsay and Jack.

EAST COAST UPDATES: Tracy Wickersty Orlando writes that she is still enjoying life in Washington, D.C. She is an attorney for Wang Laboratories, and her husband, John, is chief of staff of the House of Representatives Energy and Commerce Committee. They have two children, Katherine and John Anthony. William Brabam reports that he and his wife, Persephone, are finally settled in Philadelphia after their move from New York. He is teaching in the U.Penn. architecture dept. and is director of the Fine Arts Research Center, where she is a computer support person. He is also working on a swimming machine for James Murdock, who has a booming business called "Endless Pools." Frances Sladek and Tom de la Cal and their toddler son, Maximilian, are still in Manhattan. Francey is doing post-doctoral research at Rockefeller Univ.

OVERDUE THANKS: Many thanks to the classmates who have provided news on the flaps of dues or A.G. envelopes, returned news on birthday cards, or responded to notes. This column would not be possible without you; keep up the good work!

80

Rik D. PARKER
25 Farmhouse La.
Purloing, PA 18925

Congratulations to Chuck Cummings, who recently won the Natl. Archives Playwriting Competition for his play SCARECROW. The play, which is about a freed slave who was "ku-kluxed" in Chatham County, N.C., in 1871, was given a staged reading at the Natl. Archives in Washington, D.C. in September. Chuck comments from Decatur, Ga., that winning the competition was a major shock but also a major encouragement in his quest to trade pinstripes for pen. Asbby Boyle has finally ventured out into the world after ten post-Princeton years cloistered within the ivy walls. Asbby now has a Ph.D. in religious ethics from Yale and J.D. from Columbia (along with another law degree from the Univ. of Cambridge, Emmanuel College), to show for all of his efforts. He recently took the oath of office to clerk for former Chief Justice Burger in Washington, D.C. Speaking of the law, Peter Swire moved to Charlottesville, Va., over the summer to begin teaching at the U.Va. School of Law. He specializes in banking regulation and worrying about how to prevent the thrift crisis from happening again. His wife, Anne (Dartmouth '81), and son, Nathan (2), are enjoying country living and getting used to a town where the colors are orange and blue, rather than orange and black. Kate Raisz recently dropped a note that she is still in Jamaica Plain, Mass., but that she had missed Reunions because she was just starting a new job as a documentary producer for PBS. From the Far East, Tom Blum writes that he, his wife Heli, and his kids Henry (2½) and Tina (8 mos.) would love to see any classmates passing through Tokyo.

CLASS ISSUE: On Apr. 2, Sandy Stoner Van Wormer gave birth to her second child, Andrew, who joins two-year-old sister, Emily. Sandy and her husband, Phil, are both in marketing with DuPont in Dela. and spend their spare time taking care of the kids.

81

JUAN AMARILE TELL-JOHANN
50 Riverside Dr., #9F
New York, NY 10024

Amy Sommerfeld Fiore is working as a professional writer, living outside Boston with her husband, Jay. She writes that she is looking forward to the finer things—children, house—in the not-too-distant future. Isis Carballo writes that she is having a lot of fun with her son, Alejandro José, now one-and-a-half years old. Isis became a partner in the law firm O'Neill & Borges in Puerto Rico, where she specializes in corporate tax law. Peter Greenbill has a son, Tyler Alexander Kanoë, born Feb. 21, 1990. Peter is teaching English and coaching volleyball at Iolani School, which graduated four Princeton-bound seniors in its Class of '90.

Fernando Muñoz writes: "I am a campaign worker for Maria Elizabeth Muñoz '80, my sister (a gubernatorial candidate in California)... This coming Oct. I mark my fourth year of living with AIDS... I am also a screenwriter who has recently signed on with new literary agent, Writers and Artists of Brentwood."

Barbara Delanty is living in Basel working at Ciba-Geigy in the Pharmaceuticals Division. She is currently the project leader overseeing the construction and start-up of a production line for Tegretol, an anti-epileptic and their biggest product on the basis of tonnage. Barb spent last Easter in N.Y. with Lisa Fisber, who celebrated her first wedding anniversary with Steve Holland June 4. Barb spoke recently to Gail Froiman, who seemed delighted with her new job at the E.P.A. in the Washington, D.C. area, where she and her husband, Casey Lisse, built a house a few years ago.

82

TIM DOOLEY KOGUT
12409 Sadler Lane
Bowie, MD 20715

ON THE GO. After receiving his M.B.A. from U.C.L.A. last June Neil Barry spent the following month in Fiji, New Zealand, and the Great Barrier Reef. When he returned, he moved to San Francisco to start a management consulting job for Booz Allen Hamilton, and within two weeks was sent to Melbourne, Australia on a six-month assignment. Tom Carruthers' latest attempt at climbing recently took place at Mt. McKinley. Alas, one climbing companion broke his hip from a falling rock; so his group had to retreat at 15,300 feet. He's hoping to return in summer of 1992 (after our 10th, right, Tom?).

ON THE MOVE. Maddi Hausmann has moved to another location in the Bay Area... this time it's to San Jose. She's still has the same old job (at Tandem) and the same old cat (Eric, now 11 years old), but bought a new hot tub after her old one broke in last year's earthquake. So far she experienced a rare thunderstorm and is hoping this might lead to ending Northern Calif.'s four-year drought. Mark Prysant just moved to the San Diego area and is working at the Center for Communications Research. Ellen Longmire, on the other hand, left Calif. (after six years) to teach as an assist. prof. in aerospace engineering and mechanics for the Univ. of Minn.

STAYING LOOSE. Mark Parrish is enjoying the good life. He's surfing, boogie boarding and doing some modeling in sunny Southern Calif. He's living on avocados and alfalfa sprouts and hopes to return to civilization by reunion time.

83

GAIL FRANCK
345 West 87th St., Apt. 3F
New York, NY 10024

Robert Simms wrote in with the following news. "Dan Teager is living in Boston and has taken the engine out of his red M.G. What's more, he has removed the fly wheel and crankshaft too. In fact, he has probably removed everything that is removable. The man is amazing. Besides fashioning custom parts for it on a lathe, (without a carbide tipped saw blade), when he decides to he will have every screw, nut, and washer back in the original locations. 'O.K., Dan, have you decided to start reassembly?' Matt Benner is living very happily. Gene Sidoti might take his family to Philadelphia so his daughter Lea Michelle can see the liberty bell. Bob Konefal married his wife, Catherine, at the Columbia Chapel at a ceremony performed by Catherine's brother who flew up from Peru for the wedding. Mary Farenbach Costello was reported to be doing 'the Twist' at the reception with her husband Barney."—Thanks for the scoop.

Jill Gardiner married Stuart Chessman on July 15, 1989. Their son, Stuart John, was born on May 6, 1990. They live in Hartford where Stuart is an attorney and Jill is working on a dissertation for the dept. of classics at Univ. of Chicago.

Joe Piropatto is "taking stock of the West" as first V.P. at Baleman Eichler Hill Richards in L.A., running institutional sales and trading. Margaret Lee Chess and David Chess '81 had a baby girl on August 16, 1990. Maryanne Gael Chess weighed in at 7 lbs., 13 ozs., and was 21.5 inches long. The Chesses live in Mohegan Lake, N.Y.

John Briggs II writes that Anthony Pacheco married Deborah Licht (U.C.—Northridge '82) on Aug. 19, 1990, in the southern Rockies. Anthony is a defense lawyer for white-collar criminals in L.A. and serves as a pro tempore judge in the Calif. municipal courts. Deborah works as a paralegal at Leopold, Petrie & Smith. Classmates at the wedding included John, who is a real estate attorney and adjunct professor at S.M.U. Law School in Dallas, and Joel Wells, a tax attorney in Atlanta.

84

THOMMY C. WU
Beacon Court, 175 Beacon St., Apt. 413
Somerville, MA 02143

SPOTLIGHT ON THE TOP SPOT AT THE HI-SPOT... Amanda Wood was recently profiled by the SEATTLE WEEKLY in an extensive cover story describing her creation and ownership of the Hi-Spot Café in the neighborhood of Madrona. According to the article, "Wood has endowed her enterprise with a dreamy idealism and a menu that seem too quirkily out of touch with the times for the place to survive. Yet on weekday afternoons and weekend mornings, the Hi-Spot is packed, its patrons drawn there by the café's hearty, sustaining food, Wood's considerable charisma, and her high-minded, homey sense of mission." Amanda bought the café with her business partner, Michael Kingsley, in Nov. 1988, and since then it has rapidly become the heart of the Madrona business district. Amanda views her ownership of the Hi-Spot as "the perpetuation of a family tradition, a political movement, a form of artistic expression, and an attempt to preserve her favorite neighborhood in the whole world." Amanda decided to try her hand with the café after finding school and other jobs to be overly goal-driven and funneling experiences. With her café, Amanda sees her role as that of bringing together and revitalizing the economically depressed Madrona business district. In addition, "I try more than anything else to get idea people, creative people, together. It's like my hobby is human chemistry, mixing a little of this and that, and sometimes it's a catastrophe and the whole lab blows up, and other times people that I think should be kept apart at all costs end up actually meeting each other and really hit it off."

ALSO IN SEATTLE ARE... Bill and Molly Drewser Lapatra, both architects; Eleanor Mosely Pollnow, pursuing her acting career; and Charles Polnow, a financial analyst; and Mark Snowden, who is pursuing his medical residency and has settled in Seattle with his wife, Janine.

85 ROS JURANEK
1578 Oak Ave., Apt. 1
Evanston, IL 60201

A FUNNY THING HAPPENED ON THE WAY TO THE YUCATAN: The following note from Bill Stanton and his lovely wife, Amanda '86, gave our letters editor quizzical pause. Bill had this to say of their recent sojourn to Mexican ruins: "The weirdest thing happened! We were hiking through the jungle when we came upon a huge mound of dirt. Having spent a good part of a week digging, we discovered what resembled an enormous pyramid. We thought it might mean something, though we were not sure. Then an even stranger thing happened: a small store only a quarter of a mile away was actually selling pictures of what looked exactly like our find. Damned if we'll ever get credit for it now." It appears our explorers drank too much of the water.

Elsewhere, well-paid investigative reporters for this column chartered a Winnebago to the Windy City where they spied former football great, Greg Kaiser holding court in a downtown dance club. Greg, who sophomore year decided against a career with College Pro Painters, has risen to such bachelor celebrity that he regularly graces the gossip pages of Chicago's venerable youth register, NBON Magazine.

From all of our staff, we wish you the plumpest of Thanksgiving Turkeys.

86 SALLIE KIM
2645 California St., #303
Mountain View, CA 94040

Pictured is the wedding of Tracy (TR) Winfree to Bryan Neely. Tracy graduated from Univ. of Colo.—Denver with a master's in urban and regional planning and is now working for the City of Boulder.

Princetonians pictured: (front row) Beib Finney, Martha Russo '85, Suzie Preston '85, Mary Bryan, John Donovan, Tracy, Katy (O'Connor) Donovan, Virginia Moore, Coach Susan Tee-ter, Betsy Lind, (second row) John Lurie '85, Katherine Fritts, Becky Bol '89, Heather Cameron '88, Doris Kim, Jackie Kel-lachen '87, Margaret Reidy, Sue McCarter '85, Bob Rivers, (third row) Darcy Eckert '89, Sarah Tantillo '87, Wendy Reiners '89, Ellen DeVoe, Wendy Otis '88, Justine Koepfen, Julie Boblen, (fourth row) Gary Squires, Laura Hopper '87, Lisa Goodwin, and Andy Robbins. Tracy also gave a report on some of her wedding guests: Betsy Lind received her master's in education from Harvard. Ellen DeVoe is studying for her M.S.W. at the Univ. of Denver.

Kyril Saxe-Coburg is the groom in the caricature.

His wedding was Sept. 15, 1989.

Future filmmakers in our Class are Danny Salles, studying at U.S.C. film school, and Susan Kírr, who has just entered N.Y.U.'s film school.

87 MARY TAYLOR DEMKO
1935 Seville St.
Santa Rosa, CA 95403

Happy anniversary to Brian (SUNY—New Paltz '83) and Lisa Blair Hanlon who were married Dec. 2, 1989, in the P.U. Chapel. Lots of Princetonians attended the wedding, including (front) Sean Kavanaugh, (middle, l-r) Carolyn Mora, Bob Wang, Christie Adams, Brian, Cbris McKibbin, Lisa, Jay Walsh '86, Dave Kopp, Kari Briggs, Darcy Eckert '89, and (back, l-r) Molly Meville, Shannon Ginn, Tim Main, Penny Bunn, Andrew Chang, Jennifer Pickens, Lucy Springen, Tim Kingston, Cindy McKane, Brian Hetherington '85, Jane Neely, Lisa Sansone, David McCune, Jim Blair '61 (Lisa's father), and Doug Butler '86. Lisa and Brian now live in Tenafly, N.J., and work as sales reps for Bristol-Myers Squibb.

Shawn Cows was named an associate of the Society of Actuaries last July. He lives in N.Y.C. and works for New York Life. Peter Kraus writes that he is very much enjoying studies at Boston College Law School; he is now in his third year. Also in school, Bill Zimmerman is working toward a Ph.D. in chemical engineering from Stanford. Jane Dietze spent a year in South Africa studying at the Univ. of Capetown. William Hiser, a med student at U.C.S.F., was awarded a Sarnoff fellowship to do cardiovascular research this year. Fred Horman finished his master's in computer science at Rutgers in May, and married Amy Meyer on Sept. 22, 1990.

88 CHRISTOPHER LU
206E Holden Green
Cambridge, MA 02138

Like many '88ers, Nellie Gorbea-Diaz had enough of the real world and has returned to school. Nellie is doing a master's in public administration at Columbia, with a concentration in public and non-profit management. She writes that Mari Garcia is in her second year of a master's program in communications at the Newhouse School at Syracuse. And Olly Fernandez is working at Lopito, Ileana & Howie, an advertising firm in Puerto Rico.

Two other people who have recently returned to school are David Frank and David Proshan. The former is at Harvard Business School, and the latter is at Univ. of Chicago law school. Other Class of '88 news comes from Old Nassau, where Don Lu has returned from a two-year stint in the Peace Corps—he was in Sierra Leone—and is now finishing his M.P.A. at the Wilson School. Also returning to Princeton is Dana Laird, in admissions.

President Harold Shapiro recently wrote to thank the Class for establishing the Sam Mitra Scholarship Fund: "While I regret I did not have an opportunity to know Sam personally, I do have a sense of what a special person he was. I know that his spirit and enthusiasm will leave a lasting impression on all his friends and teachers at Princeton. You and your classmates are very thoughtful to pay tribute to Sam in a way that will be so very helpful and meaningful to his successors here. Please convey my warmest

Young Alumni Activities

PCNY: Nov. 28: Night at Comedy Club, "Stand up, New York." Nov. 29: Movie night—CINEMA PARADISO 7:30, free. Dec. 6: Thursday Night Club—young alumni get together in PC's bar and grill. Dec 20: Young Alumni Holiday Party 6:30-8:30. For reservations (except Thurs. Night Club) call manager's office.

REGIONAL YOUNG ALUMNI CHAIRS: Boston—Adrienne Della Penna '88, 617-421-5336; Central Conn.—Whitney Repp '80, 203-677-1642; Chicago—Robert Jirnek '85, 708-869-3052; Dallas—Rosalind Hausmann '84, 214-696-2848, Matt Hertzog '87, 817-478-4006; Delaware—Anne Linton '86, 302-427-0235; Houston—Timothy Herbert '84, 713-862-2730; L.A.—Lance Ketterer, 213-838-8397, Mary Beth Sutter '84, 213-666-4769; Michigan—George Corser '85, 313-647-0054, Michael Sklar '84, 313-995-1831; N.Y.C.—Mary Ciepiel (PC manager), 212-840-6400, Christa Weil '82, 212-517-5848; Oregon—Lori Irish Bauman '81, 503-774-1983; Philly—John Lavelle '85, 215-922-6532, Karen Bowdre '88, 215-293-9284; San Diego—Michele Cheung, 619-452-2315.

thanks to your classmates for creating this scholarship." Contributions to the scholarship are greatly appreciated and can be sent to the address above.

89 DAVID MILLER
4698 S. 36th St.
Arlington, VA 22206

Pictured here are newlyweds David Stuart (center) and Bridget Hodder (Mt. Holyoke '85), with David's Princeton roommate of four years, Jeff Yu. David and Bridget were married in a small, private ceremony in El Segundo, Calif. They are both anthropology grad students at Vanderbilt Univ. in Nashville, Tenn.; they met at a conference in May 1989, where David was to meet with several Vanderbilt anthro students for finalizing plans for grad school.

Andrew Huckman (right) went to 24 White Sox games in Chicago last summer, five of them with Princeton classmates. Jon Jaffee (pictured) is at his first year at U.C.L.A. Law School. The others with whom Andy farewelled Comiskey Park, slated for demolition this year: Wendy Bower Greppin, a paralegal at the Chicago law firm Bell, Boyd and Lloyd; Abby Franklin, fulfilling her R.O.T.C. commitment at Fort Benjamin Harrison in Indianapolis through Dec.; Mark Hiller, seeking a Ph.D. in molecular biology at Carnegie Mellon Univ. in Pittsburgh; and Tim Matbeney, teaching at St. John's High School in Toledo, Ohio.

Andy, in his second year at Northwestern Law, is now awaiting the start of the opera season.

90

BRETT GOODMAN
22 Berkeley Terrace
Livingston, NJ 07039

SPANNING THE GLOBE... Dave Baffa and Aidan Wasley work at the JAPAN TIMES in Tokyo. David Heine (Mitsubishi), Brigid McDermott (NEC Trade Services) also work in Japan. Many classmates teach English in the Far East, including Al Dyer and Mary Strotter in Japan; Adam Aston, Scott Davis, and Clark Lombardi in Indonesia; Sarah Colby, Jill Forney, Ken MacLean, Will Maack, and Mary Park in Thailand; Hae Jung Cho, Karyn Johnson, Scott Karchmer, Stephen Robb, Elizabeth Seay, Marcus Tye, and Elizabeth Yang in Korea; David Felt, Caiby Mulford, Mina Muraki, and Dax Swanson in China; and Steve Zwanger in Hong Kong. Florence Hsia is in China as well, studying Chinese.

Bob Kent is at the London School of Economics, Anna Thornton studies mechanical engineering at Cambridge, and Brian Epstein pursues a philosophy degree at Oxford. They are joined by our four Rhodes Scholars—George Boge, Andrew Dechet, Renee Lettow, and Tim Lyons. Andy Trees teaches high school in England, and Ellen Osborne works at Sotheby's in London. Marion Stoney and Frances Dougherty work in Paris, Celica Dincolo attends business school outside the capital in Joux-en-Josas, and Missy Larson works at a church ministry in Grenoble. David Sternberg and Bill MacCarney both study at the Univ. of Frankfurt, Michele Sobman works for Young & Rubicam in Frankfurt, and Pete Nouakoski is at Goethe Industries in Murnau. Richard Baldwin works at the American embassy in Madrid, while Bart Quillen teaches English in Czechoslovakia. John Carne and Joel Hekner teach in Vienna and Salzburg, respectively, while Sarah Billington and Ted Posner both study in Switzerland, at Zurich and Geneva. Ben Kramer teaches at Athens College in Greece. Dan Robinson studies history at the Hebrew Univ. of Jerusalem, while Michael Freund and Brad Hames are both at the Shapell College of Jewish Studies in Jerusalem.

GS
*60-*75

C. ROGER DAVIS *73
26 Crescent St.
Northampton, MA 01060

GEOLOGY: Dale F. Ritter *64 has retired from Southern Ill. Univ. at Carbondale. During his 18-year career there he received the first Outstanding Scholar award in 1985, won the Outstanding Teacher award in 1979, and received a distinguished teaching award from Franklin & Marshall College in 1970.

HISTORY: After teaching history for 15 years, Allan M. Marcus *67 reports he is now an attorney with Metropolitan Life in N.Y. Robert V. Wells *69, professor of history at Union College, Schenectady, N.Y., was awarded an alumni citation at Denison Univ. last June. President Michele Myers of Denison praised Robert's scholarship and teaching and noted that his publications have broadened the body of knowledge about colonial American history. One of his books is POPULATION OF THE BRITISH COLONIES IN AMERICA BEFORE 1776 (Princeton Univ. Press, 1975).

POLITICS: Last June, Kalamazoo College presented Jon W. Fuller *72 the honorary degree of doctor of humane letters, chiefly in recognition of his 15 years' service as president of the Great Lakes Colleges Assn. Jon is now president of the Consortium for the Advancement of Private Education, in Washington, D.C.

RELIGION: Larry Shinn *72 continues as V.P. for academic affairs at Bucknell.

Memorials

W. B. Kloppenburg '19

W. B. KLOPPENBURG died Dec. 12, 1988. He was born Aug. 11, 1897, in Jersey City, N.J. After Princeton, he went into the insurance business, living in Manchester, Conn., and continued there until 1984, when he moved to Little, Penn. In 1931 he was admitted to the Ohio Bar. He was interested in choral work and Boy Scouts, and was chairman, Manchester District 1951.

The Class of 1919

Varnum C. Mead '21

VARNUM C. MEAD died Sept. 3, 1990, after a long illness. He was 92 years old. He was born and lived all his life in Massachusetts. He prepared at Lawrenceville. At Princeton he was on the track squad and in Terrace. Varney spent his business career with Dwinell-Wright Co., coffee importers, where he was assistant treasurer.

He is survived by a daughter, Nancy Peters, two granddaughters, and two great-granddaughters, to whom the Class extends sincere sympathy.

The Class of 1921

Frank Elmer Rutan Jr. '23

WE OF THE CLASS OF 1923 lost one of our best known and admired members when Frank died Dec. 27, 1989.

Frank was born Apr. 23, 1899, in Sewickley, Penn. He attended Hill School. He served in the U.S. Army in WWI. At Princeton he won varsity letters in track and football and was in Triangle. That artistic-athletic connection earned him the nickname "Dancing Tackle." He was a member of Senior Council, Class Day Committee, Varsity, Right Wing, and Ivy Clubs.

After graduation, Frank settled in the Philadelphia area. He married Frances Sloan Dec. 8, 1928. After working for Sun Oil and as a stockbroker, he founded Rutan & Co., Manufacturer's Representatives. He retired in 1969 to Watch Hill, R.I. He served Princeton well as Class V.P. and reunion chairman for many years.

Frank was past president of the Fourth Street Club of Philadelphia and the Blue Hill Country Club.

Frances Rutan died in 1987. Frank is survived by his sons Frank and Nicholas, three grandchildren, four great-grandchildren, sister Elizabeth (Mrs. Hubert A. Royster '27), and brother-in-law Burrows Sloan Jr. '33.

The Class of 1923

George R. Beach '26

GEORGE BEACH, prominent resident of Lake Forest, Ill., and of the Hot Springs, Va. area, and a loyal and generous Princetonian, died of a heart attack Aug. 26, 1990, in Bacova, Va., at 87. At Princeton and in life George was an active participant. George spent his entire business career with E. I. du Pont Co. Much of his work was in personnel and as personnel manager of du Pont in Wilmington. His wide range of interests took him from raising irises, hunting in Africa and India, and collecting Currier and Ives prints, to serving as president of Chicago's Brookfield Zoo, as treasurer of the Natl. Board of PP/WPOP, and as alderman and three-term mayor of Lake Forest. He became a trustee of Lake Forest College in 1955 and retired as board chairman in 1974. He served as secretary, V.P., and president of 1926, and as president of the P.C. of Chicago. George was a rare person, whose interest in people resulted in activity, philanthropy, and leadership. We will long remember George Beach and what he meant to us.

Our profound sympathy goes out to his wife, Mary, his daughters Jane Zalman and Lynn O'Riley, his stepdaughters, Carolyn Tams and Katherine Bairstow, nine grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

The Class of 1926

Daniel E. Walzer '32

DAN WALZER died of cancer Aug. 31, 1990, in N.Y.C., where he was born and lived most of his life. He prepared at Poly Prep, and at Princeton was the handball champion of the University for two years. He was among our large contingent at the Harvard Law School, from which he graduated in 1935. During WWII he served as a major in the Air Force. Dan practiced law privately for many years, and later joined the firm of Samuel Lefrak, where he served as V.P. until his retirement in 1982. After that he devoted most of his energies as a director for the Inst. of Retired Professionals. To those who knew him he was a most pleasant and genial person and an excellent speaker with a fine mind.

In 1946 Dan married Marjorie Grier. She survives him, as do a daughter, Wendy, two stepsons, Oscar and Jack Schafer, and five granddaughters, to all of whom we extend our deep sympathy.

The Class of 1932

Ellwood W. Godfrey '33

ELLWOOD GODFREY died in Vero Beach, Fla., June 12, 1990. Ellwood was born July 17, 1910, in Ambler, Penn. He prepared at Lawrenceville. In college Ellwood was in Triangle and Cottage. He was a member of the 1936 Olympic field hockey team. Ellwood graduated from Penn med. school in 1937. In 1943 he received a degree in med. science (radiology) from Penn.

During WWII Ellwood served in the Navy Medical Corps in the South Pacific, emerging as a commander in 1946. He practiced medicine in Hartford, Conn., until his move to Princeton, where he served on the borough council and created the hospital's radiology dept.

On Aug. 28, 1939, Ellwood married Sophia Moore, in Blue Hill, Me. They had four children: Andrew, Georgiana Leonard, Caroline Werth, and Sophia Bauer. There are six grandchildren. Ellwood is also survived by a sister, Margaret Bradford.

To Sophia and to all the family we send our deep sympathy. We have lost a good friend.

The Class of 1933

John M. Farley '37

JOHN FARLEY, of the quixotic wit and passion for Princeton, died Sept. 12, 1990, at last released from his diabetic woes. On July 14, 1945, he married Patricia Bridgen, a British Wren, in London. They had five children: Charles, Alison, Christopher, Michael, and Mary Elizabeth; and six grandchildren. After Princeton John was a sports editor with the BUFFALO TIMES and, after the war, with the Times-Review in Bergenfield, N.J., before switching to furniture sales with Ethan Allen. He retired in 1979. During the war, by 1942 John was R.O. in a firing battery in Northern Ireland, and then within ten minutes of being on Omaha Beach met Biz Gifford and they set up a Princeton Club of the Beachhead. He garnered a Bronze Star with the 190th Field Artillery, while traveling the E.T.O. and a bit of Czechoslovakia, emerging a first lieutenant.

All our sympathies go to John's family and friends.

The Class of 1937

William Leslie Jr. '40

RETIRED INSURANCE executive Bill Leslie passed away Aug. 22, 1990, in San Diego, Calif. After WWII service as a naval aviator and a year at Columbia Law School, Bill entered the insurance business. In N.Y. he was with the Royal Globe Insurance Group, the Natl. Bureau of Casualty Underwriters, and the Continental Insurance Co., from which he retired as an exec. V.P. Bill was a fellow and president of the Casualty Actuarial Society and V.P. of the American Academy of Actuaries.

At Princeton and subsequent 1940 gatherings we recall Bill as a cheerful and extremely likeable individual. His devotion to Princeton and the Class was unshakable for he served as reunions chair, regional V.P., and on schools committee. Bill's feelings expressed in our 40th Year Book: "I am proud of Princeton and 1940."

Bill leaves his wife, Georgie; two daughters, Meredith Welch and Karen McKay; sons, William III and David; and seven grandchildren. The Class shares in their bereavement and to them all sends a message of sincere sympathy.

The Class of 1940

Diversity and the Primitive Peoples of New Guinea

"AIIIEEEEEEE-WAH! wah! wah! wah!" was how we were greeted on the trail. We responded in the same way, nodding our heads vigorously and repeating "wah, wah, wah, wah" in rapid succession. Each time we thought we'd said our last "wah," however, a new round would begin. The ritual usually lasted several minutes, until, much to our relief, the former headhunters decided they'd had enough. Decked out in penis gourds and carrying bows and arrows, the Dani tribesmen would then continue down the path to the next village.

Seventy-five hundred miles away, in a program called the Festival of Indonesia, the arts of Java, Bali, Sunda, and Sumatra are coming to museums and theaters throughout the United States. Indonesia, as The Washington Post recently pointed out, "is culturally more diverse than North and South America combined," so not surprisingly, the show's emphasis is on cultural diversity. The diversity stems from Indonesia's 175 million people, who come from three hundred different ethnic groups on thirteen thousand islands; it is the fifth most populous country in the world.

It seems inevitable that any attempt—like this festival—to present a singular image of such a large, diverse country would focus on its most visible people and cultures, particularly when their art is so rich. Indonesia's Hindu, Buddhist, and Muslim cultural traditions are varied and abundant, and they stretch back hundreds and even thousands of years. Yet there is one group of people in Indonesia so dramatically different from the others that any discussion of the country's diversity would be incomplete without mentioning them: the Dani of Irian Jaya.

In June of last year, I spent ten days trekking in Irian Jaya with a French woman named Charlotte. I had been teaching English for a year in Yogyakarta, on Java, through the Princeton-in-Asia program. I had heard of Irian Jaya as someplace jaub, or far, from Java. Irian Jaya, which shares the island of New Guinea with the nation of Papua New Guinea, is the easternmost province of Indonesia. Charlotte and I hiked in the Baliem Valley, which lies in the interior of the island and is separated from Jayapura, the capital of the province, by miles of dense jungle.

The author among the Dani of Irian Jaya.

PHOTO COURTESY LYNN HELLER

The outside world first “discovered” the Baliem Valley in 1938, and during the 1950s, Western missionaries moved in. Cannibalism was reportedly wiped out by the late 1970s, although we were told otherwise once we arrived in the valley.

Our Javanese friends warned us not to go, but Charlotte and I decided to travel at least to coastal Irian Jaya. From there we would choose whether to continue into the interior. The Indonesian government restricts travel to the Baliem Valley, particularly for foreigners, but after several weeks of working through bureaucratic red tape, we finally received the necessary letters of permission and set off for Irian Jaya.

Our six-day boat ride from Java took us around the island of Sulawesi (formerly, Celebes) and through the Moluccas, the famed Spice Islands. We landed in Jayapura, decided to trek into the interior, and then flew in a small plane to Wamena, the main town in the Baliem Valley. To get to Wamena, you can spend either a month hiking through the jungle or an hour flying over it. There is no road between the valley and Jayapura.

Once in the valley, our first order of business was to find guides. On the boat, we had befriended a Papuan doctor, and he eventually found us two young men. The two had moved into town from the mountains six years earlier under the auspices of the doctor, who had provided them with housing, food, and an education. Both guides were warned that if anything happened to us, they would be held responsible and would have to answer not only to their mentor, but also to the Indonesian military police. After buying a few provisions at the market, the four of us left Wamena.

The people of the Baliem Valley have a uniquely primitive lifestyle. Hunting and gathering are their means of subsistence, and they spend their days in search of food. At night they sleep in circular grass huts grouped around a fireplace. These onai are usually about four feet high and fifteen to twenty feet in diameter. The people possess little clothing: men wear penis gourds (koteka), and depending on their marital status, women wear skirts made of rope or grass.

Although many tribes live in the valley, and each speaks its own dialect, the name of the tribe closest to Wamena has come to mean all people in the valley. The Dani have Melanesian features, and the average man is about five-foot-three. Their skin is often somewhat leathery, due to their constant exposure to the sun and to the smoke they trap in their huts at night to keep warm. The Dani age fast. They have babies long before they are twenty, are considered old at forty, and rarely live past fifty.

Many Dani women have lost from one to eight fingers; until recently, a finger was chopped off to mourn the death of a male relative. Missionaries have eliminated this tradition for the most part, so women in mourning now cover their bodies, from head to foot, with clay.

Dani men also wear large nose rings made of pig teeth, wigs made of closely woven twine, and long, wide necklaces made of tiny shells. And of course they don a variety of penis gourds, which seem equivalent to Western neckties. These vegetable gourds range in diameter from less than an inch to four inches, and in length from six to eighteen inches. They are tied around the waist with twine and curve upward, so that, depending on the length of the gourd, the tip may almost reach the man's chin.

As for Dani children, virtually all have distended bellies, and many have unnaturally reddish hair or dark circles around their eyes—all signs of malnutrition. As Charlotte and I quickly learned, the food supply in the valley is sporadic. Sweet potatoes, occasional leaves and ferns, cabbage, pineapples, and bananas make up the Dani diet, but potatoes are the staple.

Throughout the trip, I continued to be impressed by the Dani's lack of material possessions—even in the form of art works. Photographs of many tribes in Africa, Asia, and even Papua New Guinea show brightly colored and often richly decorated ceremonial costumes. Even the Asmat people of southern Irian Jaya (where Michael Rockefeller disappeared thirty years ago) traverse the swamps in uniquely carved canoes. The Dani have almost nothing.

Each man owns his penis gourd, each woman her skirt; some have cotton T-shirts. Most males own either bamboo bows and arrows or knives (once used in headhunting, now used primarily for killing and skinning birds). The women usually own tools for harvesting sweet potatoes and gathering leaves and ferns. Each family or group of families owns several woven bags in which to transport food, and the more fortunate Dani own a pot or two for cooking.

Pigs are signs of wealth and prestige amongst the Dani.

Major social events, such as weddings and peace offerings to other tribes, center around pigs. If a man wishes to be married, he must exchange a pig (or pigs) for his bride. Pigs are so valued that in many villages they sleep side-by-side with their owners. Women can even be seen suckling piglets while their human babies are strapped to their backs.

The Dani have a uniquely primitive lifestyle. They wear little clothing and have few possessions. They rarely live past fifty.

Although the Dani lifestyle won't change overnight, there are many pressures to "civilize" them. Western missionaries, for example, have wielded enormous influence over them. Tribal warfare and cannibalism have supposedly been eliminated, and many Dani are now practicing Christians. Missionaries continue to be active in the valley, and the Indonesian government has joined in their efforts to send the Dani through a time warp.

In the process, however, the Dani culture is threatened. The Indonesian government's policy of transmigration, instituted to relieve overpopulation on Java, has resulted in an influx of Javanese into Irian Jaya. The Javanese own shops throughout the province, and they dominate the region militarily as well as economically. The Dani are tough people who have lived in the valley for centuries, but their power of self-determination is gradually being taken from them.

The Indonesian military police maintain tight control over the Baliem Valley. We had to check in with the police upon our arrival in Jayapura, again in Wamena, and at four different military outposts during our ten-day trek. The majority of the police in the valley are Javanese. In ten days, we came across only one Papuan policeman, and he was most likely not even a Dani. The police are constantly armed and rarely seem to venture beyond the vicinity of their posts. While Charlotte and I were fearful of confrontations with former headhunters, our guides were noticeably afraid of the police. Each time we neared a police post, their demeanor changed dramatically. Neither said a word as long as we were anywhere near a policeman.

In retrospect, I recognize that the risks we took by going on that trip—and making it by ourselves—were probably more significant than we realized at the time. The relatively few non-Dani who hike far into the valley usually arrange for a missionary pilot to take them either there or back. Our round-trip was both physically and mentally exhausting, but I'll never regret taking the risk for the opportunity to immerse myself in one of the world's most remote and primitive civilizations. The experience is one I will never forget. It certainly gave me a new perspective on the meaning of Indonesian—and human—"diversity."

—Lynn Heller '88

This man sports a penis gourd, the Dani equivalent of a necktie.

PHOTO COURTESY LYNN HELLER

Lynn Heller, a history major while at Princeton, lives in Washington, D.C., where she works in the civil-rights division of the Justice Department.

Collecting Art

Some of my most treasured possessions are the paintings, etchings, sculptures, lithographs, and prints that Vivian and I have been able to add to our home over the years. We have a very modest collection, but it includes items as varied as artifacts from archaeological digs in the Near East (from Roman times) to Goya etchings; from Chinese fan paintings to Chagall and Picasso lithographs; from Japanese woodcuts to Kollwitz (a drawing, a bronze, and some lithographs); from Canadian landscapes and Eskimo sculptures to a wonderful Pop Art portrait of the Beatles done by Bob Stanley.

Harold T. Shapiro

None of these is a great masterpiece. Nevertheless, as Vivian and I have established our home in different cities, our artwork has provided a certain stability that has helped us sustain a sense of self and place. It has remained an important visual language to supplement the verbal and mathematical languages that tend to dominate our lives. When we moved into Lowrie House here at Princeton, it began to feel like our home only after our books and paintings arrived.

The first work of art we brought home was a print of a wonderful still-life by Braque. This now hangs in one of my daughters' houses. The latest addition was a Daumier etching that arrived as a birthday gift from Vivian. In between these artworks were countless hours of pleasure and excitement that have enriched our lives immeasurably. I occasionally try to select my favorite, but I have found this to be quite impossible. Each of these works of art has its own special moment and associations, and we remain equally attached to them all.

As modest collectors, the two biggest mistakes we made were: first, not spending the time and effort necessary to add more items to our collection; and second, donating a piece of Eskimo sculpture (a wonderful walrus) to an art auction. I know now that I should have made an equivalent cash gift to what was a very worthy cause or given the object to a museum, where I might still visit it. Having this sculpture just disappear has left us with an unresolved sense of loss.

Putting together a personal collection (something you feel close to, not simply something you own) takes a lot of time and effort. In fact, it often takes more time and energy than money; luck and persistence are also important. Vivian and I did most of our collecting in the 1950s—before I decided on an academic career. The subsequent time demands of parenthood and our own professional commitments gave us very little time in successive decades to supplement our collection. Nevertheless, our chief hobby continues to be what Vivian dubbed “urban hiking.” This means forays to private art galleries (up and down the blocks, up and down the many stairways) and to exhibits of public museums. If too much time passes between trips, we begin to build a need for a “fix”—a need that can only be resolved these days by a quick trip to New York or Philadelphia.

Lowrie House has wonderful walls and spaces to exhibit art. Indeed the opportunities are too vast for what we brought with us. We have had the great privilege, however, of being able to borrow paintings from the University's collection. The Princeton University Art Museum has, of course, wonderful holdings, many of them gifts from our alumni. If you have not visited the marvelous galleries in our newly renovated and expanded museum, you have a real treat in store during your next visit to campus. (I hope you will all make a special note to visit the new basement galleries that have fantastic exhibits of Pre-Columbian, Greek, Roman, and Oriental art.)

The paintings that would come to Lowrie House to supplement our own collection were chosen by a “troika” consisting of Allen Rosenbaum, director of the art museum, Vivian and me. The constraints were: Allen had to like it, Vivian had to like it, I had to like it, and—for insurance reasons—it could not have too high a monetary value. It was unusual and quite funny to rummage through the museum's collection, and Allen was a great—and very generous—help.

I know that many of our alumni have assembled outstanding collections; and I know that in each case there is a story about how the passion for collecting began, how it evolved, and what meaning it had in the life of the collector. I am very grateful for the opportunities I have had to see the collections of others, which reveal so much about not only the artists' but also the collectors' sensibilities.

I hope many of you will have an opportunity to visit Lowrie House in the coming years and see our collection. Most of all, however, I hope you will find your own opportunities to enjoy and perhaps collect art. I would certainly like to hear of any especially memorable experiences you have had in this area.

“When we moved into Lowrie House here at Princeton, it began to feel like our home only after our books and paintings arrived.”

The people who drive one are very secure.

P E U G E O T
Beyond the obvious. SM

1991 505 models from $18,590 to $26,100.* Call 1-800-447-2882. *MSRP. Excludes tax, title, options, registration and destination charges.

Do you feel secure in your automobile?

Addressing this concern has been a Peugeot goal for 100 years. And nowhere is that better demonstrated than in the 8-passenger 505 SW8 and SW8 Turbo wagons.

Within a sleek, graceful body, Peugeot has amassed one of the industry's longest lists of features to help you avoid danger. In the event of the unforeseen, however, front and rear crumple zones will collapse at a controlled rate, dissipating the force of an impact.

But the most dramatic safety feature is that, unlike all other wagons, the SW8 has its third seat facing forward. Children love to sit in the back, and in a Peugeot, they face away from the crumple zone, and potential harm. It just seemed the obvious thing to do.

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

DECEMBER 5, 1990

AMERICAN LIGHT:

Art Historian

John Wilmerding Bridges
the Museum and the Classroom

Before It Saw The Light It Saw The Light Of Count

It's called a light-fade test. For hours on end, various surfaces and materials of the LS 400 were blasted as if by the sun.

Why? Because contrary to the old cliché, there is no such thing as "timeless beauty." In fact, beauty is very much a factor of time.

Of Day, less Days.

The engineers at Lexus know this. That is why an entire task force was created to investigate ways of fighting age and maintaining the value of your investment.

The result is a luxury sedan whose luxury was fashioned with one eye to the future as well as the present.

The optional handworked leather

on the seats and trim is designed to resist bleaching by the sun. The burnished California Walnut on the doors and center console is designed to resist fading and cracking. And the exterior finish incorporating up to 42 steps is designed to maintain its rich gloss and luster.

In all, 96 items were studied as part of our anti-aging program. When a surface proved too sensitive to sunlight or the oils from human skin, the offending material was reformulated, again and again if necessary.

So see the dealer nearest you to discover what sets the LS 400 apart. Any car can be new today.

We want to be new tomorrow.

The Relentless Pursuit Of Perfection.

ABSOLUT SEASON.

TO SEND A GIFT OF ABSOLUT® VODKA (EXCEPT WHERE PROHIBITED BY LAW) CALL 1-800-243-3787
PRODUCT OF SWEDEN. 40 AND 50% ALC/VOL (80 AND 100 PROOF). 100% GRAIN NEUTRAL SPIRITS. © 1990 CARILLON IMPORTERS, LTD., TEANECK, N.J.

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

CONTINUING THE ALUMNI PRINCETONIAN, FOUNDED IN 1894

FEATURE

12 ENLIGHTENED SCHOLAR OF LUMINOUS ARTISTRY

John Wilmerding, Princeton's First Endowed Professor of American Art, Bridges the Museum World and Academia
by Ann Waldron

DEPARTMENTS

5 LETTERS

7 PRINCETON NOTEBOOK

Alumnus Funds Refuge for Chinese Scholars; Art Museum Receives a de Kooning

10 ON THE CAMPUS

University Will Close Old Graduate College For Renovations, Displacing 200 Students
by Gayle Wald GS

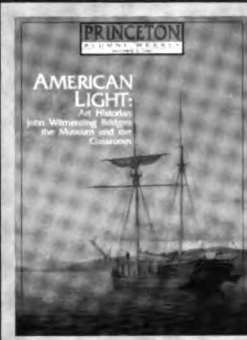

17 BOOKS

19 SPORTS

Football Ends Season with Losses to Yale and Dartmouth; Women's Soccer Restructures with New Coach

25 CLASS NOTES

41 MEMORIALS

On the Cover

Fitz Hugh Lane's Lumber Schooners at Evening on Penobscot Bay (detail), painted in 1860, exemplifies luminism, Professor John Wilmerding's specialty.

National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C.; Andrew W. Mellon Fund and Gift of Mr. and Mrs. Francis W. Hatch, Sr.

FROM THE ARCHIVES

The specter of war in the Middle East recalls another war—Vietnam—and the campus protests it aroused. At Princeton, much of the antiwar activity focused on the Institute for Defense Analysis, a Defense Department think tank located on university land behind the Engineering Quadrangle. The first protest against the I.D.A. (picture) took place in October 1967 and led to the forcible arrests of thirty Princeton students.

J. I. MERRITT '66, Editor

ANDREW C. MYTELKA '85, Managing Editor
NUALA O'CONNOR '89, Assistant Editor
STACY M. WZOLA, Art Director
NANCY S. MACMILLAN, Business Manager
LOLLY O'BRIEN, Advertising Director
R. T. HOWELL, Production Manager
LORRAINE DONEKER, Graphic Assistant

BOARD OF EDITORIAL DIRECTION

EDWARD R. WEIDLEIN '68, Chairman
LESA B. BELKIN GELB '82 • CHRISTOPHER V. CONNELL '71
LONDON Y. JONES '66 • ELLIOTT D. LEE '74
PATRICIA H. MARKS '72 • JOHN A. MCPHEE '53

PUBLICATION BOARD

DOROTHY L. BEDFORD '78, Chairman
ROBERT K. DURKEE '69 • ROBY HARRINGTON III '51
WALTER H. LIPPINCOTT, JR. '60 • PETER O. PRICE '62
PETER G. SMITH '46 • DANIEL N. WHITE '65

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE

ROBERT F. SENNOTT, JR.
Ivy League Magazine Network
254 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001 • (212) 684-5603

LOCAL ADVERTISING/PRINCETON EXCHANGE

LOLLY O'BRIEN (609) 258-4886

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is an independent magazine supported by alumni class subscriptions and by paid advertising. Its purpose is to record news of the alumni and at the same time to review without partiality the achievements and problems of the administration, the faculty, and the student body of Princeton University. The views expressed in the Alumni Weekly are those of signed contributors or the editor and do not necessarily represent official positions of the university.

PUBLISHED BY

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540
Telephone (609) 258-4885
TWX 510-685-2306 UNIV PRSS PRIN • Fax (609) 258-6305

ELECTRONIC PAW BBS: (609) 258-3602

Materials can be transmitted to our offices via telecommunications, using the upload facility in the file-transfer section of the Electronic PAW computer bulletin board system. Its protocols are 300/1200/2400 baud, eight data bits, one stop bit, and no parity. It is online 24 hours a day.

PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY (ISSN 0149-9270)

Vol. 91, No. 6, December 5, 1990
Printed by William Byrd Press, Richmond, Va. Annual subscription $19.50 (foreign postage $5 extra); single copies $1.50. All orders must be paid in advance. Copyright © 1990 Princeton University Press. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Second-class postage paid at Princeton, N.J., and at additional mailing office.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to PAW Address Changes, 3175 Princeton Pike, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

Princeton On Tape

Learning is the enterprise of a lifetime

Did you miss Alumni Day or Reunions? Do you want to make better use of your commuting time? Are you tired of watching TV news but have no time to read?

You can hear Princeton lectures and panels in your car or living room. Listen to Princeton On Tape — audio cassettes of talks and discussions with distinguished faculty and guest speakers. A sampling includes:

James McPherson on "Abraham Lincoln and the Strategy of Unconditional Surrender;"
"Toward 2001: Our Defense Environment in Flux" with Admiral William J. Crowe, Jr. *65; and Victor Brombert, "The Spirit of French Romanticism;" plus many more.

Continue your Princeton education and share the enterprise with classmates, friends, and family. Give Princeton On Tape to your favorite Princetonian or would-be-Princetonian as a birthday, holiday, or anytime present.

"Learning is the enterprise of a lifetime," said Woodrow Wilson, 1879, but even a lifetime is not enough to learn everything Princeton has to offer. Get started with Princeton On Tape. Send for our free catalogue. Write Debra Wharton, Alumni Council, PO Box 291, Princeton, New Jersey 08544, or call 609-258-5854; Fax 609-258-1281.

Send me my FREE
Princeton On Tape catalogue

Name _____

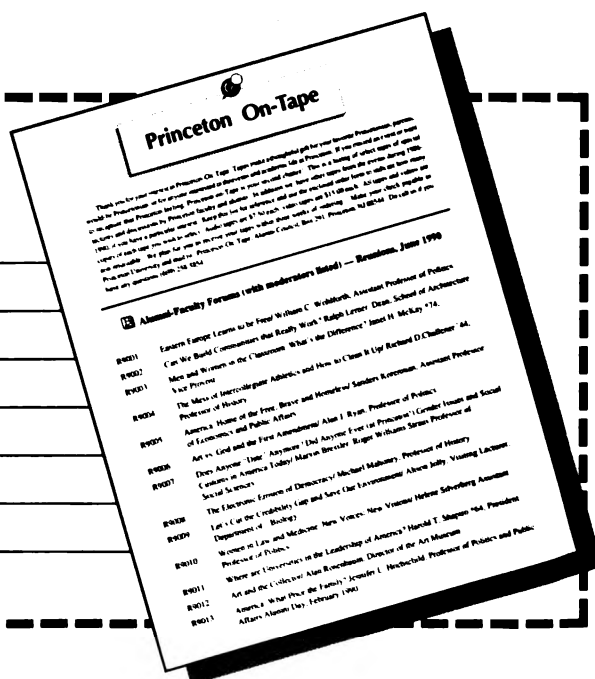

Class or affiliation _____

Date _____

Address _____

Phone (day) _____

(evening) _____

Alumni
Princeton

Council
University

Stars for War Dead

Reading your Notebook item on dormitory stars for the Vietnam dead (PAW, October 10), I could not fail to recall the Korean War. Surely our dead in that war should be equally remembered. I, for one, remember Marine lieutenants John Gray and "Rich" Rich and Army lieutenant Tom Kilby, all of the Class of 1950. I am sure there were members of other Princeton classes who lost their lives in that all but forgotten conflict.

As a veteran of both the Korean and Vietnam wars, I hope your article will stimulate other letters similar to mine and that the sacrifices of our alumni—at such places as the "frozen Chosin," Naktong River, Pork Chop Hill, and the Pusan Perimeter—will also be remembered.

PETER F. C. ARMSTRONG '50
Colonel, U.S. Marines (Ret.)
Honolulu, Ha.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Carved in marble in the foyer of Nassau Hall are the names of all Princeton alumni and faculty members who died in the nation's wars. The memorial includes the names of twenty-nine who died while in uniform during the Korean War. In other twentieth-century conflicts, twenty-four died during the Vietnam War, 353 during World War II, and 152 during World War I. The Spanish-American War claimed five Princetonians, and seventy died in the Civil War, one in the War of 1812, and ten in the American Revolution.

Required Reading

Thank you for shedding light on the man, Robert Caro '57, who has shed such brilliant light on the lives of Lyndon Johnson and Robert Moses (PAW, October 10).

Several chapters of Caro's biographies are required reading in the "Power and Politics" course here at Stanford Business School. And while the class has recoiled at the sleazy ways by which Johnson and Moses attained and exercised power, we've been captivated by Caro's wonderful ability to bring the facts to life. Our professor paid a just compliment to the biographer when he told us, "This is one of the few courses at the business school with reading that will raise your pulse rate."

DOUG "DEE" REED '86
Palo Alto, Calif.

Hounds and Hares

I would like to comment on Carlo Cannell '85's article on Oxford student societies (First Person, October 24). Cannell may have played tiddly-winks and "real" tennis, but I doubt that he ever went out with—or even saw—the Christchurch and Farley Hill Beagles. If he did have a day with the beagles, his powers of observation are woefully weak. The M.B. (Master of Beagles) does not release a hare. The wily hare is wild and to be found in nearly any English meadow. The "whippers-in" carry whips and perhaps walking sticks but never horns (the accouterments of huntsmen). The M.B. who daubs his own cheeks with the hare's blood after a kill (however atavistically) would soon find himself relegated to Bedlam or, perhaps, Coventry. Many years ago, it was occasionally the custom "to blood" young followers at their first kill. Happily, this custom fell into benign neglect for obvious sociological reasons after the carnage of World War II.

But, please, know what you are talking about when you set out to make sport of a sport. Beagling, bassetting, and fox hunting are not the sorts of endeavors to be explained or defended. The same can be said of field sports in general. They tend to fall into that broad category of activities that are simply accepted—enjoyed or not as you please. After all, how can one make a case for collecting mushrooms, climbing mountains, or attending Princeton reunions?

DAVID REEVES '48
Princeton, N.J.

Oxford Memories

What a joy it was to read the cover story of the October 24 PAW, "Princetonians at Oxford." As a graduate of both Princeton and Oxford (D.Phil.), I found the article brought back pleasant memories of my years in two very special university settings. I don't think anyone who has spent any time at Oxford and Princeton could fail to notice the unique affinity between the two institutions.

RICHARD D. LAND '69
Nashville, Tenn.

PHOTO BY STACY WEDZLA

Chevrons Explained

Your article on beer jackets (PAW, May 16) included a picture of Bud Wynne '39 holding a copper template used for stenciling beer jackets of the Class of 1921. You noted that the meaning of the template's three inverted chevrons is unknown. Inverted chevrons similar to these were used on uniforms during World War I to indicate service in France: each chevron meant six months' duty overseas. The Class of 1921 must have included many veterans of World War I. My guess is that the stencil was used to mark beer jackets to show the wearers' overseas service.

BENJAMIN H. WALKER '44
New York, N.Y.

J.F.K. at Princeton

The Alumni Council's advertisement in the PAW of October 10 states that, according to the Constitution of the Alumni Association, "Any person who has officially matriculated at Princeton as an undergraduate becomes an alumnus upon the graduation of that person's class . . ." In view of this, I take special pleasure in adding the name of John Fitzgerald Kennedy to those of James Madison 1771 and Woodrow Wilson 1879 as Princeton alumni who became presidents of the United States. I regret only that the list does not include Adlai Stevenson '22!

JOSEPH PRENDERGAST '27
Aldie, Va.

EDITOR'S NOTE: John F. Kennedy entered Princeton on October 26, 1935, as a member of the Class of 1939. According to A Princeton Companion, by Alexander Leitch '24, he matriculated late due to a case of jaundice he had contracted the previous summer. A recurrence of that illness forced him to withdraw seven weeks later, on December 12. He later entered Harvard, from which he graduated in 1940. Following World War II, Princeton at Kennedy's request removed his name from its alumni rolls.

Dangerous Crooks

I take exception to a remark in the review by Andrew C. Mytelka '85 of Anthony T. Grafton's Forgers and Critics: Creativity and Duplicity in Western Scholarship (Books, September 12). The parenthetical statement that "these fakery are never dangerous crooks" may be challenged, because the fraudulent Protocols of the Elders of Zion gives support to anti-Semitism. Perhaps "crooks" is applicable, but to deny the danger of such fakery is insensitive and itself dangerous.

WILBUR SCOTT '37 '43
Malvern, Penn.

Abusive Behavior

In his letter in the October 10 PAW, William A. Percy '55 '64 tells of a gay graduate student who, thirty years ago, was expelled for propositioning an undergraduate. This brings to mind two possible scenarios in today's campus environment. In one, a gay faculty member propositions a

THE PRINCETON WATCH

A Timely Gift

This gold plated quartz watch for men or women can be personalized with class year and/or initials. One year limited manufacturer's warranty.

$75.00 each

Call or write for your Princeton Watch today.

ACTUAL SIZE

☐ Year ☐ No Year

☐ Initials ☐ No Initials

☐ Check enclosed (N.J. Residents add 7% tax)

☐ Charge my ☐ VISA ☐ AMEX ☐ M.C. ☐ H. Gross

Shipping and handling $3.00

Exp. Date

Signature

Name

Address

One Palmer Square
Princeton, N.J. 08542
609-924-6088

At the sign of the goose...®

male freshman, who later complains. The faculty member is disciplined, prompting gays and lesbians to demonstrate outside President Shapiro's office. In the other, a "straight" faculty member propositions a female freshman, who later complains. The faculty member is disciplined, prompting members of the Greek fraternities to demonstrate outside President Shapiro's office. In both scenarios, the university is sued.

I applaud the university's policy, as stated in your editor's note, to "not tolerate abusive behavior based on sexual orientation." I would hope that the university doesn't tolerate abusive behavior based on anything. I can see that the lives of administrators have become more and more complicated and dependent on lawyers. They have my sympathy!

ROBERT L. GENSLER '42
Sonoma, Calif.

Team of Destiny?

In this year's basketball season, Pete Carril, Princeton's brilliant coach for the last twenty-three seasons, will attempt to duplicate what his former mentor, coach Butch van Breda Kolff '45, accomplished in the mid-1960s—winning three successive Ivy League championships. Although the challenge is formidable, Carril's troops are a good bet to take the Ivy crown come next March. The reasons? Outstanding talent and superior coaching; a demanding national schedule; and perhaps most importantly, Carril's special ability to forge teams of extraordinary character.

Those who subscribe to the cyclical theory of history should ponder this: Princeton teams lost close games in the first rounds of the N.C.A.A. championships of 1963 and 1964. The next year, the team captained by all-American Bill Bradley '65 won its first-round game and eventually went on to the Final Four. Let's go, Tigers!

BOB LEEHAR '61
Yonkers, N.Y.

Hope and Forgiveness

I was not at all surprised to see the letters attacking the Alumni Council's decision to give a service award to Sally Frank '80 (PAW, September 12, November 7). It is precisely my cynicism about Princeton alumni that distinguishes me from Sally, who possesses an apparently unlimited capacity for hope and forgiveness.

Princeton is not perfect. It does not welcome every student equally, and some leave it with memories of exclusion, harassment, and disappointment. Most of these alumni never look back, and few devote themselves to ensuring that future undergraduates will enjoy their years at Princeton more than their predecessors. Sally Frank is an exception, and no one has taken on the task of reforming Princeton's social structure with greater energy, dedication, and affection. The Alumni Council's decision to recognize her renews my faith in Princeton and revives my desire to help make it an even better place.

SHELLEY RIGGER '84
Somerville, Mass.

PAW welcomes letters on topics of general interest to alumni. We reserve the right to edit for length and clarity. Our address is PAW, 41 William Street, Princeton, NJ 08540.

The New Princeton Club of New York

Opening floor-by-floor throughout 1990

- Attractive, "clubbier" entrance lobby.
- 3 new dining rooms, each one unique.
- 9 restyled private dining rooms.
- 48 newly decorated bedrooms.
- Women's rooms added on all floors.
- Plus: squash courts, fitness center, library, lounge, varied member events.

Join during our major renovation:

- save $250 entrance fee (will not be waived again).
- and get a free $100 dinner in the new Woodrow Wilson Room.

OFFERS EXPIRE JANUARY 1, 1990

Call or write: Membership Secretary
The Princeton Club of New York
15 West 43rd Street, NY NY 10036
212-840-6400

STEWARTSON-DOUGHERTY

Real Estate Associates
366 Nassau Street
Princeton, N.J. 08540
PHONE: 609-921-7784

PROSPECT AVENUE

Gracious home in a wonderful location. Just a step from your club. Beginning at the spacious entrance to the comfortable living room with fireplace and formal dining room, it is apparent this is a very liveable house. Coupled with this is a cozy family room, enclosed breezeway, two car garage on a lovely lot only a short walk to the University and the Riverside school. $350,000.

Robert Dougherty '50 Julie Douglas w/'41
Paul Douglas '41 Betsy Stewardson Ford w/'54
Georgia Graham w/'52 J. B. Smith '45
Diane Unruh w/'70 Barbara Broad w/'38
Betty McClelland w/'50 Judy Perrine s/'69

For no obligation—Information about real estate in the Princeton area call (609) 921-7784 or Outside of New Jersey 1-800-542-0067.

REALTORS

Representing Previews Executive HomeSearch

Alumnus Funds Refuge at Princeton for Chinese Scholars and Students in Exile

TWENTY CHINESE scholars and intellectuals in political exile from the People's Republic have found refuge at Princeton, thanks to the generosity of John B. Elliott '51. Elliott, a venture capitalist based in New York City, gave $1 million to enable the dissidents to study for one or two years at the university. The group includes Chai Ling, one of the three principal leaders of the student protests in Tiananmen Square in the spring of 1989, and Fang Lizhi, an astrophysicist who sought sanctuary in the United States Embassy in Beijing and spent months there before Chinese authorities allowed him to emigrate last August. The scholars range in age from twenty-four to sixty and represent a variety of disciplines, including art history, philosophy, religion, anthropology, political science, and history.

Elliott, who has long held an interest in Chinese art and culture and who has twice visited the People's Republic, made the gift after the Beijing government suppressed the protesters in Tiananmen Square. At a press conference held recently in Princeton, Elliott said he had been "deeply moved" by the events of those momentous days. He originally intended the money to help Chinese students and scholars already at Princeton who might have been stranded in this country because of political turmoil at home, but it was soon applied to support Chinese intellectuals fleeing their country. An ad hoc committee of professors and administrators, including Dean of the Faculty Robert C. Gunning '55 and Dean of the Graduate School Theodore J. Ziolkowski, has overseen what became known as the "China Initiative." Professor Martin C. Collcutt, the director of the Program in East Asian Studies, said that the initiative has assembled "a corps of really first-class people" in an environment in which they can work, write, and exchange ideas with faculty members and students across the disciplines. "We're hoping that out of this will come articles, and books perhaps, that will give a richer and deeper assessment of recent Chinese politics and intellectual history."

Currently, Princeton is hosting eighteen Chinese dissident scholars, most of Chai Ling, a leader of the student protests in Tiananmen Square, is writing a novel about her experiences.

PHOTO BY SUSAN RIGGS

whom came in the fall of 1989. Two others, Fang Lizhi and journalist Liu Binyan, are scheduled to arrive next spring. In addition to the dissidents the Elliott fund is sponsoring, the university community includes at least 150 other Chinese nationals who are supported by their government or by foundation grants. Among these are postdoctoral fellows, visiting professors, 116 graduate students, and eight undergraduates. According to Paula K. Chow, the director of the International Center, there are some twenty-five thousand Chinese studying on American campuses.

Although most of Princeton's eighteen dissidents were present at the press conference, only six were willing to speak on the record and to be photographed. Probably the best known of these is Chai Ling, a twenty-four-year-old child psychologist who was nominated for a Nobel Peace Prize. She is now writing a novel about her experiences in the democracy movement. After the crack-down of June 1989, she went into hiding for eight months and eventually escaped to the United States via France.

Ruan Ming, a political scientist and journalist, was expelled from the Chinese Communist Party in 1982, after he spent years pressing for reform of his country's constitution. At the press conference, he invoked the name of a celebrated refugee from another era, Albert Einstein, who fled Nazi Germany in 1933 and made his

Art Museum Receives de Kooning

H. GATES LLOYD '23, a retired businessman, has presented the university's Art Museum with Black Friday, a three-by-four-foot oil painting in black and white by the Dutch-born artist Willem de Kooning. Allen Rosenbaum, the director of the museum, called it "the most significant gift of postwar American art ever made to the museum." De Kooning created the painting in 1948, during a period in which his initial experiments in abstraction laid the foundation of his reputation. Last year, his Interchange (1955) sold at auction for $20.68 million, a record price for a work by a living artist. Black Friday has hung in Princeton since 1976, when Lloyd's late wife gave the museum a share in the painting. She donated an additional share in 1979, and in accordance with her wishes, her husband gave the remaining share in honor of the Class of 1923.

PHOTO © TRUSTEES OF PRINCETON UNIVERSITY

home in Princeton for the next twenty-two years. Ruan said he remained optimistic about the future of democracy in China and didn't believe that these exiles would have to wait as long as twenty-two years to return to their country.

Su Xiaokang, a journalist and filmmaker, is best known for River Elegy, a series of documentary films that examine China's authoritarian political tradition. In 1988, millions of Chinese saw the series on television, and many observers credit the films with helping to create a political climate conducive to reform.

Chen Yizi, a political scientist and a leading theorist for democratic reform, is now studying the political changes that have swept through the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. The Princeton program, he said, is "an opportunity for scholars to meet and to conduct their research in a free environment and to promote the cause of freedom and democracy. Without freedom, there can be no true research."

Correction

IN OUR STORY about the resignation of Paul Benacerraf '52 '60 (PAW, November 7), we reported that he was appointed to the post in October 1987 by then President Bowen. In fact, he was appointed by President Shapiro, who was inaugurated in January 1988. Because of the importance of the provost's position, the decision of who was to succeed Neil L. Rudenstine '56 was left to Shapiro, even though he had not yet taken office.

STAFF WRITER-ASSOCIATE EDITOR

PAW seeks a staff writer-associate editor. Chief responsibilities are covering campus news and Princeton sports and writing occasional feature stories. Candidates should have two years' experience on the editorial staff of a newspaper or magazine. An excellent opportunity for a young alumna/a in journalism. PAW is an equal-opportunity employer.

Send résumé to:
Andrew Mytelka '85 / Managing Editor
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William Street
Princeton NJ 08540

Computer-Generated Anxiety

REMEMBER WHEN YOU first sat down at a computer? The nervousness, the dread, perhaps even the shame of being—gasp—computer illiterate in the Information Age? Well, relax, says Joel Cooper, the chairman of Princeton's psychology department. You've got computer anxiety, and it's about as common as the common cold.

"The interaction of human beings and computers is unique," Cooper says. "People tend to treat computers as if they're human creatures. We get angry with computers and treat them as though they have intentionality. Haven't you ever threatened to kill your computer? This kind of emotional response just doesn't exist in our interactions with other mechanical devices, like toasters or electric shavers."

Joel Cooper

PHOTO BY ROBERT P. MATTHEWS

Cooper and several of his associates at Princeton have been studying the phenomenon of computer anxiety for the last five years. Some of their conclusions aren't earth-shattering—older people tend to suffer computer anxiety more often than younger ones, for example—but their results also suggest dramatic differences between the genders when it comes to using computers.

In general, Cooper has found, females are more subject to computer anxiety than males are, and as a result, they perform computer-related tasks worse. But there's an important contextual component to these findings: the performance differential appears only when there's someone else in the room with the female who's using the computer. Just the presence of another person—male or female, no matter what he or she is doing—seems to be enough to generate computer anxiety. By contrast, when they're alone in a room with a computer, females generally show no appreciable difference in performance compared to males.

In the course of this study, Cooper examined a group of middle-school children in Princeton (where, by the way, he's chairman of the school board). The children were asked to solve arithmetic problems on a computer. In group settings, the girls in the class often did worse than the boys, whose performance actually improved when other people were around. In a test of university students, Cooper had groups of men and women play an adventure game called Zork on a computer; some played with other people present, others were alone. The middle-school results were replicated.

"We tried to get a fix on what the other people in the room had to do to provoke the computer anxiety," Cooper recalls. "It turned out to be almost nothing. They could be writing a letter in the corner, totally ignoring the woman at the keyboard, but still her performance would drop. They just had to be there."

Not surprisingly, Cooper has also found that computer anxiety diminishes as people become more expert with computers. It's really only among beginners and infrequent users that the gender-based differential emerges. Nonetheless, these results have disturbing implications: If girls are intimidated by their first exposure to computing, and boys are not, should we be teaching computer skills to schoolchildren differently? Furthermore, what can explain these curious data? Rather than pushing any single explanation, Cooper suggests a couple of possibilities. For one, he says, society has traditionally associated computers with science, mathematics, and engineering, fields in which men have predominated. What's more, Cooper considers much software, especially that used to teach young children, to possess a male bias. "The software—much of which is written by men—comes directly from the video-game craze," he notes. "The subject may be English, but the lesson is couched in the language and themes of video games—blasting aliens, space travel, and so forth. The software sends females the message, 'This is not for you.' It's disfranchising."

Cooper now faces some anxiety of his own. To date, his research has been underwritten by a grant from the McDonnell Foundation; he's now applying to the National Institute of Mental Health to continue his studies. "It's a fairly new field," he says, "but computers and computer anxiety are here to stay."

—David Williamson '84

Imported by C. J. Fournier, Inc. NY, NY. 40% Alc./Vol. 80 Proof. © 1990. Photo by Duane Michals.

THE ONLY WAY HINE COGNAC COULD BE MORE PLEASURABLE TO A MAN IS IF THERE WERE MORE OF HIM.

University Will Close Old Graduate College For Renovations, Displacing 200 Students

FOR MANY OF Princeton's seventeen hundred graduate students, the fair distance that separates the Graduate College from the main campus symbolizes what they perceive as the university's remote relation to roughly a quarter of its students. Despite the formation of the Graduate Student Union two years ago, "graduate students still don't feel a part of the community, a part of the university," says Frank D. Russo, a graduate student in molecular biology and chairman of the G.S.U.

But soon, this sense of distance is likely to come between many graduate students and the Graduate College itself. Next June, the university plans to close the Old Graduate College—the part of the complex that features Cleveland Tower—for fifteen months for renovations. Recently approved changes in the New Jersey State Fire Code require all dormitories to have sprinkler systems, and the Old Graduate College, which predates World War I, needs a new furnace, new boilers, and reconstruction of its hot-water and electrical systems. Because the renovation will consume the entire 1991-92 school year, some two hundred graduate students will be displaced. The university has proposed accommodating them in a vacant Holiday Inn it owns on Route 1, several miles from the campus.

Princeton's plan is contingent on two decisions: officials in Plainsboro Township, where the former hotel is situated, must rezone the property for use as a dormitory, and the board of trustees must consent to the cost of the renovation. Thomas Miller, the university's director of housing, says he expects the plan to go forward with no real opposition, but graduate students have expressed concern that they are again being snubbed by university administrators who exclude them from the decision-making process. "Everyone agrees there was no choice in this matter," Russo says. "Most of what people were ranting about [at a meeting of the G.S.U. on October 24] was the relative lack of input we had in the decision that came out of this."

Theodore J. Ziolkowski, the dean of the Graduate School, says that though he is "sure" the closing of the Old Graduate College will undermine graduate students' morale, he is confident that the university's plan makes the best of the situation. "My concern," he says, echoing other administrators, "was to make sure that we have housing for the students who are being displaced." Ziolkowski points out that Princeton is unusual among universities in that it provides housing for so many of its graduate students—about 68 percent (almost five hundred at the Graduate College and nearly seven hundred in off-campus apartments), according to Jo-Ann Jacoud, the acting assistant director of graduate housing.

One Ph.D. candidate predicts that few graduate students will want to live at a Holiday Inn the university owns on Route 1.

Russo notes, however, that the university provides this housing not as a gesture of charity, but out of necessity, because the local market is too small to absorb so many tenants and too expensive for the average graduate student. In town, the monthly rent for a room in a house typically runs between $300 and $400; over the ten-month school year, such a rent would consume between a half and two-thirds of what the average humanities student gets as a stipend. Under the university's current system, which guarantees housing to all first-year graduate students who request it, a lottery determines the allocation of rooms and apartments. Second- and third-year students usually can get university housing, but fourth- and fifth-year students, who have lower priority in the draw, often must seek housing in town.

Even if the university offers the Holiday Inn rooms at reduced rates—a plan administrators say they are considering—Russo predicts that few graduate students will want to live at a renovated hotel on Route 1, a busy, four-lane highway. "It's one thing for people to be living that far from campus when where they're living is essentially an apartment," he says. "It's another when it's still a dorm situation."

Another problem with the Holiday Inn is the availability of food services. Because Princeton is closing the hotel's kitchen, students who live there will have to take a university-run shuttle bus to Procter Hall for their meals; the Old Graduate College's dining room will be among the first facilities to be renovated. Ronald T. Shigeta, a graduate student in chemistry and a member of the Graduate College's house committee, worries that students who live at the Holiday Inn will frequently be caught in traffic during Route 1's notorious rush hours just to get to their meals. Shuttle-busing will also make life difficult for the many graduate students who work long hours on the main campus, in particular the scientists who sometimes must check experiments in the middle of the night. Not many graduate students own cars. "Morale tends to be a very delicate thing at the Graduate College," says Shigeta, and the administration's plan as it stands "could possibly have a very damaging effect."

With the increased dispersion of graduate students due to the housing crunch, the perennial problem of graduate-student social life will be exacerbated. Dean Ziolkowski makes no promises, but he says the university is "hoping very much" that the Debasement Bar, an aptly named watering hole owned and operated by students in the basement of the Old Graduate College, will be able to remain open during the renovation. This bar, in particular, is crucial to the social lives of first-year graduate students, and it's one of the few places where students from different disciplines can socialize informally with one another.

According to Ziolkowski, the university explored a plan that would have closed the Old Graduate College for as many as eight consecutive summers, but the difference in cost between renovating the building all at once and doing it piecemeal was as much as $30 million. So at this point, no plan has received final approval. "Once there is a final plan," says Ziolkowski, "we'll announce it to all graduate students."

—Gayle Wald GS

Gayle Wald is a graduate student in English from Elkins Park, Pennsylvania.

Athletics and the Academy: Basketball and Values at Princeton

It is my pleasure to turn the president's page over to Pete Carril, head coach of the men's basketball team.—H.T.S.

A gift from Laurence Rockefeller '32 has enabled Princeton to establish the Center for Human Values, devoted to the study of "moral challenges humans face as individuals and as members of society." Princeton University has always been a place where knowledge is defined by what you know and how you act. For this reason, I hope that the center will give some thought to the role of intercollegiate sports in general, and Princeton basketball in particular, when examining issues of morality.

Too many years ago, my professors tried to help us as students develop values, including respect for the mind, concern for personal character and social ethics, and appreciation of what life really means. It may seem strange to connect these values and intercollegiate sports when each day's news brings another report of scandal and corruption involving big-time programs. We are told that some universities subsidize scholar-athletes and that some institutions graduate only a small portion of their athletes.

Nothing resembling this occurs here. Athletes receive financial assistance on the same basis as other students and are expected to meet the same academic requirements as their classmates.

Nevertheless, during my stay at Princeton, 15 of our players have been drafted by the National Basketball Association; of these, Armond Hill, John Hummer, Ted Manakas, Brian Taylor, and Jeff Petrie had fine professional careers. I especially admire the drive of Armond Hill and Brian Taylor, who chose to leave Princeton University before graduation and returned to complete their education after retiring from competition. I am no less proud of those less gifted players who, like other alumni, have in various ways embodied Princeton's ideals. Their accomplishments are largely their own, but I like to think that the values they lived by on our basketball court contributed to their academic performance, careers, and human qualities.

Philosophers give a good deal of thought to mind and body problems. So do Princeton basketball coaches. Our players regularly compete against opponents who can outmuscle, outjump, and outrun them. These physical limitations can only be surmounted if our teams learn to play with their heads as well as their bodies. Every member of the squad must have an understanding of the game, grasp its meaning, know the relationships of its parts to the whole, and recognize his own strengths and limitations.

It is not easy to be an athlete at Princeton. Athletes are not treated as celebrities but as students; they must know Firestone Library as well as their playing fields. It has been written that, during our practices, play "is actually work, and there are even rumors that the head coach does not always speak softly and with the tongue of angels." It takes a special kind of integrity to respond to these pressures with determination to be the best that you can be—on the court and in life.

The Princeton basketball team that won the National Invitation Tournament in 1974 and was undefeated in the Ivy League the following year adopted as its motto Brains and Courage. Team members might as well have added other values such as work, sacrifice, and honesty, which, taken together, to me mean character. While it is true that basketball usually reveals rather than builds character, it also provides a chance to work on strengths and to overcome shortcomings.

Athletics, on the whole, are oriented to results, and they reward merit regardless of the race, nationality, religion or social class of the players. Athletic participation recognizes no automatic entitlements, and excellence must be demonstrated rather than assumed. A scoreboard only records performance, and athletes, whatever their origin, soon learn that no group has a monopoly on talent, intelligence, or character. Coaches and players welcome anyone who can help them win. Here, too, sports have lessons to teach. Respect for the values of diversity is one of the major aims of a college education, and it does not fit well with prejudice. The best antidote to bigotry is not talking but working hard together on behalf of common goals.

I personally want to thank Laurence Rockefeller '32 for his generous gift and the participating faculty for establishing the Center for Human Values. For our part, as another season begins, we will continue to promote our version of what we think is good basketball, played by athletes who behave like their fellow students and earn the respect of the entire Princeton community. A good athletic program—and we are part of one—is the kind of activity that brings diverse groups together in support of an objective while instilling lasting love of athletics and the academy.

Pete Carril

"While it is true that basketball usually reveals rather than builds character, it also provides a chance to work on strengths and to overcome shortcomings."

ENLIGHTENED SCHOLAR OF LUMINOUS ARTISTRY

*John Wilmerding,
Princeton's First Endowed Professor of American Art, Bridges the Museum World and Academia*

By Ann Waldron

ONE AFTERNOON LAST MAY, LAURA Coyle, a graduate student in the Department of Art and Archaeology, read a paper in John Wilmerding's seminar on American still-life painting. Her subject was the newspapers that artist William Harnett used as props in his paintings. She examined the newspapers as artistic devices and the role that newspapers played in nineteenth-century America. The other students asked questions, and there was discussion of the newspapers Harnett chose to use—for instance, the Toledo Blade in a painting for a patron from Toledo. Wilmerding, Princeton's first Christopher Binyon Sarofim '86 Professor in American Art, made suggestions for further research.

This discussion showed more than the usual level of erudition to be found in graduate seminars, and still more came of it. During the summer, Coyle sent a revised version of her paper to Wilmerding at his vacation home, in Northeast Harbor, Maine. Wilmerding, in turn, sent it to curators in museums in New York, Fort Worth, and San Francisco for their review. After further revisions, her paper will become one of the chapters in the catalogue of Materials for a Leisure Hour: The Still-Life Paintings of William Michael Harnett, an exhibition that will open at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York, in early 1992 and travel to museums in Fort Worth and San Francisco and, finally, to the National Gallery of Art, in Washington, D.C.

Four other graduate students at Princeton are working on catalogue essays for the show. "None of us is blasé about writing for a catalogue for the Metropolitan," says Coyle. This unique opportunity for these fledgling scholars came about because of Wilmerding's background in museum work. In 1988, at the same time that he came to Princeton after eleven years at the National Gallery, the Metropolitan appointed him a visiting curator in American art. The Harnett show is the dazzling first fruit of the new relationship between Princeton and the Metropolitan.

Wilmerding, who prior to his work at the National Gallery had taught at Dartmouth, was happy to return to academia—and happy, too, that his arrangement allows him to keep one foot in the world of major museums. The Metropolitan is equally delighted to have someone of Wilmerding's stature in American art, for the museum recently opened the Henry R. Luce Center to exhibit its holdings in Americana: some twelve thousand paintings, sculptures, ceramics, textiles, items of silver and glass, and other works. The cooperative arrangement between the university and the museum is the best of both worlds for Wilmerding, who has no specific duties at the Metropolitan but is free to use its enormous resources for the education of his students. "They get our expertise, and everybody wins," he says.

IN THE SPRING OF 1989, during his first semester of teaching at Princeton, Wilmerding led a small graduate seminar on the luminists, a school of American landscape painting that flourished in the mid-nineteenth century. "I chose luminism for the first seminar because I knew it well," he says. He is the author of several books on the subject and had staged a popular show of luminist paintings at the National Gallery. "The topic was broad enough to give graduate students something to chew on and enable them to produce something that could be published."

In the middle of the semester, however, Wilmerding abruptly changed the seminar's focus to take advantage of an unexpected opportunity. A collection of paintings and drawings by Winslow Homer (not of the luminist school, although contemporary with it) had come on the market, and both the seller and the buyer had asked Wilmerding to advise them. When Wilmerding suggested that his students organize an exhibit of the collection and write a catalogue for it, both agreed. The students, of course, jumped at the opportunity. "It was a bit of a surprise when he came up with Winslow Homer in the middle of a course on luminism," recalls Douglas Nickel, one of the three graduate students in the seminar. "But it was very worthwhile—to get something published and to see the process of putting together an exhibition. Most art-history professors have purely academic backgrounds and couldn't have offered something like this." The switch to Homer, says Wilmerding, "was not off base. Early Homer coincided with late luminism. It was not as though we had switched from still life to Homer." With one month left in the semester, the students dove into the project. "It evolved at just the right Above: John Wilmerding. Opposite: Winslow Homer's At the Window (1872). The woman is unknown, but she could be a war widow.

OPPOSITE: THE ART MUSEUM, PRINCETON UNIVERSITY. GIFT OF MR. AND MRS. FRANCIS BOGAK '31 for the ortu-t be-seum me to Gal-siting is the p bene Nawas y, too, ne foot politan

Wilmer-museum
r to ex-twelve textiles,
rks. The niversity orlds for es at the amous rents. "They
" he says.

semester of ed a small school of ourished in e luminism it well," he oks on the y of luminist
e topic was dents some-to produce

owever, Wi-ar's focus in portunity. A by Winslow
though con-market, and sked Wilmerng suggested of the collec-n agreed. The portunity came up with a course on one of the minar. "But it nothing pub-tting together ofessors have couldn't have ne switch to off base. Early
It was not as fe to Homer"
the students
just the right time," Wilmerding recalls. "The students got preliminary papers to me for grading, gave oral reports in the seminar, and spent the summer writing polished drafts."

In early 1990, Winslow Homer in the 1870s: Selections from the Valentine-Pulsifer Collection went on exhibit at the university's Art Museum, and later in the year, it traveled to the Wadsworth Atheneum, in Hartford, Connecticut. The Princeton Art Museum published the catalogue, which is distributed by the University Press of New Eng-a catalogue raisonné and biography. Bolger and Wilmerding wanted the show to evaluate Harnett's subject matter, his method of composition, his relation to his patrons, his affiliation with traditions of European art, and his use of photography as a source of his style. They wrote to art historians who were experts in Philadelphia artists, in still-life painting, or in trompe l'oeil, and asked if they would contribute to the catalogue.

Wilmerding points out that the nature of exhibition catalogues has changed—from a single author writing about the artist to many authors analyzing different aspects of a painter's career and his or her milieu. "Catalogues used to be almost disposable," he says. "They only described what was showing, and the catalogue was no good after a few weeks." Now catalogues analyze the social, political, and cultural contexts in which the artist worked and discuss other artists who may have influenced him. The Harnett catalogue "will be designed to look and read like a book, and we expect that a trade publisher will pick it up. It will lay the groundwork for the next generation of Harnett scholarship."

As an example of this multiple approach, the catalogue will feature Wilmerding on the formation of Harnett's individual style and Bolger on Harnett's patrons. Other contributors are writing on illusionism and impressionism in relation to his paintings, his exhibitions and critical reception, his academic training, and his subject matter, which besides the aforementioned physical objects includes literary themes.

After the curators and professional scholars agreed to write on these subjects, there remained other topics that Wilmerding thought would be ideal for his graduate students to take on. In addition to discussing Harnett in seminars, he and his students studied the artist's paintings on field trips to the Metropolitan and two private collections in New York. Eventually, Laura Coyle chose to write on the newspapers in the paintings; Jennifer Hardin on Harnett's last years; Jennifer Milam on his working methods (her paper includes a discussion of the paintings' underlying drawings, which X-ray photography has revealed); Douglas Nickel on photography as a source for Harnett; and Paul Provost on Harnett's work as a silver engraver before he became a painter.

For the future, Wilmerding has no shortage of similar projects. Next year, his graduate students will work on the Metropolitan's collection of American drawings and watercolors. "The Met is moving the collection from the graphics department to the American wing, and it includes Sargent, Homer, Copley, the Hudson River painters, everybody," he says. "The collection is uncatalogued, and when it's moved to the Luce Center and the items are on the computer, working with them will be perfect for a graduate seminar. The Met will do a catalogue raisonné in seven volumes—it will be a major opportunity for us." Another project involves one of the foremost private collections of American drawings, which Wilmerding has been asked to organize.

The Banker's Table (1877), by William Harnett, is a characteristic still life of the artist. Those were the days when a copy of British Poetry was essential reading for bankers!

THE METROPOLITAN MUSEUM OF ART, PURCHASE, ELLHU ROOT, JR., GIFT, 1956. (56.21)

land, and the names of the three graduate students (Nickel, Frederick Ilchman '90, and Robert Wolterstorff) appeared on the title page along with Wilmerding and Linda Ayres, his collaborator at the Wadsworth. "This was not a Metropolitan production," says Wilmerding, "but it was a good way to teach in a university museum. That's the point, isn't it? To bring the chickadees along!"

Meanwhile, Wilmerding had proposed that the Metropolitan put on an exhibition of works by Harnett. Museums had staged shows of still-life paintings by Harnett and other artists, Wilmerding noted in a letter to Philippe de Montebello, the Metropolitan's director, but there had "not been for many, many years any show devoted in depth" to this artist, "one of the masters of American still-life painting." When Montebello agreed to the proposal, Wilmerding and Doreen Bolger, then the curator of American paintings and the manager of the Luce Center, began to plan. They quickly learned that several other museums around the country were considering Harnett exhibits of their own. Wilmerding convinced the curators at these museums to pool their resources, and the result is a single show.

Harnett was born in Ireland in 1848 but lived most of his life in Philadelphia, where he enjoyed a significant reputation and inspired imitators who appropriated his subject matter (memento mori, bric-a-brac, dead game, pipes for smoking, musical instruments, and newspapers) and style (trompe l'oeil). He died in 1892. Yet he has remained a shadowy figure, and at the time of Wilmerding's seminar last spring, nothing on him had appeared in print since 1953, when Alfred Frankenstein, an art critic in San Francisco, wrote

"We can plan an exhibition for the Princeton museum, with students working on the entries or writing thematic essays. I also dream of doing a small exhibition of the late portraits of Thomas Eakins, building a very important show around his wonderful painting in Princeton's museum, A Singer, a portrait of Mrs. W. H. Bowden. That's a topic that has real significance and offers potential for publication."

WILMERDING'S ANCESTRY, if not his early inclinations, foreshadowed his career in art. A great-grandmother of his was Louisine Havemeyer, who in the 1890s collected Manet, Degas, Goya, El Greco, Rembrandt, and Cezanne. She, her son, and her daughter gave nearly two thousand works of art to the Metropolitan. Electra Havemeyer Webb, his grandmother, expressed an early distaste for her mother's French impressionists and began her own collection of Americana with the purchase of a cigar-store Indian. When she went on to country furniture and pewter, her mother called her mounting collection "trash."

His grandmother's collection grew and grew, eventually filling several households (including his own). Finally, he recalls, "I came home from school one day and my mother said, 'Your grandmother's starting a museum.' Trucks backed up to the door. My room and the rest of the house seemed bare without so many hooked rugs and quilts and whirligigs." Mrs. Webb founded Vermont's Shelburne Museum, which features a lighthouse, a steamboat, a covered bridge, and buildings filled with scrimshaw, beaded moccasins, duck decoys, dolls, paintings, and various other Americana. Wilmerding serves as its president. He also sits on the boards of Yale University's Lewis Walpole Library, the Wyeth Endowment for American Art, Monticello, and the Committee for the Preservation of the White House.

Wilmerding's mother reacted so strongly against the collecting habits of her mother and grandmother that, by the time he got to Harvard, he had never even been inside the Metropolitan or any other major art museum. He intended to major in literature and thought about becoming a writer, but two events changed his plans. First, he took Harvard's famous survey of art history, a course that wags dubbed "Darkness at Noon." ("We looked at all those slides and then went out to lunch with Radcliffe girls," he recalls.) But the class imparted to him an appreciation for art, and this schooling primed him for his second experience: a visit to the old seaport of Gloucester, Massachusetts, where he discovered the marine paintings of the nineteenth-century artist Fitz Hugh Lane. Having learned sailing and a love of the sea from his father, an ardent yachtsman, he took naturally to Lane's seascapes. He wound up majoring in art history and writing his senior thesis on Lane. His research led him to the Maxim Karolik Collection, which was then housed in the basement of Boston's Museum of Fine Arts. After earning his A.B. in 1960, he stayed on at Harvard to do graduate work. He wrote his doctoral dissertation on American marine painting and again used the Karolik Collection.

The Karolik had begun as a collection of decorative arts and by Wilmerding's time had grown to include paintings. "The Boston blue-hairs wanted to see Paul Revere's silver," he says, "but they didn't care anything about the paintings." Wilmerding and other "moles" in the Karolik Collection—among them Theodore Stebbins, who's now the curator of American paintings at the Boston museum (he brought the Karolik Collection up from the basement to the main gallery)—went on to become leading figures in American art scholarship. Looking back on his student days, Wilmerding says he's astonished by the lack of attention accorded to American art at the time. During his nine years at Harvard, the faculty didn't even have one full-time professor of American art, and the school offered just two courses in the field. "We taught ourselves American art," he says. "There were more important books of our generation written out of the basement of the Boston museum than in any other field by any other set of scholars."

After Wilmerding finished his Ph.D. in 1965, he moved to Dartmouth to teach. His father, a banker, had given him a work ethic: Wilmerding understood that you didn't live off inherited money and you didn't just become a collector (although some of his Vanderbilt cousins had done just that). By the end of his eleven years at Dartmouth, he held an endowed professorship and chaired the art department and the humanities division.

In 1977, he went to the National Gallery, in Washington, D.C., to be the curator of American art, which was as much a stepchild in the museum world as it was ignored in academia. Crowds never flocked to look at American paintings the way they lined up to see the French impressionists. But at least at the National Gallery, that attitude began to change after Wilmerding's arrival. Forty-one years old and with no experience in mounting big exhibitions, he suggested a show of

In Sunset, Camel's Hump, Vermont (c. 1851), John F. Kensett injected the raw power of the American wilderness into the golden landscapes of Claude Lorrain and Albert Cuyp.

THE ART MUSEUM, PRINCETON UNIVERSITY.
GIFT OF THE OLD PRINT SHOP, NEW YORK CITY

two hundred examples of American luminist painting, a showcase for the work of Fitz Hugh Lane, Martin Johnson Heade, Sanford Gifford, John F. Kensett, and other landscape and marine painters of the mid-nineteenth century.

"The work of the luminists was known only to specialists," Wilmerding says. "It wasn't taught. The general public and the art-history community did not know it." The artists were dismissed as members of the "purple mountain majesty" school and regarded as thoroughly provincial. Yet Wilmerding insisted that their work included some of the most beautiful paintings in America. "Before the show opened, my colleagues were afraid," Wilmerding recalls. "They were afraid it was too big, afraid of its scope, afraid it would be empty and uneven."

American Light: The Luminist Movement, 1850-1875 opened on a cold Sunday in February 1980, and on that first day, twenty-one thousand people times conflicted with others in the book. Wilmerding relished the diversity.

Wilmerding went on to stage an exhibition on John Peto, a still-life painter and contemporary of Harnett. Another of his shows, on Andrew Wyeth's Helga paintings, raised a storm of criticism, but Wilmerding says, without regret, that his aim was to place Wyeth "somewhere between his idolaters and those who called him just an illustrator."

After the Wyeth exhibition, he became more involved in administrative affairs, and he now claims not to be interested in organizing another major show. "I was able to do my grand dreams at the National Gallery," he says. "Luminism, Peto, Wyeth's Helga paintings, Fitz Hugh Lane. At the National Gallery, exhibitions were my only scholarly outlet. Now that I'm at the university, I have more opportunities to do essays and books, as well as exhibitions. The most interesting unknown for me at Princeton is the American studies seminars, where you can see American art in relation to history and literature and social and cultural life." Wilmerding believes strongly that American art should not be studied in isolation from these other disciplines and the art of other countries, and for this reason he has reportedly turned down jobs at the Whitney and Winterthur museums, both of which focus exclusively on American art.

Last summer, after sixteen books and twenty-two catalogues, he still had a great many writing projects underway at Northeast Harbor, where he writes in the morning and sails in the afternoon. There was a study of certain key years in American culture, a revision of his Pelican History of American Art, a book of essays for Princeton University Press (which has kept his catalogue of the luminist show in print), a magazine article on Peto's house and studio, and a book about the painters of the Maine coast.

Wilmerding likes to teach for both its inspirational value and the opportunity it gives him to perform—whether in a graduate seminar or an undergraduate survey course. "Every term I get some new insight from a student, in class, on an exam, or on a paper. It starts your mind racing." Charles A. Riley II '79, writing in Art & Auction magazine, spoke of his "tenor voice, slightly tightened by Locust Valley lockjaw," filling the room "with an uninterrupted cascade of observations, allusions and connections." He can talk about Robert Motherwell and Jackson Pollock with equal authority, and with almost the same enthusiasm that he brings to Winslow Homer and Fitz Hugh Lane. Last spring, at his final lecture, on pop artists and advertising, he wore an American-flag vest and a red fright wig.

"The surveys give me a nice way to rethink," he says. "The lectures are a good way to decide what's important this year. They keep you going over the broader traditions, the larger themes. Ideas for my own work often come from trying out general ideas before a class."

Ann Waldron, a former editor of Princeton Today, writes frequently on the arts.

Paintings by Harnett were once more valuable than works by artists like John Peto. That's why someone forged Harnett's name on this Peto, Old Souvenirs.

THE METROPOLITAN MUSEUM OF ART, BEQUEST OF OLIVER BURR JENNINGS, 1968. (68.205.3)

poured in to see it—a record crowd. The show also drew rave reviews from art critics. Paul Richard wrote in The Washington Post that it glowed with a "radiant core" and that Wilmerding "has shown us something we have not seen before." The show helped to change the way people thought about American art. It dealt with iconography and content as well as with form, and it focused on the period's apocalyptic imagery and heroic vision. One of the many influential aspects of the show was its catalogue, to which a number of scholars in American art contributed. They brought varying points of view to their essays, and proposed ideas that some-

"Singin' the Blues" and All That Jazz

VOICES OF THE JAZZ AGE: PROFILES OF EIGHT VINTAGE JAZZMEN

Chip Deffaa '73 • University of Illinois Press, $29.95

CHIP DEFFAA'S Voices of the Jazz Age blends harmoniously, rhythmically, and technically into a literary jazz symphony. The "voices"—Sam Wooding, Benny Waters, Bix Beiderbecke, Bud Freeman, Jimmy McPartland, Joe Tarto, Freddie Moore, Jabbo Smith—are excellent choices, diverse in their personalities and characters. Deffaa, a jazz critic at The New York Post, brings out their essences in a sensitively written compendium of experiences, history, anecdotes, quotations, and revelations about these talented giants of jazz in the 1920s.

In the introduction, Deffaa tells us that the book is a collection of profiles of jazzmen who were born at least eighty years ago and were performing when jazz was new. The first jazz records appeared in 1917, and they helped take the music into every corner of the country. The Jazz Age was a time of high national spirits. Prohibition was widely flouted; sexual mores were loosening. As Leopold Stokowski noted, "Jazz has come to stay because it is an expression of the breathless, energetic, superactive times in which we are living."

These eight men all "came up" in the twenties and recall the same years, but they do so from different perspectives. Four are black; four are white. At that time, the music world was officially segregated; there were separate bands and separate unions for what the musicians commonly called "white jazz" and "black jazz." Their realities were literally as different as black and white. But they listened to (and respected and emulated) many of the same jazz idols, and were catalyzed by the same mix of technical proficiency, improvisational inventiveness, and soulfulness.

Those who Deffaa could interview obviously felt free to tell it all: complete, unabridged, often with their own "improvised" grammar and jargon. Upon this unfettered free expression Deffaa gently imposes a well-organized structure (like a big-band jazz arrangement that fuses structure and improvisation). The result is a flowing, absorbing, literary "jazz-arrangement."

It is evident, as their stories unfold, that these "voices" jammed with, drunk with, fought with, were hired or fired by, borrowed from or loaned to, slept with, or toured with almost everyone associated with the evolution of jazz in America. Here's a brief sampling of the incredible number of names, places, events, and delicious quotations that jump out of this 217-page jazz saga: Small's Paradise, in Harlem; Duke Ellington; the Biddles of Philadelphia; Chocolate Kiddies, an all-black revue; "Whites were fighting like hell to keep us from being anybody, and we was fighting like hell to be somebody" (Wooding); Willie "the Lion" Smith; Bessie Smith; Eubie Blake; W. C. Handy; Roseland; Charlie Johnson's band; Atlantic City nightclubs; the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (remember Princeton's I.V.J.B., graduated in the Class of '51?); Barron's, in Harlem; Jimmy Ryan's; Paul Whiteman; Chick Webb; the Washingtonians (Duke was a sideman); Wooding brings jazz to Europe (and stays); Claude Hopkins; Gene Sedric; Noble Sissle; the Austin High Gang (McPartland, Freeman, Frank Teschmacher, Dave Tough, Jim Lanigan, Dave North); the Cotton Club; McKinney's Cottonpickers; Eddie Condon; Bennie Moten; West End Café; "uninhibited music . . . uninhibited lives" (Deffaa); King Oliver; Club Alabam; Jimmy Lunceford;

Bud Freeman strikes a characteristically playful pose at Pennsylvania's Conneaut Lake Jazz Festival in 1985.

PHOTO BY CHIP DEFFAA

"Hot Lips" Page; "There's just as much prejudice in France as in New York, just less competition" (Waters); Creole Rice Band; "Mississippi Rag"; Satchmo and Bix meet in 1919 for the first time, on a Mississippi River excursion boat; Bix and the Wolverines recording "Fidgety Feet," "Sensation Rag," "Jazz Me Blues"; "Beiderbecke and Trumbauer, the decade's most important partnership" (Deffaa); Bix's immortal recording of "Singin' the Blues"; "Satchmo . . . searing, passionate, always on, always up . . . Bix, more concerned with form and elegance" (Deffaa); Hudson Lake; Bix "never belonged in the Whiteman orchestra; his talents were wasted there" (Artie Shaw); Bix, Freeman, and the Dorseys play houseparties in 1930 (Princeton is frequently mentioned in the book as a forum for great jazzmen); the Little Club; the Village Gate; Bix "was a lyrical player, also staccato and bright. He had a speaking, 'trumpet' way of playing" (Doc Cheatham); Elitch's, in Denver; "Even Benny had to compromise in the early thirties. Hot jazz was just not selling. In 1935 Goodman and his 'King Porter Stomp' changed things" (McPartland); Adrian Rollini; "In 1937 musicians wasn't making much money, but they was happy" (Moore, who at almost ninety is still drumming, at the Red Blazer Too on Forty-sixth Street); "From Monday On" and on . . . and on. The names, places, and songs come up again and again, and it's fun to make connections with them.

Deffaa is especially adept at describing and analyzing musicians' performances on records. He has the ability to render elements of ephemeral subjectivity (notes, sounds, phrasing) into meaningful, objective concepts. His style, like many of the solos he describes, is lyrical, poetic, sensitive, and unpretentious. Some of the best Deffaa quotations: "Bix Beiderbecke showed that jazz can be played with subtlety without losing impact." Of an Austin High Gang recording he observes that "all four sides pulsed with nervous excitement." My favorite is in the last paragraph of his profile of Bix, whom he never met of course (Bix died in 1931): "In Beiderbecke's last work, his soul seems to be exposed. You can sense both his elations and his sorrows. He may not have been strong enough, thick-skinned enough, to survive in this world. But in his relatively few, often troubled years he gave us some unforgettable music. What he created could not easily be copied. A trumpeter would have to have his particular psychological makeup . . . to improvise passages with the subtle, quick-silver mix of feelings he had. And as for the particular, lyrical gift he had, the facility for instantly inventing passages of curious beauty . . . how could anyone have copied that? Bix Beiderbecke was one of a kind, an original. And in any art form, how few true originals there are." Encore, Chip. Take another chorus!

Deffaa "takes it out" (in jazz vernacular, he plays the last chorus and then ends the piece) in grand style with his profile of Jabbo Smith, a lesser known trumpeter who was really considered the best for a time, but fell into relative obscurity before his recording career was resurrected in the sixties. Of this rediscovery Deffaa writes, "His tone was darker, heavier than in his youth (not surprisingly); he no longer soared as high nor played as flexibly." This closing profile is tender, poignant, and compassionate. A marvelous "last chorus."

By listening to the music and listening to the man, Deffaa seems to be able to delve into the core of the jazzman's soul. Yes, by listening and truly bearing he gives the jazz musician credibility, respectability, and relevance to the human quest for happiness and innocent pleasure, which perhaps all jazz performers seek in their playing.

This book is for everyone and certainly for anyone interested in jazz, whether musician, aficionado, or buff. Get three copies: one to underline, one to keep as a collector's item, and one to give your teenage child or grandchild as "required reading" to balance his or her musical tastes (which probably run to MTV). The photographs in the book are delightful, too. Deffaa, who also recently published Swing Legacy (Scarecrow Press, Box 4167, Metuchen, NJ 08840; $39.50), includes an invaluable discography, scholarly annotations, a fine bibliography, and a guide to further listening.

—Stan Rubin '55

Stan Rubin is well known to alumni as the internationally famous leader of the Tigertown Five Jazz Band, which among other successes in the 1950s sold out Carnegie Hall and played at the wedding of Grace Kelly and Prince Rainier III. Since then, his orchestra and swing-era big band have performed at untold alumni affairs and released twenty-two albums.

Books Received

TOWARD PEACE AND SECURITY
IN SOUTHERN AFRICA
Harvey Glickman '52, ed.
Gordon and Breach, $20.00 paper

INSIDE COLLEGE: NEW FREEDOM,
NEW RESPONSIBILITY
Henry C. Moses '63
The College Board, $10.95 paper

KEEPING KIDS: A PRACTICAL EVERYDAY
RESOURCE GUIDE FOR NANNIES, BABYSITTERS AND HOME CAREGIVERS
Barbara A. Cunningham '73
Orders to 1644 N. McKinley Rd.,
Arlington, VA 22205. $16.95 loose-leaf binder

DISCOVERING: INVENTING AND SOLVING PROBLEMS AT THE FRONTIERS OF SCIENTIFIC KNOWLEDGE
Robert Scott Root-Bernstein '75 '80
Harvard University Press, $35.00

PROVISIONS (poetry)
Monifa Atungaye '76
Lotus Press, Box 21607, Detroit, MI 48221
$6.50 paper postpaid

ANCHORS: BROKAW, JENNINGS,
RATHER AND THE EVENING NEWS
Robert Goldberg '79 and Gerald Jay Goldberg
Birch Lane Press, 120 Enterprise Ave.,
Secaucus, NJ 07094. $19.95

THE FINAL CLUB

Geoffrey Wolff's

superb novel of lives subtly changed in the inner circles of Princeton in the 1950's

"Wolff does
[for Princeton] what Waugh did for Oxbridge

—ALBERT MOBILIO,
Voice Literary Supplement

"A brave novel—tough where it needs to be, compassionate where it needs to be."—WARD JUST

"Wolff, whose depth and insight have marked such previous works as The Duke of Deception and Providence has constructed a Princeton-based universe that far surpasses any sentimental visions of the golden years. By focusing on the elite inner sanctum of the class of '60, the novel exquisitely captures [its] wider world."

—GAIL CALDWELL, Boston Globe

"Finally
The Final Club shows us both sides of paradise,
the beautiful and the damned."

CHRISTOPHER LEHMANN-HAUPT
New York Times

Already in its 2nd printing • Published by Knopf

Football Drubbed in Season-Ending Losses to Yale and Dartmouth

FOR THE SECOND year in a row, Palmer Stadium hosted a celebration of an Ivy League championship. Last year, the boys in orange and black tore down the goal posts after their final game of the season. This year, it was the team in Dartmouth's white and green that gathered for a victory celebration at midfield. With its 23-6 drubbing of the Tigers on November 17, the Big Green secured its first Ivy title in eight years. Cornell beat Penn that day to finish with the same league record as Dartmouth (6-1), but on the strength of the Big Green's 11-6 squeaker over the Big Red earlier this year, Dartmouth fans are entitled to assert their predominance.

For Princeton, it was an appropriate if depressing end to a lackluster season. Perhaps spoiled by the fine play of three Garretts in three years, Tiger fans got an unpleasant reminder of prior years of football futility as Princeton struggled to an overall record of 3-7, the first losing mark in Steve Tosches' four-year tenure as head coach. The Tigers' 2-5 record in the league—including an inexcusable loss to Columbia, which didn't win another game—placed the team in a tie for sixth place with Brown. It was Princeton's worst Ivy finish in four years, and it was all the more dispiriting in that it followed the Tigers' first Ivy title in twenty.

Looking back on his squad's performance in 1990, Tosches had no difficulty identifying the two key factors in this dismal season. For one, he said, "we had a very, very average offense." More importantly, the team was on the wrong side of a number of "giveaway victories." In particular, in games against Harvard and Columbia, the opponents didn't so much win as Princeton lost, through a series of embarrassing gaffes. Without their charitable play, the Tigers would have finished no worse than 5-5, and possibly better.

The last two games of the year, however, did not fall into the "giveaway" category. Yale and Dartmouth just beat the pants off the Tigers. It's possible to rationalize these losses—both games were played in miserable conditions (cold, wind, rain), and both opponents were among the best in the league—but there's no ignoring the obvious: Princeton got flattened. In a sodden Yale Bowl (and on national TV), the Elis dismantled Princeton in the second half, en route to a 34-7 victory. In an equally saturated Palmer Stadium, Dartmouth jumped out to a 20-0 lead and cruised the rest of the way.

Above: One of Princeton's few bright spots in the Yale game was defensive end Leon Newsome '92, who led all defenders with twelve tackles, ten of them unassisted. Here he's about to tackle Yale quarterback Darin Kehler for a loss. Below: As the game wore on, the Yale Bowl became a quagmire. Clods of turf and gobs of mud flew into the air as players, among them defensive tackle Steve Schildt '91 (left), struggled for traction.

PHOTOS BY LARRY FRENCH

Both contests were full of the problems that plagued Princeton all year. The Tigers scored first in only three games this season; both Yale and Dartmouth tallied touchdowns before Princeton had gained so much as a first down. The offense consistently had trouble moving the ball on first and second downs, forcing many third-and-long plays. The short passing game, which Princeton used so effectively in the last few years, seemed to disappear from the playbook. When the offense did connect for a big gainer, it was, often as

ALUMNI FLIGHTS ABROAD

Exceptional Experiences for Selective Travelers.

Egypt	Ancient.
Greece
Asia Minor
the Aegean	Classical.
Carthage
Central Asia
the Kyber Pass	Mysterious.
India
Nepal
the Himalayas	Oriental.
Japan
Southeast Asia
Java
Borneo	Enigmatic.
Ceylon
Sumatra
South America	Primitive.
the Galapagos
the Amazon
Ancient Civilizations	Vibrant.
the Andes
Australia
New Zealand	Compelling.
New Guinea
Kenya
Tanzania	Exciting.
the Seychelles
Northern Italy
Burgundy	Artistic.
Southwest France
Alsace-Lorraine
the Rhine
the Moselle	Cultural.
Flanders
Scotland
Wales	Historic.

Highly acclaimed itineraries, especially designed for alumni of Princeton, Harvard, Yale, and other distinguished universities. For further information, please contact:

Alumni Flights Abroad

Department PR-170

A.F.A. Plaza

425 Cherry Street

Bedford Hills, New York 10507

TOLL FREE 1-800-AFA-8700

N.Y. State (914) 241-0111

not, called back by a penalty.

Because of injuries and inexperience, Princeton tried four players at center this year, and the result was a series of fumbled snaps and timing problems. Against Yale and Dartmouth, the Tigers fumbled a total of ten times. (To be fair, the weather was undoubtedly a factor in both contests, but Yale and Dartmouth fumbled only four times.) And penalties, penalties. The Dartmouth and Princeton teams clearly had little affection for each other, as evidenced by an unsightly stream of personal fouls, but the Tigers always seemed to get penalized at the worst possible moments. Against Yale, for example, Princeton started one drive with four consecutive penalties. First down and ten yards to go became first-and-thirty. In ten games, the Tigers were penalized a colossal eighty-four times for more than 660 yards—just about what the team's leading rusher gained.

Usually, these kinds of statistics indicate a poorly coached team. But I don't think that this was the Tigers' problem in 1990. On any number of occasions, Tosches called the right play but then watched in agony as his players failed to execute it. The passing game was especially problematic. At the beginning of the season, the receiving corps had a collective case of the drops—the player was wide open, but the ball clanked off helmets, chests, or hands of stone. Perhaps as one result of this poor catching, quarterback Joel Sharp '91 went into a slide that sometimes seemed to affect his judgment. His statistics against Dartmouth—seven of twenty-three for eighty-four yards and three interceptions—were a sad end to a career that began so auspiciously with last year's 7-2-1 campaign. In both the Yale and Dartmouth games, Tosches replaced Sharp with backup Chad Roghair '92, giving him experience for next year.

Coaches of the defensive unit were also sabotaged by problems of execution. The Tigers were rarely fooled by opponents' plays, but they were often victimized by poor tackling. The defense had the distressing habit of permitting competitors to score just before halftime as well. And the offense's inefficiency hurt the defense: in almost all its games, Princeton held the ball for less time than its opponent did. Against the best of the Ivy teams, the defense got worn down by relentless rushing attacks; Dartmouth's Al Rosier and Shon Page, twin threats out of the backfield, racked up 186 and 146 yards, respectively, on the ground.

But the 1990 team had its moments, and several players enjoyed fine seasons. Mike Hirou '91, the team's captain and strong safety, led the squad in tackles by a wide margin, and Renard Charity '91 was a force on the defensive line. The fullback, Chris Hallihan '91, was as aggressive a runner and blocker as he was last year. Chris Lutz '91 had a forgettable year as a placekicker, but the former all-American proved to be a surprisingly reliable punter. It's a shame that these seniors, who contributed so much over the last three years, had to suffer through this disappointing season.

The future of the Princeton football program lies with the legions of younger players who saw considerable action in 1990. On the defense, linebacker Aaron Harris '93 missed two games but was second on the team in tackles. With two more years ahead of him, Harris could help Tiger fans forget the loss of Franco Pagnanelli '90. He and linebacker Jim Freeman '92, who had another strong season, will anchor the interior defense next year. On the other side of the ball, Erick Hamilton '93 rushed for seven hundred yards and showed speed, agility, and power. Michael Lerch '93, the most exciting player on the team, played all over the field and will get the ball more often next season. Three starters will return to the offensive line next fall, making it a wiser and more experienced unit. Tosches claims that the quarterback position is now "wide open," but Roghair showed mettle in tough circumstances against Dartmouth, leading Princeton to its only score against the Ivy League's best defense.

It may be, however, that the best hope for next fall will come from this year's freshman team, which finished at 5-1. It's only been six months since Judd Garrett '90 graduated, but his records could fall to the gifted Keith Elias '94, who blends Garrett's moves with blinding speed. Heavily recruited by several Division I schools, Elias chose to attend Princeton, and no one's happier about his decision than Tosches. In only six games, Elias rushed for more than a thousand yards—the first time that's ever happened in Ivy freshman football. Tosches' backfield looks set next year, with the trio of Hamilton, Lerch, and Elias. Perhaps that's the best way to leave the 1990 season—with visions of a clean slate and Steve Tosches diagramming plays to exploit the talents of his three young backs. I guarantee that it's more pleasant than replaying memories of this fall.

—David Williamson '84

David Williamson, PAW's fearless pigskin prognosticator, picked Princeton to finish in the middle of the pack in our Ivy League preview. He's been wrong before.

New Coach of Women's Soccer Is Collegiate Player of the Decade

A CHANGE IN coaches almost always means the restructuring and reorientation of a team. For the women's soccer team, which finished this year with an 8-6-1 record (3-4 Ivy), the restructuring occurred during a respectable season, but one that has almost every player who will return anxiously awaiting the proverbial "next year."

"Even though the season just ended, I think that everyone is looking forward to playing and lifting weights over the winter to be ready to have a good, productive spring. Coach Heinrichs has got us really motivated," says full-back Heidi Peterson '93. (The Ivy League does not allow women's soccer teams to practice during the spring in an official way, but most players expect to spend a lot of time working out informally on Poe Field.)

Credit for the changed atmosphere of the program is due mostly to April Heinrichs, the new head coach. Heinrichs graduated from the University of North Carolina, a nationally ranked powerhouse in soccer, in 1986, but her credentials don't stop there. Soccer America magazine recently named her the female Collegiate Player of the Decade for the 1980s, and she is currently the captain of the United States Women's National Team. This team, which consists of the sixteen best players in America, will compete next year in the Women's World Cup, to be held in China.

Not surprisingly, given her high-powered background, Heinrichs has asked a great deal from her players at Princeton. At first, she says, her most important goal was to "get the girls to train hard enough—to practice for two hours entirely at game speed." According to Heinrichs, it took the players a full month of practice this year to attain this degree of effort; next year, she'll expect it right from the beginning. Overall, however, Heinrichs was impressed by what she calls the "nice level of soccer" played at Princeton.

Of course, the players had their own preconceptions of their new coach; it was, after all, sort of like Bo Jackson showing up to coach at Palmer Stadium (or Clarke Field). Peterson points out that few of the players had ever been coached by a woman before, and hardly any had ever had a coach as young as Heinrichs, who can "teach us tricks that she has used herself and so she knows work."

April Heinrichs, Princeton's new head coach of women's soccer, was recently named the female Collegiate Player of the Decade for the 1980s. She also captains the U.S. Women's National Team.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

After that month of practices went by (and thus a couple of weeks of games as well), the new coach and her players seem to have become comfortable with one another. Because of a fortuitous stroke of scheduling, at that time (the end of September), the team took a rare road-trip on a weekend to play two games in Texas. A combination of the intense practices and this trip really caused the team to jell, not only among themselves, but also with their coach. During the trip (for which the players raised the funds themselves), they stayed in several houses in fullback Kathryn Hamm '91's neighborhood of Dallas.

The Tigers played well in splitting the games with Texas Christian (won, 2-1) and Southern Methodist (lost, 3-1), and both Heinrichs and Kathy Kobler '91, the team's captain, say that they noticed a different attitude among the players upon their return to Princeton. Throughout October, Kobler says, the team played much more consistently and effectively. The Tigers' record reflected this attitude, as they won four of their last five games.

Much can be said for the team's future. Heinrichs will now have a full year to prepare the returning players and to recruit a new class. Despite the onus of replacing Kobler (the university's career leader in assists) and forward Mollie Marcoux '91 (third in career points), Princeton's future in women's soccer looks bright. Next year's Tigers, led by talented players like wing Julie Pomerantz '92 and forward Nancy Foot '92, should be more than ready for "next year."

—Matthew T. Henshon '91

SCOREBOARD

VARSITY FOOTBALL

(3-7 overall; 2-5 Ivy)
Yale 34, Princeton 7
Dartmouth 23, Princeton 6

FRESHMAN FOOTBALL

(5-1 overall; 5-1 Ivy)
Princeton 34, Yale 20

MEN'S X-COUNTRY

(4-1 overall; 0-1 Ivy)
IC4As—30th place

VOLLEYBALL

(21-8 overall; 10-4 Ivy)
Concordia 3, Princeton 2
Concordia 3, Princeton 0
Princeton 3, Columbia 0
Penn 3, Princeton 1
Princeton 3, Harvard 0
Princeton 3, Yale 1
Penn 3, Princeton 1

WOMEN'S X-COUNTRY

(5-1 overall; 1-1 Ivy)
E.C.A.C.—4th place

JOIN THE RANKS OF PROUD ALUMNI WHO CARRY THE CLASSIC CASE OF PRINCETON

Choose from a distinctive collection:

• Traditional Attachés • Accountant and Lawyer Brief Bags • Top Zip Briefcases • Legal Writing Pads • Desk Agendas.

Each piece is expertly handcrafted using only the finest leathers and is elegantly monogrammed on the interior in 24 karat gold leaf with the seal of PRINCETON UNIVERSITY.

To place an order, receive a complimentary brochure or request further information call (800) 553-1907; Fax (619) 423-2064. Affinity Fine Leather Goods, 2248 Main St., Suite 4, Chula Vista, CA 92011.

NEW. The Princeton watch features an orange and black shield on a white ground. This good-looking quartz watch with its black leather band and gold-tone case makes a fine gift. Made exclusively for us. $50., plus $4.25 shipping. N.J. residents add 7% tax.

the PRINCETON University Store

36 University Place, Princeton, N.J. 08540

Call toll-free: From N.J., 1-800-624-4236
Elsewhere in the U.S., 1-800-631-0137

☐ U-Store ☐ VISA ☐ MasterCard ☐ AmEx
Acct. # _____

Exp. Date _____

Qty _____

Name _____

Address _____

City, State _____

ZIP _____

The Princeton Triangle Club proudly presents the national tour of

Easy Street

The 1990 Triangle Show

"The best Triangle show in decades!"

--The Town Topics

Dec. 14 New York, NY
Dec. 15 Boston, MA
Dec. 16 Philadelphia, PA
(matinee)
Dec. 17 Washington, DC
Dec. 18 Charlotte, NC
Dec. 19 Atlanta, GA
Dec. 20 T B A
Dec. 21 T B A
Dec. 22 T B A
Dec. 23 T B A

Contact your Alumni Association for ticket information

K·M· REAL ESTATE
LIGHT

A REAL SWEETHEART

of a house! All brick and built to last by Matthews with quality materials and generous room sizes. Three bedrooms, 2 baths, fireplace in living room -superb condition! Natural setting with informal plantings backing up to Stony Brook conservation area. Excellent Western Princeton neighborhood. $339,500.

Karl Light '47—Broker
247 Nassau St. 609-924-2822

Princeton Exchange

FOR RENT

ENJOY THE LUXURY of your own villa, private pool overlooking the Caribbean, and staff of five to serve you. 3 BRs, 3 baths; exquisitely furnished; on one acre with terraced gardens in most exclusive residential neighborhood in Ocho Rios, Jamaica. Everyone should try this kind of living at least once. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70 (owner), 1165 Churchill Downs Rd., Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR waterfront beachhouse amid tropical gardens. Spectacular view, excellent snorkeling. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70. 1165 Churchill Downs, Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

PARIS: Elegant small studio for two just off the Seine in the 6th. 2 min. walk to the Louvre, Notre Dame. 609-924-4332.

BARBADOS: Home of the late John L. Roe Jr. '34. West Coast on bluff overlooking Caribbean. Three air-conditioned BRs, cook, maid, gardener, laundry, swimming pool. 215-527-0585.

PARIS: Rue de la Paix, Elegant apartment. Suitable for 2 or 3. 7-days preferred. $200/night. 212-838-1731.

STOCKING ISLAND, Exuma, Bahamas: Octagonal wood and glass home, spectacular 360-degree sea view. All modern conveniences. $1000 weekly for two with boat. Sam Burns '46, 407-231-2822. Brochure avail.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FLA.: Delightful beachfront condominium. Magnificent gulf view. Spacious 2 BR, 2 baths, loft. Pool. Tennis. Will Smith '63. 908-842-2096.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS (Virgin Gorda): Elegant new villa directly on own private snorkeling beach. Spectacular, panoramic view of North Sound including Bitter-End (dive school, etc.) Perfect weather year round. 3 BR, 2 bath, magnificent LR, wrap-around deck, full mod. kit., microwave, dishwasher, marina, fishing, pool, tennis. (Restaurant, provisioning, staff, car, available extra.) $2,500/wk. 609-921-7872.

EXCLUSIVE LUXURY 4 BR, 4 bath villa at private Tryall Club in Montego, Jamaica. Private pool, staff of four, gorgeous grounds overlook Caribbean and championship golf course. Also private tennis, scuba, beach and club house. Available at 2 or 3 BR rate off-season. 203-254-0228 (h) or Carol Shaw at 203-929-6391.

LONDON LUXURY FLATS: In Knightsbridge, Mayfair, Chelsea, Kensington, Whitehall Court. One, two, three bedrooms. Furnished and decorated by owners. Rented by day, seven day minimum; reduced rates when exceeding six months. Call during office hours: 518-686-7841.

KAUAI, HAWAII: 4 BR, NaPali Coast beach house. $650-850/wk. 703-560-7900.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant villa on blue Caribbean. Breathtaking views. Daily maid. All amenities. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

ITALY: Renting delightful holiday accommodations, each personally selected. Tuscan castles, Umbrian farmhouses. Seaside villas, lakeview cottages. Centrally-located apartments Venice, Rome, Florence. Week/month. 415-821-9345.

ST. THOMAS: 2 or 3 BRs on the water, spectacular downisland view. H. Macaleer. 919-942-8439.

SANIBEL ISLAND: Gulffront condominium, 2 BR with pool and tennis. Weekly/Monthly. Boozan '79, 201-522-8219

CENTURIES OLD FARMHOUSE at edge of Sabine hill town. Easy reach of Orvieto, Perugia, Assisi, Spoleto, Florence, Rome. Magnificent setting on 4 acres. Restored recently. Architect Ellen Jawdat of Washington, D.C., M.Arch. Harvard. Work executed by Valentini Ristauo of Rome. All modern comforts. C. Joseph, 1 Lincoln Plaza, New York, NY 10023, 212-873-5104.

ST. JOHN: Off-season rates. 2 bedroom villa, pool, spectacular view. 508-668-2078.

LONDON RENTALS: Privately owned flats and houses in London's best areas offering comprehensive personal service at attractive prices. One week minimum stay. Call: A Place Like Home, London. 800-526-0215.

ST. BART'S, FRENCH WEST INDIES: Luxurious seaside villa surrounded by privacy, beautiful beaches and French restaurants. 412-687-2061.

PARIS. LEFT BANK APARTMENT: St. Germain, close to D'Orsay, Louvre, Rodin. Sunny. Fireplaces. Antiques. Luxuriously furnished. Memorable! 412-687-2061.

MAD RIVER SUGARBUSH AREA: Comfortable farmhouse for up to 20 skiers. $350 per day. William Iler '51, 508-922-0010.

TORTOLA. BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS: Luxury 5 bedrm., 3 bath villa. Pool. 11 island view. Every amenity. Maid, car included. Two thousand, six hundred dollars weekly. 516-283-2299.

SKI VERMONT: Spacious 4 bedroom house near Stratton/Mt. Snow. 703-522-5454.

SAIL THE VIRGINS: The best beaches, best views, best of everything. Fully equipped 40' O'Day. 2 cabins, salon, galley, 2 heads, shower, sleeps 7. Captain, provisioning available. 201-747-3976.

VAIL, CO: 3 BR plus loft. 5 min. from gondola and great skiing. $225/night. $275 during Christmas and spring break. Bruce Brookens '67; 303-761-8815.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK: Rocky Mountain seclusion, minutes from skiing. Creek-side home sleeps six. No X-mas. 303-926-3907.

ST. JOHN: Fabulous private home near beach. Peaceful. Furnished. Box 12287, St. Thomas, VI 00801. 809-775-4266.

SUN VALLEY, ID: Luxurious, spacious, ski condo at base of Mt. Baldy in Warm Springs. 3 BRs, 3 baths, fireplace. Walk one block to lifts, restaurants, shops, apres ski. Bill Travers '71, 607-257-7322.

EXUMA, BAHAMAS: Magnificent hilltop view. Fully equipped, 4 bedrooms, van, private beach, housekeeper available. $1,000 weekly in season. 302-428-1455, evenings.

BEQUILA: Jewel of the Grenadines. Quiet. Beautiful. Friendly. Stone house overlooking the sea. Three bedrooms with baths. Pool. Beach. Housekeeper-cook. Three-week rental $5,250. 914-763-8030.

SOUTH CENTRAL FRANCE. AUVERGNE near Romanesque Conques. Stone farmhouse: modern kitchen, sleeps 6. $900/mo. 703-960-6425.

TORTOLA, BVI: 6 acres, 4 BR, 3 bath, noted architect-designed villa with pool on spectacular promontory jutting over sea and own beach on undeveloped N.E. coast. Two-week rental minimum. Charles Sommer, 11 Upper Ladue Rd., St Louis, MO 63124; 314-982-2690(w), 314-991-5527(h).

TAOS, NM: 2 BR, 2 bath condominium overlooking Kit Carson Park. $400/week, April 15–Nov. $575/week, Dec.–April 15. Charley Brooks, ERA Taos Realtors, 13 Paseo del Pueblo Norte, Taos, NM 87571; 505-758-0112.

SPAIN: Lovely 4 BR villa (pool) overlooking Mediterranean/village. Hess '64. 203-688-9333.

VIEQUES, PUERTO RICO: 4 bedroom, 3 bath villa. Pool. 360 degree views. Beautiful beaches. Amherst '58. 508-371-7375.

PROVIDENCIALES, BWI: 3 BRs, 3 baths on private beach. $1,500/wk. 216-229-2978.

VERMONT, MORETOWN: Remodeled farmhouse sleeps 10. 15 minutes to Mad River Glen, 20 mins. to Sugarbush, 40 mins. to Stowe. For rent week, weekend, month. 802-229-0051.

CARIBBEAN PARADISE: Luxury 4 BR, 3 bath villa. Perfect 2-6 people. Enjoy heavenly views, gardens, privacy. Walk to 2 spectacular beaches. Tortola, British Virgins. Clipper Cleaver '41, Box 356, Adamsville, R.I. 02801. 401-635-4725(h), 617-742-8310(o).

VAIL/BEAVER CREEK: Well-appointed 3 bedroom, 3 bath house 15 min. to Vail, 5 min. to Beaver Creek. Available Sat. to Sat. $850/wk. Charles Gaylord '34, 303-722-3474.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR villa at Lagoon Point, sensational views. Weekly $840–$1260 winter; $560–$840 summer. Valentine, 8 Fern Way, Madbury, NH 03820. 603-742-3063.

ELEUTHERA, BAHAMAS: Cotton Bay Club. Magnificent waterfront home. Trent Jones golf course 100 yards away. Snorkeling, tennis, 3 bedrooms, Bertram sportsfisherman boat, pool, housekeeper. 617-722-7045.

IRELAND: Charming Georgian house in beautiful County Waterford. 4 BRs, 3 baths. Available all year. Low rental Nov. to June. 914-677-9698.

FLORIDA KEYS VACATION RENTALS: Call Jannie, Sugarloaf Realty. 800-827-2230.

SAN DIEGO: 2,500 sq. ft., 3 BR, 2½ bath Bauhaus condo. Exceptional executive living on ocean and lagoon. Furnished or unfurnished 6-month + lease, or lease-to-buy. $3,000/month or terms. 619-481-1548.

CASTLE HYDE: On the Blackwater River, County Cork, Southern Ireland. Exceptionally lovely 18th century Georgian house on 144 acres. 6 bedrooms, 5 modern baths, classic Renaissance gardens with fresh fruit and flowers. Fully staffed. Two miles of private trout and salmon fishing. Pheasant shooting. Available year round. Richard Kroon Y'64, 201-741-5692.

SCOTLAND—GLENEAGLES: Privately owned furnished, new 2-bedroom townhouse on grounds of Gleneagles Hotel estate. Central to highlands, St. Andrews, Edinburgh, Scottish links. $550/week. J. Murphy 513-281-0346.

ST. BARTHÉLÉMY HOLIDAY, FWI: Superb 3-bedroom beachfront villa. Complete services. 203-255-9299.

JUPITER ISLAND, OCEAN FRONT HOME: P.O. Box 1546, Hobe Sound, FL 33475. 407-546-2571. Bush '50, '64, '75.

ALASKAN CABIN near historic mining town, on scenic beach. Shower, electricity, wood heat. Furnished but rugged. Hiking, salmon fishing, wildlife. Sleeps 5. $350 per week. Available June–September. 1326 K Street, Anchorage, AK 99501. 907-272-2119.

COME BACK TO JAMAICA! Enjoy the privacy of your own spacious 3 BR, 3 bath villa, "Clive House", at Tryall Golf and Beach Club near Montego Bay. Beautifully appointed and complete with it's own 20' x 40' pool. Cook, maid, laundress and gardener. Spectacular panoramic view of the Caribbean and our 18 hole championship golf course. Tennis, lovely sand beach and all water sports also on site for your enjoyment. Color brochure available on request. Call Liz Poley, w'55 or Susan Wylie weekdays 8-4:30. 612-339-1820.

TORTOLA, BVI: Three bedroom house, pool. Marvelous beach, views. Private, unspoiled location. Off-season values. 617-876-2590.

SOUTHERN FRANCE: Charming house in medieval Haut-de-Cagnes near Nice. 3-bedroom, 2-bath. Lovely courtyard. Per week: winter 3,400FF ($667), spring/fall 3,900FF ($765), summer 4,700FF ($921). (Dollars are approximate.) Please call 212-222-2879.

TORTOLA, BVI: Lovely villa, sleeps 10. Three acre privacy, magnificent view. High season $2,400 for six. $300 each additional guest. 617-868-5340 or 617-492-0727.

CHRISTMAS IN MANHATTAN! (Gramercy): Charming 1 bedroom with nursery. Doorman, elevator. Available Christmas Eve through New Year's. Babysitter available. Call Tom Wong '87, 212-979-2660.

PERFECT DESERT VACATION HOME: Bermuda Dunes, California. Elegant, 3 bedrooms, jacuzzi, private tennis court, swimming pool, mountain vistas, great weather and nearby golf. William Kopolovitz '66, 800-352-1144.

FOR SALE

MANHATTAN: If selling a co-op, condominium, or townhouse, call about our unique 200 brokerage firm multi-list program. Sharon Baum w'62, S.W. Bird & Co., 331 Madison Ave., New York, NY; 212-351-2416.

GREAT CAMANOE, BVI: Secluded home, magnificent view on private island. 2 BR, baths. Land Rover and Whaler. Doug Martin '54. 203-426-2928.

EASTERN SHORE OF MD: Seeking residential property in waterfront mid-shore area, convenient to Washington, Baltimore and Phila.? Call Juana Mestres w'57. Clare Hughes Real Estate, Cambridge, MD 21613. 301-228-4236 (o), 301-228-4787 (h).

ISLAND HOUSE: See "For Rent, Stocking Island."

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK, COLORADO: Unique properties. 10% of commission proceeds donated, in your name, to the Yellowstone Bighorn Research Association in memory of my father, Professor Erling Dorf, Hon. '33. Bob Dorf 303-476-2421.

SHORT HILLS, NJ: Magnificently and completely restored 1880's Victorian. Unbelievable craftsmanship. Brick walls surround lush trees and formal gardens. Walk to village and NYC commute. Helen Hagerman w'30, Raymond Connolly, Realtors. 201-376-5323.

BOCA RATON, FLA., YACHTSMAN DREAM: Deep-water slip, 3,000 sq. ft. townhouse facing Boca Raton Hotel. Next to beach club and Boca Inlet. Magnificent home or investment. Phone 407-466-4219. 407-391-9072.

MANHATTAN, GRAMERCY PARK: Pied-a-terre. Modest one bedroom. Secure doorman building. $125,000. 718-NE9-6200.

MANHATTAN, EAST 70s: Beautifully appointed 1 bedroom co-op. Completely renovated, modern appliances and windows, hardwood floors. Doorman. Perfect for personal or corporate use. $155k, low maintenance charge. 212-772-7135.

MANHATTAN/BATTERY PARK CITY: Two bedroom high floor corner condominium with spectacular Hudson River views. Walk to work downtown. Luxury doorman building. $335,000, maint. $621. Jennifer Jordan '78. Office: 212-969-6259, home: 212-945-3113.

OUTSTANDING INVESTMENT, LIVE IN HOME 1856 farmhouse off Great Road, Princeton-border. Good condition, 2 family, 6 bedroom home and cottage with current monthly rental income $2,000–$2,500. Income pays mortgage costs. Asking $235,000. Call evenings 212-996-1512.

PLACE YOUR AD IN THE PRINCETON EXCHANGE

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____ State: _____ Zip: _____

Telephone, Work: _____ Home: _____

My ad should run _____ time(s), beginning the month of _____

Classification: _____

Text: _____

Payment for all insertions must accompany initial request. My check for $ _____ is enclosed. Rates per insertion: 1–5 insertions, $1.50 per word; 6–10 insertions, $1.45 per word; 11–17 insertions, $1.40 per word. Send to: Princeton Exchange, Princeton Alumni Weekly, 41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540 (609)258-4886. No phone orders please. Issues are published 17 times from September through July. Ads will appear five–six weeks after receipt. When calculating payment, multiply number of words X number of insertions X rate per word to arrive at total price. P.O. Box number counts as two words, phone number as one word. No charge for zip code or class numerals. We cannot accept PAW box numbers. Please make checks payable to Princeton Alumni Weekly.

Princeton Alumni Weekly

Reaching 56,000
upscale, sophisticated
readers with every issue.

Published more frequently
than any other alumni
magazine in the world.

Why advertise with
anyone else?

For details please contact:
Ms. Lolly O'Brien/Advertising Director
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William Street
Princeton, New Jersey
08540
(609) 258-4886

OLD LYME, ELEGANT CONNECTICUT RETREAT: Privacy on 7+ acres. Both main and guest house have high views of Connecticut River and Long Island Sound and were recently designed to take advantage of a unique environment and spectacular site. 3/4 bedrooms, 5 baths. Two adjoining sites available. $1,100,000. Shirley Whitney Talcott d'12. Talcott Associates 203-434-7339.

FOR SALE/FOR RENT

NANTUCKET—Come join the 400 happy Princeton families. We have large and small rentals, investment opportunities, estates and commercial enterprises. AND we give your investments TENDER, LOVING CARE—PREFERRED PROPERTIES. Nancie B. Taylor, w'43, Lucy T. Eaton, d'43. 508-228-2320, 800-338-7715.

WASHINGTON, DC, METROPOLITAN area, Northern Virginia, Maryland. Sales, rentals, land, property management. Colleen Finks w'61, associate broker, Pardoe & Graham, 6729 Curran St., McLean, VA 22101; 703-734-7020; eves., 703-821-2850.

FOR EXCHANGE

MONTEREY BAY, CALIFORNIA: Beach front luxury condo in exchange for like: Italy, Switzerland, France. Duke Slichter '54. 415-941-3244.

WANTED TO RENT

FRANCE, PROVENCE: House sleeping 6-8, May 25—June 22, 1991. Robert Lilien '48. 212-876-0733.

RESORTS & TRAVEL

LONDON, ENGLAND: Luxury self-catering apartments in the heart of Mayfair. We offer you the comfort and privacy of a recently converted period Georgian town house. British Breaks, Ltd., P.O. Box 1176, Middleburg, Virginia 22117. Telephone 703-687-6971. Fax 703-687-6291.

FLORIDA KEYS, BIG PINE KEY: Fantastic open water view, Key Deer Refuge, National Bird Sanctuary, stilt house, 3/2, screened porches, fully furnished, stained glass windows, swimming, diving, fishing, boat basin. 305-665-3832.

"NOT ONCE did I feel like a tourist; I felt an Italian friend was showing me his ITALY, his favorite spots." La Pergola, Tours, Inc.: A special company for the special traveler. Call for 1991 tour schedule. 914-358-6035.

ARIZONA GUEST RANCH: Riding ranch-bred horses, tennis, pool, fantastic birding, shooting, all in a verdant valley surrounded by historic mountains. Season, Nov. 1 to May 15, limited to 40 guests. Brochure, Circle Z Ranch, Box 194 P-3, Patagonia, AZ 85624, winter 602-287-2091, summer 814-425-3768, Don Simmons P'49 manager.

AFRICAN SAFARI: Deluxe photographic safari throughout Kenya. Superb accommodations: deluxe tented camps to Mt. Kenya Safari Club. Personal escort. Kathleen Colson w'79, African Safari Planners, 201-221-1854.

SCOTLAND: Ardsheal House, historic home of the Stewarts of Appin, now a country house hotel owned and run by Jane & Bob Taylor (Princeton '53). Located on coast in magnificent West Highlands. Superb food. Brochure: Ardsheal House, Kentallen of Appin, Argyll PA38 4BX, Scotland. Tel.: 44-63174-227. Fax: 44-63174-342. Open Easter to Nov.

ENGLISH CANALS with historian-skipper. Good food, no schedule. $595 weekly, inclusive. Box 2083, Springfield, Mass. 01101. Tel. 413-562-9296.

LEARN UMBRIAN cooking in renovated farmhouse in Italy. 212-873-5104.

BED & BREAKFAST

MANHATTAN B & Bs and private apartments. Prime locations, attractive rates. AT HOME IN NEW YORK, P.O. Box 407, NYC 10185. Lois Rooks, Director. 212-956-3125; fax 212-247-3294.

D.C. AREA BED & BREAKFAST: 15 minutes from downtown. 301-229-4835.

PALLEY PLACE: A quiet retreat in Sierra foothills. 916-265-5427.

WANTED TO BUY

RARE BOOKS AND FIRST EDITIONS: We are interested in purchasing libraries or single volumes from the 15th to the 20th century. Top prices paid. Also, expert appraisals for individuals or institutions. David L. O'Neal '60, Antiquarian Booksellers, Inc., 234 Clarendon St., Boston, MA 02116; 617-266-5790.

OLD FOUNTAIN PENS: Any condition. Richard Golden, 212-758-6478; fax 212-557-8137.

BUSINESS SERVICES

PROFESSIONAL TAX PLANNING, ACCOUNTING, AUDIT REPRESENTATION. Personal and business. Enrolled to practice before IRS. By appointment. 212-947-6031. Virgil M. Cummins '67 (EA), 430 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10001.

OPPORTUNITIES

PATENT FOR SALE: Automatic shrimp deheading machine. Blueprints, manufacturing rights, working machine, details. Proven efficient in processing plant. Fred Stephenson '50. 305-733-8211.

EDUCATION

NONTRADITIONAL PREMEDS: Expert advice for older students, career changers, second round applicants. Counseling by former director and founder of the Post-Baccalaureate Premedical Program at Bryn Mawr College. Dr. Patricia Pruett, 215-525-4607.

PERSONAL

TITLED HUNGARIAN with Royal British Crest, anthropologist, Princeton PH.D., wishes to meet young lady not previously married, up to late 30's, fair in form and feature, (vide: Joan Fontaine, Deborah Kerr); in short - a lady, in the traditional sense of family and manner, impish in outlook, gamin in charm. Object: matrimony and a son. Because of local commitments cannot court you much beyond the general Short Hills, Montclair, Madison, Westfield area. Past such compass of condition and geography love's labor will not be lost. I offer devotion, rosemary, and thyme. Be warm please, be gentle, be chaste, be bright in spirit. Love old Vienna, Lehar and Strauss. And, please love dogs. Photograph and telephone number will be reciprocated. Replies to: Sir Knight, c/o Law Offices, P.O. Box 255, Glen Ridge, NJ 07028.

12

ARTHUR C. HOLDEN
Box 182
Washington, CT 06793; 203-868-7063

We have already attempted to make an initial comment on the significance of the epic-making offer of Laurance Rockefeller to contribute what appears presently to be some $21 million to the endowment of a center devoted to better understanding of what today we would designate as human values.

This is an acknowledgement of the failure to achieve an adequate measure of needed human values, despite human sincerity and continued effort during the course of historical development.

Money values, so far as it has been developed today, no longer will suffice to satisfy the measurements which we recognize have become essential. A new potentiality lies before us.

13

ALBION R. BRYAN
Box F
Frenchtown, NJ 08825

We have printed the names of next-of-kin who have generously made contributions to Princeton in honor of members of the Class of 1913.

We have received a letter from Isaac B. Grainger '17 about our own Arthur Bluetenthal. We will print it in the next issue.

17

ICE GRAMMER, c/o Chemical Bank
30 Rockefeller Plaza, Ste. 6100
New York, NY 10112

Shortly after the death of Joe Shanley in Dec. 1969, his son Graham '50, with the support and participation of Joe's widow, Agnes, and many of our classmates, established the Joseph Sanford Shanley Class of 1917 Prize for Excellence in Architecture, which is awarded annually to an outstanding undergraduate in the School of Architecture. Joe had a distinguished career as an architect, gaining particular recognition for his churches. His abiding interest in Princeton was reflected in his having served as president of the Princeton Architectural Assn. and having designed the library at Colonial Club while serving on the club's board of governors. This year the prize of $4600 was awarded to J. Christoph Pansil '90. Graham, who lives in Geneva, Switzerland, returned in June for his 40th reunion and was able to be present at the Class Day ceremonies in the architectural school.

It is with sadness that we report the passing of the widow of Ted Keating. She had lived in Buffalo, NY for many years.

19

GEORGE B. LARKIN
14 Lake Forest Dr.
Charlottesville, VA 22901

As you know, Bradley C. Downing is our agent for Annual Giving. The total received for all Annual Giving this year was $18,605,030. Our Class of 1919 participation was eight gifts from our 17 members. It would be very nice to better this figure next year.

Hope you had a very good Thanksgiving.

20

SALLY S. McALPIN W'20
Box 670
Princeton, NJ 08542

To my joy one of my pleas for "tidbits" has borne fruit. And what fruit! A cheerful letter about his family, his Class of 1966, and the Class of his father, Russ MacGregor. Let him speak for himself: "Maybe it is habit, or maybe it's because Class of '20 reunions were some of the exotic events of my youth, but whenever RAW arrives I still look at the '20 Class notes column on my way to my own Class of '66."

"So I saw your plea for tidbits, and wondered if a report on the MacGregors would serve. (Russell was my dad, and my sister and I joined younger Dalls, Demarests, and Townleys as the youngest inhabitants of '20's later reunions). Anyhow: Jean MacGregor, my mother, is a little creaky (Ed: being Jean's age I take umbrage at the word creaky) but otherwise holding forth in fine style. Her address is Forest Lake Club, R.D. 1, Hawley, PA 18428.

"Jean Tweedy MacGregor, my sister (also known as Mrs. Rob Cole) is associate director of the Washington Center for Undergraduate Education, which she helped to launch. Based in Olympia, Wash., it's very successful premise is that colleges give better education when they trade faculty, students and curricula with other colleges on a regular basis.

"Jim MacGregor (that's me), lives in Sherman, Conn., and is managing partner of the Abernathy/MacGregor Group, a consulting company that spends a lot of time with corporations that don't want to get taken over. I'm still involved with Princeton as president of the board of trustees of the DAILY PRINCETONIAN. Nancy and I will interrupt our presence at the 25th next June to see our son Robert graduate from Lehigh Univ.

"If any members of '20 feel like stopping in at the 25th in June, please tell them they're invited. I'd love to say hello once more."

21

A. EDWARD CONOVER
331 Lower Doolington Rd., Apt. C-4
Newtown, PA 18940

Well, we did have two classmates at the H-P lunch: Tom Roberts with wife, Kay, and Ed Conover with daughter Joyce and her husband, John.

We had a visit from the only present member of '22, Joe Lewis, who, you might say, is a son-in-law of '21, since his older sister Mary is the widow of Russell Hopkinson and his younger sister Anne (deceased) was the wife of Ritz Perry.

Muriel Stephens, the widow of George Stephens, has moved from Washington D.C. to 111 Sheltered Care, Messiah Village, P.O. Box 2015, Mechanicsburg, PA 17055. During the 1960s the Stephens lived in the Princeton area, where he was very active in Class affairs. Muriel sends regards to all her old friends.

22

JACK REYNOLDS
1660 Park Ave.
Quakertown, PA 18951

We received a very nice note and photo from Hugh Richardson, forwarded by his son Hugh Jr. '53.

Hugh writes: "My mind is O.K. but my body is weak. My wife, Frances, and I celebrated our 64th wedding anniversary on Jan. 30, 1990. I had two best men when I got married. I needed two because each one, Jerry Jiranek and Stu Sperry, were both members of '22."

"Although I need help in getting around, I come to my office at least once a week. We have a small family commercial real estate business that my father, Hugh Richardson '94 started in 1896."

Pictured is Hugh, seated with his wife of 64 years, Frances, on his right, a granddaughter on her right, and ten of his 11 great-grandchildren, at Hugh's and Frances's 64th wedding anniversary.

Jim Scarff sent some correspondence from the recent dues mailing. A brief note from Joseph Morton in N.C.: "Leaving Oct. 6 on a trip to the Black Sea, Naples, Rome, Berlin, London, and home on the QE II." Please send us some follow up news about the trip and include an exotic photo.

Incidentally, we have received 34 responses from the mailings. Please keep the money and the information flowing, including photographs of yourself and your family.

23

LISEY GOOD
201 W. Evergreen Ave., Apt. 716
Philadelphia, PA 19118

Donald Griffin, close follower and staunch supporter of Princeton football, is planning to attend this season's final home game, the Princeton-Dartmouth showdown at Palmer Stadium. Cheering with him will be Class secretary Lisey Good. Griffin hopes that, due to throngs of football fans, it will take at least 20 minutes to file into the stadium. He says, "In the grand old days, it took at least thirty minutes to make your way through the stands!"

We are grateful to Gretchen M.B. Chaplin, who has given a generous gift to the Class in memory of her husband, the late J. Crossan Chaplin III.

We are looking for news of the Class! Any correspondence is welcomed.

We regret to report the death of Mrs. Malcolm L. Cole on July 29, 1990, and the death of Robert M. Ives on Sept. 13, 1990.

24

RICHARD H. MOORE
862 Prospect Ave.
Winnetka, IL 60093

Migs and Howard Blake, who live in Santa Barbara, were in Chicago recently to attend meetings of the Servant Society, and we had the pleasure of visiting with them briefly.

For them, this was like coming home, because Migs was born in Wilmette and Howard lived in Winnetka in the 1920s.

Howard is a Presbyterian clergyman. Although he has retired from active participation in the ministry, he is still a member of the Southern Calif. Presbytery. Now that he is retired he is able to devote his time to the Servant Society, which he helped to found about ten years ago. It is a nonprofit organization dedicated to improving the standards and morale of individuals and organizations so that they will be more concerned with honesty and Christian ideals. Howard studied theology at Princeton and Oxford. He was ordained in 1928.

We regret to report that John B. Miles died in Lynchburg on Aug. 28. Dave Trimble, who roomed with him during their four years at Princeton, writes that he called on him in Lynchburg a few days before he died. They were very close friends.

Charles E. Brewer Jr.'s present address is 1406 Pineland Ave., Bainbridge, Ga. We have notes from Bobbie Emeny, who has returned from Maine, and from Wally McClenaban, who lives in Barnstable, Mass.

25

JOHN L. K. JIMNEY
Box 123
Montchanin, DE 19710

The annual fall picnic, held in Jadwin Gym before the Harvard game, was attended by the Dills, Jennys, Kenmans, MacMillans, Ran Sawyer, and Estelle Ives, who graciously had made the arrangements. The game was played on a beautiful fall afternoon with the stadium about half full. We watched two unexciting teams play an error-filled game. Our Class had seats on the 50 yard line, including vacant ones, tickets for which were held by the Nielses, Steegers, and Hank Wilsons, who were "no shows." We missed them!

The Kennans recently returned from a visit to Moscow, and George had been in Washington the previous day to make the George Kennan Award of the Soviet-American Society to Secretary of State Baker '52.

The Class will recall that Harvey Phillips in July 1938 accompanied a Civil War veteran from Bradford to Gettysburg to attend the 75th and final convention of the Blue and the Gray veterans. The Bradford newspaper reports, "Some of the pictures shown in the PBS television series on the Civil War were taken by D. Harvey Phillips, who shot an eight m.m. film at the final reunion of Civil War veterans held in Gettysburg. Some two years ago Ken Burns (the producer of the series) borrowed Harvey's film. The segment appeared in the Gettysburg section of the series." Over the past several years Harvey has shown the film at the three sessions of the Princeton Alumni College on the Civil War conducted by Prof. James McPherson, as well as at several Class reunions. (Editor's Note: Please see a related story in this section.)

Bill Sherrerd's son, Jay '52, has been elected a ten-year charter trustee of the University.

26

ROBERT WOHLFORTH
57 Rockwell Rd.
Ridgefield, CT 06877

The fall mini-reunion at beautiful Longwood Gardens near Wilmington, Del., was enjoyed by 15 Classmates and associate members, who gathered for two evening dinners at the Hotel duPont and for tours of the Brandywine and Winterthur Museums on the weekend of Oct. 12-14. Those attending were Madge and Ted Beck, Donna and Frank Dana, Patty and Bill Nevlus, Della Sue and Jim Newman, Assoc. Mbr. Esther Off, Elizabeth and Bill Siemon, Mary and Woos Supplee, and Glen Perry and son Chris '61.

By the time you read this Buzz Hallock will be settled in Essex Meadows, a retirement community in Essex, Conn. (06426), with a nine-hole golf course and healthcare facilities at his door. His number is 122 and his phone 203-767-7261.

From the snowy slopes of upper New England comes an early-season report from the ski-meister of 1926, Arch Winsten: "Now that I've achieved the advanced age of 86, the reduction of heart, eyes, legs, ears, hair, energy, memory, and brains leaves me with but record longevity... But my grandson runs a four-minute mile!"

Our treasurer, Bob Ward, reports that his first dues letter this year to all Classmates and associate members (for PAW, etc.), has brought only about a 50% response, so he has a second letter in the mail.

A laconic, unsigned note from Helen and Mac MacMurray, who spend each fall roaming Western Penn. high school football-land, hoping to encourter a triple-threat senior with astronomical S.A.T.s who can't wait to go to college in N.J.

Assoc. Mbr. Irene Booth, widow of Cec Booth, writes that a grandson in the U.S. Navy, exact whereabouts unknown, is believed to be in the Persian Gulf on active duty.

27

NELSON R. BURN
36 Lexington Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06119

Lam Clifford writes that Bill Van Alstyne recovered from his leg operation at Wolcott Hall in Torrington, Conn. Jess Macfarlane says that Lam sounds very well, and has been joined by Jim and Marian Crawford at Sherwood Oaks, a retirement home at 100 Norman Dr., Mars, PA 16046.

The classmates are more or less aware of Don Kemmerer's trips to Antarctica. An account of his most recent venture has been deposited in the Class archives at Princeton. In a recent letter Joe Bryan wrote a handsome tribute to Bill Spackman for his editing of the Nassau Lit and his novelistic portraits of classmates. "He was certainly," says Joe, "one of the most brilliant members of our Class."

A cheerful note from spunky Jack Sands says that he is steadily recovering from his back operation, and on a recent Sunday made it to church. His doctor says that he will win his bout with arthritis. Another cheerful note, from Ted Bachman, says that President Jim Westfall has a friend in the Annual Giving office—a lovely young lady who was seen with him at the Brown football game. Ted adds that he and wife, Marie, are settled in their retirement home at Spring House Estates, Spring House, Penn.—"getting to like it very much and meeting a lot of new people."

The secretary has recovered from his cataract operation, drives the car on errands, and still likes being 1927's scribe and servant.

We have a memorial in this issue.

28

R. PARK JOHNSON
Box 28
Penney Farms, FL 32079; 904-284-8698

The Aug. 27 issue of SPORTS ILLUSTRATED had an article by Curry Kirkpatrick about the German tennis champion, Boris Becker. There is a brief quote about Becker from the director of tour services of the Assn. of Tennis Professionals (A.T.P.), Weller Evans. The headquarters of the A.T.P. is at Ponte Vedra, Fla., near Jacksonville, known also for its championship golf courses, not far from Penney Farms, where the '28 Class secretary lives.

I telephoned the A.T.P. and had a very interesting conversation with Weller '76, son of our Moonte Evans, who died in 1980. Those who attended our 50th reunion will recall that the 1928 banner was carried in the P-rade by sons of Moonie Evans and Win Rutherford. Weller Jr. has worked for the A.T.P. for ten years. He was married two years ago, and spends a lot of time "on the road" (he was in Tokyo when I first telephoned a couple of weeks ago). He lived until recently in Southern Calif., but now spends more time in the central office, so he moved to Ponte Vedra this past May.

He was interviewed about Becker when at the French Open, and went from there to Wimbledon. It was less than a year after Moonie's death that Weller Jr. started working for A.T.P., and he knows that his father, who was so actively involved with tennis affairs through the years, would be greatly interested in all his activities now.

The sad word has come of a tragic automobile accident in Maryland on Oct. 18, which caused the death of Rieman McIntosh and Kathleen Nes, widow of Charlie Nes. They were riding in a car hit by a drunken driver. Mrs. Mayo McIntosh survived. David Nes '39, Charlie's brother, communicated this by telephone. We have memorials in this issue.

29

LOUIS F. KEMP
12 Winthrop Rd.
Guilford, CT 06437; 203-453-4646

Enjoying an ideal day for the Harvard game lunch were Sam Beasley and his guest, Mrs. Moore, Lou Kemp with his granddaughter, Kaaren Kemp '90 and Peter Espenshade '90, Doris and Spence Marsh, and Elaine and Pres. Harvey Mole, with their son and daughter. The Marshes thoughtfully extended hospitality to your scribe in their lovely Madison home, saving him from battling traffic.

From my vantage point in the stadium, I had a splendid opportunity to observe the antics of the tiger mascot during the game. A hard-working tiger that beguiled and fascinated the small fry with his grimaces, hugs, shrugs, and climactically carrying off squealing young ladies to his jungle lair (not literally!), creating untold goodwill for Princeton.

Am indebted to Jack Fanshawe for the following story from one of his irreverent friends. "The president of a small, struggling Kentucky college in the racing area received an offer of a one-million-dollar endowment from Mr. V. Z. Smith, providing the college would award an honorary doctorate to his horse, Conquest, who had made him wealthy and famous. The president said that such an unusual request would have to be referred to the board of directors. Two days later he called Mr. Smith, accepted the needed funds, and agreed to the terms saying, 'After all, this will be the first time an honorary degree has been conferred on an entire horse.'"

30

HUBERT A. "RED" SCHNEIDER
8008 Westover Rd.
Bethesda, MD 20814

Although the weather for the Harvard game was picture perfect, only a handful of 1930s appeared at the pre-game luncheon in Jadwin Gym. They included Betty and Lou Klauder, Evelyn and Jack Myers, Merrill Sheppard, Virginia and Don Sperry, and Red Schneider. Seen at the game were Anita and Dave McMullin, Wally Ruchert, and Bill Trimble. Wally and Bill had been guests of President Shapiro at a luncheon for Annual Giving fundraisers. After the game, Wally, along with Associates Dorothy Goodrich and Helen Webb, drove down to the Eastern Shore and spent a long weekend with Red Schneider at his waterfront home. Wally told of his experiences on a two-week bicycle tour of the Chateau country in France in early Oct. as part of an Elder Hostel group. The usual stint was 25 miles a day, and Wally, although the oldest member of the group, handled it with ease.

Allen Mills writes that he is still trying to shoot his age at golf but misses by a few shots. How many in our Class have achieved that goal? Don't be modest. Drop us a line. Marietta and Stan Garber enjoyed a five-day cruise on the MISSISSIPPI QUEEN in late July, followed by a cruise to Alaska and a tour of the Canadian Rockies in Aug.

Lyt Purnell has been battling with Bell's Palsy for over six months but hopes the end is in sight.

Gibby Kane's daughter, Meredith, writes that Gibby is in a retirement home and that she is handling all his correspondence. She sees him regularly and reports that it gets harder for him to get any fishing done from his wheelchair.

With sadness we report the death of Harold Jones in Richmond on Sept. 9, 1990. Also the death of Associate Kitty Kirkpatrick in Point Pleasant, N.J. on Aug. 29, 1990.

31

HUGH T. KERN
15-01-U Meadow Lakes
Hightstown, NJ 08520; 609-448-4100

Jadwin Gym resounded with happy voices greeting friends and families prior to the Harvard game, Oct. 20. Our Class had one of the biggest groups, and everyone had a fun time, before the game, that is. The roll-call: Mike Bosak with Ruth Freidenburg; Marilyn and Trump Bradley; Jean Cootes; Phoebe and Bill Davis; Frank Froment with Marion Niles; Nancy and Al Genung; Brice Hereford with Ginny Cluett; Dolly Humpbrey; Greta and Harry Hurd with Marion and Randy Linthurst; Meek Keen; Tim Kerr; Punch and Dave Kretler; George McKee; Charlie Miner with Amy, Jim, Lisa Fleming, and Bridgett Mangan; Cope Morton with Ginny Collier, Sue Hanson, and Palmer Fletcher; Grace and Whitie Mountain; Bill Newman; Francine and Pen Reed.

As they say, it wasn't raining when Noah built the ark, so plan ahead and respond, if you haven't already, to letters from Arthur Crocker, Al Genung, Pen Reed, and Bill Newman. And plan on our midwinter co-ed luncheon at the Princeton Club of New York, Jan. 16, 1991—a great way to begin our 60th anniversary year.

It is always good to hear from our associate members. Louise Burt (Freddie died 1975) has trouble keeping track of nine grandchildren and several great-grands scattered across the country. As for the little ones, there's a jewelry shop in Queens that advertises—"Ear Piercing Babies Our Speciality."

We regret to report the deaths of Frances Meeks, Shippy Sagendorph, Barbara Toy, Weatherly Reimund, and Ione Uiblein.

32

MATLAND A. EDEY
Seven Gates Farm
Vineyard Haven, MA 02568

IDZIES AND ODDZIES trickling in on the dues envelope flaps: Helen and Tom Fernley have abandoned St. Croix and have settled into a retirement community at Vicar's landing, Vero Beach, Fla. They think it's great, and would welcome visitors from '32. The welcome mat is also out at Naples, Fla., where the Maury Wauds winter. Maury has had a knee replacement, but is back on the golf course—not yet up to the form he displayed when he was captain of the golf team at college, but headed in the right direction. Dick Dana has just started another term teaching acting at Manchester Community College in Hartford, Conn. Eric Kocher, having completed his book, THE MAKING AND UNMAKING OF A FOREIGN SERVICE OFFICER, is off on another project involving Navajo, Hopi, and Yana Indians in Ariz. and N.M. Hugh Henry thought Treasurer Ty Kennedy's dues letter was such a powerful tear jerker that he enlarged his check. (Others with sensitive hearts please follow Hugh's lead.) Buzz Roberts reports that Fran Hart, after spending a medically miserable spring and summer, has made a vast improvement in his health and outlook. Finally, from Bill Lipp, that he is well, that he is no longer actively practicing medicine, and that he is a year older. Who isn't?

An interesting and thought-provoking Alumni College, devoted to literature and history, was held on the island of Martha's Vineyard over the weekend of Oct. 6. Virginia and DeWitt Stern attended, and the following Monday spent lunch and the afternoon with this writer. A most rewarding visit.

33

ARTHUR MOODY
600 E. Cathedral Rd., Apt. A314
Philadelphia, PA 19128

The Harvard game brought out a large party of classmates, wives, widows, families, and friends on a beautiful day. The disappointment at the loss of a close and exciting, if sloppy, game was overshadowed by the pleasure of the festivities. Present were Steve Ailes, Ceil and Swat Brown, Peg and Bill

Happy 100th, Li'l Arthur!

ARTHUR CORT HOLDEN '12, Princeton's oldest returning alumnus at the last four Reunions, celebrated his one hundredth birthday on November 29. Always active in Princeton alumni affairs, Holden's primary career interests have been architecture and public planning.

A native New Yorker, he attended Collegiate School and at Princeton was a member of Cottage Club. After graduating with a Litt. B. in art and archaeology, Holden went on to Columbia, where he received a bachelor's degree in architecture and a master's in economics. He then joined the architectural firm McKim, Mead & White; in 1920 he formed his own firm, Arthur C. Holden & Associates. He is a fellow of the American Institute of Architects, and has served as president of its New York chapter.

Holden leading 1990 Reunions.

PHOTO BY NUALA O'CONNOR

Dick Knott. But he soon became known for his interest in urban planning and low-income housing, and was instrumental in drafting the legislation that created the federal and city housing authorities. He also served as a member of the New York City mayor's committees on real property investment and city planning, the Welfare Council, and the Real Estate Board of New York. He was a consulting architect to the New York Board of Housing and served as chairman of the executive board of the New York Urban League.

Holden is the author of several books on architecture, including the classic Primer on Housing; Brick Architecture of the Colonial Period in Maryland-Virginia; Gateways and Doorways of Charleston, South Carolina; and Settlement Idea. His books on other topics include Money in Motion: The Social Function of Banking, Sonnets for My City: An Essay on the Kinship of Art and Finance, and At the Roots of the Urban Crisis.

Holden married Miriam Young on February 10, 1917. She became a nationally known activist for the rights of women and minorities. During her lifetime, she amassed a collection of six thousand volumes on women's history, literature, and suffrage. After her death in 1977, this collection became the Holden Collection of Women's Literature, in Firestone Library. The bequest arrived in time for the tenth anniversary of coeducation at Princeton, in 1979. The Holdens had four children, including the late Edwin Arthur Holden '41.

Holden received the Alumni Council's alumni service award at Reunions in 1980 for his work as a "fiercely independent, fiercely public-minded . . . pioneer in the field of public housing and city planning." He has served twice as the president of his class and is currently active as class president and secretary.

—Nuala O'Connor '89

Cahn, Julie and Paul Campbell, Bettie and Charlie Davis (Bettie watched the game from their car, parked in the end zone), Margie and Burt Eiberington, Barbara and Bill Heuson, Hildy Hellerston, Connie and Ed Holschub, Mary Liz and John Kemmerer, Rita and Dave Ludlum, Maeve and Curly Marsb, Becky and Art Moody, Elsie and Ray Paul, Yvonne and Andy Smith, Sedge Snedeker, Lenchen and Frank Townend, and Sheila Wright. The Townends had a large family contingent, including Steve '71 and Morgaen Donaldson '94. The Moodys had as guests Hugh and Winkie Livengood, and Bruce and Gus Leighton. Hildy Hellerston told of her trip to Istanbul, the Black Sea, and the Danube, expressing horror at the miserable condition of Romania, but delight at everything else. Sheila Wright let us know of the memorial service for Bill, to be held in the Chapel the following Sat., Oct. 27. This indeed came off as scheduled, conducted by Dean (emeritus) Gordon, and attended by Davis, Moody, the Ludlums, and the Andy Smiths.

The Thursday luncheons at the Nassau Club continue to be well attended. Besides the locals, Jack Pyle, Holschub, and Paul often come. Ernie Chamberlin disappears in the winter to Antigua. Recently the club abandoned its long-time males-only policy. With nine classmates meeting in the Gun Room and nine wives and widows meeting in the dining room on Oct. 25, a vote was taken about the future. The men voted to leave it to the women. The women voted to meet separately. This, of course, does not affect the Christmas party, scheduled for Dec. 20.

Sorry to report three deaths: Bill Buffum, May 28; Harry Tipper, June 6; and Jack Kerram, Sept. 10.

34

RALPH K. FITCH
4347 Province Line Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Alex Keer, our events chairman (shown at Skytop in Oct.), was honored at a Class meeting before the Harvard game with a surprise presentation by President Bayard Roberts of a Princeton rocking chair in recognition, as Gordy Brown read from a framed citation, "of his steadfast loyalty and service to the Class" for the many Class gatherings he has organized and managed with "skill and energy."

Present for the meeting and/or the lunch following and/or the game and/or the Baleses' post-game party were: Jeannie and Jack Bales, Lonnie and Gordy Brown, Jeanne and Charlie Classen, Barbara and Frank Constantine, Hazel and Bill Eisenbart, Adra and Ken Fairman, Louisa and Bill Foulke, Mary Frances (the widow of Bill) Garrison, Flora and Bill Ghriskey, Gloria and Doug Hahn, Ruth and Tom Hamilton, Dan Hinman, Bob Holton, Mary and Ralph Hubbard, Greta and Stan Ivins, Janet and Mal Johnson, Alex Keer, Sally and Art Lane, Betty and Ernie May, Addie and Ralph Ritchie, Bill Robbins, Weasel and Bayard Roberts, Lank Siebert, Gladys (the widow of Jack) Smithies, Margie and Frank Van Dusen, Tony and Moose Weeks, and Marion and Rus Wood.

Mary and Eric Braun celebrated their 55th wedding anniversary in Oct. with an East Coast tour.

Frank and Dr. Andy Parker, whose 50th anniversary was last month, celebrated early in Lewiston, Penn., their hometown, before departing for their usual winter stay in Florida. "We both love golf," Andy wrote not long ago, "and take our golf bags wherever we go."

Annual Giving has started. Go, '34!

35

JOSEPH C. HAZEN JR.
94 Essex Rd.
Summit, NJ 07901

MOVES. Jack McClean, now known as "Mickey," has moved from Kingston, N.Y., to a life-care retirement community in Essex, Conn. A retired advertising executive, Mickey is a collector of fine prints, and his apartment looks much like an art museum. He suffered the loss of his wife in 1982 and a paralyzing stroke in 1985, but, thanks to excellent therapy, is now quite mobile and as bright as ever. Margaret and Steve Smith have become citizens of Wyoming, living in the town of Banner, near the Bozeman Trail, from early May until early November. When not in "God's Country," they live in Cedar Rapids, Ia. Steve has only one complaint: "Everything is fine except for my terminal old age." Marion and Jim Cowan have bought a new house amid 36 holes of golf in Gulf Breeze, Fla. "The name of the place is 'Tiger Point,' and that's what sold me." Charlotte and Bob Johnston have moved into a retirement community in Millbrook, N.Y., some 75 miles north of the big city. "But we will continue summering in our beach house in East Hampton Town on Long Island." After five years in N.C., Amanda and Wes O'Neill have moved back north to a retirement community in Falmouth, Me., near Portland. They know Maine well—Wes once taught French language and literature at the Univ. of Maine. Bob Whaley has bought a second home with tennis court in Alamos, Mexico, "a charming old colonial town with great winter climate," where he plans to live six to nine months of the year. His home base is Creston, Calif.

HEALTH NOTES. Don Kidd, a retired banker of Needham, Mass., reports worsening arthritis and a cancerous spot on his pancreas and sighs, "So much for the golden years." On the other hand, White Sutton of Laguna Hills, Calif., boasts, "My cholesterol count is 116. Can anybody beat that?"

IN MEMORIAM. James N. Robertson of West Chester, Penn. May 24, 1913–Oct. 3, 1990.

36

JAMES Q. BENJEN
24 Aylesbury Cir., Windermere
Madison, CT 06443

This photo was taken last Dec. in Santa Monica, Calif., showing Class V.P. John Paul Jones, President Paul Hancock, and Ted Ashton, long-time resident of L.A.

Bill Scheide writes, "I recently achieved new heights of venerability. My step-daughter acquired a 70-year-old husband who was a great-grandfather. She says, 'I am a step-great-grandmother.' And her husband, in introducing me to a friend of his, said to the friend, 'I want you to meet my father-in-law.' I would like to ask: how many classmates have been introduced as the father-in-law of a great-grandfather? Given two 'steps,' as I have been, one can dream of great, great-grandfatherhood. Most of mine died in the 1840s!"

Your secretary recently phoned his old friend Bill Morris, now living in Pittsford, N.Y., near his hometown of Rochester. He seemed cheerful, although is somewhat restricted in travel due to recent strokes. Bill's grandson Charlie Morris '92 and son Tom Morris '63, exec. director of the Cleveland Orchestra, continue the family line at Princeton. Bill and Eleanor were recently visited by Harry Crawford and Carter. Bill also reports that George Hawks recently returned from a great trip to Alaska.

Can you top these two items? Benn Jesser last Aug. had his 31st grandchild (including step-grandchildren). Dick Williams is now a great-grandfather who plays tennis four times weekly!

We regret to report the death Oct. 10, 1990, of Lefferts Strebelg.

37

STANDISH F. MEDINA
250 Broadway, Rm. 2104
New York, NY 10007

By official proclamation, Mayor Daley of Chicago named July 25, 1990, as Alan R. Johnston Day, in recognition of his able and dedicated work in furtherance of environmental protection of Lake Michigan (for sailing of cup yachts, naturally). He also was the recipient of an award from Lake Michigan Federation in the form of a handsome half-plaque of a 12-meter. Johnny Smyth adds, "Alan responded with a fine presence and unexpected (by me) eloquence." Lawyers never have good public relations.

Other accomplishments. As the Trenton News headlined the story, Taplin tapped to head Friends of the Institute for Advanced Study. Charlie Test, now prof. of medicine emeritus at the Indiana Univ. School of Medicine. After finishing discount malls in Fort Lauderdale and in Chicago, two million square feet each, Bob Furman retired to tennis, though he says the court seems smaller, the net higher, and he has to call more of his opponents' near shots out than he used to. Andy Duany's son Douglas '75 should take note of the architecture, not the tennis, as he just graduated with a master's degree in architecture from the Harvard School of Design, perhaps to go into partnership next year with his new wife, Kristin, who won't graduate similarly till next June. Howie Quinn still working part time as a real estate broker, but still living in the house he was born in (surpassing Barnouw's occupation of Claremont Ave., N.Y.C.). Ben Poole ran 5:27:26 in the full-length Berlin marathon Sept. 30, with 24,000 entrants. You can order Rod Davison's new ESSAYS IN OTTOMAN AND TURKISH HISTORY, 1774-1923, from the Univ. of Texas Press, 279 pages. He just completed 50 years of university teaching, matched by Fred Stichel's 50 years of legal practice, but, being a sucker, now running the Class of 1940 Columbia Law School Fund.

38

WILLIAM P. TAMM
Box 167
Moran, WY 83013; 307-543-2396

The proud father pictured is Paul DuVivier dancing with his daughter Anne on the occasion of her marriage to Bernard Green last fall.

We have another undergraduate grandson, William M. Sloan III '94, the son of our Bills son, William Jr. '64. But the leader in this category is Jim White, whose grandson Goodlow White entered this fall, joining Marjorie '92 and James H. IV '93. All are offspring of Jim's son, James III '64.

Jim has sent us an update from the Birmingham News on Lt. Bobby Meyer, who was lost over the Coral Sea in his B-17 bomber Apr. 25, 1942, while on combat patrol. Wreckage of the plane was discovered in New Guinea in 1986, but it has not been possible to identify his remains among those of his seven crew members.

His brother John ("Jason") '39, now deceased, served as a fighter pilot in Burma. He established a scholarship fund at Princeton in Bobby's memory, which helps up to nine undergraduates each year. The family has also dedicated a chapel in the Episcopal Church of the Advent in Birmingham in his memory. A foundation named after him has supplied funds for a planetarium built at Birmingham-Southern College in 1964.

Marge and Bailey Cowan have decided (sob!) to forsake the sea and sell their boat which they have sailed English and Scottish waters for 32 years. They say this will let them think of other things to do, such as join the Class trip to Spain.

Binx Luibi avers that the echoes of the step-sing at our 50th still ring in his ears, otherwise all systems are go!

39

RICHARD R. UHL
12 Charlotte Ct.
Briarcliff Manor, NY 10510

In the fall of 1981 a young woman from mainland China, Yueping Sun, came to Princeton on a Herbert Dupuy Merrick scholarship. Throughout the next four years she could often be seen at our Class gatherings in Princeton. This fall on Oct. 7, Yueping was married in the garden at Prospect House. Among the guests were the Maxwells, Thompsons and Wynnes. The gentlemen posed with the bride. For the record, our Merrick Scholar Yueping went on to earn her law degree at Columbia and is now an associate at White & Case in New York. We wish her and her husband David Leebron happiness and long life.

Doris and Art Kallop missed our 51st because another reunion, a family reunion in England, took precedence. They, two sons, and five grandchildren rented cottages on a Cotswold estate. One son, arriving a day late, found the way down the lane to the cottages marked for him by balloons—orange and black, of course.

Some of us are still in harness. El Salter got back this summer from India where he had been working as an international engineering consultant. And Nat Boynton, though officially retired, writes a baseball column which covers the entire minor league baseball scene. His column in the Delmar, N.Y., SPOTLIGHT was named best sports column in the 1989 Better Newspaper Contest sponsored by the N.Y. Press Assn.

40 BENJAMIN FULLER
6119 Vernon Terr.
Alexandria, VA 22307; 703-329-1961

Since distance and small numbers tend to limit news of classmates residing on the West Coast, it is a delight to be able to come up with a report on several of them. For starters, we feature Corona Del Mar, Calif. resident Bob Fox with his sons Bob and Greg, and daughter Kim. After 40 years in the brokerage business, Foxie is about to haul down the flag and devote time to community service and his interests in travel, fly fishing, golf, and gardening. Adds Foxie, "No grandchildren yet but hope springs eternal."

Other Calif. classmates noted on the circuit are retired engineer Charlie Waugh from Tarzana, the still-active and energetic Pasadena lawyer Dave Robinson, and Tom Kennedy, semi-retired entrepreneur from Saratoga. All with their respective wives participated colorfully and enthusiastically in the most enjoyable and successful Aug./Sept. Class Danube River Adventure. Although not from the West Coast, another "distant" 1940 couple on the Adventure were Beverly and geology consultant DeWitt Van Siclen from Bellaire, Tex.

Please don't overlook Treasurer George Cadgene's recent Class dues and scholarship notice. He would appreciate a prompt and generous response. Don't let him down. Many thanks.

May you all have a very Merry Christmas and best wishes for the New Year.

41 BILL WILSON
Box 1420
Bridgehampton, NY 11932; 516-537-2458

The annual ritual of the Big Three game at home this Oct. 20 brought the following loyalists to a sunny, if thinly populated, Palmer Stadium: Muff and Jim Adams, Fred Bruenner, Betty and Clipper Cleaver, Cathy and Don Cleaves, Fran and Sam Dorrance, Bill Elfers, Polly and The Hon. Ed Finch, Jean

Memories of the Blue and Gray

PRINCETONIANS WATCHING The Civil War, a recent documentary on PBS, may have been surprised to catch a glimpse of D. Harvey Phillips '25's own camera work. In one program of the multipart miniseries, writer-director Ken Burns used a short segment of an eight-millimeter film Phillips shot at the seventy-fifth reunion of veterans of the Battle of Gettysburg.

Phillips attended the reunion in 1938 on the spur of the moment, accompanying a fellow resident of his hometown, Bradford, Pennsylvania, who was a Gettysburg veteran. Three thousand Union and Confederate veterans gathered over three days to commemorate the anniversary of one of the war's pivotal battles. During the reunion, President Roosevelt dedicated an eternal flame as a memorial to peace. In sharp contrast, General George S. Patton led a review of the latest tanks and military hardware. ("No one had heard of him then," says Phillips.)

Since The Civil War established Phillips as a filmmaker, the Gettysburg National Trust and the Philadelphia Civil War Commission have requested copies of the film, which is one of the few motion-picture recordings of the reunion that survives. The footage is of special interest because it has close-up shots of veterans' faces. But before the segment was shown on national TV, several hundred Princetonians had seen it during alumni colleges on the Civil War (in Charleston, Natchez, and Chattanooga). All three colleges were directed by James M. McPherson, the Edwards Professor of American History and author of the Pulitzer Prize-winning Battle Cry of Freedom.

Phillips, who spent his career in the oil business in Bradford, is active in his community and in Princeton alumni affairs. He is especially proud of Bradford's newest Princetonian, Meghan M. Mitchell '94, who was the valedictorian at Bradford Area High School and is an outstanding diver and runner. Meghan continues a Bradford-Princeton connection that dates back to the Class of 1874.

Phillips, who is "proud to contribute just a little bit" to Civil War scholarship, says, "I just filmed the things I wanted to see—soldiers greeting each other, reuniting . . . we Princetonians are great reuners, you know."

—Nuala O'Connor '89

Harvey Phillips '25

PHOTO COURTESY OF THE ALUMNI COUNCIL

Gorman, Elaine and Jim Herz (married just this June), Kay and Bob Jackson with their son Dick, Mae and Bob Leibowitz, Isobel and Bob McCullam, Pat and Hart Moore, Elizabeth and Bill Pettit, Shel Pitney, Barbara and Ted Price, Peggy and "C.H." Robinson, Gloria and John T. Scott, Don Skidmore, Pat and Carrington Stevens, Bob Tate and his son Randy, Yvonne and Lynn Tipson, and Peggy Wilson with her husband Bill. The Lou Pyles and the Bob Minors were glimpsed at a distance. Many of the above attended our pre-game party in the gym, and many went on after Princeton's distressing 23-20 Harvard loss to consolation cocktails in the Tipsons' elegant apartment at 68 Lovers Lane.

Walt Pinkard, who has four married sons and nine grandchildren, is semi-retired from real estate and devotes most of his time to his racing stable in Maryland. Dr. Fritz Haffner writes from Cincinnati that he and Priscilla will be reunion "first timers" at our 50th come June. Harry Holland says he is enjoying "The Sequoias," a retirement community in Portola Valley, Calif. Ed Dulcan's daughter Beth presented the family with 8½-lb. Jeremy James on, "appropriately," Labor Day. Phil Christian attended a Princeton Alumni College in Red Lodge, Mt., with no '41ers there but four from '40. There is happy news from St. Clairsville, Oh., that Gordon Kinder was married in late May of this year to Suzanne Wemple, a professor of medieval history at Barnard College. Suzanne's field of interest is female monasteries in the dark ages.

We note with sorrow that Bill Bittel died on Sept. 9, 1990.

42 ARMSTRONG HUNTER
R.R. 1, Box 250, Perkinsville, VT 05151
802-263-5361; FAX 802-263-9263

Dave and Peggy Dennison were in Australia recently, Peggy with her Forever Young tap-dancers (their appearance brought down the house everywhere, Dave says) and Dave as mayor of Carefree, Ariz., for ceremonial functions (exchanging neckties with the mayor of Cairns, for example) and both to visit daughter and grandchildren.

Question asked occasionally, here as Ace Bigelow (N.C.) put it: "Are donations to the 50th Reunion Fund donations, or are they advance payments that may be returned if persons can't attend? Treasurer

Bob Lowry's answer, here edited a bit: "The fund is intended to make it possible for all Class members desirous of doing so to attend the 50th on a no-fee basis. Because payments to the fund are not earmarked as a prepayment of reunion fees they are non-refundable. This feature, however, enables them to qualify as tax deductible contributions."

Dick and Cbloef Stifel sent this photo (original in full color) of the President greeting Bill and Joan Matthews when, at his invitation, reaffirmed by his secretary, they visited the Oval Office for a chat early in Aug. PAW readers not members of '42 may be unaware of the Matthews' longtime friendship with George and Barbara Bush; let all be assured this does not happen to just anyone who may be visiting Washington from San Francisco.

We have memorials in this issue.

43

JACK LAPLIN
10 Vardon Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06117; 203-523-8929

In the recent Annual Giving campaign just concluded, the Class of 1943, under the able leadership of George Small, put up some better-than-average numbers in turning in $84,250 to the overall $18 million-plus effort. While the contribution of all alumni topped out at 55% of the total numbers, 1943, with 280 out of 445 potential donors, wound up with almost 63%. In individual regions, Herb Jones of W.V. and Newt Allen of Memphis, Tenn., headed up their respective drives.

In Sept. we received a letter from Wini Rider Young, widow of our late classmate Paul Rider. It contained the news that Paul Rider IV was born to Anne and Charles Winston Rider on July 31 in Markham, Ontario. For the record he's Paul's grandson, and the infant's father's godfather was our Johnny Markham. Is that one for Ripley, or what? On the downside of Wini's letter, she went on to say that she lost her great second husband, Chet Young, to cancer after only a year and a half of marriage. She plans on remaining at Sawgrass in Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., where, she says, "Our friends have been unbelievably wonderful."

Randy Myer writes: "Spent two weeks sailing the Dalmatian coast with John Brown. Jim Davis was also scheduled to be there, but chickened out because of the Gulf Crisis. Otherwise, I'd send you a photo in our reunion shirts."

Henry Ubl and wife Nancy are enjoying their retirement more and more. "I'm concentrating on golf game now," confides the former practicing physician, "after having completed several writing projects and a research project at the Medical School. I'll teach again next year."

Late last year, Bob Bamman enjoyed dinner with Gene Taylor in Seattle. Gene and the missus are no longer on the farm with their horses, but enjoying a beautiful home "in the posh part of Seattle."

44

HERVEY S. STOCKMAN
1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

Class luncheon Thurs., Dec. 6, 12-2 P.M. at the Philadelphia Club—N.W. corner of 13th and Walnut St., Phila. Come for some pre-Yuletide conviviality. Guests, members of other classes, especially sons and daughters of Nassau are more than welcome.

New Orleans mini reunion—April 4-7, 1991. John Ware reports 22 classmates will, 38 might, plus three widows. (Of the 60 wills and mights, 42 would bring wives.) There will be a late fall mailing to all the above from John and Brison Wood with brochures, room costs, etc. In Feb. there will be another letter with program asking for commitment to beat a March 2 deadline for room reservations.

Class Treasury. As of Sept. 21 about 25% of our dues payments were in, a fair start. The voluntary fund for our 50th is a tad over $2800 with about all of it in C.D.s. Our treasury is in good shape with assets increasing about $2,000 in fiscal 1989-90. For '90-'91 we'll keep our dues at $30.

Dues News. Jack (John A.) Myers delightfully proves that romance is not dead and yes, you can go back. Jack married an old sweetheart, Betty Medkiff (Morris) last Jan. 3 in Honolulu; a gal he had met there in WWII. He retired from 40 years of teaching English in June 1988. His last post was at Belmont Hill School, Belmont, Mass. Yes, you're right; he bronzes his bod in Honolulu. Bill Archibold knew a summer of abdominal surgery and house building, severely limiting his golf. With a little bit of luck he'll have sold the old house and moved into the new one in the country, some 30 miles north of Toronto. Sayre Rodman, who has hiked, climbed, and poked about in distant wildernesses, reports in with these words from six weeks of business in Japan, "It's fascinating to share the decision-making with a bunch of good engineers and see how smoothly they decide among the conventional ideas. They're more comfortable than I expected with ideas out in left field, also."

45

WARREN W. EMMOTT
U.S. Courthouse, 915 Lafayette Blvd.
Bridgeport, CT 06604

Remember the Naples reunion last March? Shep Kimberly's GRACEFUL was very much in evidence and enjoyed by all, but this photo shows Captain Bill Lambert's vessel. Smiling for the camera are (l-r) Charlie Towers, Johnnie Lamberton, Gigi Stewart, Harry Lamberton, Evelyn Lambert, the '45 Tiger (not to be confused with Hobbes) Captain Bill, Beezie Towers, Stew Stewart, and Janey and Dave Acaster. More pics subsequently from that memorable reunion.

Herewith verbatim a letter from Mike Seymour, which suggests an appropriate Christmas gift:

"For me the high point of our 45th reunion last June was Rocky King's delightful recital of jokes and songs on Thurs. night following dinner. I recently purchased two of Rocky's cassette tapes, thinking I would show some appreciation for his Reunions appearance. Last weekend, I played the tapes while driving home from a weekend in the country. I literally could not stop laughing, and repeatedly thanked my lucky stars that I had bought the tapes. Norman Cousins discovered a few years ago that daily doses of laughter help to cure cancer. It also helps to cheer old Tigers. I prescribe sending a check for $22.50 for Rocky's two latest tapes to: Rock King, P.O. Box 417, West Dennis, MA 02670. Classmates will be well rewarded with several good doses of laughter."

Since we missed wishing all a good Thanksgiving in the last column, this provides an opportunity to wish everyone happy holidays for the balance of the fast-expiring year.

46

ROBERT CAMPBELL JR.
Investors Security Services
636 Morris Tpk., Short Hills, NJ 07078

Thirteen years ago with $119 in unused contributions to a campaign for election to the Quaker Valley School Board, Dave Nimick has built a charitable trust of $325,000. Incentives for excellence in the educational system is a current theme of many. This fund is an example of what can be done. It recognizes in cash rewards both teachers and students for outstanding achievements. One could relate this to our own 1946 Memorial Fund, which, through the gifts of classmates and well-wishers, has grown to the level of $27,000. Dave has thus provided us with a fine example of how, drawing together, we can make a greater impact than we can as individuals. Burr Fisher (542 Snowden La., Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-2242) can answer any questions about the '46 Memorial Fund.

The Harvard game on a sunny Oct. afternoon was the setting for a '46 mini-reunion. While the game itself lacked something in its final score, over 20 of our faithful, along with brides and children, were in attendance.

Burr Fisher tells me that, in addition to those at all the Class dinner, he also saw Hugh MacRae, Arnie Berlin, Ed Knetzger, and Jim Buchanan at the game. Those attending the dinner included Charlie Brown, Dick Charlesworth, Dave Colt, Ralph Del Deo, George DeVoe, Bob Donovan, Hal Erdman, Burr Fisher, Stan Gillespie, Carroll Howe, Bill Iz, Bob Lebatr, Pete Smith, Paul Spagnoli, and Art Sullivan. In addition, two of our scholars were there: Marcella Allen '92 and Charles Forcey '91, whose dad was Class of '47.

Marcella Allen, our first memorial scholar, told us she had a fine 1989-90 and has entered her junior year with a pre-med basket of classes: chemistry, biology, physics, etc. She is working in McCosh Infirmary, took an advanced first aid class, and is serving on an advisory board to assess student health needs. In 1991 she hopes to work in the emergency room of the Princeton Hospital. A dedicated young lady.

47

ASA BUSHNELL
Box 7034
Tucson, AZ 85725; 602-741-4715

Telecommunications consultant Dave Trimble was good enough to submit a ton of photos chronicling our recent San Francisco adventure, so I'm returning the favor by publishing this candid I shot of him standing behind his wife Jean at a Megablast dinner. Wives were much in evidence by the Bay, including Bill Wright's long-time partner Polly, who mentioned '47's fascinating "Wellesley connection." She said our classmates showed "excellent taste" in choosing mates from her Wellesley Class of '49; in addition to Bill, Doug Fletcher teamed up with Sally, Arnie Fraiman with Gen, Ham Hazleburst with Carol, and Sam Vrooman with Flodie. Also part of the connection: Sid Drell's wife, Harriet '48; Wil Brucher's wife, Doris '51; and the aforementioned Jean Trimble '50.

Graeme Whyllaw, another muster participant (enjoying the festivities with wife Jeane), reported that fellow Florida retiree Dick Miller remained a widower until June, when he tied the knot with the former Anne Dunbar of Pittsburgh. In Scottsdale, widower Sunshine Herrick now retired from the Dial Corp., exchanged vows in March with the former Sue Wright, whom he met in their church choir.

Sue, who works part time for Sunshine Biscuits (what else?), was impressed by his "heavenly" gourmet cooking, while he has signed up for classes with her at Scottsdale Community College.

We had a splendid turnout for the Harvard football game party: 16 classmates (Andreas, Bollman, Boyle, Bryan, Eggers, Eller, Faunce, Hanson, Henderson, Bill Jackson, Metter, Niemann, Pearson, Pershing, Stevenson, and Wetman), plus 18 spouses, friends or family members.

48

DAVID K. FINEVES
106 Snowden Ln.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3340

The Class party after the Harvard game was spectacular. Not surprisingly, our trusted leaders, Simmons and Meyer, organized a splendid occasion with fabulous hors d'oeuvres. Some 60 of us were in attendance at the Springdale Club. John Garber, now that he has given up 42 years' leadership of Penn Dairies, was able to join in the merriment for the first time in years. In future we can look to Don Reed's gracing our festivities. Don is moving to Yardley, Penn., after eight years in the Far East and now a well-earned retirement.

Tom Wolf, a superb clipper of news items, sent along a Washington Post piece that Bill Danforth has withdrawn from consideration to head the Natl. Institutes of Health. Bill would have had to disassociate himself from the Danforth Foundation.

Frank Rosenberg is still with Sterling Drug and involved with regulatory affairs. Research headquarters has moved to Exton, Penn., which makes it much easier for Frank to enliven Class affairs.

A distinguished artist has agreed to speak at and to grace our mid-winter dinner at the Princeton Club of N.Y. on Feb. 19. Mark your calendar.

Jack Lewis proudly reports that his much better half, Phoebe (Smith '51) has been serving for the past year as chairman of Smith's trustees.

Landau's, a Princeton clothing store, had a clever contest promotion which involved creating a caption for a cartoon in their New Yorker ads. Guess who gets to judge the 2000-plus caption entries? The cartoonist himself, Henry Martin.

We are saddened to learn of the death of John Dorsey Sept. 18. We have a memorial in this issue.

49

ALVIN R. KRATCH
Limerick Lane Poetryworks®, 5 Birch Ln.
Chappaqua, NY 10514; 914-238-0352

During one of our monthly Class luncheons at the Princeton Club, the question was asked as to who is our oldest living classmate, and who is our youngest. I've waded through our 1949 Nassau Herald, fellas, and find—correct me if it's wrong, guys—that Herb Grobskopf, born July 7, 1917, is our most senior member, and John Poll, born Aug. 20, 1929, is our "baby." We haven't heard from Herb recently (maybe we will now!) but here's word from John:

"I was startled to hear that I am the youngest member of the Class of '49, the more so since I have unfortunately just become the oldest member of the Department of Spanish and Portuguese at U.C.—Berkeley, which now has one other Princeton A.B. besides myself, and two Princeton Ph.D.s. The oldest in terms of years of service, and just plain oldest.

"I came here straight out of Princeton, where I majored in what we used to call S.P.I.A., inspired by Princeton's Allison Williams Bunkley to try my hand at graduate study in Spanish. I liked it, and, as a graduate student and faculty member, I've been here ever since, except for some time in the Army, on sabbaticals, and as a director of our junior-year program in Madrid. Here I have become, in order, a husband, a Ph.D., a father, and a father-in-law. I even still remain all of those."

In addition to being a fellow '49er, Max Gunther was a Key and Seal clubmate of mine, and had grown up in Maplewood, N.J., where he was a neighbor of my wife, Barb. We hadn't heard from Max for quite a while, and then received a note from him with the sad news that his beloved wife, Dottie, had died of cancer in Jan. 1987. Subsequent phone calls and a most enjoyable lunch followed this summer, and we can report that Max is now retired from his career as a writer, and lives in Heritage Village, a retirement community in Southbury, Conn. He's in good shape, enjoys where he's living, travels a bit to visit his children. He has kept his P.O. Box #865 in Ridgefield, CT 06877, so friends who would like to get in touch can reach him there.

50

PETE BUCHANAN
151 West St.
Beverly Farms, MA 01915; 508-922-1650

In the pleasant pursuit of continuing education Hank Rentschler cruised the Mississippi last spring with the Alumni College on the DELTA QUEEN. Lectures by superb faculty such as Civil War historian James McPherson, visits to the battlefields, plus good Princeton and Stanford companionship made it a truly memorable experience. Among the good companions was Guthrie Speers. Earlier Guthrie and son Tom officiated at the wedding of son Sam to Lisa Brawley in Maine. Linda and Bill Dietel were on hand for the ceremony.

Also pursuing some further education, Erika and Cammy Slack in the summer of 1989 were Elder-hostel students at the universities of Madrid, Navarre (Pamplona), and Toulouse. Cammy admits they took gut courses without any exams, comparing them fondly to several he took freshman year.

Continuing in the educational vein, Huastan King this spring authored a new medical textbook. Taylor Stevenson has also had a book published this summer, SOUL AND MONEY: A THEOLOGY OF WEALTH. Meanwhile, Phil Kunbardi has put together a string of very productive years with six books since 1984, including LIFE IN CAMELOT, a book about the Kennedy years; LIFE LAUGHS LAST, a second collection of old LIFE miscellany; and THE JOY OF LIFE.

A number of classmates paid final respects in late Sept. to Jack Borden at the Episcopal Cathedral in Trenton. On hand were Al Abbotts, Pete Erdman, Wally Green, Mo Kinnan, Hank Rentschler, Jack Robinson, Charlie Roll, and Bob Smith. Charlie, who had gone to school with Jack 50 years ago, read a personal remembrance at the burial service. Steve Zimmerman had his own fond last recollections of Jack and Tom Raleigh. As organizer and team captain of the post-reunion, People-to-People tennis trip, Steve paired Jack and Tom against the number one British team in the final match of the tour. They won handily by a score of 6-2, 6-3. They were both winners to the end.

51

RICHARD K. PAYNTER
49 Wilson Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-921-6720

Life Begins at the 40th June 6-9

Classmates are responding to Reunion Chairman Joe Howell's call. Early birds are (as of Oct. 27): Broadus Bailey, Charlie Beattie, Frank Beatty, Jack Bogle, Bill Brown, Bud Brown, Peter Butz, George Chandler, Lou Emanuel, Bob Erdody, Peter Fleming, Eb Gaines, Bob Keeley, Jake McCandless, Gene McGrew, Jerry McHugh, Donald Mann, Guy Newland, Jack Noble, Bill Paxton, Dick Paynter, Bob Pickett, Dick Pierson, Bob Poor, Mark Roberts, Jack

If you count these stocks among your portfolio . . .

. . . consider increasing your income with a life income trust.

These stocks are excellent investments. However, they generally return less than 4 percent.

Princeton's Pooled Income Fund currently pays 7½ – 8 percent. By making a gift to Princeton, you can almost double your income and receive an immediate income tax deduction — with no capital gains cost.

You can join the Pooled Income Fund with a gift of $10,000 (or more). It's a great way to increase your earnings and invest in Princeton's future.

For more information, write a confidential letter or call the Planned Giving Office.

Planned Giving Program
Princeton University
Box 39

Princeton, NJ 08544-0039
609-258-6318 or 609-258-6320

Director

Daniel H. Jamieson, Jr. '74

Associate Directors

Jane Rae Bradford

Robert B. Turner

Closing the Gender Gap

"THERE'S NO PROBLEM in the U.S. Congress today that doesn't require the attention of women as well as men," says George A. Dean '52, founder of 50/50 by 2000, a new public-action group whose aim is to spark awareness of the low numbers of women at all levels of American government.

Dean came to Princeton from Lawrenceville School. At Princeton he majored in history and American civilization. After service in Korea, he entered Harvard Business School. Dean spent his entire career with the Dancer Fitzgerald Sample advertising agency and by 1987 was executive vice-president. When the agency was sold that year, he decided to devote more time to his personal interests.

Dean is involved in pro-bono work for the American Cancer Society and serves as vice-president of the Class of 1952, but what he calls his "major project" is increasing the number of women in American government. He has become a leading force in this effort, speaking at gatherings of women and at colleges.

With a staff of twenty volunteers and employees (split almost evenly between Democrats and Republicans) working out of offices in Connecticut, this independent, nonpartisan group's strategy is to use "advocacy advertising": series of ads designed to increase the public's awareness of an issue. Dean's ads, like the one at the right, have appeared in The Washington Post, news magazines, and a variety of women's magazines.

Dean has found that women candidates face the same problems as their male counterparts do—only more so. One is the problem of defeating incumbents; according to Dean, close to 98 percent of incumbents win reelection. Women candidates also suffer because many voters have problems thinking of women as leaders: in recent surveys by Emily's List, a women's political-action group, up to 25 percent of adult male voters stated they do not feel women have the stamina or qualifications to serve in public office. Dean believes that women candidates are often perceived as only interested in such "women's issues" as day care, early education, and abortion.

Currently there are only two women in the U.S. Senate and twenty-nine in the House of Representatives; in Congress, says Dean, there is only one black woman, one Hispanic woman, and one Asian woman. Thirty-one states do not have a woman representative in Congress. Percentages of women in state legislatures vary widely, with highs of more than 30 percent in Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, and Colorado, and a low of 2 percent in Louisiana.

Whether there will be a natural evolution toward more equal representation remains to be seen. Molly Yard, the president of the National Organization of Women, estimates that, at the present rate of turnover, it will take 417 years to achieve a one-to-one ratio in Congress. Reforms in election rules that reduce incumbents' advantages will certainly help 50/50 by 2000, but significant changes in perception are needed as well. "It's not in the best interests of the country," says Dean, "to ignore the creativity and imaginative leadership of half the population."

—Nuala O'Connor '89

Some Say A Woman's Place Is In The Home. We Say It's In The House.

Never underestimate the power of a woman. That's what advertising tells us. Huh. Some power. A mere 6% of the House of Representatives are women. And there are only 2 women Senators.

Such an imbalance is more than unfair. It deprives the Nation of so many wise and talented women. Granted the advantages of incumbency are an obstacle. But that shouldn't stop us from working. Harder than ever. All of us. For more equal representation. So that by the turn of the century we can honestly say—

We're a government of all the people.

50/50 by 2000 Elect Women To Congress

Find out how you can help. Write G. Dean, Box 34, Fairfield, CT 06430

John Criscitello died in 1963. A boyhood friend in Jersey City, Ray Fitzsimmons, graduated from Princeton in 1955. He came because of John. He sent an article in the Trenton Times recently that John Jr. is a burgeoning rock musician, fronting a group called The Dream.

52 DON OBERDORFER
4630 30th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20008

Steve Rogers was sworn in as U.S. ambassador to Swaziland, an independent kingdom in Southern Africa, at the state dept. Oct. 25. Previously, Steve was deputy U.S. ambassador in South Africa. Mike Ely, Chaps Chester, and your secretary were on hand for the swearing-in.

In case you've missed it, Princeton will be losing some of the services of two of our classmates. Joe Bolster is retiring from his Annual Giving responsibilities after an illustrious career. He and Tink hope to travel and are considering writing a book about their family—something like a sequel that tops CHEAPER BY THE DOZEN. And Paul Benacerraf resigned as University provost to return to teaching, due to the strain of the administrative job on his family life.

For all those dreaming of winter in Waikiki, Doc Buyers has been elected chairman of the board of the Hawaii Visitors Bureau.

Tom Melohn was featured in a business magazine for his outstanding employee-oriented management style at his Silicon Valley company, North American Tool & Die. Caring for employees should be a chief exec.'s top priority, said Tom.

John Schmidt was awarded an honorary degree at York College of Penn. in recognition of his many years of active civic leadership, including 12 years as chairman of the college's board of trustees.

Harvey Glickman and his wife, Sylvia, have each published books in 1990. Harvey's is TOWARD PEACE AND SECURITY IN SOUTHERN AFRICA, published by Gordon and Breach. Sylvia's is rather different: AMERICAN KEYBOARD MUSIC, 1866-1910, part of the series on "Three Centuries of American Piano Music" published by G. K. Hall. Harvey continues to teach political science at Haverford College.

53 PIERCE J. LONERGAN
Box 18
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Quint Anderson, our freshman Class president, is still excelling. Quint, the founder and chairman of the AARQUE Companies in Jamestown, N.Y., has been named to the board of trustees of the Roger Tory Peterson Inst. of Natural History, joining former Cabinet Secretaries Elliot Richardson and James Schlesinger. He founded Citizens For America, a national civic organization, and is chairman of the state steering committee on education policy. The Peterson Inst., named for the famed ornithologist and Jamestown native, is dedicated to the study of nature, especially by children.

Class dinner, Alumni Day, Feb. 16.

Bill Van Cleve '50 is a sometime contributor of information on our classmates in the St. Louis area. His latest missive concerns the activities of Dr. Lou Avioli. Lou, professor of medicine at Washington Univ. School of Medicine, recently received the Distinguished Leadership Award of the Endocrine Society. He is director of endocrinology at Jewish Hospital and directs the Division of Bone and Mineral Diseases at the School of Medicine.

Sheble, Dick Simmons, Don Stokes, Frank Reichel, Jerry Rose, Scott Stewart, Lou Tilden, Mike Towbes, Sandy Troubridge, Hal Urschel, Ben Van Tuyl, Perk Wilson. The sooner you sign up, the less it will cost.

Joe's committee is an expert one, carefully chosen: Bloom, of counsel; Ganoe, headquarters; Paxton, housing; Nick Wilson, food and beverage; Rizzi, treasurer; Strauss, entertainment; Grady, ecumenical church service; Jahn, seminars; Seldin, new jacket and tie; Howell, directory; Rube Shaw, attendance. Shaw and his committee have crafted a series of mailings designed to persuade you that '51's 40th is a gathering you will regret missing.

John Elliott is a collector of Chinese art.

After the massacre in Tiananmen Square, he looked for a way to protect Chinese intellectuals and their work. His solution was to donate $1 million to Princeton to provide some 20 Chinese scholars the opportunity to study and teach at the University for a year or so.

Dodds Buchanan writes that he is cutting back his teaching schedule at the Univ. of Colorado College of Business and will have more time for consulting, ventures, travels, and spending time at the family ranch in Wyo.

In spite of the unfortunate outcome of the Harvard game, the Class cocktail party under the direction of Fred Crispin was, as usual, very successful. Among those spotted were: Burns, Carleu, Connolley, Crispin, Roger Decker, DeNunzio, Erdman, Goetschius, Gray, Herr, Kurzman, Lindholm, Mancusi-Ungaro, McKulik, Milberg, Bill Miller, Orlando, Barry Phelps, Frank Phillips, Post, Supbin, Velde, and Dave Wilson.

54 DICK STEVENS
1 Valley Sq., Ste. 101
Blue Bell, PA 19422

Our politician, ambassador, cabinet member, businessman, statesman is at it again. Don Rumsfeld has signed on as C.E.O. of General Instrument Corp., headquartered in N.Y.C. G.I.C. was a recent acquisition by one of the "good" barbarians, Forstmann Little, whose chief buys companies the old fashioned way, with cash—no funny money junk stuff. As a private corporation, Don will have a wide latitude to expand this cable TV supplier internationally as well as develop interesting market segments at home.

Peter Hopkinson and two former associates at Skidmore, Owings & Merrill have combined forces to form Hopkinson & Partners, an architecture firm located in Boston. The firm specializes in high-caliber design and effective management of big, complex projects in the commercial and institutional arena. Peter has done it all, including apartments, offices, hotels, city planning, public housing, etc., not to mention car rebuilding and boat rebuilding. He is also a past president of the Boston Society of Architects.

Rob Troubridge, with George Beatty in tow, slipped off to Ireland for some salmon fishing on the Eriff River... you remember... the place where the Irish Nationals killed Lord Mountbatten. The fishing was great fun, the take was slim (none), the Irish whiskey... outstanding.

Seen at the Harvard game... Raccoon Charlie Day, Briskman, Barnads, Hardenburg, Kirby, Ford, Ledger, Dalton, Marks, Hnai, John Harper, Judson, Eric Jones, Bob Madden, Maruca, Stout, Slichter, Steelman, Hamilton, Ledger, Neill, Nemitz, Frank, Rock, Luke Watts, and Dan Wright.

55 MITZI ROSEN
40 E. 88th St.
New York, NY 10128; 212-722-7447

Here is Mitzi Bhaunani unbending at our 35th. Mitzi is the wife of Asbok and the mother of Raoul '93. She is on the staff of the Museum of Natural History in N.Y.C.

The fall newsletter of Bill Salmar's Santa Fe Greenhouses is always welcome here at 88th and Madison where greenery is at a premium. The letter is chock-full of autumn planting tips and ideas. Of special interest to some of you is the availability of the famous Salman Ranch raspberry jam. Two- or 12-jar boxes are now being shipped. Write to: Santa Fe Greenhouses, 2904 Rufina St., Santa Fe, N.M. 87501, or call 505-473-2700. The perfect gift from New Mexico!

Eugene McCoy writes from Delaware, "All three daughters now married. Hooray!"

Paul Sigler has returned to the Univ. of Chicago after a period at Yale Univ. Paul is a professor/investigator in the dept. of biochemistry and molecular biology. This past summer, Paul's daughter Jennifer married Prof. Clinton Rubin. In attendance at the wedding were Peter Lewis, Michele Sigler '82, and Jonathan Sigler '84.

Marty Hyman is a volunteer for the American Cancer Society in N.Y. and is also writing for SKYLINE, a periodical devoted to that city's history. An article about old German restaurants in Manhattan steeped in stained glass and sauerkraut will soon appear.

Waldemar Ostermann is recovering from "severe service-connected injuries in the '50s" and living in Philadelphia.

56 DAVID M. JORDAN
410 Rodman Ave.
Jenkintown, PA 19046

A long feature article in the Washington Post describes the travails of Buck Williams as the only physician in South Dakota (as well as northeastern Iowa) who publicly takes in abortion patients. Buck, an obstetrician who maintains a clinic in Sioux Falls, S.D., puts up with the pickets, the abusive phone calls and letters, the refusals to service his clinic, in order to provide, safe, medically-sound abortions for women who come to him from five states and Canada. Buck's wife Joan runs his office for him.

WATCH YOUR MAILBOX: Old Nass reports that for our 35th Phyllis and Dick Kluger will take us "down memory lane" with some tidbits from back issues of the DAILY PRINCETONIAN languishing in the Klugers' attic. Old Nass slept under a few of them in his time, and the idea occurred to him while lying down. (Ed: Who is Old Nass, and what's he doing in my column? What was written on the Blakely Laundry card?)

Joe Knox helped to put together an exhibition of the sculptor Mercié at the Marsh Gallery of the Univ. of Richmond in Oct. and Nov. Mercié did a famous mounted statue of Robert E. Lee; the show is called "Mercié in Context: The French Academic Tradition in American Public Sculpture."

A changing of the guard at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., the government securities brokerage house, will see John Ford retire as C.E.O. at the end of the year. John will continue as a director and counselor but "will be happy to be retired from the trenches, so to speak."

We have learned of the death on Oct. 7 of Henry Heald, known to many as Jerry Jiranek before he changed his name while at Princeton. A memorial will follow.

57 JACK SCHLON
Box 6177, Yorkville Station
New York, NY 10128; 212-427-3575 (H)

Tampa TRIBUNE on "Sailing the Atlantic Alone": "Both times Jack Hunt, an assoc. prof. of educational leadership at the Univ. of South Florida, sailed the OSTAR—Observer Single-handed Transatlantic Race—he did it in a 31-foot boat.

"In the last race, 91 left Plymouth, England, but only 64 made it to Newport, R.I. Some had masts blown apart, some capsized and others turned back, but all participants survived. Though the race is run in June and July, supposedly after the winter storms and before hurricane season, 'the North Atlantic is everything they say it is,' says Hunt. Hunt tried to work it so he would sleep in two-hour blocks and be awake much of the night, when the chance of being run over by a ship was greatest. The worst came upon him about midway across—a storm with 30-foot seas and 60-knot winds.

"In the 1984 race, it took him 41 days to get across the ocean in his single-hull sailboat, averaging about five knots. For a frustrating nine-day stretch, he relates, he encountered a sea of glass and practically no wind.

"I thought the gods were mad at me because the boat was so filthy, so I cleaned it from top to bottom. Nothing. Then I thought the gods were mad at me because I was so dirty, so I cleaned myself. Nothing."

"Finally, he offered a sacrifice to the gods—a pair of skivvies. The ocean threw them back.

"The killer is fatigue, I think," he says. "Fatigue destroys judgment."

58 RALPH L. DEGROFF
7 Grace Sq.
New York, NY 10028

Ed Midgley has recently left the positions of vice chairman at Fieldcrest Cannon and Amoskeag to become head of the corporate department at Bankers Trust Co.

Gordon Wu was featured in a late-summer article in FORTUNE about the Pacific rim. Only in Asia, the writer comments, would a businessman build a $1-billion highway with government help. Gordon estimates that during his 30 years of operations the Hong Kong-Canton road will produce $12-15 billion in tolls. Warning Beijing against another crack-down like last year, Gordon says, "Tanks don't pay tolls." Gordon also has an agreement in principle to build the Thais a $3.1 billion elevated train and highway system in Bangkok to solve its traffic problem. Gordon will make his profit from developing government-owned land around the system. Gordon claims little late night work, "Work is like shaving. No matter how well you do it today, you've got to do it again tomorrow."

Doug Wingel is president of Princeton's Friends of Men's/Women's Cross Country.

Mac Miller has recently become the director of development at Episcopal High School in Baton Rouge, La. Episcopal, co-ed, with 650 students in grades four through 12, is one of the premier day schools. Mac and Libby's children are geographically spread out—Don is at Quantico U.S.M.C. base, Julie is in N.Y., and Ian will be with them in La.

Christmas present idea: A Princeton Class of 1958 blazer patch. It is quite attractive and does not require being sewn on. It can also be removed after use. The Class still has some left over from our 25th Reunion. Send $25.00 payable to The Class of 1958, Princeton Univ. to Ralph L. DeGross Jr. at the above address.

59 JAY M. SMOL
11321 Rolling House Rd.
Rockville, MD 20852

The 83rd meeting of Princeton and Harvard on the gridiron and a bright, autumn day provided the backdrop for an activity-packed Saturday at Princeton. A Class meeting in the morning, the game in the afternoon, and our post-game cocktail party at Terrace Club kept a number of '59ers busy. Seen throughout the day were Hank Barton, Bill Buchanan, Duke Butterworth, Bob Gilbert, Dodd Harris, Ben Hoover, John Hubbell, Howie Hudson, David Manischewitz, Ed Mills, Dick Orth, Bill Powell, Rink Reyniders, Bob Rock, Ted Sandquist, Jim Sharp, Jay Siegel, and Aldo Vandermolen. A leading item of business at the Class meeting was our 35th reunion. A committee is taking shape, comprised of Bob Rock (on-site logistics), Murray Simpson (housing), and Ben Hoover (uniforms). Major positions still to be filled are reunion chairman, entertainment chairman, and treasurer. Anyone interested in serving in any capacity should contact a Class officer. In the interim, Ed Mills has agreed to serve as chairman for our 32nd.

In case you missed Duke Butterworth's son James (11) in the children's choruses of "La Bohème" and "La Traviata" at the Met last season, you can catch his daughter Diana (8) performing a plié or two in the 1990 Lincoln Center production of "The Nutcracker."

Surgeon-turned-fast-fooder Sandy Brown has two "Hot 'n Now"s up and running in Benton Harbor and Niles, Mich. With 39 cents and a car, you can drive through and pick up a burger.

Brock Evans has taken a leave of absence from his position as V.P. of the Natl. Audubon Society to teach a course at Harvard's J.F.K. School of Government, entitled "Lobby to Save the Earth: Taking on the Big Boys and Winning." Brock says he feels "like a kid in a candy store . . . sampling delicious bites of new things," e.g., auditing seven courses in his spare time, including Old Babylonian language.

60

MASON LOWANCE
100 Lincoln Ave.
Amherst, MA 01002

Pictured here is Mel Endy, formerly prof. of religion and chief academic officer at Hamilton College; Mel became provost of St. Mary's College in Maryland. Following Princeton, he earned the B.D., M.A., and Ph.D. degrees from Yale, and joined the faculty of Hamilton in 1966, where he was dean of students and dean of the college. He has held a research fellowship from the Natl. Endowment for the Humanities, and authored WILLIAM PENN AND EARLY QUAKERISM, published by the Princeton Univ. Press. His son, Michael, is a graphic artist in N.Y.C., and daughter, Margaret, works at Columbia Univ. Carol Locke-Endy was associate dean of students at Colgate, also in Hamilton, N.Y. Paul Yager has been extremely busy launching Paul Yager Associates, a full-service firm for the practice of architecture and graphic design in Arlington, Mass. And Ron Fisber writes from Milan that his missionary work in Europe has recently expanded; he is now European administrator of U.F.L. and is responsible for Italy, Spain, Sweden, Germany, and Austria, "with the exciting new dimensions of incredible spiritual openness in East Europe." Ronald Barks was recently named a fellow of the American Ceramic Society at their 1990 Dallas annual meeting, and Dave Rinker, who lives in Columbia, S.C., and is with the Univ. of South Carolina, was unable to make the 30th in June as he was hosting David Chamberlain '71 and an exhibit of his sculpture at the university museum. Bob Tellander spent the summer in Holland and Sweden and in Jan. will be in Java, for a sabbatical, researching while his wife prepares her M.A. thesis in art history.

61

GEORGE BRAKELEY III
98 Winfield Ln.
New Canaan, CT 06840; fax 203-978-0114

1961 THIRTIETH 1991

Herewith the 30th reunion logo, compliments of co-chairs Ken Scasserra and Len Berton. By the time you read this, the initial 30th mailing and registration form should be in your hands. Sign up now to a) save a few bucks and b) allow Ken, Len, and their gang to get a head start on planning. Note the FAX number above—an easy way to send in news. Here's an easier way. If you routinely include a message to friends and relatives in your cards during the holidays, send one to us.

The Wakeman Award for Research in the Neurosciences is one of the highest honors in that discipline. Presented biennially, it is awarded this year to a team of doctors for their work in spinal cord injury recovery, and one of them is Frank Wagner. Frank is chair of the dept. of neurosurgery at U.C.—Davis. Michéy Michel reports that, somewhat to his chagrin, all three of his children have gone to Yale.

On Oct. 11 Fred Hitz was confirmed by the U.S. Senate to be the first statutory inspector general of the Central Intelligence Agency. Fred notes, "The President nearly vetoed the bill creating the job and Director Webster opposed it—other than that, all is rosy." Fred had been practicing law since 1982, before which he spent 15 years in the government, including four at the C.I.A. "Back to the scene of the crime," says Fred. And Gene Lawson, another Washington veteran who is currently vice chairman of the Export-Import Bank, observes, "Fred's a real patriot—this is going to be a tough job." Our congratulations and best wishes to Fred.

62

ERIC W. JOHNSON
2221 Craigo Ct.
Vienna, VA 22182; 703-280-9080

Congratulations! On campus this year are 19 Class of '62 daughters (down from 21), and 17 sons (down from 26)—once again Class daughters outnumber Class sons! Come on, sons! Eighty-eight of our children (representing well over ten percent of our Class) now have either been to Princeton, have graduated, or are on campus. Of the 36 on campus (eleven less than last year), three are '94, twelve are '93, eleven are '92, ten '91. The fathers and their progeny: Bill Barnes (Nancy '91), John Barr (Alexandra '94), Harvey Barile (Louisa '93), Steve Baum (Benjamin '94), Drew Berry (Wendy '92), Dick Bowen (Amelia '94), Jon Buler (Jonathan '91), Phil Carlin (Katharine '91), Jim Carolan (Sybil '93), Bill Clayton (William '92 and Austin '93), Walt Corey (Sarah '92), Joe Delafield (Michael '93), Ariel De Pontet (Philippe '93), Barry Goss (Virginia '93), Herb Henryson (Dylan '91), Mike Kingston (Courtney '92), Stu Kotler (Meredith '92), Harold Kroeger (Hal '92), Charlie Lighdale (Jennifer '91 and Hallie '93), Bill MacLean (Paige '93), Frank McConnell (Curtis '93), Ken Melrose (Robert '92), Dave Misbalo (Ian '93), Drayton Nabers (Drayton '91), Rip Noble (Vicki '91), Ray Oram (Jeffrey '91), Joel Pensley (Danielle '92), Vic Raiser (Robert '92), Albey Retner (Jesse '92), Joshua Roth (Eric '92), John Sculli (Karen '91), Bill Swain (William '93), Tyrl Van Geel (Alexandra '93), and Tom Wright (Thomas '91).

63

SHELDON S. EDWARDS
Elgin Academy, 350 Park St.
Elgin, IL 60120

Ned Hall writes, "In Jan. 1987 I joined a company with thirteen Chapter 11 bankruptcies, but finally they are all settled and Stevie and I are really beginning to enjoy San Diego and sailing here. The kids have hung in well, Bob at Andover '92, in first boat in crew, and Becky starting at Davis in Jan., after three enjoyable years at Thatcher School."

Exciting news from Californian Walt Acuff: on Aug. 25, he married Valerie Connet in Laguna Niguel. N.Y.C. prep school history teacher Bill Everdell reports from his N.E.H. sabbatical year, "I'm working on the period 1872-1913. Also working for transportation alternatives to tame the automobile and exalt the bicycle in the coming greenhouse era." Also in Manhattan, Howard Hamm continues as the Class's only trade show manager, with George Little. He is also president of the Natl. Assn. of Exposition Managers.

Tuck Henry's daughter Channing is a freshman at Princeton, living in Forbes College, and a good friend of Dick Haverland's daughter Lucy. He, a formidable college athlete, admits to having taken up golf recently and plays often with surgeon Tom Newsome, formidable post-college athlete, who shot 77 the last time they played. Mike Eckles gave up his investment advising on Wyatt Earp Blvd. in Dodge City, Kansas, to begin teaching economics and business management full time this fall at St. Mary of the Plains College. His wife, Jana, still works as a paralegal. Kathy and Joel Rosenman have dragged Molly and Ted out of Trinity School in N.Y.C. to Jackson Hole for the school year, where he will continue his venture capitalism by way of "the three P's: plane, phone and pfax."

Speaking of FAX, don't forget that you can send news over the phone lines by dialing 708-695-5017. Do it today.

64

JOTHAM JOHNSON
Box 12
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

According to the Alumni Council, 39 classmates have 41 children on campus this fall, with Floyd Propst and Jim White having two each. Charles Agus, Peiffer Brandt, Michael Dowban, Sarah Hermanson, Hugh MacMillan and William Sloan III are the newest legacies on campus.

As judge of the Fulton County (Ga.) Probate Court, Buddy Propst was the recipient of the 1990 Franklin Flaschner Judicial Award for distinguished contributions to the bench. "Judge Propst has been the greatest single factor, in my opinion, in elevating the quality of justice in the probate courts of Georgia," noted Georgia Supreme Court Justice Charles Weltner in announcing the award.

Thanks to all who contributed to last year's A.G. effort. Class Agent Dave Miller, who moved from Chicago to Washington to become director of development at Sidwell Friends, reported contributions from 442 classmates (59%) totaling $125,253, an "off-year" record for 1964 and a very pleasant surprise given all the 25th-reunion stretching.

Among those back for the Harvard game this year, many with wives and children, were Nat Floyd, Rick Grand-Jean, Skip Grenoble, our host Dick Henry who throws a mean reception, Jo Johnson, George Khouri, and prexy Rob Kuser. Also Larry Levine, Bill Mears, the aforementioned Dave Miller, Ed Murphy, Jim Okie, Gil Peterson, Bill Purcell, Dave Siegfried, Gerry Shey, Dick Springs, Renny Thompson, and the "W" boys, Bill Walker, Alex Wellford, Dave Wetherill, and Rick Wright. Apologies if we missed anyone.

Susan and Rick Price hope many of you will plan to attend 1964's mini-Reunion in New Orleans on April 11-14, 1991. "The weather is great in April," Rick wrote, "and we promise you a sensational time in the 'Big Easy.'" For more info, give Rick a call weekdays at 504-523-3534.

65

J. MICHAEL PARISH
Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts
1 Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004

More material that arrived too late for the 25th reunion book, this time on the stationery of the Christchurch School of Medicine of the Univ. of Otago on the South Island of New Zealand from Randall Allardyce: "I left the States in 1966 to further interests in research, rugby and bagpiping, and attend med school in Edinburgh. My wife, Joan, who is from St. Andrews, and I were married there in 1969. After nine years in organ transplant research in the U.K., wanderlust led me to accept a job here involving a touch of ophthalmology, orthopedics, immunology, and vaccine development, as well as some collaborative work on biological control agents. Last year I was appointed a national scientific adviser on vaccines and new medicines for the New Zealand dept. of health. Joan is now a consultant physician with the student health service at the Univ. of Canterbury.

"Joan and I have two daughters, Tara (14) and Rona (12), who have grown up on our North Canterbury farm. In addition to our careers and raising beef cattle, the girls, Joan, and I do most of the usual sports in a country where within an hour from home you can ski, catch a salmon, and surf on the same day. I also do a bit of shooting over my pointers and flail the local waters to a milky froth with the dry fly. Last year we joined my old roommate Marty Wood and his wife, Daphne, to hunt their superb Live Oak Hounds near Thomasville, Ga. It was a lively wee reunion that was long overdue and served to remind me how enduring and strong some of those bonds we formed remain."

John Farnbach, having finished up positions in R. & D. and operations with a small electronics company, is currently pondering his next career move and wants to hear from classmates with bright ideas waiting to be developed.

66

JEFFREY N. McCOLLUM, A.T.&T. Products
5 Wood Hollow Rd., Rm. 1J19
Parsippany, NJ 07054

Twenty-one sons and daughters of the Class of 1966 are currently enrolled in the Princeton classes of 1991, 1992, and 1993. (Presumably there are more in the Class of 1994, but the information is not currently available from the University.) Those 21, as well as their parents and financial backers are listed below.

Victoria Ayling '93 (Michael Ayling), David Burnett '93 (Dr. David Burnett), David Duncan '93 (William Duncan), Matt Eastwick '92 (Carl Eastwick), Elizabeth Eaton '93 (O. Seaburn Eaton), Deborah Horn '93 (Larry Horn), Carl-Christian Jackson '93 (Dr. Robert Jackson), and Rebecca Jones '93 (Lanny Jones), William Kane Jr. '93 (William Kane), Robin Kates '93 (Richard Kates), Bryan Largay '92 (George Largay), Tom McCabe '91 (Don McCabe), Jonathan Milder '93 (Mike Milder), Meredith Miller '93 (Dr. Jeff Miller), Richard G. Morgan III '93 (Tiny Morgan), Linda Okstein '91 (Charlie Okstein), and Sarah Savidge '91 (Paul Savidge), Sarah Schatz '92 (Dr. David Schatz), Lara Shafer '92 (Dr. Jeffrey Shafer), Catherine Smith '92 (Marshall Smith), and Lisa Vogel '92 (Robert Vogel).

In early October Kit Mill (pictured) picked up from N.Y. and planted himself in San Francisco where he joined Foote, Cone and Belding as senior V.P., group management supervisor. He has assumed responsibility for the Clorox account. For Kit, the move marks a return to the Bay Area and another in a long series of prestigious positions.

On behalf of all of the officers of the Class, I extend hearty and heartfelt wishes for the happiest of holiday seasons. May you experience the season in good health, good spirits, and with good friends.

67

PETER J. TURCH
6503 Masefield St.
Worthington, OH 43085

Dave Foster relayed a piece in the Boston GLOBE about our writer/pediatric neurologist Joel Herskowitz (THE POPCORN PLUS DIET, IS YOUR CHILD DEPRESSED?) who has now branched into limericks. From his new book, FOR BETTER OR VERSE, we have one example that may be useful for those practicing conservation of hair as we approach our 25th:

One day as he rolled out of bed

My eight-year-old son Sylvan said:

"Now isn't it weird

That a man has a beard

When there's nothing on top of his head!"

The photo shows Grabam Marcott with his daughter Alyssa (r) and a friend at the U.S.Y.S.A. Regional Soccer Championship in Kalamazoo, Mich., last July, where their team placed third in region II. Graham has been coaching the girls' team, the Blue Angels, (Johnson County, Kansas), since Alyssa was in kindergarten. He writes that placing as high as they did with a neighborhood team "was as close to sports self-actualization as I have come since the varsity baseball team came within two innings of going to the college World Series in June 1965."

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO. Charles De Gaulle re-elected to a seven-year term as president of France. Shah denies that Iran depends on U.S. James Lovell, on Gemini seven, is first to fly in space in his underwear, without protective gear. The Byrds rip-off old lyrics for chart-topper "Turn! Turn! Turn!"

68

JOE KLIMEK
Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour St.
Hartford, CT 06115; FAX 203-524-7057

On the other side of the globe, Chip Nevius is still in Singapore with Scott Paper and continues to enjoy it both professionally and personally. Like all of us, Chip does need to get away, and since Singapore is a small island, he does it by sailing and racing a 27-foot Maxi 77. Accompanying him on his sojourns into the South China Sea are wife, Barbara; Erica (16); and Tuller (11).

Naples, Italy is the home of the headquarters for the Allied Naval Forces in Southern Europe. It's also home for Scott Slocum, who recently put on a fourth stripe and is now a captain in the U.S. Navy. Scott is serving as an assistant to the plans and policy officer for NATO and has been recently joined by wife Carol, and Ben (13), Jessie (11), and Allison (2). Ciao!

Jorge Sanchez is V.P. in charge of foreign accounts at Prudential-Bache Securities in Miami. Jorge is in the process of starting a foundation to support poor children in South America. Wife, Mamie, helps raise the Sanchez children, Kristina (12 going on 17) and Jorge Jr. (9), who is six months away from a black belt in karate.

Two of our classmates will use their non-martial-arts skills as recent additions to the Princeton Alumni Council. Skip Grossman, who lives in Princeton, is the alumni rep. of the Princeton community. In his other life, Skip is the director of business development, information services group, Dow Jones & Co. Dave Lawryer has been elected to the Committee to Nominate Alumni Trustees. Dave is a professor of ethnic studies and political science at the Santa Barbara City College in Calif.

69

PAUL GEORGE SITTENFELD
1854 Keys Crescent
Cincinnati, OH 45206

CLASS BODIES: George Boomer, "determined to nurture fantasies I should have put to rest long ago, I recently ran and finished two triathlons. The picture shows me bringing up the rear of the pack: a sweeper enjoying the scenery!" The first in Rosarita Beach, featuring a swim in six-foot waves, was followed by the second, in San Diego, with "more benign conditions but longer distances and tougher competition, including some world-class pros."

Princeton Clubs And Alumni Associations

PC OF PHILADELPHIA: Sun., Dec. 16: The club will host Triangle Club's "Easy Street" at 4:00 P.M. There will be a holiday party at the conclusion of the performance. For tickets or information, call Andrea Micek at 215-884-9288.

PAA OF WESTERN PENN.: Tues., Dec. 18: Associate Provost Mimi Coffey will speak at a luncheon. For further info., call Peggy Joy '74 at 412-566-6157.

PC OF NORTHERN CALIF.: Sat., Dec. 29: The association will host a symposium on higher education with sociology Prof. Marvin Bressler. The symposium will precede an appearance by the men's basketball team in the Cable Car Classic Basketball tournament Saturday evening. For info., call Matthew Quilter '74 at 415-324-7029.

Grant A. Peacock '46
Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

*Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased*

Suite 2600
450 Park Avenue at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022

(212) 753-4640

September a year ago, Steve Lindo and Bill Ramsay climbed the "Grand." They reached the summit of the Grand Teton: 13,770 feet. Summing it up, Bill remembers: "Tired boys."

CLASS MIND: The Glendale Press Ltd. of Dublin has published PLANNING IRELAND'S FUTURE, edited by Murph McCarthy. Murph's article in this book started as his undergraduate thesis. The study has been reviewed as "providing new insights to the economic history of modern Ireland." A full-time attorney and father of three terrific kids, Murph has previously co-authored JOYCE'S DUBLIN: A WALKING GUIDE TO ULYSSES and co-produced WALKING INTO ETERNITY: JAMES JOYCE'S ULYSSES—A DUBLIN TOUR. With a smidgen of bias, we continue to think his most important task is presiding over the Best Old Class of All.

70

JAN KUBIK
113 Laurel Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08544

Legend tells us that eager alumni sometimes write the admissions office immediately upon the birth of a child, but few can match our own Richard Trenner. As the photo clearly indicates, proud papa rushed newborn Miles Richards Radcliffe-Trenner to Nassau Hall in the first week of his birth. This zealousness is perhaps more palatable if you know that Richard and lovely child-bride Annabelle live less than a block from Firestone Library, and on a clear night one can see Nassau Hall from their window. Another candidate for "Shortest Stroll Back to Reunions Award" is Hal Werner, who lives only two houses from the perimeter of the Graduate School. You may have seen Hal and family in the P-rade this year by their vintage V.W. Bug, license plate "P-rade." (We can't make up stuff this good!) The judges have not rendered a decision on this award.

A decision IS finally in from the Big Bug, Gregg Lange, for the Monarch For A Weekend Contest. A randomly drawn winner was to win a fun-filled weekend for two in Princeton, N.J. The winner is... "envelope please"... Dr. Ray Gibbons! of Rochester, Minn. Come on down. Ray and his lovely spouse, Nuala, can redeem their prize any time this coming year.

71

STUART E. RICKERSON
Grace Station, P.O. Box 1142
New York, NY 10028

WEDDING BELLS: On Jan. 13, 1990, Richard Lindsey Jr. married Evangelina Lisa Manolakis. Richard is a physician specializing in invasive cardiology in Pittsburgh, while finding time to ski whenever possible.

HARVARD GAME: Among those seen at the football game and post-game Class of 1971 cocktail party were: Phil Bobbitt, Steve Cook, Henry Barkhorn, Bill Lewis, Ed Chambliss, Varel Freeman, Geoff Smith, Randy Meadows, Al Uyeda, Peter Charapko, Art Lowenstein, Mark Hausberg, Jack McNab, Charlie Ade, Ron Sencbesak, Richard DiFedele, Murphey Harmon, and Stu Rickerson.

TIGER INN CENTENNIAL: Smith, McNab, Harmon, and Rickerson also represented their section at the celebration of the 100th anniversary since the founding of Tiger Inn. They joined over 425 members and over 1,000 family members and guests. Among the events of a very full weekend was the dedication of the library, which the members of the 1971 section funded with a contribution of $25,000.

SEVENTY-ONE DELIVERS: Ann and Thomas Peff's most recent addition was Andrew Mitchell Peff, born Nov. 19, 1988. He joins Catherine, Adeline, and Thomas Jr. Kathy Molony and Rich Hollingsworth note the birth of their second child, John Phillips, Nov. 30, 1989. Kathy is director of the Japan Service at D.R.I./McGraw-Hill in Lexington, Mass., while Rich is a consulting engineer at Digital Equipment, and manages the semiconductor development group in Hudson. They live in Concord, Mass.

Meanwhile, two other true class-mates, Robbie Weyer and Richard Shell, also have a birth announcement. Their son, Edward, arrived on Valentine's Day, Feb. 14, 1990, joining his brother, Ben (7). Robbie is a magazine editor in Philadelphia, while Richard is a law professor at Penn and the Wharton School. They add, "We're both looking forward to our 20th reunion."

72

KIP HEWITT
21 Wildcat Rd.
Danien, CT 06820

ANNUAL GIVING: Each year '72 has been one of the University's strongest contributors. Last year we set a new dollar record for the 18th reunion. Knowing that the University depends on the steady and strong contributions from '72 each year, Class Agent Tom Hoster is organizing volunteers to assist with the A.G. campaign for our 19th year since graduation. As you think about this year's campaign, try to make your gift early. This will stop the flow of A.G. requests and make the work of the volunteers much easier.

Also, an advance fund for spreading 20th reunion gifts over several tax years has been established. Take some time to consider what being at Princeton has meant to you and how much the University depends on your support. '72's continuing generosity and support is vital to Princeton.

FAMILY NEWS: Randy Swenson writes that he and his wife are well on their way to yuppie-dom. They have moved to the suburbs, Chevy Chase, Md., and on Sept. 12, 1990, their second child, a son, arrived from Korea—Edmund Pierson "Perry" Swenson, 17.5 lbs., born April 23, 1990. Gary Shapiro, who is a physician in Hyannis, Mass., and his wife have added a daughter, Whitney, to their family. They have two other children, Leigh (9) and Brett (7).

UPDATES: Philip Barbaccia writes that he has been living in Ft. Myers, Fla., for the last five years. After 16 years with I.B.M., he has "traded selling computers for selling dirt," and is now in commercial real estate. Philip is married with three children—Sarah (10), Leann (9), and Philip (7). Also, David Livingston has returned to private law practice, joining Babcock/McLeod, Alexander et. al. in Houston, saying he had battled inside the corporate world for too long and was ready for the change. David is involved in the banking and real estate business in Houston. He was married Labor Day 1989 to Melanie McKenzie (Tex. Tech '84).

73

R. GREGORY PLEMPTON
Box 14545
North Palm Beach, FL 33408

Joan Gallos has been awarded this year's Fritz Roethlisberger Memorial Award. Awarded by the Organizational Behavior Teaching Society and McGraw-Hill Book Co., the prize honors professional and academic achievement in the field of teaching organizational behavior and management by contributing the best article to "Organizational Behavior Teaching Review." Joan's article was titled "Developmental Diversity and the Organizational Behavior Classroom: Implications for Teaching and Learning." Joan is an instructor in the management program at the Radcliffe Seminars and a faculty member at the Harvard Inst. for the Management of Lifelong Education.

Election Results: Fred Larson was elected to his third term as a Chautauqua County, N.Y. legislator. Rich Nemno was elected to the Board of Directors of Recording for the Blind in Princeton. Rich is assistant V.P. and trust counsel for Wilmington Trust Co.

Two other bankers: Don Boucher is still with the Bank of Hawaii in N.Y.C., still fighting the frightening prospect of a transfer to the head office in Honolulu. Andy Wilcox is heading up sales for Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of Calif. in San Francisco and L.A. Sons Andy (9) and Brian (7) keep he and Mary Ann busy with lots of baseball and T.M.N. turtles.

Legal Notes: Greg Schwed is a partner in the N.Y.C. office of Graham & James. He and Maggie live in Manhattan with Sarah (4) and Robert (2). New decade equals new career for Barb Hill. She has started at the Cardozo School of Law.

74

JOHN STRYKER
15 Woodbine Rd.
Kendall Park, NJ 08824

DESIGNING MAN: The drawing shown here is part of Marc Cohen's patented design of a hyperbaric airlock for Space Station Freedom, allowing an astronaut to enter or leave the space station. Marc began working for NASA in 1979 at the Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif. He worked on the Space Station Program from 1983-1988, coming away with four design patents. With two co-designers, he won an Industrial Designers Society of America Design Achievement Award for a space station wardrobe table. In 1988 Marc won a NASA graduate fellowship to attend the Univ. of Michigan, where he has been working on a Ph.D. in architecture. This fall Marc returned to the Ames Research Center to work on his dissertation on space mission planning. He lives in Menlo Park with his wife, Jane Jacobson '75, and their son, Benjamin (almost 4).

TARGET 99 UPDATE: Chairman Jeff Wieser reports that Target 99, the Class of '74 Memorial Fund, had a value of $246,000 as of last May. Jeff says that we have undoubtedly been hammered by the stock market since then, although part of the fund is invested in bonds. As 1999 is creeping up on us, we are all urged to keep sending in those pledge payments. Jeff has been transferred to Toronto to be president of Manufacturers Hanover Bank of Canada, but promises that Target 99 will remain here.

76

JAMES L. MARSHOTTS
Lane & Mittendorf, 919 18th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20006

Jane and David Villa report the birth of a daughter, Elena Austin, on Dec. 20, 1989. Pictured at her baptism (l-r) are her grandparents, Mary and Fred Villa, David, Bob Hudnut '56, Elena, John Rabe, and grandmother Nancy Harney, wife of Ed Harney '47. David is president of the Chicago chapter of the Natl. Society of Hispanic M.B.A.s.

Martha Esersky was married July 8, 1990, N.H.'s historic Shaker Village to Bruce Lorden, an avid runner with 16 Boston marathons under his belt. They both teach history in the Hanover, N.H. school district. In 1983 they were guests of the Dutch government on a cultural exchange for teachers. More recently they honeymooned in England where they joined an archaeological dig at a Roman villa in the Cotswolds.

Peter Grossman has joined The Sharper Image, the San Francisco-based specialty retailer of innovative products, as senior V.P. of merchandising. He was formerly divisional V.P. of Rich's Department Stores in Atlanta and of The Emporium in S.F. Peter received his M.B.A. from Harvard.

We kicked off our pre-15th events with hoagies and how've-you-been's at New South before the Harvard game on Oct. 20. Seen: Baber, Baldwin, Belferman, Bogardus, B. Byrne, J. Byrne, Cosman, Cronbeim, de Sante, Eicher, Forest, Gonnella, Gourdon, Heyison, Hugin, Ireland, B.C. Jackson, Kurtz, Landon, Landrigan, Markatos, Murley, Petiti, Ruxin, Slater, Trees, Tyler, van Amerongen, Villansenor, W. Wilson, and D. Witmer.

77

JAMES BARRON
15 W. 72nd St., Apt. 24-B
New York, NY 10023

DOCTOR, DOCTOR: Spencer Welch is an endocrinologist at Piedmont Hospital in Atlanta, where he was recently appointed director of the Diabetes Resource Center. He also has his own practice there. He's pictured with daughter Kate (5) and son Nate (2). Not pictured: wife Leigh, a fellow native Atlantan. Ray Phillips is assistant chief of gastroenterology at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington. Daughter Rachel (7) won the Montgomery County (Md.) Superintendent's Writing Award for 1989, taking after her mom, Marian Levy Phillips.

ABSOLUTELY NO -OLOGISTS IN THIS ITEM: Bruce Quackenbush joined Sumitomo Bank Capital Markets in N.Y.C. in the spring as senior V.P. in charge of derivative products marketing. Until recently he was the head of the N.Y. Swap Group of Credit Commercial de France. Gabriella Morris Coleman has been promoted from asst. general counsel to V.P. in the law department of The Prudential Insurance Co. of America in Newark. She specializes in real estate law. Elizabeth Collins has become a PADI scuba instructor in her spare time. Alums who want to learn can call her at 617-641-5336.

EAST, WEST, AND FARTHER WEST: Rodnie Nelson and Jean Smith Nelson continue to shuttle back and forth between L.A. and N.Y. Jean heads Security Pacific's Leveraged Buyout Group and has people reporting to her on both coasts. Rodnie studies with opera teachers and coaches—you guessed it—on both coasts. Jan Clewe has been working as a volunteer at the Museum of Neon Art in L.A. and has been doing her own neon art "on the side." Kate Sokoloff says she's enjoying Hong Kong, "where there is an active Princeton group, courtesy of Tom Pyle '76, Karen Edgley '83, Dori Yang '76 et al."

78

BOB FRANK
Box 886
Middlebury, VT 05753

Last Feb. the Princeton Club of Larchmont (members: Barbara Flickinger, Carla Volpe Porter, and Sally Genster Robling) played host to guest speaker Kim Peaslee, visiting from New Hampshire. The meeting was held at Carla's house, which is two blocks from Sally's house, which is two blocks from Barb's house. Carla writes, "We're not roommates anymore, but as close as you can be while being married, with children, and living in the N.Y. 'burbs." Carla's son, Andrew, is nine; Sally's son, Jack, is two; and Barb's daughter, Katie, is almost one. "We have collective expertise in a wide variety of fields: Kim designs consumer education packages for D.E.C. so people can understand the equipment they buy; Sally is a senior manager at General Foods; Barb rates municipal debt for Moody's; and I'm associate general counsel at Drexel, learning more than I ever wanted to know about bankruptcy law." The four roomies are pictured (l-r): Kim, Sally, Carla, and Barb.

Congratulations to Michael Schiano, doctoral candidate in musicology at Brandeis, for winning one of four A.M.S.-50 dissertation fellowships. "Arnold Schoenberg's Grundgestalt and its Influence" is the title of Mike's dissertation, which was honored by the American Musicological Society in a nationwide competition. The holder of a master's degree from the Univ. of London, Mike is "especially interested in the use of computer sciences for music analysis," according to a press release announcing his award.

79

MARTHA KRAMER
27 Northill St., Apt. 6-R
Stamford, CT 06907

SEVENTY-NINERS, M.D.: Ralph Petrilli is an anesthesiologist in Louisville, Ky., and enjoys his time out of the operating room with his wife, Cynthia, and daughter, Laura (1). Joan Wofak is doing additional training in neuroradiology at Louisiana State Univ./Charity Hospital and writes that New Orleans, her new home, is great.

SEVENTY-NINE, TEACHERS: Will Speers received a Natl. Endowment of the Humanities fellowship this past summer to study at St. Michael's College in Vermont. He continues to teach English and serve as director of admissions at St. Andrew's School in Delaware. (The school was pictured in the recent film DEAD POET'S SOCIETY.) Lynn Stout is teaching at Georgetown Univ. Law School, where she is specializing in corporations, takeovers, securities regulation, and law and economics. Seth Chandler, also an alumnus of the DAILY PRINCETONIAN, is teaching law at the Univ. of Houston.

NEWS ROUND-UP: It has been a busy 18 months for Kelth Thompson. First, he married Mary Church (Univ. of Houston '78); classmates in attendance included John Harryman, Dan Alexander, and Tom Brady. Then Exxon Chemicals, for whom he has worked since graduating from Wharton Business School, transferred him to Baytown, Tex., and promoted him to senior engineer. Phil Martin is working for First Chicago Bank in the loan workout dept. and serving as treasurer of the Princeton Club of Chicago.

ANNIVERSARIES: Pamela Garrison Pbelan and her husband, Larry, will soon be observing their tenth wedding anniversary. To celebrate they plan a trip to London and Paris. In London they hope to visit Princetonians Meredith Harrington Gagne and Mary Sykes. Chris Forsman Godly and her husband, Marty, recently celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary with a trip to the Sonoma Valley. Chris recently became the co-director of the Red Bank, N.J. chapter of Birthright, which provides services to pregnant women and babies.

80

PAK D. PARKER
25 Farmhouse La.
Purlong, PA 18925

Bailey Pope married Celia Crenshaw of Memphis, Tenn., on April 21 in Atlanta, where they now live. Princetonians attending included (pictured, l-r): Robert Pavlovich '82 (with Hannah '10), David Seagraves '81, David Gilman, Bailey, John Howell '81, Celia (U.N.C. '81), Phil Pope '47, and Eric Olson. Not shown was sister, Laura Pope Pavlovich '83. Bailey practices architecture in Atlanta with an emphasis on affordable housing, and spoke at Re-

Wanted to Buy

Highest prices paid
for American and European Art,
including paintings, watercolors
and drawings, sculpture and prints
from 18th century to present.
Please contact Stuart P. Feld, '57

Hirsch & Adler
GALLERIES INC.

21 E. 70th St. NY 10021 • (212) 535-8810
Fax: (212) 772-7237

Crapp Family Lodge

The flavor of Austria on a mountainside in Vermont

For information about one of America's most distinguished resorts, please call 1-800-826-7000
in Vermont 802-253-8511
or write Stowe, Vermont 05672

Authors... LOOKING FOR A PUBLISHER?

Learn how to have your book published.

You are invited to send for a free illustrated guidebook which explains how your book can be published, promoted and marketed. Whether your subject is fiction, non-fiction or poetry, scientific, scholarly, specialized, (even controversial) this handsome 40-page brochure will show you how to arrange for prompt publication.

Unpublished authors, especially, will find this booklet valuable and informative. For your free copy, write to:
VANTAGE PRESS, Inc. Dept. Y-69
516 W. 34 St., New York, N.Y. 10001

unions on a panel on homelessness.

For all of you who missed reunions, have already lost, worn out, or otherwise destroyed your Class costume, or simply want an extra, this is your lucky day! There is no need to be out of step with the Class all of the way to the 15th. Class costumes, including children's T-shirts, and Class directories are still available if you act now. For more information and to place an order, call Arlene Pedovitch or Andy Kaufmann at (609) 799-5982.

NEWS FROM ABROAD: Across the Atlantic Ridgely Johnson has now started at the London Business School. His wife, Claudette, works for Bankers Trust there in the global equity area. Across the Pacific, Russell Young is living in Beijing, China, where he works as an associate systems engineer for I.B.M. He was married last year to Hua Lin, a Beijing native. They were recently seen by Bennett Ruschhoff in Washington, D.C., where Bennett has started a solo legal practice dividing his time between taking court-appointed cases on behalf of indigent criminal defendants and representing non-indigent people in general civil litigation.

81 JEAN AMABLE TELLOHANN 50 Riverside Dr., #9F New York, NY 10024

Eltzabeth Nelson Schetler writes that she finally graduated from school after her Grenada invasion experience, but she transferred to podiatry school. She is beginning a two-year surgical residency in Miami, where she and her husband, Donald, love the warm weather. Wally Adams entered the Yale School of Management in Sept. He is working on his master's degree. In June he wrote, "Looking forward to moving back East!" Dana Harrison traveled for seven months last year, then came back to San Francisco, started work for Schwab as director of Electronic Service Delivery and bought a house in Berkeley.

Jim Welch and his family moved to Louisville in July 1989, where Jim is in the acquisitions group of Brown-Porman, which owns, among other things, Jack Daniels, Lenox China, and Hartmann Luggage. Jim saw Phil Wallis and his family in Philadelphia recently, where he also had great fun with Jim Buck and Jim Alton at a Phillies game.

Jim Ludemann has quit Sun Microsystems and started a company called Antares Microsystems, which is now shipping two enhancement products for Sun's SPARCstation computer.

82 TIM DOOLEY KOGUT 12409 Sadler Lane Bowie, MD 20715

BI-CITY MARRIAGES... Kathleen Motes Bennewitz has returned to school to get her M.A. in art history after working as a curatorial assistant at the Amon Carter Museum in Fort Worth, Tex., for the past five years. She'll be in Delaware for the next one-and-a-half years while her husband, Scott '79, will be staying in Dallas working for Frito-Lay. Julia Lee Cloud, on the other hand, has just ended her D.C.-N.Y. commute. She left Paine Webber in N.Y. to be a V.P. with Wheat First Securities in Richmond, Va. Now she and Doug can live together in Maryland.

'82ERS SEEING '82ERS. John McCarty was recently visited by Judy and Chris Austin who just started their year-long around-the-world trip. Clini Winters was pleasantly surprised to see Jeff Weinberger on the same basketball court. Now they both will be driving to Christopher Morley Park on L.I. to shoot hoops every weekend. Jim Mackenzie had a visit from Mark and Vera Trojan Carthy last Aug. They spent a beautiful Saturday at the races in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., where Vera decided to wager a few bills on "Princeton Grad" (a 30 to 1 shot). Unfortunately, the hapless horse came in dead last by ten lengths, but they had a great time anyway.

NEW BIRTHS. Theodore James Keenan was born on Oct. 8, 1989, to Deborah and Jim Keenan. Jim got his M.B.A. from Wharton on May 14, 1990, and now works for Manufacturers Hanover in N.Y.C. in their strategic planning area. Eduardo Maricbal and his wife have two daughters, Ana Isabel (2) and Gabriela (5 months). Eduardo is practicing ob./gyn. in Gainesville, Fla. Jean Ramirez Monioya is remarried to an Assembly of God asst. pastor and recently gave birth to her daughter, Sonia. Jean is an asst. prof. of law at the Univ. of San Diego. Last Valentine's Day Joshua Douglas was born to Doug and Janice French Prager '83 before they left Hawaii. Now Doug, Janice, Joshua, and Jennifer (3), are in Augsburg, Germany, where Doug is a staff internist at an army hospital.

83 GAIL FRANCK 345 West 87th St., Apt. 3F New York, NY 10024

The occasion is Linda Riefler and Kit Boyatt's wedding, Sept. 23, 1989. Seems it took a year to find the picture. Princetonians included (l-r) John Olson '55, Ambassador Thomas D. Boyatt '55, Amy Scholtz (hidden), Sam Davidson, Tim Wheeler, Lisa Brown '82, Jamie Dryfus '82, Betsy Kenny, Linda, Bill Kenny, Paul Bartlet '82 (hidden), Kit, Natalie Bocock, Stewart Hartmeyer '84 (hidden), India Cutler, Kari Dolan, Kim Meyer, Martha Russo '84, Betty Logan, Kathleen Mahoney '82, David Wagstaff Sr., Dennis Burns '55, and Don Sutherland.

Lydia Marti sent this picture with news from Thailand. She is taking a year off from practicing law in Chicago to teach English at Payap Univ. The picture (l-r) shows Jim Edmunds (fellow teacher), Lydia, Rob Pease, Carol Wingard and their son Zander. Rob is the director of Princeton in Asia. Lydia will be in Chiang Mai until March 1991 and welcomes any '83 travelers.

84 TIMOTHY C. WU Beacon Court, 175 Beacon St., Apt. 413 Somerville, MA 02143

A PHILADELPHIA STORY... Mark Wilf married Jane Frieder (Univ. of Colorado) at the Hotel Atop the Bellevue in Philadelphia on Oct. 29. Princetonians present at the ceremony included (standing, l-r): Jeremy Feigelson, Bob Bruce, Ray Gonzalez, Peter Seiden '86, Jane, Mark, Jeremy Ben-Ami, Elizabeth Sanchez Soriano '83, (sitting, l-r): Timothy Wu, John Sortano, and Karen Klitzman. The Class of '84 contingent was heavily tilted towards those engaged in the legal profession: Mark graduated from N.Y.U. School of Law in 1987; Jeremy F. is a third-year law student and editor of the Law Review at the Univ. of Chicago; Ray is an attorney with Warner Brothers Records, Inc. in L.A.; John is an associate with Simpson Thacher and Bartlett in N.Y.C.; and Jeremy B. is the asst. commissioner of the N.Y.C. Human Resources Administration, a job he took upon graduating from N.Y.U. Law School in June. As for the two non-lawyer Class of '84ers present, Karen is an economist with the N.Y. Mercantile Exchange, and Bob is asst. V.P. of Tribal Assets Management, a firm engaged with Native American financial ventures, based in Portland, Me. Mark is currently a partner in Garden Homes, a real-estate development company in Short Hills, N.J., while Jane is an associate producer at MTV's HA TV Comedy Network in N.Y.C. Following their wedding, Mark and Jane embarked upon a four-week long honeymoon tour through Asia.

85 ROB JURANEK 1578 Oak Ave., Apt. 1 Evanston, IL 60201

FAMILY AFFAIRS: Pictured is Jeff Berger's excuse for missing our fabulous fifth. The middle Tiger is the latest edition, Adina Naomi Berger, who came calling over reunions weekend. Jeff is currently specializing in biophysics in the M.D.-Ph.D. program at Penn. "I hope to graduate before Adina matriculates at Old Nassau," he says.

Lt. Bill Baker, now back on the East Coast, has a baby daughter, Allison Christine, born May 3, 1990.

Butch Brodie continues to overwhelm his opposition on the rugby pitch where, barefoot, he plays second row for the Univ. of Chicago. He is also subtly honing his cocktail discourse through his Ph.D. study of snake evolution. Congratulations to Andrew Young, who married Stephanie Scheer (Harvard '85) on Oct. 27 in Boston.

Mike Bator graduated from Wharton in June, married Bianca O'Connell '86 in Sept., and now works in Boston for the Boston Consulting Group.

Brian Bonnyman and his wife recently moved to Charlottesville, where he is in his first year of family practice residency at U.Va. They recently had dinner with Don Kruger, who teaches music at nearby, illustrious Woodberry Forest School.

86 SALLIE KIM 2645 California St., Apt. 303 Mountain View, CA 94040

Todd Laurence writes that he has joined the throngs of NINKHEDS (No Incomes, No Kids, Huge Educational Debts) by getting married (pictured), giving up his job at Arthur Andersen, and entering business school at U.C.L.A. Todd married Monica Keenan (Bucknell '86) on Oct. 28, 1989, in the Princeton Chapel. Pictured are (front row) Ken Umezaki, Flo Madrid '88, Roberta Conner, Todd, Monica, Wade Thomas, Nicole Sandler Resnick '88, Dan Resnick '87, (second row) Ed Zschau, Charlie Thompson, Christian Kemp-Griffin, Kate Kemp-

Griffin, James Fiscber, Vince MacAneney, Jack Arduin '82, Jonathan Cohen '85, (back row) Bert Laurence '62, Doug Bootbe, and Gary Squires. (Not pictured: Allison Davenport.)

Todd, our Class V.P., also says that anyone interested in finding out about young alumni events should give him a call at 213-826-4174.

It has been four years since John Hiller has suffered his cerebral hemorrhage, but his father writes that he is doing well in a wheelchair and still undergoing extensive speech and exercise therapy. John enjoys television, going to concerts, and hearing from his friends.

87 MARY TAYLOR DENKO
1935 Seville St.
Santa Rosa, CA 95403

The sun was shining in Seattle when Daniel Mytelka married Christine Chen '89 on June 25, 1989. Princetonians present were (l-r) Daniel, Christine, Will Zimmerman, Ted Bunn '89, Rose Chen '93, Andrew Mytelka '85, Seth Katz '89, Rebecca Mancoll '90, Natalie Giance '89, Dave Hull '88, Dave Isaacson, Parham Ganchi, Robert Hine '89, and Arnold Mytelka '58. Christine and Daniel are now at Berkeley studying biophysics and genetics, respectively.

Also at Berkeley is Glenn Shepard. Glenn was awarded the Ira Abraham Sr. and Georgina Koening Abraham Scholarship for doctoral studies in medical anthropology.

Matt Handel is at M.I.T.'s Sloan School "working like a dog." To break away from school pressures, Matt took a trip to Ireland last year, and brewed some of his own beer at home. Karen Anderson is working toward her Ph.D. in public health from Yale's med school. She was awarded her M.P.H. last spring. Shbelley Scruggs, a Ph.D. student, studies in the E.E.C.S. depy. at the Univ. of Michigan. Lee Garth, at the Univ. of Illinois, is also an E.E. student. Lee took a break from studies last year and devoted time to London's and Amsterdam's homeless while on a six-month tour of Europe. Nili Abrahamsson joined the Peace Corps last summer, and is now in Poland.

Cindy Enger moved to Chicago and works as an attorney for McDermott, Will & Emery. Cindy graduated from N.Y.U. Law last spring.

88 CHRISTOPHER LU
206E Holden Green
Cambridge, MA 02138

CLASS OFFICER CORNER—Contrary to popular belief, the Class officers don't spend their days thinking of new ways to pester you for money; we actually have jobs (except for me). President Karen Bowdre recently received her master's in public administration from Villanova and is now working for Bell Atlantic in the executive development program.

V.P. Bill Bowman is working for North Pier, a real-estate company in Chicago. Enjoying the Calif. sun is Treasurer Cyndie Feaster Washington, who is in the financial section of Household Credit Services. Back at Old Nassau, Class Agent Liz Duffy is the director of the Student Volunteers Council and an assistant master of Rockefeller College. Finally, Bruce Wetner, our reunions chairman, is in London working for American Express.

Josh Yamamoto married Morag Meade last May 15 in Leesburg, Va. Pictured include Dave August and Michael Dennin. Also at the wedding were Zizzy Zenowich and Ellen Goldberg. Josh writes: "The ringbearer pictured is my new son, Travis, who just recently turned nine. We are all living outside Hanoi, N.H., where I am a first-year student at Dartmouth Med."

We're looking for volunteers to help plan the fifth reunion (costume design, entertainment, etc.) or serve as regional V.P.s (local alumni activities). If interested, call Karen Bowdre at 215-293-9284.

89 DAVID MILLER
4698 S. 36th St.
Arlington, VA 22206

Iraq may be the "in" Mideast trouble spot, but Wendy Bower Greppin hasn't forgotten there's another war still on, you know. Wendy went to Pakistan last Aug. to visit husband Carl '87, who was a summer intern at a cement factory, and celebrated their first anniversary. They are pictured here in a "weapon bazaar" in Darra Adamkhel, Pakistan. Carl's holding an anti-aircraft gun; Wendy's the one with the rocket launcher.

Tom Hagedorn and Laura Landweber were married June 21 in Prospect House with an all-Princeton wedding party of Suzie Hagedorn, Joe Reisert, Richard Schnee, Jill Sigman, and Dorit Wuensch. Also attending were Tom Cuniff, David Daniels, and Henry Ricardo. Both Tom and Laura are enjoying their second year of Harvard grad school, Tom in mathematics, Laura in molecular biology. No word yet on their first anniversary plans.

Jane Chapman received her M.A. in English from the Univ. of Chicago, and is now working as the editorial assistant for its alumni magazine, where part of her job is writing and editing Class news. Class Treasurer Nuala O'Connor is her counterpart at our very own PAW, editing the class notes you are reading now. Nuala is also assistant master of Wilson College and was recently elected to the Cloister Inn grad board. Also in the editing biz, Class Secretary David Miller is assistant editor at INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC INSIGHTS, a new economic policy journal published by a Washington think tank. He has also been writing freelance economics articles for the INDEPENDENT of London.

Mark T. Reed is working for the Variety Club of the Pacific Northwest, a charitable organization, and "learning a lot about fundraising, P.R. and media relations." (Also discovered that "nonprofit IS long hours and low pay." Pass it on.) Marian Stover has been a naturalist at Potomac Overlook Regional Park in Arlington, Va., since last March.

Young Alumni Activities

PRINCETON ASSOCIATION OF NEW ENGLAND: Dec. 13: Black-tie holiday party at the Charles Hotel. For more info., please call Adrienne Della Penna '88 at 617-861-8254.

PC OF NEW YORK: Dec. 6: Thursday Night Club in the Tiger Bar & Grill; Dec. 10: Movie—GREMLINS II, 8 P.M., at the club, free; Dec. 14: Triangle Club dinner package—please call for info.; Dec. 20: Young Alumni Holiday Party, at the club, 6:30-8:30; Jan. 3: Thursday Night Club; Jan. 14: Movie—PRESUMED INNOCENT, 8 P.M., free. For reservations for the movies, holiday party, or dinner package, please call the manager's office at 212-840-6400.

PC OF NORTHERN CALIF.: Dec. 29: Symposium with Marvin Bressler, prof. of sociology. Call Angela K. Clark '85 with questions, 609-258-5844.

PC OF HOUSTON: Young (and relatively young) alumni, events are planned for Dec. 1990, Feb., Apr., and June 1991. Call Gretchen Manias at 713-667-9344.

Contact Debbie Braedel at the Alumni Council with notices of events for inclusion in this column. Please submit information at least six weeks prior to the event. Call or write: the Alumni Council, Maclean House, Princeton Univ., Princeton, NJ 08544.

HOW DO YOU GET THE PAW?

You get your PAW, year in and year out, thanks largely to class dues. If you haven't been paying your class dues, act now!

Dues make the difference!

THE ALUMNI COUNCIL

90

BRETT GOODMAN
22 Berkeley Terrace
Livingston, NJ 07039

Congratulations to the Class's first parent—to our knowledge, that is! Annette Pein sends us the news that Rica Yamamoto, wife of Harald Fuess, gave birth to Elisabeth on April 11. Annette is at Harvard studying Slavic languages, and Harald is there too, studying Japanese history. Congratulations as well to Jen Kosowsky, who tied the knot over the summer with Dror Michaelson '89. The couple was wed in Boston before moving to N.Y.C. to attend the Albert Einstein School of Medicine.

Three classmates have written to tell of their recent engagements. Lori Herold, who's at M.I.T. for a Ph.D. in physics, is planning a June 1992 wedding to Jonathan Jacobson '89 in the University Chapel. In addition, the big day for Andy Krivosvik and Susan Lyon is Aug. 10, 1991. In the meantime, Andy is studying towards an M.D.-Ph.D. at the Univ. of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Furthermore, Jenny Zoler will wed Jon Douchis (Harvard '90) in June 1991. Jon attends Stanford Med School and Jenny is job-hunting in the Bay Area.

Speaking of families (now there's a transition), Maria von Boibmer works in the parent-child center at St. Luke's Hospital in N.Y.C. She spends her days with children, aged four and under, and teaches parenting skills to the children's mommies and daddies.

As this column is written, Bill Bradley '65 is about one week away from getting re-elected for another six years in Washington. We hope he heartily thanks Benton Fisher, Scott Gibbs, Joe Verga, and Jason Weinstein, all of whom worked on the campaign in either D.C. or N.J.

Mala Battin, Tray Medina, and Beth Strong are apparently adapting to life in the Minnesota tundra. They're living together in Minnetonka and marketing Apple Cinnamon Cheerios, Garfield Fruit Snacks, and Hamburger Helper for General Mills.

Finally, a word from good ol' Princeton. Kimberly Chu writes, "I am now officially Class of '91, but please don't forget me. I took last year off and went to Tiawan."

91

BECKY JOHNSON
152 Little Hall
Princeton University Campus

The Class of '91 is having a great and spirited year. The Halloween Party, storytelling party for area children, reception at the Art Museum for nearby senior citizens, Pub Nite with Project '91, showing of PRETTY WOMAN with the Class of '92, Yale tailgate at Yale, Dartmouth tailgate, and "Career Week," for which the Class would like to extend thanks to all the alumni who helped in making it a huge success, all drew big crowds of smiling seniors. Upcoming events include a Christmas Party and a trip to Atlantic City. While '91ers are enjoying their last fall at Princeton, for most, the dreaded T-word is still off in the future somewhere.

93

OWEN KERN, MARK POAG
53 Holder Hall, 211 1940 Hall
Princeton University Campus

The Class of '93 has been busy in the past few weeks, what with four sophomore women crewbies winning the Head of the Charles, another sophomore football player winning Ivy League Sophomore of the Week honors, and the Class government sponsoring coed jello wrestling.

The women's youth fours boat of Faith Freeman, Laura Dalston, Fay Hanley, Sarah Killien, and Suzy Cleary beat 16 other boats at the Head of the Charles. This is the second consecutive year that a Princeton women's youth four boat has won the prestigious race. In football Erick Hamilton became the third Princeton sophomore to win Ivy League Sophomore of the Week honors. Hamilton, the starting tailback for the Tigers all year, rushed for over 100 yards for the second time this season, and joins sophomores Aaron Harris and Michael Lerch as a recipient of this honor.

Never has Princeton seen anything like the Jello wrestling extravaganza held in Dillon Gym on Oct. 17 and sponsored by the Class of '93. "We just thought it would be a fun thing to do and would draw a big crowd," said Josh Mezrich, co-chairman of the study-break committee. Dennis Curran provided no-holds-barred commentary on the action and made the more dull matches interesting. Probably the most exciting match of the evening pitted David Morrow and Chuck Herrick against the Val Tomasello and Adelle Bruni. The ladies appeared overmatched when the David and Chuck came charging out of the locker room and quickly stripped down to their speedos. But the women, undaunted by what they saw, used teamwork and a surprising knowledge of the sport to better the men to the delight of the crowd. Other sophomores wrestling were: Mike Kotin, Kirstie Copeland, Adam Cohn, Susan Chang, John Zolnikoff, Britt Fair, Andy Saland, Darren MacNaughton, Rick Hartley, Seiji Tsuzuki, Dave Walton, Dan Shea, Carlyn Kenny, Patricia Kelly, Stephanie Fox, Zibby Hammond, Mike Moule, Bill Dawes, Rob Dyer, Justin Gob, John Cabral, Russell Grandinetti, Mark Feuerstein, Alex Soutwell, and Roy Lapidus.

GS

VIVIAN G. HENSHAW JR. '48
1573 Kirkley Rd.
Columbus, OH 43221

*01-59

ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY: From Washington, D.C., William Loerke '57 reports, "My article, 'A Rereading of the Interior Elevation of Hadrian's Rotunda,' appeared in the JOURNAL OF THE SOCIETY OF ARCHITECTURAL HISTORIANS, XLIX, 1, March 1990."

CHEMICAL ENGINEERING: Writes Robert A. Snedeker '56, "Retired last year (1989), bought a condo on a golf course here in North Reading, Mass., (near where I worked 20-plus years in paper manufacturing), and rang doorbells for the U.S. Census Bureau." And Robert F. Hoffmann '58 tells us: "Recently appointed as environmental affairs director for the polyurethanes group (division) of I.C.I. Americas; responsible for environmental and societal affairs for the company—including public affairs (D.C. office); safety, health, and environmental affairs and communications; also personnel director for the group." Meanwhile, Keith McHenry '58 writes us, "Promoted July 1, 1989 to senior V.P., technology, of Amoco Corp. Responsible for coordination of technology development, acquisition, and use across the corporation."

CHEMISTRY: "Last year," writes Gilbert P. Haight Jr. '46, "Tom Spiro and the chem. dept. library tried to find my WWII thesis—and failed. I was forbidden to keep a copy since it was classified work for the Manhattan Project. Submitted in Sept. 1946, its title was ANALYTICAL PROCEDURES DEVELOPED FOR USE ON THE MANHATTAN PROJECT. It would be nice to have it in my collected works file. Can the Grad School help?" And from Westfield, N.J., honoris causa member of the A.P.G.A. board, Robert S. Miner Jr. reports: "Completed late Winter lectures for Brazilian government near Rio on 'Current Good Manufacturing Practice for Bulk Pharmaceutical Chemicals.' Invited to come to Argentina (Buenos Aires) next year to do the same. Just signed a two-year consulting contract with S.R.I. Int. In other words, at two months' short of 72 years of age, I'm still going strong as a consultant. Trying to emulate my friend, Prof. Hubert Alyea '28." We learn that Henry L. Hsieh '57, senior scientist, Phillips Petroleum Co., was written up in a series of articles called "Polymer Science Engineers," Vol. 14, No. 9, POLYMER NEWS, 1989. And we likewise learn that Samuel S. Markowitz '57 at U.C.—Berkeley, was elected chairman-elect for 1990 of the Calif. section of the American Chemical Society. He becomes chairman in 1991.

GS

CHRISTOPHER KEANE '86
31183 Lakemont Dr.
San Ramon, CA 94583

*76-90

CIVIL ENGINEERING: Zbigniew Jan Kabala '88 reports that he has joined the faculty of U.C.—Riverside as an asst. prof., effective March 16, 1990. Previous to that he held a one-year post-doctoral appointment at U.C.—Berkeley.

EAST ASIAN STUDIES: Raffaello Orlando '81 writes that he is living in Rome with his wife, Chi-mei, and son. He is currently teaching clarinet in the Italian Conservatory of Music. For the past several years he has been performing recitals internationally, often in conjunction with his wife, who is a pianist.

ECONOMICS: Albert Smiley '78 has recently become chief executive officer of Smiley Bros., Inc. This organization owns and operates Mohonk Mountain House, which is a natl. historic landmark in the mid-Hudson Valley of N.Y. state. Previously, he had been the director of research at the economic analysis group of the justice dept. antitrust division.

ENGLISH: Elatine Miller '90 reports that "life is great" and that she has a wonderful job at the Univ. of Puerto Rico. In addition to living in a house on the ocean, she has been elected secretary of the College English Assn.—Caribbean branch. Anita Schorsch '86 has just completed and designed the Museum of Mourning at Arlington Cemetery, Drexel Hill, Penn. In June she finished up a four-year stay at the Center of Theological Inquiry in Princeton.

GERMANIC LANGUAGES AND LITERATURES: Though the news is a bit late reaching us, we congratulate Lee A. Brewda '81 for being awarded the title of chartered financial analyst in Nov. 1988 by the Inst. of Chartered Financial Analysts, Charlottesville, Va.

HISTORY: Due to a communication mixup, our Oct 10 issue related news of a "John Fleming," who is actually James R. Fleming '88. To recap, he has had a new book, METEOROLOGY IN AMERICA, 1800-1870, published by the Johns Hopkins Univ. Press.

MECHANICAL AND AEROSPACE ENGINEERING: Since July 1990, Charles E. K. Morris Jr. has been assistant director of the Natl. Aerospace Plane Office at NASA headquarters in Washington, D.C.

NEAR EASTERN STUDIES: Marilyn Mayers '84 is a research associate at the School of Public Health at the Univ. of Washington. On a happy note, she had a baby girl, Sasa, last July. She would be happy to talk to Princetonians about job prospects and general life in Seattle.

POLITICS: Timothy Louvain '78 is V.P. and general counsel of Denny Miller Associates, a lobbying firm in Washington, D.C. He is also president of Zero Population Growth.

RELIGION: We have good news: In Dec. 1989, Paula Fredriksen '79 received the 1988 Governors' Award from the Board of Governors of the Yale Univ. Press for her book, FROM JESUS TO CHRIST: THE ORIGINS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT IMAGES OF JESUS. The award honors a distinguished work of creative scholarship published by the press and written by an author under 40 years of age. She is currently serving as associate prof. of religion at the Univ. of Pittsburgh. George Wilson Ramsey '68 was recently named the Outstanding Professor of the Year at Presbyterian College, Clinton, S.C. He is currently chairman of the religion, Greek, and philosophy dept., and is the Kristen Herrington Prof. of Bible.

Charles Rellstab Howell '27

CHARLES DIED OCT. 8, 1990, his 88th birthday, in the house of his son, Thomas, at Mt. Laurel, N.J. There he had spent his years of retirement, after a ministry of four decades in Presbyterian churches. Everywhere he devoted special attention to religious education and ministry to youth, and was involved in local education and social service.

His son, Thomas, reports that despite the pressure of many pastoral duties, Charles still found time to read the Bible, cover to cover, twice a year, and to carry a huge correspondence with former parishioners. He was fond of gardening, hiking, and swimming, and of bringing up an adopted son, Thomas C. Howell, who helped in composing this memorial.

In reporting for 1927's TWENTY YEAR RECORD, Charles wrote: "There is not much to report by way of success story except that I have enjoyed my work and life immensely since leaving college." Well, how else does one define success? His life seems to typify those of innumerable pastors who, rather than fame, win souls for the Christian life.

The Class of 1927

James Bateman '28

JIM BATEMAN died April 23, 1990, at his winter home in Paradise Valley, Scottsdale, Ariz. He prepared for college at Culver Academy. At Princeton he majored in psychology and was a member of Charter Club.

After graduation he worked in Philadelphia and Chicago for almost 25 years with W. E. Cooper & Sons, manufacturer of industrial textiles. From 1943 to 1945 he served in the U.S. Navy in New Guinea and Australia and attained the rank of Lt. commander.

After two years with Iden Associates in Chicago, he founded his own company in 1954, Ventfabrics, in heating and air conditioning supplies. In 1987 he sold the business to its employees.

Jim was active in numerous civic organizations in Northbrook and Winnetka, including Community Chest, Park Commission, and Board of Education. He played golf and was an amateur ornithologist.

Jim was married to Beatrice (Betsy) Kearns Dec. 17, 1937. She survives him, as do two sons, James Jr. and Christopher, two grandchildren, and the widow of a cousin William C. Elliott '30, now deceased.

Jim maintained his interest in Princeton, and will be remembered with the admiration and affection of his classmates. Our deep sympathy is with Betsy and their family.

The Class of 1928

William Carson Bodine '28

BILL BODINE, a lawyer in Philadelphia throughout his career, died April 29, 1990, at the Devon Manor Nursing Home in Devon, Penn. He went to Kent School. At Princeton he majored in politics and was a member of Colonial Club. He graduated in 1932 from the Univ. of Penn. law school and entered the practice of law with a large firm, Pepper, Hamilton, et al.

Bill became a director of several companies and served as a trustee and acting president of the board of trustees of the Curtis Inst. of Music. He was the first person to be honored by the award of honorary trusteeship by Curtis Institute. He enjoyed golf at the Sunnybrook Country Club, and delighted in horseback riding around Chester City, where he was raised. He served during WWII as a Lt. commander with the U.S. Naval Reserve in the Bureau of Naval Personnel.

Bill married Lois Holding March 17, 1934. She died April 16, 1988. Their children are Mrs. Sheila Schindler and Mrs. Margaret Wallis. One of three grandchildren is Sophie Schindler '87. Bill's grandfather was William Budd Bodine, Class of 1860. Joseph L. Bodine, also Class of 1860, was a great-uncle, and another Joseph L. Bodine '05 was a cousin. To his daughters and their families go the grateful remembrances and heartfelt sympathy of Bill's classmates.

The Class of 1928

Edward Coe Embury '28

RED EMBURY died June 6, 1990, at the Winchester (Va.) Medical Center. After Lawrenceville he studied architecture at Princeton, and was a member of Charter Club. He joined the architectural firm of his father, Aymar Embury II '00, who designed Tiger Inn and Elm Club. Red served in the U.S. Army and was with the Air Transport Command in North Africa and Europe during WWII, attaining the rank of Lt. colonel.

Red designed the Children's Zoo in Central Park, the new wing of the mayor's residence in N.Y.C., Gracie Mansion, the Congregational Church in Scarsdale, and numerous other school, club, and residential buildings. However, members of the Class think mainly of Red's famous mural cartoons depicting the ongoing history of the Class from 1933 to 1988, which have formed a backdrop of decoration for our reunions throughout the years, and were donated to the University last year.

Marguerite Haynes, a landscape architect, married Ted (as she called him) July 29, 1939. She died July 1, 1989. They had two sons, Philip and Edward Jr., and there are several grandchildren.

Red was an active church officer, a man of great integrity, outreaching friendliness, and an unflinching sense of humor. He was a member of the executive committee of the Class, and was always active in Princeton affairs. Our sympathy is with his sons and their families.

The Class of 1928

William Waller Carson Jr. '42

WALLIE DIED Jan. 29, 1990, in Brookfield, Wisc., his home for many years. He came to Princeton as a member of the Class of 1941, leaving the campus at the end of sophomore year to work in his family's business for a year. He returned to Princeton in the fall of 1940, joining our Class as a junior. He majored in philosophy and was a member of Gateway Club.

During the war Wallie served as a second Lt. in field artillery and received both the Bronze and Silver Star medals for courage.

Following the war and his promotion to Captain, he returned to Princeton and was graduated cum laude in June 1946. He then entered Harvard Business School and received his M.B.A. with honors in Nov. 1947, remaining at Harvard as a junior faculty member for the next three years. He subsequently taught at the Northwestern Univ. School of Commerce in Evanston, Ill., for three years before leaving in 1953 to work with his father in Velvac, Inc., a small family-owned company. He was instrumental in building the company into a major player in brake and truck equipment.

In addition to his business activities he pursued a lifelong interest in youth and the outdoors—camping, swimming, and canoeing. He was deeply involved in working with and for the handicapped. At age 66, Wallie took up scuba diving at the Cousteau Society summer camp in the Caribbean.

To Wallie's widow, Rosalie; his brother, Col. William B. Chase; his sisters, Julia and Mary; his sons, William and Ken; daughters, Wendy and Sue; and Walter W. White '44, Wallie's brother-in-law and close friend, the Class extends its sincerest sympathies.

The Class of 1942

Harold Christian Roser Jr. '42

HAL DIED June 13, 1990, of heart failure at N.Y. Hospital. At the time of his death he was retired from the Exxon Corp., where he had worked since 1953. Prior to that he had spent ten years in the Foreign Service, serving both in Europe and Asia.

Hal came to Princeton via Columbia High School in Maplewood, N.J., and majored in politics in the School of Public and International Affairs.

Among the posts he held within Exxon were director and V.P. of Esso Eastern Chemicals, V.P. of Exxon Enterprises, V.P. of Exxon Education Foundation and Executive V.P. of American Cyrogenics of Atlanta, an Exxon affiliate. As a manager of Exxon's Community Development Programs, he initiated many cultural, educational, and philanthropic programs.

Hal was also active in the United Way and had been on the board of the N.Y. Blood Center. Following his retirement from Exxon in 1982, he helped organize and develop Business Radio Network. Hal and his family divided their time between Manhattan and Southampton, L.I.

To his wife, Cecilia, and his son, Lorin '70, the Class extends its sincerest sympathies.

The Class of 1942

Ross Campbell Shaw '42

ROSS DIED June 12, 1990, at his home in Port St. Lucie, Fla., where he had lived since 1981. At the time of his death, which culminated a five-year struggle with emphysema, he was retired, having spent most of his career with Dupont, Garlock Packing Co., and the J. V. Calhoun Equipment Co. as an equipment engineer.

Ross joined the Class of 1942 after attending Episcopal Academy in Philadelphia. He majored in chemical engineering and was a member of Cloister Inn. Following graduation he worked for E. I. Dupont and was involved with the Manhattan Project during the war.

Ross and his wife, Dorothy, moved from the Philadelphia area to Port St. Lucie following his retirement in 1980. Ross loved young people and they loved him. He served as a coach and manager of Little League teams and taught a Sunday school class of teenagers at the Wayne, Penn., Presbyterian Church. Following the move to Florida, Ross became an avid and excellent tennis player. He also owned a boat which brought many happy hours to him and Dorothy.

Despite his debilitating illness, he never felt sorry for himself or lost his sense of humor, even when he was on oxygen 24 hours a day. Dorothy reported that he always found something to enjoy in life right to the very end.

To his widow, Dorothy, to his two sons, Ross Jr. and Bruce, and to his daughters, Cynthia, Linda, and Karen, the Class extends its most sincere sympathies.

The Class of 1942

John F. Pribonic '48

JOHN PRIBONIC died of a heart attack May 17, 1990 in Dayton, Ohio, his home for the past 42 years.

John was born in Akron, Ohio, Feb. 25, 1924, and attended Buchtel High School. After graduation he joined the Marine Corps and came to Princeton with the V-12 Program in the fall of 1944. John majored in mechanical engineering and was a member of Key and Seal, J. V. football, and the track team.

After graduation John began a successful career with Delco Products Division of G. M. During his career he had 23 patents. He retired in 1980, and subsequently divided his time between Dayton, Oh., and Lighthouse Point, Fla.

Over the years he was involved with the Engineers Club of Dayton and Professional Engineers Assn. of Ohio, and was president of Princeton Alumni of Dayton, and the Society of Automotive Engineers. He was very active in the Republican Party and many community projects.

Although John returned to Princeton for only three reunions and visited the campus occasionally on business trips, he often reminisced about his happy days at Princeton and the friendships that lasted his lifetime.

John is survived by his wife, Donna; two sons, David and Mark; and one grandson, John David.

The Class of 1948

It takes a special eye to appreciate it.

P E U G E O T
Beyond the obvious.SM

1991 405 models from $15,300 to $21,700.* Call 1-800-447-2882. In Canada 1-416-566-1900. *MSRP Excludes tax, title, options, registration and destination charges.

How you see the Peugeot 405 S depends on how you look at it.

A glance will probably note the leather seats, but miss the two densities of foam used to eliminate seat springs which transmit road vibration. It might take in the six-speaker anti-theft AM/FM cassette stereo system, but miss the hydraulic-powered anti-lock braking system.

A more discerning eye will see Peugeot's passion for building cars which do not sacrifice any one element for another, but aim to provide the optimum balance of all aspects of the car.

Something which, if you haven't yet experienced, you are certain to appreciate.

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

DECEMBER 19, 1990

*"It's not all gimme, gimme, gimme! Here's one from Princeton University.
They want to confer an honorary degree on you—Doctor of Humanitarian Service."*

IVY LEAGUE BASKETBALL PREVIEW

Serving on a Presidential Council

Last year, I was invited to be one of the dozen members of President Bush's Council of Advisers on Science and Technology (PCAST). I was the sole economist on a committee otherwise made up of distinguished scientists and engineers and chaired by Dr. Allan Bromley, the president's science adviser. Serving on the council has been an honor and a challenge, and I'd like to share some reflections on my experience to date.

The council has a number of overlapping functions—all of them advisory to the president through Dr. Bromley. One is to help inform key federal policy-makers of recent developments in science and technology relevant to various federal issues. We also recommend policies to strengthen the nation's research and development (R&D) base. Third, we help evaluate the effects of various federal policies or policy initiatives—for example, tax law—on the science and technology base. The fourth charge is to contribute to policy discussion and analysis regarding technology transfer, that is, ways new understandings of the natural world get translated into products and processes that generate economic and social dividends such as improved economic competitiveness or health care. Finally, the council is charged to play a role, as may be requested, to advise on the coordination of federal policy in science and technology that stretches across various agencies and congressional committees.

As you can see, the scope of the council's responsibilities is potentially quite broad. We began our work with a four-hour meeting with President Bush at Camp David. Our group's first challenge was to articulate an agenda for that meeting; selecting an agenda of finite size for this rare opportunity proved to be a daunting task indeed.

For one thing, it was very difficult restricting ourselves to issues of which we had special knowledge—I, at least, had many things I wished to discuss with the president! As Winston Churchill said, the only problem with democracy is that only those out of power know how to fix things. We had to keep our sights focused squarely on science and technology despite the temptation to speak to the president about other large and critical issues.

Four hours is a lot of a president's time, but not a lot of time for even a preliminary examination of the long list of issues within our charge and expertise. It was difficult to concur on what we should cover. After many hours of discussion, with each of us advocating our own perspectives, we finally agreed to submit a list of a dozen or so topics and let the president choose what he was most eager to discuss. Of these, the president selected three topics on which to concentrate our initial discussion: global change, science and mathematics education, and economic competitiveness.

As a result of that discussion, we decided to form a panel of experts in the area of global change to learn more about its nature and impact. This is, of course, a highly controversial area where much remains to be learned, but where policy actions need to be taken before all the necessary information is fully understood—a dilemma often faced by policy-makers.

As for science and math education, it is a tragedy in the classic sense: We see events unfolding before our eyes and we know what to do to improve the situation, but we seem to be paralyzed in our capacity to act. How do we mobilize a complex society to work on the problem?

With respect to economic competitiveness, we continue to focus our attention on how to translate most effectively accomplishments in science into equally extraordinary economic accomplishments. There can be a deep chasm between these two. Indeed, it is my opinion that this divide has been precisely the area of our greatest difficulty in recent years. Simply stated, whether or not we are economically competitive is intimately related to both the nation's R&D base and a wide series of social, political, and cultural arrangements (that is, how members of a society work together toward a common goal).

Other issues that have occupied us include tax policy; big science versus small science, and the role of the individual investigator; and the necessity of building up our country's long-term investments in physical and human capital and research and development. In addition to global change, we have also decided upon special panels in bio-science, education and human resources, and material science and high performance computers. We confer with the president and some of his advisers for about an hour at each of our monthly two-day meetings.

Whether the suggestions of PCAST and its panels will have any impact on federal government policy I cannot predict. As my colleagues and I begin to delineate the issues for the present and the future, I am constantly reminded how vital it is to develop sound policies in these areas, and I am continually aware of the role Princeton can and should play in educating the next generation of scientists, engineers, and public officials knowledgeable about science and technology. I also know that the process has been fascinating and the discussions often profound. I consider it a high privilege to be able to serve the nation in this particular way.

Harold T. Shapiro

"We had to keep our sights focused squarely on science and technology despite the temptation to speak to the president about other large and critical issues."

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

CONTINUING THE ALUMNI PRINCETONIAN, FOUNDED IN 1894

FEATURE

- 6 HENRY MARTIN '48's JOYEUX NOËL
*Princeton's Venerable Cartoonist
Toasts the Season with A Gallery of Drawings*

DEPARTMENTS

- 2 LETTERS
- 4 PRINCETON NOTEBOOK
*Laurance Rockefeller '32 and Steven Weinberg '57 to Receive Alumni Day
Awards; Randall Hack '69 Picked
As New President of PRINCO*
- 5 ON THE CAMPUS
*Maclean Fellow Michael E. Smith '65
Gives His Views on Criminal Justice
by Larry Zygmunt '92*
- 8 BOOKS
- 10 SPORTS
Men's Basketball Shoots for Third Straight Ivy Title; Women's Volleyball Finishes Second in Ivy League
- 16 CLASS NOTES
- 32 MEMORIALS
- 33 FIRST PERSON
Hot on the Heels of Women's Liberation by Nicholas H. Morgan '75

IVY LEAGUE
BASKETBALL PREVIEW

On the Cover

Everyone knows that Santa Claus went to Princeton, right? For more of cartoonist Henry Martin's slant on the holidays, see pages 6 and 7.

FROM THE ARCHIVES

In 1954, the annual holiday-season tour of the Triangle Club featured this lineup of beauties from "Bryn Maw-rocco College." The setting of the show, Tunis, Anyone?, was North Africa, and the plot revolved around the efforts of an American archaeologist named Kidna Stone and her daughter Rosetta to foil a kidnapping. Manning the traditional all-male kickline were Bill Rosser '56, Joe Knox '56, Berdine Groel '57, Fred Cline '56, Larry Day '55, and Jim Walker '56.

PHOTO BY ALAN W. RICHARDS

J. I. MERRITT '66, Editor

ANDREW C. MYTELKA '85, Managing Editor
NUALA O'CONNOR '89, Assistant Editor
STACY M. WIZOLA, Art Director
NANCY S. MACMILLAN, Business Manager
LOLLY O'BRIEN, Advertising Director
R. T. HOWELL, Production Manager
LORRAINE DONEKER, Graphic Assistant

BOARD OF EDITORIAL DIRECTION

EDWARD R. WEIDLEIN '68, Chairman
LISA B. BELKIN GELB '82 • CHRISTOPHER V. CONNELL '71
LONDON Y. JONES '66 • ELLIOTT D. LEE '74
PATRICIA H. MARKS '72 • JOHN A. MCPHEE '53

PUBLICATION BOARD

DOROTHY L. BEDFORD '78, Chairman
ROBERT K. DURKEE '69 • ROBY HARRINGTON III '51
WALTER H. LIPPINCOTT, JR. '60 • PETER O. PRICE '62
PETER G. SMITH '46 • DANIEL N. WHITE '65

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE

ROBERT F. SENNOTT, JR.
Ivy League Magazine Network
254 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001 • (212) 684-5603

LOCAL ADVERTISING/PRINCETON EXCHANGE

LOLLY O'BRIEN (609) 258-4886

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is an independent magazine supported by alumni class subscriptions and by paid advertising. Its purpose is to record news of the alumni and at the same time to review without partiality the achievements and problems of the administration, the faculty, and the student body of Princeton University. The views expressed in the Alumni Weekly are those of signed contributors or the editor and do not necessarily represent official positions of the university.

PUBLISHED BY

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540
Telephone (609) 258-4885

TWX 510-685-2306 UNIV PRSS PRIN • Fax (609) 258-6305

ELECTRONIC PAW BBS: (609) 258-3602

Materials can be transmitted to our offices via telecommunications, using the upload facility in the file-transfer section of the Electronic PAW computer bulletin board system. Its protocols are 300/1200/2400 baud, eight data bits, one stop bit, and no parity. It is online 24 hours a day.

PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY (ISSN 0149-9270)

Vol. 91, No. 7, December 19, 1990
Printed by William Byrd Press, Richmond, Va. Annual subscription $19.50 (foreign postage $5 extra); single copies $1.50. All orders must be paid in advance. Copyright © 1990 Princeton University Press. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Second-class postage paid at Princeton, N.J., and at additional mailing offices.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to PAW Address Changes, 3175 Princeton Pike, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

Historic Stamps

Any Princetonian would be proud to display this first day cover (dated Sept. 22, 1956) commemorating the 200th anniversary of Nassau Hall. Together with a numbered corner block of four, and a singleton, it is handsomely matted in orange and black, and framed in black lacquered wood. $50 plus $4.25 shipping. NJ residents add 7% tax.

the PRINCETON University Store

36 University Place, Princeton, N.J. 08540

Call toll-free: From NJ 1-800-624-4236

Elsewhere in the US, 1-800-631-0137

☐ U-Store ☐ VISA ☐ MasterCard ☐ AmEx

Acct. # _____

Exp. Date _____

Qty. _____

Name _____

Address _____

City, State _____ Zip _____

STEWARTSON-DOUGHERTY
Real Estate Associates
366 Nassau Street
Princeton, N.J. 08540
PHONE: 609-921-7784

NORTH ROAD

In this absolutely prime Township location surrounded by million dollar properties an exquisite decorator's house with every imaginable plus. Ample front hall, beautifully proportioned living room with fireplace and doors to the brick terrace, adjoining formal dining room with skylights and Mexican tile floor. Beautiful new master bedroom suite with cathedral ceiling, its own jacuzzi bath and dressing room; plus two other bedrooms and bath, all on the first floor. Upstairs, two more bedrooms and bath for a total of five bedrooms and three baths. Full finished basement, two-car garage. Central air. All sited on almost three private South facing acres with a myriad of dogwoods, flowering shrubs, etc. plus brick terraces and a swimming pool. Fairly priced at $795,000.

Robert Dougherty '50 Julie Douglas w/'41
Paul Douglas '41 Betsy Stewardson Ford w/'54
Georgia Graham w/'52 J. B. Smith '45
Diane Unruh w/'70 Barbara Broad w/'38
Betty McClelland w/'50 Judy Perrine s/'69

For no obligation—Information about real estate in the Princeton area call (609) 921-7784 or Outside of New Jersey 1-800-542-0067.

REALTORS

Representing Previews Executive HomeSearch

Letters

Princetonians at Oxford

I found your article "Princetonians at Oxford" (PAW, October 24) most interesting. Alumni who might want a pleasant taste of Oxford or Cambridge should consider enrolling in either of these great universities for a month of study during the summer.

Over the last few years I have attended both these schools through programs offered by the University of Texas and Florida State University. I found Cambridge's campus more appealing because of its closer resemblance to Princeton's. Also, Cambridge's library has open stacks and is open for more hours than Oxford's. Punting on the River Cam, although sometimes wet, was always enjoyable. At Oxford, my room at Christ Church College was in a building older than the Alamo. Although the Bodleian Library is about as prestigious as heaven, I found it difficult to use. In the summer, it is open only for limited hours, and you need the equivalent of a passport to get in. The stacks are closed.

Each university offers about a dozen courses to summer students. Any individual or couple enrolling in one of these programs has a private room with a washstand but must share a bathroom. Considering the scholastic opportunities, I did not find sharing the facilities unbearable.

JOHN M. BENNETT '31
La Salle, Tex.

bans. Although the Court's action defines such bans as constitutional, it scarcely follows that they are either necessary or right. I for one am willing to entertain the possibility that the collective wisdom of the university community may exceed that of the Court, and that taking a stand against bigotry and discrimination may have value in and of itself.

Mr. deGolian cites the case of Ben-Shalom vs. Marsh, which affirmed the military ban. That decision in turn was based on the precedent set in the 1986 decision of Bowers vs. Hardwick, in which, by a 5-4 vote, the Court upheld Georgia's sodomy laws as they pertain to gays. Of significant note, retired Justice Lewis Powell, who cast the deciding vote for the majority, said in a recent lecture that he had erred in casting that vote. Had he voted as he now believes he should have, Sergeant Ben-Shalom would be serving honorably, and uncloseted, as would the 10 percent of the military that is most certainly gay. Needless to say, the present debate over R.O.T.C. would be moot.

It is not yet moot, however, and the university should have the moral and intellectual courage to follow the lead of some lesser schools and ban R.O.T.C., because to do so would be both consistent with its own policies and right.

JOHN A. EAKES '75
Philadelphia, Penn.

Nature Conservancy

Regarding David Williamson '84's article on John Sawhill '58 and the Nature Conservancy (PAW, November 7), I fear that, by giving Sawhill the last word, the author reduced my position to that of a spoiler, stressing the Conservancy's few flaws rather than its many virtues.

When Sawhill asserts that "we [the Conservancy] never accept land and then misrepresent what we're going to do with it," I can give him the benefit of the doubt by suggesting that he's not been on the job long enough to know—and that as C.E.O. he may never learn—where, in this regard, all of T.N.C.'s skeletons are hanging.

The Conservancy's Trade Lands Program is an excellent idea that, unfortunately, has been periodically marred by lieutenants who have not made clear to donors or sellers that the woods or farms they were parting with were not going to be maintained by the Conservancy in perpetuity. It is one thing to make a mistake; it's quite another to deny it by claiming infallibility.

Despite a close association with the Conservancy for twenty years, during which I have written many more pieces in praise of the organization than critical of it—including articles in T.N.C.'s own magazine—I still adhere to H. L. Mencken's credo that for scientists or journalists, "loyalty is the first quality of a dog." Shortly after my most recent disclosure about T.N.C. in my conservation column in Field & Stream, one of Sawhill's senior officers wrote me to recall the chess pie he'd enjoyed as a guest in my home Carlo Cannell '85's article on Oxford's student societies (First Person, October 24) referred to the game of "real" tennis. Readers might be interested to know that this game is known as "court" tennis in the United States, "royal" tennis in Australia, and "jeu de paume" in France. Contrary to Mr. Cannell's statement, the racquet used in real tennis isn't "warped" but is asymmetrical to facilitate returning difficult shots to the corners. One of real tennis's major supporters in the U.S. is Peter de Svastich '65.

In the U.S., there are eight active real-tennis courts. One of them is at Georgian Court College, in Lakewood, New Jersey, the former home of the financier and railroad magnate George Gould, son of the legendary Jay Gould.

Oxford also has a long history of competition in the sport of racquets, known on this side of the Atlantic as "hard racquets." It is a cousin of squash, played in a large, slate court with a ball similar to a golf ball.

GUY CIPRIANO '78
South Orange, N.J.

R.O.T.C. and Gays

In response to his letter in the November 7 PAW, I would like to ask William deGolian '72 if the name Dred Scott rings a bell. Mr. deGolian would seem to suggest that the university should take no position on the issue of R.O.T.C. and the military's ban against gays and lesbians, solely because the Supreme Court has upheld such and wondered how someone once so close to the Conservancy could be so "mean-spirited" today. I responded that he reminded me of those self-righteous officials I'd known in the State and Defense departments during the Vietnam War who also believed that because they were doing right, they could do no wrong. T.N.C.'s close co-operation with speculators and profiteers undermines the integrity of every other conservationist's efforts to preserve critical areas.

Like Mencken, I recognize that the primary function of journalism (almost forgotten in a culture dominated by advertising) is to comfort the afflicted and to afflict the comfortable. I couldn't say nothing while wheelers and dealers were using the Conservancy to get extraordinarily comfortable and then demanding that they be honored as conservation giants as well.

The history of the Conservancy's Virginia Coast Reserve offers several such examples. Am I unhappy with its existence? Not at all, for it represents the last largely undeveloped ecosystem of barrier-island beaches, marshes, and bays in the United States. Am I unhappy with the way T.N.C. put this reserve together and enriched a few insiders in the process? Yes, I am. I don't think that, in the war to save nature, generals should swill champagne while troops in the trenches drink mud-stained water.

I'm not naïve. I know that in this war, as many sins will be committed in the name of expediency as are committed in a real war. That doesn't mean, however, that as a journalist, I must obey every order and salute every ally's flag. Civilization is at stake as much as nature, and I don't know what kind of world we'll bequeath to our children if we sacrifice the highest ingredients of the former to save some tokens of the latter.

GEORGE REIGER '60
Locustville, Va.

Tiger Tallsmans

Some of your readers may recall a letter of mine published in PAW two years ago. In it I recounted how the wearing of some "lucky" Princeton device or piece of clothing can help Princeton's football team beat Yale. In the fall of 1988 at the Yale Bowl, I wore my Princeton rugby shirt, an official cloth purchased at great expense from the U-Store. Reeking aura, pulsating with magical Princeton Power, it won the day for us.

On November 10 of this year, I sat in the Yale Bowl, cold, wet, and coated from head to foot with the very worst kind of mud there is—New Haven mud. In retrospect, it is perfectly obvious to me why Yale's football team beat us. Against my better judgment, my wife went ahead and washed my lucky orange-and-black rugby shirt (and not just once, either). The lesson: Guard and protect your Princeton talismans jealously!

I suppose that stronger blocking and passing might have helped. But I hesitate to dwell on such a quarrelsome observation. Even though I am writing this on a Monday morning, I am certainly no quarterback. I'm simply an aging Tiger with a shirt too clean for his own good.

J. MICHAEL O'NEIL '64
Vernon, Conn.

PAW welcomes letters on topics of general interest to alumni. We reserve the right to edit for length and clarity. Our address is PAW, 41 William Street, Princeton, NJ 08540.

Remember the
Good Olde Days
When Sweatshirts Were
Really Thick and Warm?
Ours Are!

Extra heavy reverse weave Champion sweatshirt in silver grey (89% cotton/8% acrylic/3% rayon) with "Princeton" in orange and black lettering. Sizes M, L, XL, XXL. Crewnecks: Princeton - $39.00, Princeton with seal - $39.00, Princeton with back "P" - $42.00, Princeton with sewn-on orange/white letters - $55.00. Hooded: Princeton - $46.00, Princeton with back "P" - $49.00. (Shipping and handling $3.00)

Mail and phone orders welcome.

Use your H. Gross Charge, Visa, MasterCard
or American Express

HOLIDAY STORE HOURS
Mon.-Fri. 9:30-9:00
Saturday 9:30-6:00
Sunday 12:00-5:00

One Palmer Square
Princeton, NJ 08542
609-924-6088

At the sign of the goose...®

IN HISTORIC PRINCETON

If you like friendly country inns where a full course breakfast is served every morning, late night snacks are served every evening, cocktails are served in the living room, where you can relax, even work out... you will love the Compri Club.

All is inclusive... you don't have to worry about a thing, we've combined it into one great club package

$69.00 per Night*

For reservations
call (609) 520-1200

(Compri) Hotel

Route 1 and Ridge Road
100 Independence Way Princeton, N.J. 08540

*Subject To Availability

WATERFRONT ESTATE

Near Salisbury, Md.

43 Acres on Deepwater creek flowing to Chesapeake Bay. All brick 5000 sq. ft. Country French 5 bedroom home—3 full and 3 half baths—3 fireplaces—L.R.—Fam. room—Rec. room—Formal D.R.—Tennis court, swimming pool, many amenities—exquisite property. Near Airport and Shopping. $995,000.

For brochure call:

Norma Clifford
301-742-7868
Cooper-Stewart, Realtors
301-543-4545

Rockefeller and Weinberg to Receive Alumni Day Awards in February

PHILANTHROPIST Laurance S. Rockefeller '32 and Nobel physicist Steven Weinberg '57 will be honored at the Alumni Day luncheon, on February 16, 1991, with the university's most prestigious alumni awards. Rockefeller will receive the Woodrow Wilson Award, which is conferred annually on an undergraduate alumnus for distinguished contributions "in the nation's service." Weinberg will receive the James Madison Medal, which honors an outstanding alumnus of the Graduate School.

Following in his family's philanthropic tradition, Rockefeller, a trustee emeritus of Princeton, has supported many causes and institutions concerned with medical research, higher education, and the environment. He has been a major donor to the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, and several of his donations to Princeton have helped the university attain key objectives. In 1969, his gift of $4 million for the construction of Spelman Halls (named for his grandmother Laura Spelman Rockefeller) was instrumental in Princeton's decision to admit women as students. In 1983, a gift of $5 million funded the creation of Rockefeller College (named for his late brother John D. Rockefeller III '29), one of the university's five residential colleges for freshmen and sophomores. In 1986, his gift of $10 million toward the construction of the Lewis Thomas '33 Laboratory was critical to the university's efforts to become a major center for research and teaching in the emerging field of molecular biology. Earlier this year, Rockefeller pledged $21 million to endow a center at Princeton for the study and teaching of human values (PAW, September 12). A former philosophy major himself, he called the creation of the Center for Human Values "the fulfillment of my Princeton education."

Weinberg, a theoretical physicist, holds the Josey Regental Chair of Science at the University of Texas and is a member of that school's physics and astronomy departments. He is the author of The First Three Minutes: A Modern View of the Origin of the Universe (1977), which has been translated into twenty foreign languages, Gravitation and Cosmology: Principles and Applications of the General Theory of Relativity (1972), The Discovery of Subatomic Particles (1982), and more than two hundred articles on elementary particle physics and cosmology. One such article is the most frequently cited physics paper of the last fifty years. In 1979, he shared the Nobel Prize in Physics with Abdus Salam and Sheldon L. Glashow for their work in unifying two of the four observed types of energy. Their efforts demonstrated that the weak force (a cause of radioactive decay) and electromagnetism were different manifestations of a single "electro-weak" force.

Laurance Rockefeller '32 (left) and Steven Weinberg '57 (right) will be honored on Alumni Day.

LEFT PHOTO BY DOMINIQUE GALLAN '82, RIGHT PHOTO BY LARRY MURPHY

A native of New York City, Weinberg graduated from Cornell University in 1954 and attended the Copenhagen Institute for Theoretical Physics for one year before enrolling at Princeton. After receiving his doctorate in 1957, he taught at the University of California at Berkeley and then at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In 1973, he joined the faculty at Harvard, where he stayed for nine years before accepting his current appointment.

PRINCO Has New President

RANDALL A. HACK '69, an investor and consultant in real estate, has been appointed the new president of the Princeton University Investment Company (PRINCO). In this post, which he officially assumed on December 1, Hack works with the thirteen members of PRINCO's board of directors to oversee the management of Princeton's endowment, currently valued at $2.5 billion. He succeeds T. Dennis Sullivan '70, who left Princeton in September to become the financial vice-president of the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation (PAW, September 12). Hack's appointment is the culmination of a three-month search by Richard B. Fisher '57, the chairman of PRINCO's board, and President Shapiro.

Hack, who lives in Princeton, is the president and chief executive officer of Capstone Equities, a Princeton-based real-estate company. He also chairs the board of Matrix Development Group, a firm that develops office and industrial properties in the New York metropolitan area. As PRINCO's president, Hack manages relations with the company's twenty-eight external investment managers, who make daily decisions about the disposition of the securities and other assets that compose the endowment. Because the university must compete with Wall Street firms to attract top applicants to this position, the PRINCO president's salary, some $223,000 last year, is the highest on the campus.

After he graduated from Princeton, Hack earned an M.B.A. from Harvard Business School, in 1972. For the next seven years, he served as the vice-president for investment and development at Corporate Property Investors, in New York City. In 1979, he founded RH Development Company, the predecessor to Matrix.

Princeton's endowment, the third largest among American universities, is invested primarily in stocks (60 percent) and fixed-income securities (25 percent), with the rest in real estate, venture capital, and other specialized assets. "As the endowment portfolio becomes more complex and continues to expand and diversify globally," said Hack, "my principal goal will be to marshal the best advice and assistance available." Hack was quoted in the Daily Princetonian as saying that the endowment is "well-positioned" for what may be a recession. □

1990 Maclean Fellow Comes to Princeton With New Views on Criminal Justice

AS THOMAS WOLFE pointed out, you can't go home again. His observation is especially true of college, because after you graduate, the realities of the "outside world" make you into a person far different from the student whose most immediate concern was missing that economics lecture. Besides, someone else will claim your dorm room. But don't give up hope. If you manage to become interesting enough, the Alumni Council will name you a Maclean Fellow and put you up in Palmer House (much nicer than your old dorm) while you re-live your undergraduate experience for a week. If you're especially lucky, you might even recapture the true spirit of academia by accidentally missing an econ lecture. Michael E. Smith '65 did. But in the grand tradition of Princeton students, he did fine in precept anyway.

Smith, the director of the Vera Institute of Justice, in New York City, spent five days on the campus in early November under the auspices of the John Maclean Fellowship program. Sponsored by the Alumni Council and one of the residential colleges—this year, Mathey—the program brings to the campus an alumnus or alumna who has achieved some manner of success or distinction and allows him or her to participate for a week in university life. Smith, the fifth Maclean Fellow, spoke at formal and informal gatherings, attended classes, and took part in a variety of discussions with students and faculty members.

Vera is a nonprofit organization that studies and tests alternative means of controlling crime and increasing public safety. Because it's outside the political establishment, Smith explains, Vera can define problems and develop answers in nontraditional ways. The goal, he says, is to provide public officials with possible solutions to problems that, to the officials, might seem insoluble.

Among Vera's programs are a construction company that employs newly released convicts; the Manhattan Bail Project, which by redefining "good risks" to take into account suspects' community ties has helped to unclog packed city jails; and the Community Police Officer Program (CPOP), which radically alters the patrol styles of police officers and seeks to involve residents and local institutions in what Vera calls "co-producing safety." At the heart of Vera's philosophy is the view that problems result from inadequate structures, not ineffective execution, and so the institute stresses cooperation with public officials over antagonistic charges of failure. "If all you do is beat on them," Smith says, "that doesn't change their condition. It's not stupidity or incompetence—it's that there isn't any existing resource that, if applied, would solve the problems."

Michael E. Smith '65

PHOTO COURTESY THE ALUMNI COUNCIL

Throughout his week at Princeton, Smith emphasized this need to look at crime control and safety policies in terms of misaligned theories and ineffective institutional structures. Not surprisingly, Smith was called upon to address a great variety of specific policies, from the current—and, he feels, incorrect—preference for stricter sentencing as a means of deterrence to the difficulties of tailoring police methods to particular communities. In his highly anecdotal responses to questions, Smith combined surprising facts about safety policy (for instance, studies indicate that no one notices when police cars spend more or less time in a given area) with a Platonic tendency to pose apparently simple questions whose obvious answers demonstrate how far removed public policy may be from common sense.

Somewhat paradoxically, a man who now dedicates himself to studying public policy did not even consider majoring in the Woodrow Wilson School when he was an undergraduate, foreseeing a career as an English professor. When he lost confidence in that prospect, Smith told a group of students and professors at a lunch discussion, he studied politics, philosophy, and economics at Oxford on a Rhodes Scholarship and then wandered into Harvard Law School. He spent several years discovering his dislike of litigation before he met a former director of Vera. "It's a terrible confession to make," he said, "but the only way I could chart a course was to say, 'I want that guy's job.'"

Sharing perceptions gained from a postgraduate career, however, is only part of the Maclean Fellow's agenda. Twenty-five years after he left Princeton, Smith found himself participating in the functioning of the university, an experience he describes as intriguing, albeit disorienting. "One of the things I realized when I was engrossed listening to lectures was that this was not exactly what I recalled," he laughs. Reveling in what he calls "intellectual entertainment of the first rank," Smith found classes much more enjoyable because he didn't have to take notes. He also seems to have had better luck than current students: his Econ 331 ("Public Finance") precept went well, even though he couldn't find the room to which the lecture had been suddenly moved. "I was worried about the precept," he said later, "but Professor Metcalf assured me the lecture and the precept were not in any way related."

Recalling his initial fears upon being named the Maclean Fellow, Smith says, "I was actually quite worried by a PAW article I remembered reading about John Gregory Dunne [54, the 1988 Maclean Fellow]. The experience sounded absolutely exhausting." In retrospect, he says, "it was tiring, but it was also enormously invigorating—a real gift to an alum." For the record, Smith suffered no ill effects from his campus experience—despite several meals prepared by the university's food services department—and left Princeton in perfect health.

—Larry Zygmunt '92

Larry Zygmunt, a junior from Arlington Heights, Illinois, is majoring in English.

"Bernie, come here quick!
I think it's the Princeton Glee Club!"

"I want you all to know how thrilled I am to have this opportunity to address my fellow Princetonians . . ."

Henry Martin '48's Joyeux Noël

PRINCETONIANS HAVE BEEN DELIGHTING IN THE LOW-KEY WIT OF CARTOONIST

Henry R. Martin '48 since he was an undergraduate drawing for The Princeton Tiger magazine. For the last thirty-four years, Martin has toiled at his solitary craft in a one-room bungalow he rents on William Street, in Princeton. A typical day's output in the bungalow, which serves as his studio, is five cartoons. Martin's work appears in The New Yorker, which has accorded him the status of a staff artist, as well as Punch, The Wall Street Journal, and other publications—including, not least, the Princeton Alumni Weekly. He is not above poking fun at the loyalty of Princetonians to their alma mater; one cartoon that ran in The New Yorker a few years ago shows a man in a Princeton T-shirt before St. Peter, who tells him the bad news that to enter heaven he must "sever all earthly ties." Here we present some of his views of the holiday season, seen through orange-and-black-tinted glasses.

"Was Santa a classmate of yours at Princeton?"

Digitized by Google

"It doesn't matter what you give your father for Christmas as long as it's orange and black and says 'Princeton' on it."

"The Tigertones are here to sing you a Merry Christmas medley."

"Wow! A fifty! Thank you, sir, thank you, thank you, thank you, thank you, thank you! And a very merry, merry, merry, merry, merry Christmas!"

"Before we break up, I want to wish you a Happy Hanukkah, a Merry Christmas, and 'Beat Yale!'"

Princeton Alumni Weekly

Reaching 56,000
upscale, sophisticated
readers with every issue.

Published more frequently
than any other alumni
magazine in the world.

Why advertise with
anyone else?

For details please contact:
Ms. Lolly O'Brien/Advertising Director
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William Street
Princeton, New Jersey
08540
(609) 258-4886

Books

Are We Going to the Dogs?

BOUND TO LEAD: THE CHANGING NATURE OF AMERICAN POWER
Joseph S. Nye, Jr. '58 • Basic Books, $19.95

IS THE UNITED STATES a declining hegemon, a victim of imperial overstretch whose overseas commitments exceed her capacity to preserve them? Is America, like Britain and earlier hegemonic powers before her, doomed to lose her dominant world position to rivals? Is the remedy to retrench, bringing capacities into line with commitments?

In Bound to Lead, Joseph S. Nye, Jr., a political scientist at Harvard, takes aim at recent "declinist" interpretations of America's international future as well as at the argument for retrenchment. Dubious analogies from history and flawed, deterministic theories, he argues, may lead to wrong policies. Retrenchment, in his view, might not benefit the American economy and might only reduce American influence abroad. Moreover, when the strongest nation in the world fails to lead, he writes, international instability will be the result.

Nye's primary target is, of course, Paul Kennedy's majestic Rise and Fall of the Great Powers (1987), which made the classic case for American decline. To Kennedy, a historian at Yale, the U.S. at the end of the twentieth century is beginning to resemble other declining hegemon—the Spanish, the Dutch, and, especially, the British—who found it necessary to allocate ever-increasing sums of money to support their overextended military commitments around the globe, and who in so doing made a fatal choice that squeezed out productive investment, slowed economic growth, and, inevitably, produced a downward spiral in their world position. America's share of global manufacturing had, Kennedy contended, seriously declined since the late sixties and early seventies, and thus the U.S. was less able to carry its international burdens. When considered with such factors as huge budget deficits, heavy imbalances of trade, and a growing indebtedness to other nations, Kennedy wrote, "in that larger sense, there is something in the analogy . . . between the United States' position and that of previous declining hegemon."

The first half of Nye's compact, 260-page analysis employs graphs, statistical tables, and political theory to make an effective case that the "declinist" interpretation, if not wrong, is seriously overstated. America's share of global production, to be sure, did decline—from more than one-third around 1950 to just over one-fifth by the early 1970s—but, he emphasizes, it has held steady (averaging about 23 percent) ever since. Nor does Nye find any evidence for decline in the American economy's growth rate, still at the historic level of 2 percent annually, and the percentage of America's G.N.P. spent on the military is now less than it was in the Nixon years, despite Reagan's frenetic rearmament. Moreover, he says, much of the economic hegemony that the U.S. enjoyed at mid-century and for twenty years afterward was artificial, the result of the "World War II effect." In other words, the American economy, undamaged by war (indeed, propelled by it), expanded dramatically from 1941 to 1945, whereas the Japanese and European economies were shattered. Inevitably, then, America's share of global production and the relative size of its G.N.P. would decline as these other countries recovered. Indeed, to Nye, the whole concept of decline is a "semantic irony." The U.S. actually experienced its greatest economic decline during the years of its alleged hegemony, whereas the years since the early 1970s—frequently tagged as the period of decline—have been a time of stability.

Nye has many other arrows in his quiver. He devotes an entire chapter to the fallacy of comparing the present-day U.S. to Edwardian Britain; he maintains that, even in the glory days of the 1950s, there were real constraints on American power and that the U.S. could not impose its imperial will as freely as the asymmetries of power at the time might suggest; and he discusses at length why neither America's friends nor its rivals will surpass her in the near future. In Nye's view, Japan remains, despite her manufacturing boom, a one-dimensional economic power, while the Soviet Union, despite its actual and latent military strength, lacks the institutional flexibility necessary to adapt to the modern world economy. Communist ideology, which once seemed so threatening, is not only exhausted but it's actually a fetter on the Soviet system.

But the focus of Nye's analysis is always on the changing nature of power in the modern world and the effect of that change on the international position of the U.S. Traditional measures of power—population, military strength, natural resources—have less significance than they did formerly. In an era of burgeoning interdependence and a worldwide economic system based on technology and the rapid exchange of information, what counts are such factors as levels of education, technological progress, extent of national cohesion, and economic growth. Indeed, theorists who focus simply on transitions of power among leading states may well miss the important changes that have occurred in the nature of power itself.

The dust jacket of Bound to Lead contains many quotations from conservative politicians and scholars who praise Nye for refuting the "doomsayers" and for providing "a tonic for the current pessimism about 'America's decline.'" But the second half of the book underscores that there are trends in American society and its economy that could diminish the power of the U.S. in the future. Indeed, Nye finds that in the domestic area the British example is relevant. His analysis is also a strong critique of the prevailing "realist" school in political science, which focuses on the anarchic nature of the international state system and emphasizes the centrality of military force in any analysis of power.

Nye's list of domestic problems is not dissimilar to Kennedy's: the national debt, low rates of investment, trade imbalances, excessive consumption, and inadequate levels of education, research, and development. There is a danger of complacency and, with it, the loss of competitiveness. Nye stresses that America, still the richest nation in the world—and the least taxed nation among the industrial powers—acts as if it were poor. From his perspective, America's underlying problems are not primarily economic but political—above all, a failure of political leadership.

More importantly—and this follows from his emphasis on the changing nature of power—Americans may not realize that their real challenge comes not from national rivals like Japan or Europe's Common Market but from the growth of transnational interdependence and the diffusion of power among many states and such private actors as multinational corporations. Even powerful governments have discovered that they cannot control the world's financial markets. The raw military strength that used to be so central to questions of power is less fungible than it was; the costs of coercion are higher; and the force of nationalism in the Third World is such that no great power can influence those countries as it did even in the recent past. Consequently, even superpowers like the U.S. will have to rely increasingly on elements of "soft power" (so often decried by the realists): by their ability to shape world affairs by their influence within international organizations, by the attractiveness of their culture to other nations, or, as Nye puts it, by "their co-optive behavioral power."

What's most striking about Bound to Lead is that, the more you read, the more the gap narrows between Nye and Kennedy, his putative target. Kennedy stressed that America's decline was, at most, relative, and that, in the last analysis, the only serious threat to the U.S. would come if it failed to adjust to the new world order. Nye argues that in a world of diffused power the capacity of any nation to accomplish its purposes will be limited, and that the U.S. must expect to have less leverage than before. One way for this country to achieve its goals would be to set more modest ones. Those who still anticipate an early or tidy ending to the current standoff with Iraq will find much to ponder in a book highly touted as slaying the "declinist" dragon.

—Richard D. Challener '44

Richard Challener, a professor in the history department, teaches courses in twentieth-century American history.

Books Received

SOUTH TO THE POLE BY SKI
Joseph E. Murphy '52
MarLor Press, 4304 Brigadoon Dr.,
St. Paul, MN 55126. $19.95

VIRGINIA, THE GRAY AND THE GREEN
(Civil War fiction)
Ned Conquest '53 '67
Apollonian Press, Box 25010,
Georgetown Station, Washington, DC 20007
$22.45 postpaid

LITERATURE AND POLITICS IN THE CENTRAL AMERICAN REVOLUTIONS
John Beverley '64 and Marc Zimmerman
University of Texas Press
$27.50 cloth, $12.95 paper

AN OLD MAN'S TOY: GRAVITY AT WORK AND PLAY IN EINSTEIN'S UNIVERSE
A. Zee '66
Macmillan, $21.95

GERMAN NATIONAL SOCIALISM AND THE QUEST FOR NUCLEAR POWER, 1939-1949
Mark Walker '87
Cambridge University Press, $29.95

ST. CROIX

Everything you expect
from a vacation paradise.

Beaches, Tennis, Golf, Dining,
Entertainment, Shopping,
Relaxation

Ralph Locke Islands, Inc.
P.O. Box #800
Waccabuc, N.Y. 10597
Toll Free Nationwide
(800)-223-1108

The Buccaneer
ST. CROIX, U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS

STAFF WRITER- ASSOCIATE EDITOR

PAW seeks a staff writer—associate editor. Chief responsibilities are covering campus news and Princeton sports and writing occasional feature stories. Candidates should have two years' experience on the editorial staff of a newspaper or magazine. An excellent opportunity for a young alumnus/a in journalism. PAW is an equal-opportunity employer.

Send résumé to:
Andrew Mytelka '85
Managing Editor
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William Street
Princeton NJ 08540

America's Underdog? Basketball Shoots for Third Straight Title, and Pete's Eleventh

IN THEIR HEYDAY, the Dallas Cowboys were known as "America's Team." Mary Lou Retton won a gold medal in gymnastics in the 1984 Olympics and became "America's Sweetheart." Now meet "America's Underdog"—the Princeton men's basketball team, circa 1990.

That's right, the Tigers. The team everyone loves to watch but hates to play. Princeton, where the players are short, slow, and cerebral, and prefer passing to shooting. The school where "dunk" is a dirty word and where "vertical leap" is studied in the Engineering Quadrangle, not Jadwin Gymnasium. Princeton, mad-deningly methodical and coached by a short, slow, cerebral type named Pete Carril. Princeton, marquee attraction.

What? Marquee attraction? In Bill Bradley '65's day, perhaps, or maybe even in the mid-seventies, when Armond Hill '77 was taking the Tigers to the National Invitational Tournament championship. But surely not in the 1990s, when collegiate basketball serves as the N.B.A.'s minor league and coaches are celebrities with talk shows and huge contracts to endorse sneakers. The Tigers don't have an intimidating, seven-foot center, or a high-scoring guard, or a forward who slams, rams, and jams. How can your typically hyperbolic sportscaster get excited about six bounce passes and a backdoor layup?

First, it seems, you have to scare the bejesus out of a bunch of nationally ranked teams. Then your coach gets "discovered" (after only twenty-three outstanding years) by Sports Illustrated, Time, and CBS. Then the television networks find out that you draw terrific ratings. (ESPN, the all-sports cable station, says that the Princeton-Georgetown thriller in 1989 and the Princeton-Arkansas clash last spring were the two highest-rated college basketball games it has ever broadcast.) The last step is to gain a suitable moniker—how about "America's Underdog"?—and you've made it.

This year, America's Underdog gets the privilege of playing on national television three times. CBS will broadcast one of those games, against Loyola Marymount University, immediately before its show that unveils the pairings for the N.C.A.A. championship tournament, virtually guaranteeing the contest an

The focus of Princeton's offense is center Kit Mueller '91, the Ivy League Player of the Year last season and maybe the best Tiger since Bill Bradley '65. Here he lays in two of the nineteen points he scored against the University of Arkansas in the N.C.A.A. tournament last March.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

enormous audience. (In addition, there's the great subplot of the N.C.A.A.'s highest-scoring team playing its best defensive unit.) Alas, marquee attraction also exacts its price: a televised game against the defending national champion, the University of Nevada at Las Vegas, which has two players certain to be picked in the first round of the N.B.A. draft.

Of course, as America's Underdog, Princeton is expected to lose to U.N.L.V. And if the Tigers win their third straight Ivy League title, as almost everyone except Coach Carril predicts, they are expected to lose in the first round of the N.C.A.A. tournament to another basketball powerhouse (like Georgetown or Arkansas) that has seven-footers and guys that slam, ram, and jam. Sure, Princeton will play with pluck and poise, and lose with dignity, but it will lose. In college hoops, the underdog rarely rescues Sweet Polly Purebred.

Carril and the Tigers would dearly love to upset the logic that makes them the underdogs, and this year, the coach may have the talent to do that. After all, you've got to have a pretty damned good team to set foot on the court with the U.N.L.V.s and Georgetown's of this world. And by any measure, the Tigers are a pretty damned good team.

Princeton retains four starters and twelve lettermen from last year's Ivy championship team, which won twenty games. The only player to graduate, forward Matt Lapin '90, leaves large sneakers to fill—the team's captain led the nation in three-point shooting last season and provided Princeton with dependable offense and smarts on the floor. But last year, the Tigers had to replace an even better player, Bob Scrabis '89, and look at what they accomplished. With experienced players at every position, and Carril's deepest bench in years, it's difficult to identify a weakness in the 1990-91 squad.

LET'S BEGIN in the paint, where Princeton welcomes the return of Kit Mueller '91, the center, captain, and Ivy League Player of the Year. Hyperbole aside, Mueller may be the best Tiger to take to the hardwood since Bill Bradley. Listed as 6'7" tall but perhaps 6'5", Mueller has started every game for Princeton since his freshman year, eighty in all. A true ironman, he plays about thirty-eight minutes (out of forty) a game, on average. Last year, he led the team in scoring, rebounding, and assists. This year, he should finish out his Princeton career second only to Bradley in points and second only to Bill Ryan '84 in assists. Remember, he is a center.

Carril will start Matt Eastwick '92, one of his group of gifted juniors, as the power forward. One of the biggest men on the team, at 6'8" and 215 pounds, Eastwick saw considerable action as a freshman and started in all but one game last year. He'll get even more playing time this season. "The longer Easty plays, the better he is," says Carril. "He has ups and downs, and needs to play through it. You can't just play him a few minutes." Eastwick will be expected to make more of a contribution on offense—he's shown an ability to get open but a less-than-sure shooting touch—and to pull down more rebounds in the absence of Lapin.

Above: Once again, the sure-handed George Leftwich '92, a starter at point guard since his freshman year, will orchestrate the Tigers' offense and bedevil opponents with his tenacious defense. Although passing is his forte, as in the Arkansas game pictured here, he pulls down a surprising number of rebounds. Below: Now in his twenty-fourth year as Princeton's coach, Pete Carril is the glue that binds this team together. His deceptively simple strategies of offense and defense have frustrated opponents for decades. Early this season, he should win his four hundredth game for the Tigers.

PHOTOS BY LARRY FRENCH

An intriguing situation has developed at the other forward position. Matt Henshon '91 started in twenty games last year and is a steady, sure-handed player. But he's lost his starting job to a freshman, Chris Mooney. At present, Carril plans to start Mooney, let him play for seven or eight minutes, and then substitute Henshon for him. "I'm going to sub and improve my team," Carril hypothesizes. Mooney has blended well into Princeton's passing offense, but he hasn't yet shot as well as he did at Archbishop Ryan High School, in Philadelphia. "It's not easy for a freshman to adjust to this level of competition," Carril says. "But I've never lost a game in the first seven minutes."

Who the starting guards are is no surprise. George Leftwich '92 has been a fixture at point guard since his first game as a freshman, and he will again orchestrate the offense. Never a high scorer, Leftwich is an opportunist, often coming up with loose-ball rebounds or driving past defenders for unexpected baskets. With Lapin gone, Sean Jackson '92, the shooting guard, will take even more shots from beyond the three-point arc—his specialty in any event. Like Leftwich, Jackson is an extremely quick and tenacious defender. But even these two experienced players will have to prove themselves constantly. Jerry Doyle '91, a three-year letterman, will see a lot of action off the bench.

The glue of the team, however, remains Coach Carril. In twenty-three years at Princeton, Carril has produced ten Ivy championships. During those years, he won 397 games, and he'll surely pass the 400-win plateau early this season. His complicated offenses have baffled opponents for decades, but Princeton has always won on the strength of its defense. In eight of the last fifteen years, including the 1988-89 and 1989-90 seasons, Carril's team led the nation in scoring defense. And this year, Carril has an opportunity to achieve a feat not seen in Tigertown since the Bradley era: three consecutive Ivy titles.

To reach this goal, Carril may find himself relying more on his bench than he has traditionally. Instead of using as few as six or seven players in a game, as he often did last year, Carril could give at least eight a lot of playing time this season—and possibly more, depending on injuries and the performance of the starters. Here's how his roster looks:

CENTER: If Mueller tires or gets into foul trouble, 6'7" Jimmy Lane '92 will step in. Lane has a nice shooting touch and can rebound, but his development has been slowed because he's played two years in Mueller's shadow. Ben Gerig '94, at 6'9" the tallest Tiger, could be the center of the future. At Exeter, Gerig didn't get much competition, but he should learn from Mueller and Lane. Another center waiting in the wings is Michael Silas '93, who will play on the junior-varsity team this season to stay sharp.

FORWARDS: The top forward after Eastwick, Mooney, and Henshon is 6'8" Chris Marquardt '92. He has all the necessary skills, including a good shot, but he hasn't shown the physical and mental toughness that Carril demands. Chris Pavlic '93, a splendid shooter, didn't play much as a freshman but may this year. Rounding out the ranks of the forwards is another blue-chip freshman, 6'7" Norbert Valis, a native of Switzerland.

GUARDS: How does Carril do it? Behind Jackson, Leftwich, and Doyle, he can call on an experienced senior, Troy Hottenstein, a long-range bomber who's always willing to take a shot. At the point, look for Mike Brennan '94 to pressure Leftwich and Doyle. A highly recruited player, Brennan led his high-school team to a 32-1 record and the New Jersey state championship last season. He and Chris Yetman '94, a scorer, could be Carril's backcourt of the future.

IF ANYTHING will spoil the Tigers' season, it's their schedule, which hasn't treated them so rudely in years. As Carril puts it, Princeton's going to be playing "Willie Nelson basketball": "On the road again, oh we're on the road again..." The Tigers will play seventeen away games out of twenty-six, and they won't even see the inside of Jadwin Gym until a crucial matchup with Yale on January 11. All this travel is not inconsequential, considering that Princeton was undefeated at home last year and has an eighteen-game winning streak in Jadwin (the nation's seventh longest). The Tigers also conclude their Ivy season on the road, with tough games against Harvard and Dartmouth.

Even so, it would take some audacity for a pundit to pick any other team to win the Ivy championship. But the Tigers won't coast to the title unchallenged. Unlike the big powers that America's Underdog routinely throws a scare into, Ivy teams have been playing against Carril's pass-happy bunch for years. Thus they aren't as easily surprised and flustered; some of them can play the slow game nearly as well as the Tigers. And overall, the league has improved, so Princeton is almost certain to lose a few Ivy games. As Carril is quick to remind anyone who will listen, even in the Bradley era, the league title was in doubt until the final weekend of play.

We'll listen to the voice of experience, however, and forecast that Princeton will clinch the championship, with a 12-2 record, on the regular season's final weekend. Here's how the rest of the league shapes up, in order of predicted finish:

Against Arkansas, guard Sean Jackson '92 defined the phrase "getting in your opponent's face": there is no contact between the players, yet Lee Mayberry's view of the basket is effectively blocked. Besides great defense, Jackson will be relied on for his sharp three-point shooting now that Matt Lapin '90 has graduated.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

YALE: The Elis didn't lose a single player to graduation from a lineup that finished last season with a 10-4 record, just one game behind Princeton. The team's leaders are all-Ivy forward Dean Campbell, who ate up the Tigers on the boards last year, and guard Ed Peterson, a favorite target of the Jadwin crowd. Peterson plays brilliantly everywhere but in Princeton. The game in New Haven on February 16 will speak volumes about Yale's chances of unseating the Tigers.

HARVARD: In Ralph James the Cantabs have the league's other premier player (after Mueller). He can score, rebound, and pass. He'll get some help from forward Ron Mitchell, but overall, Harvard lacks size and depth. Coach Peter Roby likes an up-tempo game, with plenty of scoring, but that's also meant plenty of turnovers. To play with the Tigers and the Bulldogs, Harvard will have to control the ball better.

BROWN: Last year, the Bruins had their first winning campaign since 1986, and they retain some talented players from that squad: guards Rick Lloyd and Chuck Savage and forward Carlos Williams, a massive, 250-pound rebounding machine. Brown is one of the Ivy's youngest teams, with only one senior among thirteen returning lettermen. A more consistent defense and better shooting are the keys if the Bears are to continue their resurgence.

DARTMOUTH: The Big Green lost seven-foot-tall Walter Palmer to the N.B.A., a departure much appreciated by the rest of the league. James Blackwell, a flashy and high-scoring guard, returns from a knee injury, and Brendan O'Sullivan, a forward of quality, should pick up some of the slack. But Palmer's absence leaves a gaping hole in the middle, and his replacement, Michael Lombard, proved incapable of stopping the likes of Mueller and Eastwick when he played for the injured Palmer last season.

CORNELL: The Big Red have a trio of solid players in center Bernard Jackson and guards Steve Johnson and Shawn Maharaj. After them, there's a steep decline in quality among the starting five, and an even steeper descent on the bench. Cornell's big problem has been its inability to win away games: you don't get far in the league if you're 0-7 against Ivy teams on the road, as the Big Red was last year.

COLUMBIA: The Lions retained all five of the starters who turned in a disastrous 2-12 record last season—good news (perhaps) for Jack Rohan, who recently signed on for a second stint as head coach after a sixteen-year hiatus. Dane Holmes, Mike Jelinsky, and Eric Speaker are the Lions' best starters, but they will have trouble staying afloat against Princeton, Yale, and Harvard.

PENN: How are the mighty fallen. Penn, a perennial power that made it to the N.C.A.A.'s Final Four just eleven years ago, could be the league's doormat this season. Hassan Duncombe, whose last-second tip-in dealt Princeton one of its three league losses last year, is sitting out this season for academic reasons. Paul Chambers returns to play the point, but his forte is passing, not scoring. Who's going to score? With no player taller than 6'7", a more immediate question is, who's going to play center? It's going to be a tough year for the Palestra faithful, but the rest of the league isn't crying.

—David Williamson '84

David Williamson, PAW's fearless pigskin prognosticator, hopes he has better luck on the hardwood.

Women's Volleyball Finishes Second in Ivy League

THE WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL team spent this year renewing its winning tradition. After two disappointing seasons, marked by insignificant results in tournaments and no Ivy League championships, the 1990 version of the lady Tigers turned things around. They opened the season with a first-place finish in the Patriot Invitational Tournament, at George Mason University, and went on to take second place in both the Rutgers and Harvard invitational tournaments. The team finished the season with a 22-6 record and a second-place showing in the Ivy League Championship Tournament.

Head coach Glenn Nelson attributed the team's turnaround to several factors. "Our women came back to school this year ready to play. They came in with a tremendous work ethic, and thanks to our assistant coaches, Ken Michielsen '77 and Mark Hutman '93, we were able to generate a high level of intensity in every practice. Throughout the season, we've benefited from senior captain Loren Montgomery's leadership and Kristi Hakman '92's strong overall play. However, this year's success, more so than in the past, has been the result of a total team effort. We needed all our players this season, and each one rose to the challenge."

Despite losses to Yale and Cornell on the weekend after midterm examinations—the stress of the latter almost certainly detracted from the Tigers' play in the former—Princeton was seeded sec-

Kelly Sather '91 (pictured) led the Tigers with an average of three blocks per game and received an all-Ivy honorable mention. Team-mate Kristi Hakman '92, who averaged five kills and eleven digs a game, was named the Ivy League Player of the Year, the first Princetonian to attain this honor.

PHOTO BY LARRY FRENCH

ond in the Ivy tourney and entered it with an 18-4 record overall (8-3 Ivy). A loss to Penn in the tourney's early rounds forced the Tigers to win a semifinal match with Yale in order to qualify for the finals, which pitted them against Penn and gave them a chance to avenge the earlier loss. Penn also struggled in the early rounds of the tourney. The Quakers rallied from a score of 5-13 in their fifth game with Harvard to gain a berth in the finals. "Harvard should have eliminated Penn from the tourney in that match," reflected Nelson. "There are usually two ways that players respond to that kind of victory: either they come away thinking they're invincible or they have their confidence shaken by the realization that their victory was simply the result of luck."

Given that Penn's overall record in the regular season was 11-15, you wouldn't think that the Quakers would fall victim to the "invincibility" mindset. But they won the tournament by defeating Princeton in three games, proving true the old sports adage that on any given day, one team can beat another. All the games were decided by two points, Nelson later lamented. "A play here, an official's call there, and we could have just as easily won the match. I'm looking forward to next year. If we can return with the same fighting spirit and will to win, I expect next season's Ivy tournament to reflect our history in the league." Since varsity play in the Ivies began in 1977, the only schools to win the championship have been Princeton (seven times), Penn (five times), Yale (once), and Brown (once).

—Mark Nixon '84

Mark Nixon, a volleyball player as an undergraduate, now attends Columbia Business School.

Fall Sports Wrap-up: Football and Soccer Awards

FANS MAY BE eager to forget the FOOTBALL team's disappointing 1990 season, but they shouldn't ignore the achievements of individual players. In late November, the Ivy League's eight head coaches recognized those players when they named six Tigers to the all-Ivy team. Mike Hirou '91, Princeton's captain and a three-year starter at safety, was selected for the all-Ivy first team, as he was last year. Hirou led the Tigers' defensive unit with ninety-four tackles (sixty-four of them solo) this year, and showed his versatility by also fielding punts and kickoffs. For his work in anchoring Princeton's strong line, defensive end Renard Charity '91 was named to the all-Ivy second team. Charity recorded nearly fifty tackles. Four other Tigers received honorable mention from the Ivy coaches: offensive tackle Gavin Lowrey '91, defensive end Leon Newsome '92, running back Erick Hamilton '93 (who finished a close second to Dartmouth quarterback Matt Brzica in the coaches' voting for the league's Sophomore of the Year), and wide receiver Michael Lerch '93. The team elected linebacker Jim Freeman '92 to be the captain of the 1991 squad. Freeman thus becomes the third straight defender to hold this position, following Hirou and Franco Pagnanelli '90.

Even though the MEN'S SOCCER team finished the season with a losing record overall (7-8) and did not receive a bid to play in the N.C.A.A. tournament despite its good play in the Ivies (5-2), the squad witnessed some fine individual performances. Midfielder Jim Barlow '91, who epitomized the spirit of the ironman by never missing a game in his four years at Princeton, was named the Ivy League's Player of the Year, and midfielder Joe Thieman '94, the only freshman in the starting lineup, was selected as the Rookie of the Year (Barlow received this honor three years ago).

The MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY team lost two of its top runners to injuries just before the crucial Heptagonal meet, so the depleted squad could only manage a ninth-place finish. But no such misfortune befell Bill Burke '91, and the team's captain won the five-mile race with a time of 24:46.49. Burke thus became only the third Princetonian to triumph at New York's Van Cortlandt Park and the first in nine years. The other two Hep champions from Princeton were Rodman Zwirner '59, who won in 1956, and Matt Farmer '83, who won in 1981.

In our last Scoreboard, we incorrectly reported how the WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY team performed at the E.C.A.C. meet. The harriers finished eleventh. □

FOR RENT

ENJOY THE LUXURY of your own villa, private pool overlooking the Caribbean, and staff of five to serve you. 3 BRs, 3 baths; exquisitely furnished; on one acre with terraced gardens in most exclusive residential neighborhood in Ocho Rios, Jamaica. Everyone should try this kind of living at least once. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70 (owner), 1165 Churchill Downs Rd., Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR waterfront beachhouse amid tropical gardens. Spectacular view, excellent snorkeling. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70. 1165 Churchill Downs, Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

PARIS: Elegant small studio for two just off the Seine in the 6th. 2 min. walk to the Louvre, Notre Dame. 609-924-4332.

BARBADOS: Home of the late John L. Roe Jr. '34. West Coast on bluff overlooking Caribbean. Three air-conditioned BRs, cook, maid, gardener, laundry, swimming pool. 215-527-0585.

PARIS: Rue de la Paix, Elegant apartment. Suitable for 2 or 3. 7-days preferred. $200/night. 212-838-1731.

STOCKING ISLAND, Exuma, Bahamas: Octagonal wood and glass home, spectacular 360-degree sea view. All modern conveniences. $1000 weekly for two with boat. Sam Burns '46, 407-231-2822. Brochure avail.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FLA.: Delightful beachfront condominium. Magnificent gulf view. Spacious 2 BR, 2 baths, loft. Pool. Tennis. Will Smith '63. 908-842-2096.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS (Virgin Gorda): Elegant new villa directly on own private snorkeling beach. Spectacular, panoramic view of North Sound including Bitter-End (dive school, etc.) Perfect weather year round. 3 BR, 2 bath, magnificent LR, wrap-around deck, full mod. kit., microwave, dishwasher, marina, fishing, pool, tennis. (Restaurant, provisioning, staff, car, available extra.) $2,500/wk. 609-921-7872.

EXCLUSIVE LUXURY 4 BR, 4 bath villa at private Tryall Club in Montego, Jamaica. Private pool, staff of four, gorgeous grounds overlook Caribbean and championship golf course. Also private tennis, scuba, beach and club house. Available at 2 or 3 BR rate off-season. 203-254-0228 (h) or Carol Shaw at 203-929-6391.

LONDON LUXURY FLATS: In Knightsbridge, Mayfair, Chelsea, Kensington, Whitehall Court. One, two, three bedrooms. Furnished and decorated by owners. Rented by day, seven day minimum; reduced rates when exceeding six months. Call during office hours: 518-686-7841.

KAUAI, HAWAII: 4 BR, NaPali Coast beach house. $650-850/wk. 703-560-7900.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant villa on blue Caribbean. Breathtaking views. Daily maid. All amenities. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

ITALY: Renting delightful holiday accommodations, each personally selected. Tuscan castles, Umbrian farmhouses. Seaside villas, lakeview cottages. Centrally-located apartments Venice, Rome, Florence. Week/month. 415-821-9345.

ST. THOMAS: 2 or 3 BRs on the water, spectacular downisland view. H. Macaleer. 919-942-8439.

SANIBEL ISLAND: Gulfront 2 BR condo w/pool and tennis. Available weekly/monthly. Boozan '79, 201-277-1166

PORT ANTONIO, JAMAICA: "Nirvana:" Fully equipped, staffed, 3 bedroom, 2 bath, beachfront villa on mile-long, mostly deserted beach. Surf, few tourists. $800/wk. in season. 207-359-4447.

LONDON RENTALS: Privately owned flats and houses in London's best areas offering comprehensive personal service at attractive prices. One week minimum stay. Call: A Place Like Home, London. 800-526-0215.

KAUAI LUXURY CONDO on the ocean in sunny Poipu. Fully equipped. 2 BRs, 2 baths, free tennis at Waiohai Tennis Club. $600/700 per week. 213-681-6869.

ST. BART'S, FRENCH WEST INDIES: Luxurious seaside villa surrounded by privacy, beautiful beaches and French restaurants. 412-687-2061.

PARIS. LEFT BANK APARTMENT: St. Germain, close to D'Orsay, Louvre, Rodin. Sunny. Fireplaces. Antiques. Luxuriously furnished. Memorable! 412-687-2061.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS: Our secluded beach house on beautiful Brewers Bay, Tortola. 3 baths, maid, bunk room. Weather perfect all year. Rates: R. H. Smith '42, Westover Park, Stamford, CT 06902; 203-323-2294.

MAD RIVER SUGARBUSH AREA: Comfortable farmhouse for up to 20 skiers. $350 per day. William Iler '51, 508-922-0010.

MONHEGAN ISLAND, MAINE: 4 BR, 2 bath. Panoramic island, ocean view. Available June-September, $700/wk. Bill Walker '64. 215-687-3271.

SKI VERMONT: Spacious 4 bedroom house near Stratton/Mt. Snow. 703-522-5454.

SAIL THE VIRGINS: The best beaches, best views, best of everything. Fully equipped 40' O'Day. 2 cabins, salon, galley, 2 heads, shower, sleeps 7. Captain, provisioning available. 201-747-3976.

VAIL, CO: 3 BR plus loft. 5 min. from gondola and great skiing. $225/night. $275 during Christmas and spring break. Bruce Brookens '67; 303-761-8815.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK: Rocky Mountain seclusion, minutes from skiing. Creek-side home sleeps six. No X-mas. 303-926-3907.

ST. JOHN: Fabulous private home near beach. Peaceful. Furnished. Box 12287, St. Thomas, VI 00801. 809-775-4266.

SUN VALLEY, ID: Luxurious, spacious, ski condo at base of Mt. Baldy in Warm Springs. 3 BRs, 3 baths, fireplace. Walk one block to lifts, restaurants, shops, apres ski. Bill Travers '71, 805-684-5473.

EXUMA, BAHAMAS: Magnificent hilltop view. Fully equipped, 4 bedrooms, van, private beach, housekeeper available. $1,000 weekly in season. 302-428-1455, evenings.

LUQUILLO, P.R.: Newly refurbished completely equipped 2 bedrm. 1 ba. apts. Beach 1 block, stores nearby. Special alumni rate. Beautiful beach and views. E. Pinney '47, P.O. Box 2210, Martinsburg, WV 25401. 304-263-4660.

SEABROOK ISLAND, S.C.: Near historic Charleston, oceanfront 1 BR condo, 2 baths. Sleeps 4; great golf, tennis, restaurants, pelicans. Hugh Hanson '47. 215-649-7335. Princeton discounts!

SPAIN: Lovely 4 BR villa (pool) overlooking Mediterranean/village. Hess '64. 203-688-9333.

VERMONT, MORETOWN: Remodeled farmhouse sleeps 10. 15 minutes to Mad River Glen, 20 mins. to Sugarbush, 40 mins. to Stowe. For rent week, weekend, month. 802-229-0051.

CARIBBEAN PARADISE: Luxury 4 BR, 3 bath villa. Perfect 2-6 people. Enjoy heavenly views, gardens, privacy. Walk to 2 spectacular beaches. Tortola, British Virgins. Clipper Cleaver '41, Box 356, Adamsville, R.I. 02801. 401-635-4725(h), 617-742-8310(o).

TORTOLA, BVI: Three bedrooms overlooking two beaches. Maids, snorkeling, unspoiled. Bell, Box 3678, Greenville, DE 19807. 215-388-2241.

VAIL/BEAVER CREEK: Well-appointed 3 bedroom, 3 bath house 15 min. to Vail, 5 min. to Beaver Creek. Available Sat. to Sat. $850/wk. Charles Gaylord '34, 303-722-3474.

HANA, MAUI: One-bedroom executive getaway house with panoramic ocean/mountain views on 7.5-acre orchard/flower garden. $95/day, 4-day minimum. 213-654-2765.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR villa at Lagoon Point, sensational views. Weekly $840-$1260 winter; $560-$840 summer. Valentine, 8 Fern Way, Madbury, NH 03820. 603-742-3063.

ELEUTHERA, BAHAMAS: Cotton Bay Club. Magnificent waterfront home. Trent Jones golf course 100 yards away. Snorkeling, tennis, 3 bedrooms, Bertram sportsfisherman boat, pool, housekeeper. 617-722-7045.

IRELAND: Charming Georgian house in beautiful County Waterford. 4 BRs, 3 baths. Available all year. Low rental Nov. to June. 914-677-9698.

FLORIDA KEYS VACATION RENTALS: Call Jannie, Sugarloaf Realty. 305-745-2912.

SAN DIEGO: 2,500 sq. ft., 3 BR, 2½ bath Bauhaus condo. Exceptional executive living on ocean and lagoon. Furnished or unfurnished 6-month + lease, or lease-to-buy. $3,000/month or terms. 619-481-1548.

CASTLE HYDE: On the Blackwater River, County Cork, Southern Ireland. Exceptionally lovely 18th century Georgian house on 144 acres. 6 bedrooms, 5 modern baths, classic Renaissance gardens with fresh fruit and flowers. Fully staffed. Two miles of private trout and salmon fishing. Pheasant shooting. Available year round. Richard Kroon Y'64, 201-741-5692.

SCOTLAND—GLENEAGLES: Privately owned furnished, new 2-bedroom townhouse on grounds of Gleneagles Hotel estate. Central to highlands, St. Andrews, Edinburgh, Scottish links. $550/week. J. Murphy 513-281-0346.

ST. BARTHÉLÉMY HOLIDAY, FWI: Superb 3-bedroom beachfront villa. Complete services. 203-255-9299.

JUPITER ISLAND, OCEAN FRONT HOME: P.O. Box 1546, Hobe Sound, FL 33475. 407-546-2571. Bush '50, '64, '75.

COME BACK TO JAMAICA! Enjoy the privacy of your own spacious 3 BR, 3 bath villa, "Clive House", at Tryall Golf and Beach Club near Montego Bay. Beautifully appointed and complete with its own 20' x 40' pool. Cook, maid, laundress and gardener. Spectacular panoramic view of the Caribbean and our 18 hole championship golf course. Tennis, lovely sand beach and all water sports also on site for your enjoyment. Color brochure available on request. Call Liz Poley, w'55 or Susan Wylie weekdays 8-4:30. 612-339-1820.

TORTOLA, BVI: Three bedroom house, pool. Marvelous beach, views. Private, unspoiled location. Off-season values. 617-876-2590.

PERFECT DESERT VACATION HOME: Bermuda Dunes, California. Elegant, 3 bedrooms, jacuzzi, private tennis court, swimming pool, mountain vistas, great weather and nearby golf. William Klopovitz '66, 800-352-1144.

CENTRAL VERMONT: Restored 1830s home. 4 bedrooms, dormitory, 2 1/2 baths. Fully equipped. Tennis, skiing, hiking nearby. $500/week. Mike Van Dusen '65. 202-244-3473.

VAIL TOWNHOUSE: Spacious 2 story, 2 BR, 2 bath. Fireplace, views. 5 min. to lift. $975/week. Brochure. 303-781-8048.

VERMONT: Caspian Lake, Greensboro. Spacious lakeside home; golf, tennis. John Stone '53. 802-728-4848.

ST. MAARTEN BEACHFRONT—PELICAN RESORT AND CASINO: Designer apartments, Five Star Resort at discounted rates. Available holidays and school vacations. Call Joel Kane, 508-675-7821 days, 401-624-4207 evenings and weekends.

FRANCE: Beautifully restored home, Provençal village available January 1—April 30. October 1—December 31. Fireplaces, central heat, enclosed garden. 312-503-8426.

SOUTHWEST HARBOR, MAINE: Shorefront cottage. Spectacular views Acadia Park mountains over Somes Sound. Accommodates five. Weekly/monthly. 301-652-2356.

PORTUGAL, ALGARVE: Villa overlooking sea. Sleeps six. Maid. Available April through November. Harrison, P.O. Box 6865, Providence, RI 02940.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: New three bedroom contemporary, sleeps eight, water views, tennis, minutes to beaches, 609-924-7913 (office), 609-397-0147 (home).

NANTUCKET: Charming six bedroom Victorian, in-town, walk to beach. 617-449-4954.

MD.'s TALBOT COUNTY: Furnished two bedroom waterfront cottage on secluded historic estate. Pier; garage; peace! Call Juana Mestres w'57, 301-228-4236. Clare Hughes Real Estate, Cambridge, Md. 21613.

FOR SALE

MANHATTAN: If selling a co-op, condominium, or townhouse, call about our unique 200 brokerage firm multi-list program. Sharon Baum w'62, S.W. Bird & Co., 331 Madison Ave., New York, NY; 212-351-2416.

EASTERN SHORE OF MD: Seeking residential property in waterfront mid-shore area, convenient to Washington, Baltimore and Phila.? Call Juana Mestres w'57. Clare Hughes Real Estate, Cambridge, MD 21613. 301-228-4236 (o), 301-228-4787 (h).

ISLAND HOUSE: See "For Rent, Stocking Island."

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK, COLORADO: Unique properties. 10% of commission proceeds donated, in your name, to the Yellowstone Bighorn Research Association in memory of my father, Professor Erling Dorf, Hon. '33. Bob Dorf 303-476-2421.

GREAT CAMANOE, BVI: Secluded home, magnificent view on private island. 2 BR, baths. Land Rover and Whaler. Doug Martin '54. 203-426-2928.

BOCA RATON, FLA., YACHTSMAN DREAM: Deep-water slip, 3,000 sq. ft. townhouse facing Boca Raton Hotel. Next to beach club and Boca Inlet. Magnificent home or investment. Phone 407-466-4219. 407-391-9072.

MANHATTAN/BATTERY PARK CITY: Two bedroom high floor corner condominium with spectacular Hudson River views. Walk to work downtown. Luxury doorman building. $335,000, maint. $621. Jennifer Jordan '78. Office: 212-969-6259, home: 212-945-3113.

OUTSTANDING INVESTMENT, LIVE IN HOME 1856 farmhouse off Great Road, Princeton-border. Good condition, 2 family, 6 bedroom home and cottage with current monthly rental income $2,000-$2,500. Income pays mortgage costs. Asking $235,000. Call evenings 212-996-1512.

ONE BEDROOM, PALMER SQUARE APT.: Traditional, tasteful, charming. Overlooks green. Oak floors, fireplace. $160,000. Owner, 609-921-3836.

PRINCETON TOWNSHIP, 31 acres (part of 18th century woodlots of University). Single owner since 1900. $1,500,000. L. V. Silvester, Jr. '45, Executor, Box 52, Princeton, 08542. 609-921-6171.

TELL YOUR WILLIAMS FRIENDS: Beautiful 64 acres with panoramic 3-state views, pond, in Williams-town. Jim Egin '49. 413-458-5096.

CAPE COD, FALMOUTH/WAQUOIT: Lovely 4 bedroom home on 3.5 acres overlooking tidal river; boat to Vineyard Sound beaches. Abundant wildlife, spacious gardens. Close to Woods Hole science, Vineyard ferries, Cape Cod history. Perfect retirement/second home. $285,000. Buy now while the prices are low! Vincent Associates, 159 Main Street, Falmouth, MA 02540; 508-548-6500.

CAPE COD antique on 1.3 acres in Yarmouthport historic district. 4 bedrooms, 2 baths. Minutes to bay, beach and golf. Year round or seasonal. Norton, R.E. 508-362-2120

FOR SALE/FOR RENT

NANTUCKET—Come join the 400 happy Princeton families. We have large and small rentals, investment opportunities, estates and commercial enterprises. AND we give your investments TENDER, LOVING CARE—PREFERRED PROPERTIES. Nancie B. Taylor, w'43, Lucy T. Eaton, d'43. 508-228-2320, 800-338-7715.

WASHINGTON, DC, METROPOLITAN area, Northern Virginia, Maryland. Sales, rentals, land, property management. Colleen Finks w'61, associate broker, Pardoe & Graham, 6729 Curran St., McLean, VA 22101; 703-734-7020; eves., 703-821-2850.

FOR EXCHANGE

MONTEREY BAY, CALIFORNIA: Beach front luxury condo in exchange for like: Italy, Switzerland, France. Duke Slichter '54. 415-941-3244.

VAIL TOWNHOUSE: Spacious 2 story, 2 BR, 2 bath. Fireplace, views. 5 mins. to lift. In exchange for comparable in Florida on Atlantic 2 weeks in January. 303-781-8048.

RESORTS & TRAVEL

ITALY: INTIMATE, SMALL GROUP TOURS TO UNUSUAL DESTINATIONS: Tuscan Islands and Hilltowns; The Pallo di Siena; The Riviera; Mythological Routes in Sicily. La Pergola, Tours Inc.: A special company for the special traveler. Call for 1991 schedule: 914-358-6035.

ARIZONA GUEST RANCH: Riding ranch-bred horses, tennis, pool, fantastic birding, shooting, all in a verdant valley surrounded by historic mountains. Season, Nov. 1 to May 15, limited to 40 guests. Brochure, Circle Z Ranch, Box 194 P-4, Patagonia, AZ 85624, winter 602-287-2091, summer 814-425-3768, Don Simmons P'49 manager.

SCOTLAND: Ardsheal House, historic home of the Stewarts of Appin, now a country house hotel owned and run by Jane & Bob Taylor (Princeton '53). Located on coast in magnificent West Highlands. Superb food. Brochure: Ardsheal House, Kentallen of Appin, Argyll PA38 4BX, Scotland. Tel.: 44-63174-227. Fax: 44-63174-342. Open Easter to Nov.

LEARN UMBRIAN cooking in renovated farmhouse in Italy. 212-873-5104.

WANTED TO BUY

OLD TRAINS: Private collector interested in sets and collections. Contact David A. Hoffman, M.D. '54, 1330 Penn Ave., Wyomissing, PA 19610. 215-373-4271.

RARE BOOKS AND FIRST EDITIONS: We are interested in purchasing libraries or single volumes from the 15th to the 20th century. Top prices paid. Also, expert appraisals for individuals or institutions. David L. O'Neal '60, Antiquarian Booksellers, Inc., 234 Clarendon St., Boston, MA 02116; 617-266-5790.

OLD FOUNTAIN PENS: Any condition. Richard Golden, 212-758-6478; fax 212-557-8137.

BUSINESS SERVICES

PROFESSIONAL TAX PLANNING, ACCOUNTING, AUDIT REPRESENTATION. Personal and business. Enrolled to practice before IRS. By appointment. 212-947-6031. Virgil M. Cummins '67 (EA), 430 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10001.

GOODS & SERVICES

PIANIST, BOSTON AREA: Jazz/Classical, Solo/Ensemble. David Borden '88, 617-787-1976.

TIGER RUG shot legally India. Beautiful condition. $20,000 or best offer. 206-232-5582.

NANNIES: Trained at Nannies of Cleveland School, available for positions nationwide. Call Monica Bassett w'61. 216-521-4650.

OPPORTUNITIES

FLORIDA KEYS COMMERCIAL OPPORTUNITY: Operate your business from home with 2,000 sq. ft. apartment up, 2,000 sq. ft. down, 100' U.S. Hwy. #1 frontage, 80' canal in back. Call Jannie, Sugarloaf Realty 305-745-2912.

PAW

Reach
56,000
Princetonians world-wide with every issue!

To place an ad please contact:
Ms. Lolly O'Brien Advertising Manager
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William St. Princeton, N.J. 08540 (609)258-4886

12

ARTHUR C. HOLDEN
Box 182
Washington, CT 06793; 203-868-7063

While the Class of 1912 was passing through the University, there were an unusual number of its members who appeared to be intelligently interested in making architecture their professional calling in life. In the first decade of the 20th century, Princeton had developed an excellent department devoted to the study of art and archaeology. Prominent among the recent graduates was Howard Crosby Butler '05. He had become a member of the Princeton faculty interested in practical archaeology. As a young preceptor, he headed an expedition to the Middle East, after which excavation at Sardis in Asia Minor was commenced.

Princeton undergraduates in the civil engineering dept. at this same time found themselves to be interested in acquiring a better understanding of the fundamentals of architectural practice. Two organizations were founded among the recent graduates. These perhaps led to a greatly widened approach to Princeton's capacity for service. The first was known as the Princeton Engineering Society, of which Stephen F. Voorhis of N.Y. was the president. The second was known as the Princeton Architectural Assn., of which Arthur Meigs of Philadelphia was the first president. Subsequently S. F. Voorhis became its president.

13

ALISON R. BRYAN
Box F
Frentchtown, NJ 08825

The Class has received a copy of a letter from Isaac B. Grainger '17, secretary of his class, to the Airport Commission in Wilmington, N.C., regarding our own Arthur Bluethenthal. The letter reads:

"At our original commercial airport, there was displayed prominently the name of one of Wilmington's most distinguished citizens. Today public attention to that name is almost completely diverted and the airport is otherwise identified, which is most unfortunate. As a contemporary of Arthur Bluethenthal, and gratefully, a friend, I am fully aware of the justifications of the honor bestowed upon him and this recognition should not be eradicated by the mere passage of time.

"Bluey," as he was affectionately known by the entire community, was a beloved personality who risked a brilliant future by offering his services to our future allies in WWI, before the U.S. was involved. He ultimately became a member of the French Lafayette Espadrille, where, in 1918, he lost his life in air combat—the first Wilmingtonian to be killed in that war.

"The Wilmington Airport should still prominently display the name of this native son who became our most famous aviator. If the Chicago airport, the world's busiest airport, can still do that with its O'Hare, we certainly should be able to do that for Bluethenthal . . ."

We thank Mr. Grainger for his eloquence on behalf of our classmate.

14

C. EARL MOORE
Rosemont Plaza, Apt. 217
Rosemont, PA 19010

An outstanding letter has been received from Josephine Billings, the widow of our classmate

George Billings, better known as Josh. Because of space limits for Class notes, the letter has been divided into two parts, the first in this issue, and the conclusion in the Jan. 1991 issue.

"I was very happy indeed to receive your nice note of Oct. 2. Although I have written you a letter in my mind, my days have been so full that I have delayed much too long in putting my thoughts on paper. You asked if I am still busy at the hospital and the answer is 'yes.' The health and hospital field has become so complicated that I find I spend the major portion of my time doing hospital business. I am very blessed that we have an unusually fine administrative staff at the Brooklyn Hospital Center. I enjoy very much working with this staff, who are all much younger than I am, full of enthusiasm and dedicated to their positions.

"A year ago last March I went with two or three members of our staff over to London to take care of some insurance business. It was my first trip abroad as George always preferred to go fishing in the Adirondacks, and travel during his vacation never appealed to him. I enjoyed the fishing in the Adirondacks too, and we spent many happy summers there together. Now that I am alone and no one is depending on me, I feel free to do a little traveling.

"I found London a fascinating city and did, along with some business, as much sight-seeing as possible. It is, of course, a city filled with many historic places. When I went to Westminster Abbey, I could not believe I was actually there. I was filled with a great sense of awe that I was actually in such a magnificent building, 900 years old, filled with the history of England. There are several places that impressed me very much, among them, St. Paul's Cathedral and Blenheim Palace, which had many memorabilia from the Winston Churchill era. Both George's family and mine came from the British Isles, so I felt sorry that he was not with me when one likes to explore the beginnings of a family."

17

IKE GRAINGER, c/o Chemical Bank
30 Rockefeller Plaza, Ste. 6100
New York, NY 10112

On Nov. 1 Ike Grainger hosted a lunch for the officers and members of the Executive Committee. On hand, in addition to Ike, were Wbtl Landon, our president, Steve Hirsch, and Phyllis Schofield, treasurer. We were also joined by Ike's great-niece, Jeanne Grainger, who resides in N.Y.C.

We were sorry that the following were not able to be present: Pam and Kent Colwell, Doug Nichols, and Hans Bluntschli. They wrote expressing their deep disappointment at missing this gathering.

It is with much sadness that we report the death of Harry Hoyt on Nov. 5. He was a devoted member of the Class and took great interest in its affairs over the years. He will be sorely missed by all.

This concludes our notes for 1990. Our next news will be in the issue of Jan. 23. So at this time we extend a Merry Christmas to all and good wishes for a happy and healthy 1991.

19

GEORGE B. LARKIN
14 Lake Forest Dr.
Charlottesville, VA 22901

The very best of Christmas to all 1919ers.

Casey Downing's letter had the news that he had been in and out of the hospital—slight stroke, broken arm—all of which now has him dependent on others. He can write a good letter—thanks much.

It is with deep sorrow we advise of the death of Don Street on Oct. 31 in Westerly, R.I. All 1919ers extend their deep sympathy to his family.

20

SALLY S. McALPIN W'20
Box 670
Princeton, NJ 08542

For those of us who are interested in art, especially modern art, the latest gift to the Princeton Art Museum is a cause for rejoicing. Mr. and Mrs. H. Gates Lloyd have given to the museum, in honor of the Class of 1923, an important painting by an American artist, William de Kooning. It is the well known "Black Friday" and is considered by the art museum to be its most important work of post-war art by a major American artist.

I cannot resist the temptation to be corny and say, "I hope the Saturday when we meet Yale on the football field will not be a Black Saturday!"

We are sorry to report that Elizabeth Parke Firestone, the widow of Harvey Firestone, died Oct. 13.

21

A. EDWARD CONOVER
331 Lower Dolington Rd., Apt. C-4
Newtown, PA 18940

Merry Christmas and New Year's greetings to you all. The next issue of the PAW will be dated Jan. 23, 1991. That happens to be your secretary's birthday, which triggered an idea. Why not congratulate classmates on their birthdays right here? So here goes: congratulations to Otto Reimer and John Fawcett who will be 92 on Dec. 21 and Dec. 30. The Class extends congratulations also to Darwood Myers and Bill Barclay who will reach 91 on Dec. 22 and Dec. 30. On Jan. 10, 1991, Ritz Perry will be 92. Hearty congratulations to him.

Watt Mattheus was one of the 1990 winners of the Natl. Preservation Honor Awards for his lifelong interest in preserving the buildings and atmosphere of the historic cattle ranch. The awards are given annually by the Natl. Trust to individuals and organizations who have made exceptional contributions to the preservation of America's architectural and cultural heritage.

22

JACK REYNOLDS, JOHN CARTER '60
103 East 84th St.
New York, NY 10028

From Bob Scholl about the 1922 Foundation: "I have served as treasurer of the foundation under three Presidents—Hank Willett, Carney Hargroves, and Fran Wood, who did most of the work and loved the job. The time has come for our 'children' trustees to take over, with Scott McVay '55, president; Lee Cobb '55 and Emily Hargroves Fisher w'57, V.P.s; Perry Morgan '46, treasurer; and Reeves Hicks '46, secretary. Aren't we fortunate to have this kind of support and the assurance that the work of the foundation will be continued as long as it is needed."

Also from Scott McVay: "When I was invited to join the board of the Class of 1922 Foundation on June 9, 1979, as the first member of the next generation, Hank Willett was president. He handled that assignment with the love, care, and devotion that transcended even what he brought to the high art of stained-glass windows. He was succeeded by the Rev. Carney Hargroves, whose life, especially in Eastern Europe, bespoke the core values of the foundation, to assist those in need and elevate the spirit. Carney was succeeded by Dr. Fran Wood, former dean of the medical school at U.Penn., whose genial and empathetic competence made him seem born to the task.

To follow in these footsteps is a daunting charge, but I should make clear that when the torch was officially passed to the progeny of 1922 that Bob Scholl, Jim Scarff, Baldy Maull, Jack Lewis, and Struve Hensel were present. The current assets of the foundation are $360,000 and five widows and one classmate are being assisted on a regular basis. Should you know of any member or widow needing help, please let us know. Any inquiries will be treated with the utmost confidence."

23

LARRY GOOD

201 W. Evergreen Ave., Apt. 716
Philadelphia, PA 19118

P. L. Penfield writes that Sept. 21 marked the arrival of his and Charlotte's sixth great-grandchild, Kevin S. Moeller, born in Anchorage, Alaska. He says, "Charlotte and I celebrated here in Florida, ringing bells with a bell choir, having fun with a bridge club, and next day chasing the little white ball for nine holes (score censored). So all is well!"

Dick Lebnert is enjoying some similar pastimes. He says, "The doctor says I'm healthy. Still play a little golf and bridge and help take care of the old folks here." He sends his regards to the Class, as does Roy Prichard who sends greetings to "all ye '23 survivors!"

Helen White (Mrs. C. S.) relates that she has recently moved to a retirement home close to her house, and that, happily, her children and grandchildren were together this summer for the wedding of her grandson, David (son of David White '55) to Sophia Wheelwright of N.Y., N.Y., and New Canaan, Conn.

David Kemp and wife Eleanor are enjoying "reasonably good health" and finding it easy to entertain family and friends in their well-run retirement community. David says, "At 90, no news is good news!" Not so for Rev. T. S. Mutch, who writes that "the Presbyterian Church in Morristown went all out to celebrate my 90th birthday."

Fran (Mrs. Pendleton) Marshall is happy to still get PAW and reads with interest the various activities of the Class.

SueByrd Roberts-Pentland recently spent time in Key West, Fla., a favorite spot that she first visited in 1935. She extends a dinner invitation (904-622-2510) to all members of the Class who find themselves in the "real red-neck country" of the Red-dick, Fla., area (en route to Tampa).

Bob Aaronson reports that he and Peg love their apartment and send their salutations: "Peg and I are still afloat and not kicking. I wear a cane but Peg hangs on to her tennis bat . . . I no longer drive, and Peg does so by daylight only. Best to all!"

We regret to report the death of Mrs. L. McLane Fisher on Aug. 24, 1990.

24

RICHARD H. HOBBS

862 Prospect Ave.
Winnetka, IL 60093

We have a copy of a letter from the University to a donor regarding the Class of 1924 Scholarship, which will be of interest to our Classmates and widows. It reads in part as follows: "As you will see from the enclosed material the Class of 1924 Scholarship was established in 1946 . . . and in 1974 additional monies were raised by the Class for this scholarship to reaffirm their gratitude for what Princeton meant to them. We hope you agree that this would be a very appropriate way to memorialize your uncle by contributing to the education of many young undergraduates. You will be interested to know that last year eight undergraduates received vitally needed financial aid through the efforts of the Class, and, as the fund grows year after year, more and more students will benefit from your generosity."

Those of you who might wish to make a gift or memorial might consider our 1924 Scholarship fund.

We have notes from Martha Froelich, who resides at 120 East 90th., N.Y., N.Y., and Art Lionberger. Art writes that he and Alene are surviving nicely and that their rural lifestyle seems to agree with them.

We have a memorial in this issue.

25

JOHN L. K. JENNEY

Box 123
Montchanin, DE 19710

"Hello, Jakie." It was Wes Morck on the telephone acknowledging birthday greetings (after many years of silence) and asking if your secretary recalled the nickname coined by his neighbors in Witherspoon sophomore year. He has lived at locations around Williamsburg since the end of his Wall Street business career. A formerly ardent golfer and traveler, he still plays bridge and "enjoys two martinis before dinner."

Last summer Polly and George Phillips were on the QEII, which was staging a very elaborate celebration of the 150th anniversary of the commencement of Atlantic scheduled service between Liverpool and Boston by Samuel Cunard. On board were Queen Elizabeth, the Duke of Edinburgh, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Edwin Newman, and representatives of the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, the Royal Shakespeare Co., the Smothers brothers, etc.

The N.Y. TIMES magazine section recently contained an article by Julian Street Palmer, grandson of our Pete, who was director of the N.Y. State "Common Cause," reporting on the "swelling up" of sentiment to limit the length of time that legislators may hold office. Those who attended our 65th will remember a newspaper photo of Pete's twin great-grandchildren, exhibited by him with great pride to all present.

Our column of June 13 reported that Robin Little had 17 grandchildren. This was an understatement. The correct figures are 22 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren—no doubt contributing reasons for not making the trip to Reunions.

Charlie Snover writes, "Thanks for the happy birthday card. It is nice to be reminded that I am still alive (sometimes I am not too sure). I don't get out of the house much . . . Hope you are trying to keep in shape."

26

ROBERT WOLFORTH

57 Rockwell Rd.
Ridgefield, CT 06877

Jim Macfarland '32, of Mt. Tabor, N.J., represented his Class at the memorial services last May in Westfield, N.J., for our late classmate, Bob Smythe. It should be noted that Jim also represented at the services the "Mountain Lakes Geritol Reunion Committee," of which Jim and Bob were founding co-chairmen in 1977. This organization came into being when Bob and Jim planned a reunion of all Mountain Lakes residents who had attended a four-room grammar school in that town during WWI. The occasion was such a success—148 aging, former schoolmates turned up from Florida to California—that the occasion gained wide media attention and was christened "The Geritol Reunion" with the Geritol Co. supplying free samples to all participants.

Marsh Harrington, who served as head of the physics department at Drew Univ. in Madison, N.J., from 1931 to 1955 has recently been honored by the establishment of an undergraduate prize in physics bearing his name.

A van with a chairlift is the way Mary and DeWitt Smith do their errands and exercise their Labrador in Corvallis, Wash., where they are near family and friends.

Jobnny Easton reports with considerable excitement that a great-grandchild is on the way.

Sally and Phil Becker missed the Oct. mini-reunion as they were en route to Boca Raton for the season.

If anyone believes that 1926 is slowing down, please note this report from Assoc. Mbr. Vida Dugan: "Had a very busy year, including graduations in Ohio and Fla., then a two-week Smithsonian project in Monserrat excavating a slave village burying ground on Galway Sugar Plantation. Spent a week at Beartooth Mountain with Alumni College."

27

NELSON R. BURN

36 Lexington Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06119

Hal Johnson's son, David, reports that his father suffered a stroke on Oct. 15, and shows "some improvement." He would like to receive letters or notes at 411 No. Middletown Rd., Lima, PA. Ted Bachran writes that the Executive Committee decided it is necessary to raise the annual dues to $25. Lucky "Dick" Dixon doesn't pay dues—he's a life member and he sends "best wishes to all."

Paul Gessinger reports that his father Alfred died on Sept. 19 of a heart attack. Al had been living at the Wilton Meadows Health Center, his son Paul reports. Hank Butler lost his "wonderful wife" last Feb., and life alone is really hard. But, he'll "be 86 come Mar. 17. Wow!" Vic Gettner reports that he and Henriette "had a very great summer and early fall" at their home in White Plains, N.Y., and enjoyed it. Otherwise, no news.

Kutch Mayers would like to see Executive Committee meetings better attended than the one before the Harvard game. Only Jim Westfall, Ted Bachran, Curt Winsor, and Kutch showed up, plus Jim and Curt's daughters at lunch. As for the game—blah! Jim Pucair's widow, Ellen, sends "best wishes to the Class of '27." Hank Mayer has sent to Ted Bachran a photo of his daughter Betsy with Kutch Mayers. Her husband is Don Miller '55.

Jack Damerel sends a note on the passing of years. "My eldest son, John, ex-1952, just retired. Where does that push me?" (Jack! What more honorable place than father?) Bert Hodgeman sends greetings from Hilton Head Island, hoping that Ted Bachran always has "the same enthusiastic approach to life." Peanut and Betty Royster, from the Maine coast, send best wishes, together with daughters Dindy at Blue Hill, and Molly at San Diego. The daughters make life perfect. He and wife feel great, and he wishes the same luck to all.

Through Ted, Don Kemmerer sends greetings to all 1927ers.

28

R. PARK JOHNSON

Box 28
Penney Farms, FL 32079; 904-284-8698

Fred Hyer reports a small contingent present at the Harvard game picnic at Jadwin Gym: Sherb Becker, Charlotte and Fred Hyer, Jane and Don Liddell, Bill Rencbard. Bunny Stenger came by with a friend but did not stay for lunch. Guests included Fred Hyer Jr. '61, his wife, Pat; daughter, Susan; and three others.

The director of Annual Giving at Princeton since 1967, Joe Bolster '52 will retire at the end of Jan. 1991. He will leave with an extraordinary record of achievement. He will be succeeded as director by Bill Hardt '63, who has worked in the Annual Giving office since graduation. Bill is a son of our late classmate Bill Hardt, and we are proud that a son of the Class of '28 has been appointed to this important post of responsibility for continued alumni support of Princeton.

A telephone message from Doug Neale of Delray Beach, Fla., brought the sad news of the death of his wife Vera on Sept. 22 after a long period of illness with Parkinson's disease. Vera and Doug had celebrated 45 years of married life. Ken Kepler '27, brother of Doug's first wife, Kay, was able to come from Columbia, S.C., to the memorial service for Vera. Doug uses a cane and moves slowly but he flew north for a visit with a son after Vera's death. Doug continues to live at the Harbour's Edge retirement community in Delray Beach.

29

LOUIS F. KEMP
12 Winthrop Rd.
Guilford, CT 06437; 203-453-4646

Class Meeting/Luncheon Jan. 16, Nassau Club, 11:30 A.M.

A joyous Christmas to all '29ers. There's a certain magic about Christmas in Guilford—white candles in the windows, giving off a soft white glow. Here's news, mostly belated. Nep Isaacs recalls, "I think often of the good R.O.T.C. days, especially since my grandson takes it at Lehigh and loves it. No horses or their production to cope with."

Tom Block has been recovering from spinal surgery, which has affected his feet. He visited St. Andrews, the famous R. and A. Course in Scotland for the autumn meeting, in spite of his handicap. But thanks to having his son Stuart '56 with him, they had a good time and Tom expects to be all right in due time.

Last July Cliff Read went out to St. Paul and attended the 50th wedding celebration of Susan and Dick Oke. It was organized by their children with 150 attending—friends from university, art, political, and church worlds, reflecting their varied interests. As Cliff observed, "Well-behaved, well-fed, and well-drunk seniors honoring two of their own." Received a lovely and touching letter from Debbie Carey, Jim's widow, expressing her appreciation for the well-deserved tributes paid him. Joe Hague had to pass up our Class luncheon before the Harvard game Oct. 20 to attend the 50th wedding anniversary of two of his closest friends at the Jersey Shore.

30

HUBERT A. "RED" SCHWENNER
8008 Westover Rd.
Bethesda, MD 20814

In mid-Oct. we received a touching letter from Dorothy Lightner. It seems that back in June Bill Trimble sent to Al Lightner a long letter describing our 60th reunion, which Al could not attend because of poor health. Al put the letter into a folder on his desk labeled "Princeton-1930," along with a draft of a letter to us suggesting that Bill's letter was so good it ought to be sent to every member of the Class who did not get to reunions. Al even offered to underwrite part of the cost of circulating Bill's letter. Unfortunately Al's health became progressively worse and his letter to us was never sent. Dorothy found it after Al's death in Sept. and then sent it on along with a copy of Bill's letter. They are too long to reproduce here, but we share Al's evaluation of Bill's letter and we would be happy to send a copy of anyone who would like to read it. Just drop us a line at the address shown above.

Following are some gleanings from the envelope flaps from Lou Klauder's dues notice: Syd Stevens keeps busy commuting to his consulting office in Princeton from Meadow Lakes, a retirement community in Hightstown, N.J. Elliot Coyle writes that he is in fairly good shape, although his heart is not too great. He keeps busy collecting cars, guns, and books and will try a little golf "if the sun ever comes out again in Western Penn." Anita and Dave McMullin made their annual trip to Maine, visiting Ends Fairman and his wife enroute. Don Chamberlain's oldest grandson played center field on the Univ. of Georgia's baseball team, which won the College World Series in Omaha. Merrill Sheppard and Whitney Messlage dropped in to see Don Dilmars at his home in Pennington, N.J., and were amazed to find Don painting the basement floor in the dark, despite his almost complete blindness. How like Don; he never quits.

We have memorials in this issue.

31

HUGH T. KARR
15-01-U Meadow Lakes
Hightstown, NJ 08520; 609-448-4100

In 1945, Lon Hocher commanded a Navy troop ship, the U.S.S. LST 889, and on the way to Japan edged alongside a typhoon that peeled the paint off the hull. This past October, 45 years later, Lon hosted a reunion at Woods Hole with five of the original officers who served with him, for a festive weekend that included a clambake and a boat tour of local harbors. Lon and Esther plan to join up with Carolyn and Woody English en route to our 60th. If Lon brings his guitar, maybe some can gather 'round to sing old favorites and a sea chantey or two.

HERE & THERE: Pete Anstruber is off on a "sea voyage," but he doesn't say where; George Merrill, with three doctorates, was recently awarded the President's Medal at Loyola College, Md., "for a life dedicated to church, scholarship, and community"; down Georgia way, Ted Morris is recovering from surgery and expects to be back on the golf course soon; "Badger" Pease says he knows all the doctors and hospitals in his Fla. area but has his "sights on the 1991 reunion" (maybe Rene Carillo, a former roommate, can make some plans to bring Jim back); Hank Royster, our Raleigh medico, keeps busy with community services such as recycling and the Red Cross, with part-time teaching at the U.N.C.; a nearby classmate, Joe Sloane, who has longtime ties with Chapel Hill, tells of the rebuilt Ackland Museum of Art of which he was the founding director.

Know the three stages of a man's life? First, he believes in Santa Claus. Second, he doesn't believe in Santa Claus. Third, he is Santa Claus. Holiday greetings and a Happy New Year!

We regret to report the death of Harold Byron Smith. A memorial will appear later.

32

MATLAND A. EBY
Seven Gates Farm
Vineyard Haven, MA 02568

These thoughts from Laurie Rockefeller are worth pondering. After his own productive march through what he calls the "potato race of life" and after his contribution of $21 million to establish the Center for Human Values at Princeton, he noted in an interview that too many young people wonder what they are going to do after college, but do not ask what they are going to be. "The secular needs in life are so obvious," he said, that everyone tends to cater to them, but we have lost track of our spiritual needs, beyond consumerism. It appears that the academic world is getting more reductionistic and less and less impressed by world spirituality, intuition, insight, and mysticism." Hence the new center, which will draw from philosophy, religion, anthropology, politics, history, and the sciences. What an inspiring challenge it will be to pull all that together.

TRAVEL NOTES: Clayton Morehead has fallen in love with the West and has made trips to Canyon de Chelly, Mesa Verde, Santa Fe, and Taos. Biddy and

By McCoy are back from a trip to Montana. Bart Hawley hosted a family reunion, cruising with children and spouses in the West Indies. Lloyd Thomas went climbing in the Adirondacks, suffered from a swollen knee for two months as a result.

We note with sorrow the death of Hugh Wise's wife, Cissy, a dear friend of many classmates, also the death of the late Irwin Hills's wife, Eulalie, finally the confinement to a nursing home of the late Jim Evans's wife, Martina.

We have a memorial in this issue.

33

ARTHUR MOODY
600 E. Cathedral Rd., Apt. A314
Philadelphia, PA 19128

Last year, in the Dec. 6, 1989, issue of PAW, we mentioned that our classmate Fife Symington was the son of a governor, Soapy Williams was a governor, and Fife Symington's son, J. F. III, was going to run in the Arizona Republican gubernatorial primary in 1990. We now announce that he won the primary and led in the election, but faces a run-off in Feb. Will Fife become the first classmate to be the father of a governor? Stay tuned.

A recent piece in the N.Y. Times reported the opening to the public of the Baltimore mansion of the Garrett family, which had been bequeathed to Johns Hopkins Univ. by John Work Garrett and restored at a cost of $4.3 million. The article mentions that Harry Garrett's father, Robert (Class of 1897), used the gym which his grandfather, T. Harrison (Class of 1868), had installed to train for the 1896 revival of the Olympic Games.

Another N.Y. Times piece told about Larry Hirsch's mother, Hortense Mayer Hirsch, who died recently at the age of 102. It mentioned her many benefactions. One not mentioned was the Princeton Class of '33 Scholarship in memory of Larry, who died in 1962.

Ads for and reviews of Lew Thomas's latest, ET CETERA, ET CETERA: NOTES OF A WORD WATCHER, are appearing in all the papers these days. The N.Y. Times says, "Anybody who loves words and wordplay will be entertained by the history behind everyday words and by some of the author's provocative speculation about language." Classmates have long admired Lew's graceful use of words in writing about biology and medicine, and no doubt will be rushing to the bookstores so they can read his words about words.

We are sorry to report the death on Oct. 19, 1990, of Gus Schmitt. We have a memorial in this issue.

34

RALPH K. RITCHIE
4347 Province Line Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Debbie Debuchi, who retired in 1975 after working 24 years in Tokyo selling potassium fertilizers to major trading companies, still lives in Tokyo, "fully enjoying my life in retirement." The last time he visited Princeton was in the summer of 1971.

Duse Dusenberry, who lives in Palm Springs, Calif., for most of the year, has purchased a condominium at Oceanpoint near Boothbay Harbor, Me., "to escape the very hot and humid weather during June, July, Aug., and Sept. in Palm Springs."

Bobbie and Wis Miller are back at their winter home in Stuart, Fla., after another summer at Chatham, Mass., on Cape Cod. It was their 15th summer at Chatham.

Jack Serfas, apparently disturbed that someone questioned why a Philadelphia street was named Custer, citing Custer's "mediocre West Point record, court-martial, and defeat at Little Big Horn," shot off to the Philadelphia INQUIRER one of his fact-packed letters to the editor expounding why "Philadelphia should be proud that a street was named after him." (Custer St., in the Kensington section, is one block long.)

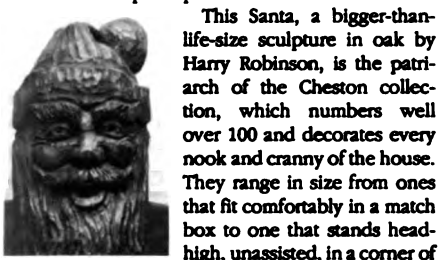

Bill Smith, who in his working years used to spend summer vacations on Mt. Desert Island in Maine, now lives there year round and says it's great. He and Marye have "settled in" for their seventh winter.

George Warch has joined Rus Wood in entertaining nursing-home residents as part of the Hobbyaires, a six-piece band. Classmates will recall that both George and Rus played in the Retreads band at our 25th reunion.

Some class!

35 JOSEPH C. HAZEN JR.
94 Essex Rd.
Summit, NJ 07901

AT CHRISTMASTIME, if you're near N.Y., you should visit Rockefeller Center. If you're anywhere near Summit, N.J., you should visit Cele and Frank Cheston, for Santa comes to their house in every conceivable size, shape, and material. One example is pictured here.

This Santa, a bigger-than-life-size sculpture in oak by Harry Robinson, is the patriarch of the Cheston collection, which numbers well over 100 and decorates every nook and cranny of the house. They range in size from ones that fit comfortably in a match box to one that stands head-high, unassisted, in a corner of the living room. There's a ballet of tipsy Santas dancing precariously on the edge of a book shelf, a pooped-out Santa sleeping in an ashtray, a show-off Santa banging from the rim of a candlestick, stuffed Santas hogging every chair in the house and, in the hall, 26 miniature Santas squeezing into the compartments of an antique printer's type case. But there's more. Propped up on Cele's bed pillow is a rubber Santa whose tummy doubles as a hot water bottle and, much to the surprise of guests, in the powder room is an appliqued Santa on the toilet seat. Most are stuffed fabric Santas in the proverbial red and white, but some are made of clay, straw, pine cones, and there's even a spread-eagled starfish in a very convincing Santa costume. Reflecting another Cheston hobby—travel—their Santas come from all over the world and often betray their origin, like the made-in-Japan Santa whose eyes are unmistakably oriental.

At this time of year the Chestons open their house for the benefit of local institutions, and a year ago they hosted a party for local classmates. They welcome visitors but ask that they phone ahead so they'll have time to wind up the Santas who jig to the tune of a music box. MERRY CHRISTMAS!

36 JAMES Q. BUNSEN
24 Aylesbury Cir., Windermere
Madison, CT 06443

This photo, by Keith Jackson for the Oct. 15 issue of NEW YORK, shows Jerry Zipkin with Ivana Trump. Over the years, Jerry has been a confidant of several socialites.

The first program announcement on our approaching 55th is that music will be provided by Ed Polcer '58 and his orchestra. Ed, a former student of Houie Menand, played for us at our 20th and 50th. He is a highly regarded trumpeter who took over Eddie Condon's famous Greenwich Village Club after Eddie died in the mid-1970s.

Frank White and Mary recently returned from a self-conducted auto trip of Germany, Switzerland, Austria, and Czechoslovakia. Frank warns "double-check your road maps of what was East Germany.

Tiger Cadets Triumph

Jeffrey R. Golden '91 (above) and Cheryl A. Patterson '91 (below) receive awards for their performances at R.O.T.C. summer camp.

PHOTO COURTESY OF U.S. ARMY

THE TIGER BATTALION, Princeton's R.O.T.C. unit, ranked first among more than ninety East-Coast R.O.T.C. groups last summer at training camp in Fort Bragg, North Carolina. The fourteen seniors were among twenty-four-hundred cadets tested in six categories: military proficiency, leadership proficiency, physical fitness, marksmanship, land navigation, and overall excellence. Princetonians finished first in four of the six categories. Scored on a five-point scale, the Tigers as a group came away with a 4.49, topping their previous high of 3.9.

Individual awards went to Jeffrey R. Golden '91 and Cheryl A. Patterson '91. Golden was selected as the top cadet in his regiment of three hundred for her leadership qualities. Patterson received a Regimental Physical Fitness Trophy, posting the highest score among women in a test that involved a two-mile run, two minutes of sit-ups, and two minutes of push-ups.

Golden, an economics major from West Point, New York, is an Orange Key guide and a former captain of the junior-varsity soccer team. This fall, he coached Princeton High School's J.V. soccer team. After completing what will probably be a four-year military obligation, he expects to attend graduate school in preparation for a career in teaching.

Patterson, from Stanton, California, is majoring in the Woodrow Wilson School and hopes to be a lawyer for the Army. She serves as the kitchen manager of Tower Club and as the president of the Inter-Club Sports Council, and she participates in club judo.

Capping an exceptional year, in November the Tiger Battalion's training program was named the best among the nation's four hundred R.O.T.C. units. "A lot of credit should go to Major Mike Burbach, who was in charge of our training," says Golden. Training is something that never stops: the Tigers recently concluded a two-day field exercise at Fort Dix, New Jersey, and before next year's summer camp, they will compete in the Ranger Challenge, a three-day endurance contest against cadets from other universities.

—Sean L. McCarthy '93

Some roads just in the planning stage are shown. One must be able to tell the difference between reddish orange and orange-like red to know which roads are actually in place."

Our most active athlete continues to be Sky Ferris, 76 years young. Last Oct. he and some 500 others competed in the Senior Olympics of Northern Va., in which he won third-place medals in the shot put, discus, running broad jump, softball hit, and 800-meter walk. He lost in the 100-meter sprint, softball throw, and in chess he was defeated by two retired army generals. Next year he hopes to add the 800-meter run and tennis. This winter he is again playing organized hockey!

We are pleased to advise that Std Silleck is recovering nicely. We regret to report that John De Yoe's wife, Ruth, died recently and that Sally, the wife of past Class secretary Dick Waters, passed away Nov. 10, 1990.

37

STANISLAV F. MIRONA
250 Broadway, Rm. 2104
New York, NY 10007

Writes Tom Wolf: "In 1903 Dr. Horatio Nelson Jackson became the first person to cross the U.S. by automobile. Today his vehicle, a Winton he named Vermont, is parked in the Smithsonian. My story is parked in the Oct. SMITHSONIAN magazine," and it's an incredible tale, 63 days from San Francisco to N.Y., almost nonexistent roads, 800 gallons of (stove) gasoline, two sets of tires, and later, a $5 fine for exceeding Burlington's six-mile-an-hour speed limit.

We regret to report the death of Ben Sloan Oct. 29.

50th wedding anniversaries. Ginny and Fran Jacobs took daughter Josephine and husband Van to their pad (time-share) at Pelican Resort and Casino in St. Maarten for two weeks in July, with daughter, Jane, husband, and three kids nearby. Doris and Phil Porter celebrated Sept. 14 with a big gathering of friends, including five of the six bridesmaids. Took three of the bridesmaids to their cottage in Colorado to see the aspens turn gold. Phil is looking for oil in eastern Siberia. Marion and Henry Quellmalz celebrated Aug. 2, with three daughters and husbands, three grandchildren, and one great-granddaughter with one granddaughter married the same day in their home. Louise and Pete Pumyea outdid these by celebrating their 52nd anniversary with a two-week cruise and tour from Vancouver to Anchorage and Fairbanks, Alaska. He is now treasurer of the 400-member Jackson Senior Citizens Club, which took a trip to Las Vegas to replenish their funds. Barbara and Turk Thorildsen underdid these by celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary Sept. 4, though the main celebration was July 4, when all the children and grandchildren surprised them with a gathering at son David's.

New addresses. Scott Donabue's widow, now Mrs. Loris Thurston, 118 Misty Meadow Lane, No. Chatham, MA 02650; Penn Kimball, 3735 Kanawha St., N.W., Washington, DC 20015-1137.

Merry Christmas! Don't forget your toast to '37 Christmas Eve!

38

WILLIAM P. TAMS
Box 167
Moran, WY 83013; 307-543-2396

Now that you have your 1991 calendars, mark on them two important dates: Alumni Day and the Service of Remembrance at University Chapel Feb. 16, and our 53rd reunion June 6-9.

David Gordon wrote last winter: "1989 saw varied travels: an excursion to Peru and the Galapagos in Jan./Feb.; a freighter cruise from Montreal to the Adriatic in the fall, and, at year-end, a working assignment as head of a small consulting team on a project for institutional strengthening of the Land Bank of the Philippines, financed by the Asian Development Bank. In between, I've been busy on the boards of a couple of small corporations, mostly trying to raise money for them, otherwise goofing off." Dave retired from the World Bank in 1980 after a 30-year stay, and from all we can gather 1989 was a typical year for him since.

Mary and George Hogeman took a trip up the Rhine and down the Danube last May, and were impressed by the signs of upheaval and the surprising different effects from country to country that they observed.

Nan and Tom McMillan have been taking full advantage of his semi-retirement—skiing in Switzerland and Italy (Zermatt and Cervinia) last winter, Arizona in March, in summer to Montana, and later the Wind River country near Dubois, Wyo., for fly fishing (Nan's forte), where they hosted Helen and Bill Tams for lunch one fine day.

Although awed by the passing of our 50th, Dr. Ted Chambers has gained a proper perspective through an invitation to speak at a symposium on spermatology at the 750th anniversary of the Univ. of Siena in Italy in Aug.

Finally, Bill Tams wishes to thank all his well-wishers for their concerns over his back surgery, from which recovery is almost complete, and to wish all of you a Happy New Year!

39

RICHARD R. UHL
12 Charlotte Ct.
Briarcliff Manor, NY 10510

The Harvard game provided one last opportunity in 1990 for a Class gathering and once again '39 had by far the largest turnout at Jadwin before the game: 41 classmates, 27 wives and four widows. Thanks to Jane Hough we got some great pictures, including this foursome, Butts Hansl, Marty Tiernan, and Audrey and Bill Jadden. After the game about 50 went on to the Wynnas to recover their spirits, nourished by that well-known Wynne hospitality. The Jaddens had flown in from Switzerland on their way to Williamsburg, their stateside home, there to rendez-vous with Bert and Art Schmidt. Art is now well on the mend after serious surgery last Feb. The Jaddens and Schmidts were to journey to Georgia in mid-Nov. to visit Jenny and Dixie Howell.

Bruce Bedford, also on the medical mend, cruised with Jere from Miami through the Canal and landed in Peru. Then on to Chile and around the horn to Buenos Aires. Bruce professed to be mystified that after they crossed the equator heading south the climate kept getting colder and colder. Note for economy majors: in Peru Bruce exchanged $40 U.S. and got 17,000,000 intis in return. When Jere tried to get rid of 10,000 of these, nobody would accept.

Dick Morten has been immobilized since a mysterious ailment struck him in Jan. A long hand-written letter gives proof that his hands are again under control. He hopes to be walking soon. Phone talks with Tom Armstrong (N.J.) and Johnny Laslie (Fla.) have kept him in touch with our Class.

We have a memorial in this issue.

40

BENJAMIN FULLER
6119 Vernon Terr.
Alexandria, VA 22307; 703-329-1961

Two intrepid 1940 Danube River pirates, Johnny Yates and Brooks Jones, triumphantly display headgear captured amidst the tumult of the Istanbul bazaar. A Sept. departure from Vienna aboard the versatile Russian assault craft UKRAINE included 31 Classmates and 29 wives, who eagerly stormed ashore at Bratislava, Budapest, Belgrade, and Istanbul, and in addition executed brilliant inland forays to Plevna and Bucharest. All objectives were reached per schedule and no casualties listed among friend or foe. The victory celebrations back aboard ship and enthusiasm for additional travel conquests were in line with the highest traditions of the Class. In fact many of these troopers clamored for continuation on to Baghdad to settle accounts with Saddam Hussein and his bully boys!

Classmates and wives making up this merry band of marauders were Miney and Cbtz Anderson, Polly and Nick Biddle, Buzzer Boozan, Nan and George Cowen, Bill Davidson, Sally and Fritz Poots, Roberta and Ben Fuller, Frances and Jack Geisel, Sara and Gene Gillespie, Margaret and Bob Goben, El and Deb Hanson, Marian and Bob Hart, Kick and Bob Hazleburst, Alice and Bob Hector, Anne and Brooks Jones, Luna and Gil Kayser, Joanne and Tom Kennedy, Betty and Dar Ley, Milly and Bob Marshall, Mary and Bob McEldownay, Kitty and Pat Merle-Smith, Charm and Dave Robinson, Connie and Sam Rogers, Nancy and Jake Rogers, Bev and DeWitt Van Sicken, Helen and Charley Waugh, Mary and Ed Weidlein, Jane and Tom Wilcox, Nancy and Wilkie Wilkinson, Jean and Johnny Yates, and Camille and Pops You.

Long may this group continue to sail under the colors of the 1940 Jolly Roger. All in all a great expedition and experience.

We have a memorial in this issue.

41

BILL WILSON
Box 1420
Bridgehampton, NY 11932; 516-537-2458

Secret societies are not unique to New Haven. Several are said to lurk in Class of 1941 shadows. One of these recently came in out of the cold. With unconscionable pretension this one styles itself "The Edwards Place Society, 1937-8." Total membership is limited to Janet and Tony Ellrod of Armonk, Phemie and Fred Bruenner of Shelter Island, Barbara and Ted Black of Port Washington, and Becky and Hugh Johnson of Laurel Hollow. All New York State. They take turns hosting annual reunions arranged years ahead. Perfect attendance is demanded.

This past Sept., Aileen and Russ Traut led a World Wildlife Fund cruise from Singapore to Bali around Borneo. Irmela and Sam Pogue of Cincinnati aboard. Join up for the Mar. 2-Apr. 12, 1991, visit to Madagascar and the Seychelles by phoning Russ at the W.W.F. 202-293-4800. Our PC386sx confirms that Jay Ely is the only '41er living in Iowa. Jay says that in the Annual Giving field his personal hero is Henry Tomlinson, who year after year leads Princeton's Vero Beach group to a number-one ranking in A.G. participation. Joan and Thorpe Goodfellow, with daughter Emily '76, were pleased to find Ann and Carl Jacobs aboard their Lindblad cruise to Alaska. Physically fit Conny and Bill Quinby in Europe for seven weeks including Alpine climbs. They saw Albuquerque's Charles Williams at an Alumni College in Alsace. Dray Dayton will be at the 50th.

Teddy III's long-weakened heart finally gave up, and he died Nov. 2, 1990. Ted himself never once gave up on Princeton or on our Class.

42

ARMSTRONG HUNTER
R.R. 1, Box 250, Perkinsville, VT 05151
802-263-5361; fax 802-263-9263

Dues flaps are beginning to come through. Good! Drawing reproduced here was with Pete Braukley's, with note that the helmet is symbol of the Middlebury (Vt.) High School Tigers. Flap reports also that Pete and Pattie are "still enjoying retirement [but] the days aren't long enough for . . . 1) volunteer work (museum and hospital), 2) travel, 3) candle-making and sugar-making, 4) getting up firewood, 5) reading a lot, 6) etc."

Some flaps have notes for treasurer Lowry (remember, we insist he send them all) principally in valid applause for what he does for the Class, though Howie Baetjer (Md.) and Frank Judson (N.Y.) write simply "Dear Bob—Good luck." Samples: "Good work, Bob!" (former treasurer Ben Brush, N.Y.); "Great job, Bob!" (Jeff Jones, N.Y., who adds, for the rest of us, "All best to all"); "Bob—You are doing a simply outstanding job. It's my pleasure to work with you on behalf of '42." (President Howie Armstrong, N.Y.).

Several speak appreciatively of Topper Cook's video. Ned Kimmel (Dela.) writes, "Enjoyed video. I'm sure I don't look as old as my classmates!" Dick White (Fla.) "Enjoyed the Class of 1942 tape." Dick Smith (Conn.) says succinctly: "Tape was great."

Most flaps, like Brakeley's, carry brief personal word: Herb Cole (Ala.), "Finally got last child married off"; Harry Kalt (Ariz.), "Grandson Davin MacKenzie Kalt born Thanksgiving Day 1989"; Judson, "Finally having grandchildren"; Tom Taplin (Colo.), "No new news. That's more significant than old news."

Val Worthington (Mass.), however, fills us in, and invites: "Last winter I was elected commodore of the Hopetown Sailing Club in the Bahamas. We run races for mono-hull cruising boats throughout the winter. Any Tigers or Tigresses cruising in the Abacos will be most welcome to race with us."

43 JACK LAFLEN

10 Vardon Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06117; 203-523-8929

Even at this late date, we still have one Class off-spring on campus as an undergraduate. He is Mark H. Robinson '92, who lives in the seventh entry of Pyne Hall and is the son of our Mark Robinson.

Most recent medical report on Bob Oakleaf: "Second surgery Aug. 27, all O.K. Home Aug. 28. Stitches out Sept. 11 and all activity resumed. Wife Libby went in for surgery Sept. 17. I plan to buy a room at the Olean General Hospital. That will be less expensive than the current $1,000 per day."

Charley Scribner has a book coming out around the turn of the year. It is his autobiography, entitled IN THE COMPANY OF WRITERS.

Gone back to his roots again, Turk Orr writes that he and his wife have returned to Ennis, Mont., "the heart of U.S. trout fishing, big game, and bird hunting. We've finished a log cabin on ten acres, fifty miles from Yellowstone Park. New address is P.O. Box 848, Ennis, MT 59729."

As of Apr. 10, John Donnell and Florence had moved from Indiana to a new house just outside Zion National Park. They said they expected to enjoy the marvelous scenery and the climate, and were very delighted to find a friendly community with many stimulating people in a town of 300.

Back in June, Jack Eitman sailed the boat of his brother Bill '45 from Anguilla to St. Thomas. Along as a passenger was Bob Page. Jack added, "Aside from some coronary artery spasm on a dark and stormy night off Virgin Gorda, it was a good time and a pleasant trip."

In Sept., Class Treasurer Norm Russell received a note from Frank Poe reading: "Dear Norm, Sorry I cannot come up with Class dues. Continuing medical expenses for back and leg injuries keep me 99 and 44/100% poor."

44 HERVEY S. STOCKMAN

1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

Merry Christmas and a very Happy New Year!

As ESPN graphically brought to the sun-soaked boonies the Eli mud bath handed the Tiger eleven, we wondered if the Armed Forces Network would be tantalizing our troops in Arabia with this sodden gridiron action.

DUES NEWS: Phil von Hemert notes a pleasant London luncheon this past spring with Nadine and Taylor Bigbie. Ruth and Jack White back in Germany this summer sensed that the seats at the Oberammergau passion play were harder than in years past. A common curse of aging bottoms. Carl Barton checks in as "still retired and living on social security." Ray Steblay came through with a charming piece on his two visits last year and this to Cicero, Ill., for his 50th at Morton High School and his 55th grammar school reunion. At the latter surviving teachers were honored. Ray had located his seventh-grade teacher, a spinster living in the house of her birth in High Hill, Mo. This indomitable lady was the guest of honor. Cicero held the largest population of Czechoslovaks in the U.S. In recent years many have moved out into other Chicago suburbs but a core of diehards remain in that town made notorious by Al Capone supporting the largest collection of Czech restaurants in the U.S. Ray asks if any of us know of a genuine ethnic Czech eatery in or around N.Y.C. Bob van Wagoner writes he's getting active in the Hampton Roads Princeton Club. Chuck Nimick, with a princely gift to our 50th Reunion Fund, sails along, cruising, traveling, visiting, volunteering; learning how to say no all over again. Among his five treasured grandchildren he singles out a lone boy, age 6, with some "direct line, inherited characteristics most reminiscent of his forebears." This child bears watching. Ed Schneider's wife Jean writes that Ed is now in the St. Joseph Villa (nursing home) in Flourtown, Penn. A son and daughter nearby. His oldest daughter lives in Madrid, Spain; his elder son in Armonk, N.Y. (Ed has been severely impaired following a tragic operation in 1985 for the removal of a cyst on his brain.) God bless him.

45 WARREN W. EGINTON

U.S. Courthouse, 915 Lafayette Blvd.
Bridgeport, CT 06604

Thanks to Dr. Karl Rugart for the photo showing potentially three generations of Princetonians. Edge Eginton is shown with daughter Andrea Seaton '77 and granddaughter Katherine Seaton, already wearing her Princeton bib in anticipation of graduation with the Class of 2011. Those of you with three-generation pictures, send them along and we will publish.

Rod Moulintier checks in from Tucson to advise that he and Lisa were indeed at the 45th reunion, but failed to sign the book, so their presence is now duly noted.

Speaking of reunions, a corporal's guard of the faithful gathered in Jadwin prior to the Harvard debacle on Oct. 20. Present were Jane and George Armstrong, Edge Eginton, Cbet Files, Shep Kimberly, Gordie McShane, Patsy and Karl Rugart, and Betsy and J. B. Smith. J.B. handed out innumerable cards, indicative of his hyper-active life as an associate of a Princeton real estate firm, marketing manager of International Hydronics Corp., and most importantly, as noted in earlier columns, chairman of the Princeton Sewer Operating Committee! Gordie McShane reported that this past summer he attended a ballet in Leningrad to find himself sitting alongside Perry Monroe. Tigers are everywhere, even consorting with the Russian bear.

Sam Julier has retired as president and C.E.O. of Carter-Rice Paper in Boston after 42 years with the same organization, a unique accomplishment these days. Sam began his career in N.Y., became president of the Baltimore Warner Co., a Carter-Rice division, by 1980 was chief honcho at Carter-Rice, and has now retired after a decade in that position.

46 ROBERT CAMPBELL JR.

Investors Security Services
636 Morris Tpk., Short Hills, NJ 07078

Pictured here is Tom Binford, better-known as Mr. Indianapolis. His associations range far and wide. Back in 1971 he admitted to being on the boards of "15 to 20 organizations in civic affairs." He was president of Urban League; he has been involved in health education, mental health planning, housing development, and was chairman of the Christian Theological Seminary Advisory Council. He has received the B'Nai B'rith "Man-of-the-Year" Award, and other human relations awards. He was president of the U.S. Auto Club for 13 years, president of the Automobile Competition Committee of the U.S., and an enthusiastic race-car driver. This past spring he was awarded an honorary degree by Martin Center College. To say that Tom is ready for retirement is belied by his bio and the energies it displays.

On the subject of retirement we have much mail. Among those reporting is Stan Gillespie, who retired this summer from banking in Conn., where he was V.P. of the American Natl. Bank. He and his wife, Joan, have moved back to Summit, N.J., where both were brought up. However, they only met four years ago as dinner partners at a wedding. This chance meeting led to marriage in 1987, and now the golden years.

Ross Miller retired as V.P. of data systems for Southern New England Telephone a couple of years ago, and is enjoying the good life in Madison, Conn., with his wife, Jane Ann, grandchildren nearby, and occasional travel to France and the Caribbean. Bernie Ryan retired late last summer as senior V.P.—public affairs of the American Assn. of Advertising Agencies. He is available as consultant in matters of public relations and freelance writing—he has published five books on his own and had four others ghosted. Such talent can't go to seed.

47 ARA BUSHNELL

Box 7034
Tucson, AZ 85725; 602-741-4715

HAPPY NEW YEAR
TO THE FABULOUS CLASS!

Now that 65 is the prevailing age among '47ers, we receive more and more frequent retirement status reports. Ted Palmer, former chief honcho at Yarrow Corp., calls his status "semi-retirement," since he remains active as a director of several Philadelphia-based companies. Yet, he and Ruth (shown together at our Megablast) find ample time to travel, including stops at Vancouver, Lake Louise, and Banff and Jasper Natl. Parks after leaving S.F.

Gus Cademartori, bowing out as veep-human resources at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center at year's end, looks forward to some "part-time" consultant work in the healthcare industry.

Tony Demuth hopes to find a way to get Social Security in 1991 and keep on working as a "leisurely lawyer" in Baltimore. Wife Lawrie still sells residential real estate. They have three married offspring, but just one grandchild (so far).

Bill Gracie, a year shy of full retirement, toils "half-time" in gastroenterology in Ann Arbor. Wife Phyllis Anne happily has recovered well from a stroke last year.

Ben Brewster, having moved from Oklahoma City to Scottsdale, refers to his status as "75-percent retirement." He dreams of a new career.

Tony Miller, who retired last spring after 41 years of "varied and interesting assignments in journalism, business, and education," believes he and Susan truly will begin to enjoy permanent residence in Amagansett, "way out east on Long Island," in 1991. Tony has spent much of 1990 in hospital rooms waging a high-spirited battle against leukemia and finally seeing positive signs of remission.

48

DAVID K. REEVES
106 Snowden Ln.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3340

Conny Hunter has news that Dave Romig has retired. Dave served as co-pastor of Rochester's Downtown United Presbyterian Church for 22 years. Conny has also forsaken the active pastorate, except for stints of interim pastoral duties. Dave Hostetter has started a mail-order business, Pastoral Diskery, to distribute homiletic and liturgical resources on floppy disks.

Derry Boyd is another who is no good at retirement. Having completed 41 years with the 3M Co., Derry is now owner, manager of a ski area/golf course in Frontenac, Minn. He finds the new career challenging and the scenery majestic.

It took a bit of sustained sleuthing to discover where our normally gregarious Class President Warren Simmons kept disappearing to. It is known that he is involved with a number of local non-profit institutes and a handful of business boards. But, for someone who has been retired for a few years, there were unexplained time gaps. The mystery was solved when it was discovered that Sim spends a great deal of time as chairman of the Natl. Captioning Inst. This is the group that has in the past decade pioneered the captioning of TV programs for the deaf and hearing-impaired. The progress made in only ten years is mind boggling. Now most news, talk, sport, and entertainment programs are being captioned. Captioning has been a great boon, too, for adult illiterates, English as a second language, and learning-disabled students.

And now, while looking to our Feb. 19 dinner, 'tis the season to be jolly...

49

ALVIN R. KNACHT
Limerick Lane Poetryworks®, 5 Birch Ln.
Chappaqua, NY 10514; 914-238-0352

Pete Buchanan, '50's sterling secretary, spotted and passed along a great article in the Boston GLOBE about our Tom Cleveland's success in teaching an ethics course at Milton Academy. Under the headline "Teaching Right from Wrong," the GLOBE writes: "While public schools in Mass. and across the country are just beginning to struggle with how or whether to teach ethics and morality in the classroom, some private schools have been doing it for years." Tom, who has been with Milton Academy since the 1960s and is now chairman of the religion department, is also an Episcopal minister. He says: "I proposed the idea

22 years ago, and we've been teaching it ever since. The course is non-graded and without academic credit, but is required of all tenth graders. Students meet weekly in groups of 12. My favorite style is to engage students in dialogue. It's definitely not me telling them what to believe. I just introduce a subject—which may range from drugs, sex, abortion to stealing, euthanasia, the death penalty—and then try to be the traffic director, and keep the conversation going." How the students feel about the course was best summed up by one who said: "In preparing us for college and the real world, schools shouldn't only prepare us in languages, and history and science, but as individual, ethical, and moral human beings. A course like this nurtures a part of us that might not get developed otherwise."

With Class dues payments comes this news. From Leo Cabell we hear: "Just retired from the Univ. of Colorado-Boulder as director of libraries and it's June 1949 all over again—where do we go from here?" And Howie Cusic writes: "Still preside as chairman of the board of Oregon Metallurgical Corp., but otherwise retired. Regards to all." Dick Long tells us: "Still plugging away at my dissertation (in political science), working part time at the dept. of state, and playing (mostly golf) the rest of the time. Mostly Anne and I are enjoying the fall weather and scenery at our old mountain farm."

50

PETE BUCHANAN
151 West St.
Beverly Farms, MA 01915; 508-922-1650

At the opening exercises in Sept., President Shapiro announced the Cotsen Family Faculty Fellowships, established by Lloyd Cotsen. The fellowships recognize faculty members who are outstanding teachers of undergraduates and will enable them to spend time developing and teaching new courses. Meanwhile, at the Dartmouth convocation in Sept., Jim Billington was the principal speaker and received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

Turning to our medical doctors, Bill Bernart was honored as Outstanding Citizen of the Year by the Eastern Shore of Virginia Chamber of Commerce for his contributions in medicine and education. The award noted that Bill, a founder 33 years ago of the Internal Medicine Group in Nassawadox, has constantly shown a compassion and understanding that endeared him to his patients. Another Virginia doctor, Dick Rhame, is practicing urology in Alexandria in the same medical office building as Jim Braysbaw. Dick was remarried last year to the former Jean Graham. Bill Haynes, a Princeton cardiologist, has just had a book published, A PHYSICIAN'S WITNESS TO THE POWER OF SHARED PRAYER. His admiration for those who make their livelihood writing is reflected in the fact it took him four or five years. Another NJ. cardiologist, Dick Sbarretti, has recently been president of Central Jersey I.P.A. His children are Elise (22), Rich (19), and Krista (18). Bill Kornfeld is chief of psychiatry at the Malden Hospital, north of Boston. He's also assistant clinical professor of psychiatry at B.U. School of Medicine, teaching, consulting, administrating, and taking care of patients. A final note from the medical world is that Paul Sauriolabes is planning to retire substantially from the practice of pediatrics. He intends to continue and expand the Aegean Inst., a summer study program in Greece, which his late wife started in 1966.

51

RICHARD K. PAYNTER
49 Wilson Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-921-6720

At halftime at the Harvard game, Dick Colman was inducted into the Football Hall of Fame (by the width of a Wheaties flake, he topped Charlie Caldwell '25 as Princeton's winningest coach). The ceremony brought back many players from the era:

Hal Urschel, Ed Reed, George Chandler, Dick Valentzas, Cliff Kurrus. John Stieglman, our honorary classmate and coach, was a special guest.

Audrey and Dick Valentzas, in retirement, are touring the U.S. in their ValentzasMobile, which appears to be as long as a PAT after two offensive off-side penalties. The Vs are alleged to have seen more of our country than Steinbeck, Lewis and Clark, Kurak, and William Least Heat Moon combined. The picture shows the following, grinning in front of the monster: Audrey Valentzas, Chandler, the major mahout, Flo Kelly, Rube Shaw, Martha Lewis, and Kurrus.

The opening of the Soviet Union to many kinds of Western expertise has benefited American law firms, several of which have opened offices in Moscow. Judith and Tish Papachristou's son Alexander is an example. His Washington firm, Steptoe & Johnson, has a joint venture deal with the Russian Lex Intl. Among other clients, Steptoe represents US Sprint and DuPont, and the Bolshoi Ballet is a Lex client. Tish is semi-retired, consulting with a few old architecture clients.

Plans for our 40th continue apace and Alumni Day in Feb. is our next Class gathering. Mark it well and plan to come back.

52

DON OSBENDORF
4630 30th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20008

Ted McAlister is credited in the Texas press with recruiting for Princeton Mitch Mitchell '93, the valedictorian of last year's 32-member graduating class of Albany High School in Albany, Tex. Albany was the home town of Bob Owen and several other distinguished Princetonians. With Ted's help, Mitch is following in a great tradition.

Dick Riordan's work on behalf of literacy for disadvantaged children was recognized by the Jewish Community Relations Committee of L.A., which presented Dick an award for philanthropic and civic activism. The Riordan Foundation has installed more than 300 "Writing to Read" computer labs in public and private inner-city schools in Southern Calif., with the goal helping teach every disadvantaged child in the area to read and write by the end of second grade.

Walt Culin is planning to retire early next year as chairman of Pre Finish Metals and move to Mill Springs, N.C. That is an interim destination while the Culin's build a house on Skidaway Island near Savannah, Ga. Last summer Walt and Carol and their three kids climbed Mt. Princeton to commemorate the Culin's 38th wedding anniversary and took a photo on the summit to prove it.

Roger Kirk has retired from the Foreign Service after serving most recently as ambassador to Romania, and is teaching a graduate course on Revolution in Eastern Europe at Georgetown Univ., as well as writing and consulting on nuclear non-proliferation. He and Betty have 12 grandchildren, one of the newest of whom is named for his granddad.

Of the many activities of George Dean in his crusade for equal representation of women in government, none was more impressive than a recent speech at Averett College in Danville, Va. According to Bob Jiranek, who was in the audience, a diverse group of non-establishment women was enthralled at George's message, which evoked memories of James Madison and the Constitution.

53 PIERCE J. LONERGAN
Box 18
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Class Dinner
Alumni Day
February 16

We assume Bill Adams is still residing in Medfield, Mass. He writes he is now director of marketing for George Beram & Co., benefits consultants and actuaries. Spare time involves the chairmanship of the local Republican town committee, presidency of the Charles Tennis Club, and service as lay reader at his church.

Vic Williams still has strings attached. He's buying and selling guitars and banjos, and managing the career of one Buddy Wachter from Baltimore, whom Vic considers the best banjoist who ever played.

In addition to his continuing interest in antique cars on the McKinney Ave. Transit System in Dallas, Dr. Howie McLure serves as chairman of the Censors Board of the Dallas Cty. Medical Society. He now boasts five grandchildren and reports that one son is living in Singapore and working for Chubb Insurance.

Time marches, etc.: Don Kobler's second grandchild arrived in March in Atlanta. Hugh Richardson was named surrogate grandfather.

Among our legacy graduates of last June Was Libby and Stan Browne's daughter Katrina. A recipient of magna cum laude honors, Katrina also was awarded the DAILY PRINCETONIAN Service Award.

Howie Minners was in Dresden, Germany in Sept. several weeks before reunification. He notes that the economic differences between East and West are only amplified by the new-found freedom of movement. He found the lack of formal border checkpoints startling, but added that rubble from WWII bombing still exists in downtown Dresden.

54 DICK STEVENS
1 Valley Sq., Ste. 101
Blue Bell, PA 19422

To be a successful coxswain, you need a loud voice and a small body. Pictured here and looking as feisty as ever is Chet Apy and his son Dean '90. The big guy in the middle is Pardee Erdman wearing the UR belt-buckle, the brand of his ranch in Maui's "upcountry." Pardee rolled out the red carpet for the Apy family. The clan was in Hawaii for the wedding of another son, Donald, and his bride, Jennifer Don, both Brown '87. Chet says that sipping the golden, buttery, award-winning Tedeschi Chardonnay (Pardee's flagship) was by itself worth the trip.

NBC has a new soap called "Generations," starring Ron Harper. Recently remarried, Ron lives in North Hollywood and he has a beautiful little daughter, Nicole, born on Christmas Day. Another big star, Wayne Rogers is now the host of Power Profiles on FNN. Everyone remembers Wayne in "M.A.S.H." and dozens of TV specials, but the new William Wayne McMillan Rogers has donned the mantle of astute businessman, financier, and investor. His advice is to wait cautiously in the wings for

A Southern Legacy

SO EBULLIENT are Charles D. Towers, Jr. '45's greetings that many classmates at recent reunions have had to remind him that sixty-five-year-old backs are not what they used to be. Senior partner at his family's law firm in Jacksonville, Florida, Charlie follows his father, Charles D. Towers '16, in his role as Jacksonville's leading mover-and-shaker.

The Towers family settled in Jacksonville in 1840, when Charlie's great-grandfather began practicing law in what was then the Territory of Florida. Charles D. (Daughtry) Towers '16 was the preeminent power broker in the Jacksonville area from the 1930s until his death in 1969, earning the name "Boss Towers." Long before the creation of the Jacksonville Transportation Authority, Daughtry owned the city's only taxicab service and represented its only bus company. Though he was known as a proponent of good government, not everyone appreciated his authoritarian style. "Daughtry Towers ran this town," noted one observer, "and he didn't let too many others play."

As Daughtry strengthened his Jacksonville power base, Charlie followed his father's path to Princeton, where he played football and accelerated his studies to graduate in 1944. As a naval officer during World War II, he earned the Silver Star for leading a rescue mission on a burning ship during the Okinawa campaign. After the war, he earned a law degree from Stetson University in DeLand, Florida in 1949.

Towers believes that his father's reputation may have made it more difficult at first for him to win acceptance from the city's political and business communities. But his ability to build consensus and motivate people won over many skeptics. Towers has never held elected office, and his political activities are described by observers as "low key" and "behind the scenes," but that certainly doesn't describe his personality.

The Florida Times Union recently named him the third most powerful person in Jacksonville and noted the range of his community interests. In 1985, he raised more than $7 million for the Salvation Army, $2 million over the fund drive's goal. Last year, he organized a city-wide Prayer Day to help fight drugs. He sees the work of God, and many of his activities are motivated by his strong religious convictions.

He works a long day, starting with breakfast meetings with various community leaders at his home. At such gatherings, Towers practices the gentle arm twisting of a consummate political operator. As one of his breakfast guests remembers, "Charlie wouldn't take 'no' for an answer. It took less time for me to say 'yes' than to say 'no.'"

Regarding his service to church and community, Towers says there's no better feeling than being "used" by God for worthwhile projects. In his typically colorful language, he quips: "It's better than making money. It's better than eating. It's even better than sex."

Charlie Towers '45 (left) and a colleague.

PHOTO COURTESY OF WARREN W. EGINTON

the big sell off a la 1987 and then look for companies with strong cash flow or stocks trading at 70% or less of the fair-market value per share of the company's assets. As for right now . . . Trapper says it's money market all the way.

Don't forget the mid-winter assembly . . . Sat., Feb. 16, Alumni Day, at Prospect House. Details to follow.

55

MIKE ROSSINI
40 E. 88th St.
New York, NY 10128; 212-722-7447

Class Dinner in Princeton Saturday, February 16

Who do Washington, D.C. lawyers go to when they're up to their ears in legal problems of their own? The WASHINGTONIAN polled members of the district bar and the answer was R. Kenly Webster of Shaw, Pittman, Potts & Trowbridge. Ken was described as "a combination of wisdom and coolness, a guy who just has it all together." We've known that for 39 years.

Here's Dana Weeder at reunions. He's the prime candidate for "Looks as though he still resides in 1879 Hall!"

Harold S. "Pete" Bott, while continuing his role as senior partner at Andersen Consulting, responsible for the strategic services practice in the telecommunications industry worldwide, has assumed the added role of managing partner of strategic services, central region.

Great excitement continues for the Neuwirth family! Daughter Bebe won an Emmy for best supporting actress in a comedy series. She plays Dr. Lilith Stearnam on "Cheers."

Bruce Hilly writes, "The happy news in our family is that our daughter Marie was married on June 30 to Glen Smith at our church in Traverse City, Mich. Marie is a defense policy program manager with S.R.S. Technologies in Arlington, Va. Her husband Glen is an attorney with the U.S. Post Office in Washington. Our son Steve is a C.P.A. with U.S. Air at their corporate office in Arlington. My business as a manufacturers' representative keeps me busy, but I still find some time for golf, tennis, and cross-country skiing."

Bruce Hilly writes, "The happy news in our family is that our daughter Marie was married on June 30 to Glen Smith at our church in Traverse City, Mich. Marie is a defense policy program manager with S.R.S. Technologies in Arlington, Va. Her husband Glen is an attorney with the U.S. Post Office in Washington. Our son Steve is a C.P.A. with U.S. Air at their corporate office in Arlington. My business as a manufacturers' representative keeps me busy, but I still find some time for golf, tennis, and cross-country skiing."

56

DAVID M. JORDAN
410 Rodman Ave.
Jenkintown, PA 19046

Our annual Class party after the Harvard game was well attended, with many classmates, spouses, and friends enjoying the spectacular view from New South on a lovely fall afternoon. (Someone said New South looks much better from the inside looking out than it does from the outside looking in.) Those spotted at the game or at the party included Rich Aron, Wayne Bancroft, Pierre Bennerup, Mort Chute, Bob Clark, Clay Cook, Jim Freund, Tom Fulmer, Joe Grotto, Garry Heber, Kirby Holmes, Bill Horner, Dave Jones, Gene Jones, Dave Jordan, Dick Kluger, Fraser Lewis, Mike Malitz, Bill McCandless, Jim McCulloch, Tom Meeker, Charlie Muldaur, Don Noonan, Sid Pinch, Bob Rodgers, Paul Sbein, Gene Stinger, Ken Snedeker, Ben Spinelli, and Don Stuard. The gathering was a fine kickoff for a big year for the Class of 1956, culminating in our 35th reunion in June.

Lew Stockman reports on his offspring: daughter Lisa married, daughter Laura (Brown '88) "seeking fame and fortune in Hollywood," son Michael starting at Harvard. Lew says he and his wife, Danielle, are not yet experiencing the "empty nest" syndrome; "a lot of twigs, etc., still to clean out." Patti and Joe Walsh, on the other hand, are celebrating the graduation of son Mark '90, completing 12 years of Walsh education at Princeton (not counting Joe).

Some ten years ago a TV movie was made of Jim Koebler's struggle to get custody of his 18-month-old son Jamie. Jim was successful and has been raising Jamie since. The case also launched Jim on his legal career as one of only four lawyers in the country whose practice is limited to fathers' custody cases. Jim helped found the national fathers' rights movement, and he has offices in Calif., Denver, Chicago, and Miami.

57

JACK SCHULMAN
Box 6177, Yorkville Station
New York, NY 10128; 212-427-3575 (H)

Stan Emery: "With pride and mild regret, I tell you that our youngest, Theo, did not follow his sisters, Alice '87 and Margaret '90, to Princeton, but is a freshman at Stanford. Currently I am acting interim chairman of the dept. of neurology at the Univ. of Vermont."

Arthur Miller: "This year, I'm secretary of the Middlesex County Bar Assn. Wife, Lynn, graduated with honors from Rutgers Law School in June and has commenced a new career as a trial lawyer."

James L. Meyer: "Retired from Foreign Service; now teaching at Episcopal boarding school in Tacoma, Wash." Sam Williams: "Daughter Cricket is now looking for a publishing job in N.Y.C." Jay Goldin: "Son Daniel '93 has a friendly rivalry with son Matthew (Yale '94). It's fun for Diana and me to shuttle-visit between the two campuses. Can't wait to see how son Jonathan (? '00) tilts the balance."

Howard R. Gordon: "Left private practice for more rewarding and livable life of academia. Now prof. and chairman of ob./gyn. at West Virginia Univ.-Charleston."

Bob Chamberlin: "I was elected to the 1990 All-American Municipal Analyst First Team in an industry contest sponsored by the BOND BUYER in N.Y."

George Oram: "55 years old and working like a steam engine (i.e., obsolete). Have realty business in Berkeley, Calif., where old grads come to football games and move here to live. Sound familiar?"

Nort Rosensweig: "Daughter Laurie '93 is a member of women's varsity tennis team. Daughter Julie '90 is at Univ. of Michigan law school."

58

RALPH L. DeGROFF
7 Grace Sq.
New York, NY 10028

Jimmy Cohen has accumulated, in the past five years, four degrees in the history dept. of N.Y.U. and recently successfully defended his dissertation for his Ph.D. His topic was a legal history of certain 14th-amendment rights from 1870 to the present. Among those who helped him were Steve Rockefeller, who suggested his topic; Dave Reimers '53, his dissertation adviser; Norman Cantor '57, former dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, for whom Jimmy was a teaching assistant and who appointed him a fellow of the Inst. for Cultural Analysis; Gordon Craig '36, who sponsored him; and Cam Avery '60 and his father, Bill '27, who provided financial aid. Jimmy is now available for a university in need of a good Americanist.

John Currie joined a group of ten from the N.C. Zoo for a three-week photographic safari last Aug. to Zambia and Zimbabwe. He visited three wildlife camps in the Luango and Zambezi river valleys. The game walks with armed guards, according to John, are the nearest things left to the safari adventures of Hemingway and Ruark.

Tom Robins's daughter Martha is a freshman at Santa Clara Univ. and wife, Jean, is managing two jobs in Seattle—at the Northwest Horticultural Society and at the Ctr. for Urban Horticulture.

Jim Caldwell's daughter Katherine entered Mount Holyoke as a freshman last fall after a successful year in Finland under the Rotary Youth Program.

Doug MacDonald is working as a psychotherapist in private practice as well as in a mental health clinic in the Berkshires. Doug and wife of 33 years, Sherry, are living and working on a 90-acre tree farm, where they built a house three years ago. Married daughter Cam is a Ph.D. student at Brandeis Univ.

Have a Merry Christmas and a happy and healthy New Year!

59

JAY M. SMON
11321 Rolling House Rd.
Rockville, MD 20852

Plan to be in N.Y.C. on Fri., Jan. 25, 1991. Andy Steffan will be hosting a Class cocktail party at his home from 6 to 8 P.M. R.S.V.P. to Andy's office at 212-698-6032.

Alumni Day ceremonies for the current academic year will be held on Sat., Feb. 16, 1991. The program will include faculty and guest lectures, lunch in Jadwin, and the Service of Remembrance in the chapel. Plans are underway for a Class reception and/or dinner in Princeton on Sat. night.

Fred Richman retired (from New Mexico State Univ.) in 1989; worked for the T.C.I. Software Research for a year; and has now accepted a position as professor of mathematics at Florida Atlantic Univ. What will he do when he really retires? Herb Slade has come out of retirement (A.T. & T.) to work for Bellcore and has reactivated his amateur radio license (AA2BF for all you hams) in anticipation of missionary radio work. Dick Woods, at least, after 27 years on Wall Street, he and Robin will embark next year on a three-month 'round-the-world cruise.

Some of you may wish to put EQUALITY TRANSFORMED: A QUARTER-CENTURY OF AFFIRMATIVE ACTION on your last-minute Christmas gift book list. This latest work by Constitutional historian Herm Belz provides an in-depth treatment of affirmative action and its impact upon our society.

ON THE GO: Rudolf Hutz, from Wilmington, Del., to Kennett Square, Penn.

As we write this column in early Nov., the clouds of conflict seem to overshadow the rays of accord in the Middle East. Mindful of the turmoil which may descend before these words are read, but ever hopeful that it will not, the Class of 1959 extends its warmest wishes to all classmates, their families, and loved ones for a Christmas of joy and a New Year of peace.

60

MASON LOWANCE
100 Lincoln Ave.
Amherst, MA 01002

The Reunions photos are now accumulating, and here's one of Phil and Betsy Becton with John Chang. Also attending were Tom and Ellie Wertheimer, who share southern Calif. with John when they are not in N.Y. on business. At a Fri. Alumni Forum on "Art vs. God and the First Amendment," Democratic party chairman from N.C. Larry Davis made some interesting, provocative comments from the audience. Among classmates who appeared on Reunions panels were Neil Ullman, a news editor for the WALL STREET JOURNAL, and Richard Louie, who was associate director, Freer Gallery of Art and Arthur M. Sackler Gallery, Smithsonian Institute, in Washington. Dick was tragically killed by an automobile while he was walking in Washington, on Oct. 7. The outpouring of letters and copies of Dick's obituaries, which have appeared in the Washington Post and the N.Y. TIMES, show how profoundly the art community has felt his untimely loss, and how deeply his friends and classmates have grieved. Also attending Reunions were Grant and Carol Curtis, who, like Phil Becton, live in Atlanta with their children Jim (17) and Sarah (14). Grant continues with Coca-Cola. Art Goldstein followed Reunions with his son, Karl's, graduation magna cum laude and phi beta kappa. Karl also won a Regent's Fellowship and a Fulbright for graduate study. Finally, the N.Y. TIMES carried the announcement of Jim Quaremba's marriage to Amelia Burns in Aug. Amelia is a principal and exec. V.P. of Hartford Financial Group and holds the Ph.D. in Economics from U.Conn.

61 GEORGE BRACKLEY III
98 Winfield Ln.
New Canaan, CT 06840

Classmates seen last July at the Curtis Cup (the Amateur Ladies' Competition) in golf between the U.S., Great Britain, and Ireland) at Somerset Hills (N.J.) Country Club: Miché Michel, Page

Chapman, Sim Rollinson, Stu Tufnell, Jay Keyser, and Joe Pralber—all reported by Joe. New grandpops: Norman Brown (a boy, born to son David '85 and wife Deborah Johnson '84) and Steve Stiles (a girl, born to daughter Stacey; Steve and Sherry were in the delivery room for the arrival—"quite exciting," says Steve). Don Le Win's son Chris got married in Minneapolis in Sept.

Al Ostreich not only practices radiology but also writes about it (several published) and translates his own books and others' into and from German and French. His latest oeuvre is due out this fall. Attorney Pete Pettibone has been active recently in U.S.-U.S.S.R. trade matters and says, "Despite the chaos and confusion in the U.S.S.R., the end of the Cold War has resulted in considerable interest among U.S. businesses in forming joint ventures and investing in the U.S.S.R.—an exciting time." The same sentiment about the same part of the world is sounded by Bill Kincade, a professor of international relations at American Univ., specializing in Soviet-American security relations.

Phil Pritchard has joined the Sibley Mortgage Corp. in Rochester as an underwriter for the commercial mortgage loan dept. Sibley does business throughout N.Y. State. Myron Uman was promoted last spring to asst. exec. officer of the Natl. Research Council of the Natl. Academy of Sciences and Natl. Academy of Engineering (he'll need a king-sized calling card to get all of that on it). Myron says he and Neil Crane get together regularly.

Greetings of the season to you and yours.

62 ERIC W. JOHNSON
2221 Craig Ct.
Vienna, VA 22182; 703-280-9080

WASHINGTON-AREA OKTOBERFEST: The 11th annual Washington-area Class of '62 Oktoberfest dinner happened Thurs., Oct. 25, at the Washington Army-Navy Club in the District. A terrific evening, it was arranged by Al Muller with 27 classmates and wives attending: Royanne and Ed Baily, Bill Bacchus, Judy and Peter Brown, Patricia and Jay Coupe, Joan and Ariel DePontet, Joe Irenas, Jean and Wes Johnson, Terri and Dick Loveland, Mike McConihe, Barbara and John McGraw, Marilyn and John Montgomery, Al Muller, Caroline and Howard Pyle, Dave Rosenbloom, Sydney and Pete Tradick, Beverlee and Buel White.

Buel White received the Class service award for his distinguished service on the Schools Committee in the Washington area for the past decade. Joe Irenas, our president (who finally earned an award, the long-distance one, by coming in specially from N.J. for the occasion), gave a brief version of his State-of-the-Class address: Class heavily in debt (the worst in the University); Class not at war—yet; and still no campaign promises kept. He concluded by awarding the second distinguished service award of the evening to and roasting Jay Coupe, the guest speaker, for his long and distinguished career in the nation's service as a naval officer. Jay treated us to an insightful and even alarming discussion of the Middle East situation, with emphasis on Iraq, gained from his long experience in the area and as special assistant to the former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Admiral Crowe.

The dinner poll this year: Will Jesse Helms win? Men, 62% yes; women, 55% no. Will we be at war in the Middle East within the next six months? Men, 56% no; women, 63% yes.

Best wishes for the Holidays and the New Year!

63 SILDEEN S. EDWARDS
Elgin Academy, 350 Park St.
Elgin, IL 60120

Chuck Junkunc has just left Dataproducts Corp., the computer-printer giant in Woodland Hills, Calif., where he was senior V.P. and C.F.O. for the past three years, having helped the company through the excitement of an 18-month hostile takeover attempt and two consent solicitation battles. Subsequently, he negotiated the sale of the company to a Japanese conglomerate and, in his own words is now "resting and consulting with several ventures."

Scotty Marsh's daughter Ashley, a Princeton sophomore, is on the varsity swimming team. Steve Kaplan's daughter Renee postponed admission to Princeton this next fall in order to spend the year in Florence. Steve is finishing a book on French bicentennial and will be in Paris in Jan. and this summer, in case you're looking for company there.

Mark Shachelford lives in Cary, Ill., and is senior designer and analyst for Kemper Insurance Co. in Long Grove. Rudy Buse is still president of his own management consulting firm, specializing in multinational business, especially in his native Latin America. He lives and works in Newtown Sq., Penn.

LOST CLASSMATES. We have no current addresses for the following. Check it over and send any information you have: David Addlestone, G. James Arnold, Frederick Bates, Frank Bell, Henry Bennett, John Blair, William Brooks, Peter Bryg, George Bumgardner, Norman Carter, A. Howell Cooper, Anthony Daddario, Andre Dokumingu, Robert French, Masataka Fujita, James Glasier, Peter Grant, Edwin Gunby, Peter Hale, David Hall, Jerome Jacobstein, Richard Jensen, Gwyllym Johnston, Duane Kennedy, John Layton, Martin Levowitz, Carl Lichtenstein, Charles Lord, Ronald Lundeen, Robert Marasco, Charles Masella, Richard Massell, Christopher Mietbe, Gene Noah, John O'Kane, James Oliver, Littleton Page, Charles Patterson, John Platten, Jeffrey Poley, Kenneth Rhodes, William Scharnikow.

64 JOTHAM JOHNSON
Box 12
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Harry Weber has sent along a portfolio of his bronze fox-hunting sculptures, including one

"You mean Princeton will send us four checks a year?"

Yes. When you make a life income gift to Princeton, you and/or your spouse will receive four quarterly income checks a year for life — income that may well be higher than you receive from the securities you gave.

Of course, you have also received an immediate tax deduction and avoided a potential capital gains tax liability.

Shouldn't you and your spouse benefit from this way of giving to Princeton?

• • •

For more information, write a confidential letter or call the Planned Giving Office.

Planned Giving Program
Princeton University
Box 39
Princeton, NJ 08544-0039
(609) 258-6318
(609) 258-6320

Director
Daniel H. Jamieson, Jr. '74

Associate Directors
Jane Rae Bradford
Robert B. Turner

Princeton Clubs and Alumni Associations

PC OF NORTHERN CALIF.: Sat., Dec. 29: The association will host a symposium on higher education with Professor of Sociology Marvin Bressler. The symposium will precede an appearance by the men's basketball team in the Cable Car Classic Basketball tournament. For information on the symposium and tournament, please call Matthew Quilter '74 at 415-324-7029.

PAA OF NASHVILLE: Mon., Jan. 7: Director of Athletics Bob Myslik '61 and Associate Director of Athletics Sam Howell '50 will both speak at a luncheon. Mon., Jan. 28: President Harold T. Shapiro '64 will speak at the annual dinner. For further information on both events, please call Walker Mathews '78 at 615-297-7424.

PC OF SOUTHWEST FLA. (Naples): Sat., Jan. 26: Assistant Professor of Politics Charles Kupchan will speak at the annual luncheon. Please call Ted Van Buren '42 for information at 813-394-3667.

PC OF SARASOTA & MANATEE COUNTIES: Sun., Jan. 27: Assistant Professor of Politics Charles Kupchan will speak at the club's annual luncheon meeting. For information, please call Fernand Baruch '44 at 813-966-4325.

PAA OF THE FLA. SUNCOAST (Tampa): Mon., Jan. 28: Charles Kupchan, assistant professor of politics, will speak at the annual dinner. For further information, please call Jim Perry '57 at 813-837-3473.

PAA OF S.C.: Tues., Jan. 29: President Harold T. Shapiro '64 will speak at the annual dinner in Columbia. Wed., Jan. 30: President Shapiro will speak at a luncheon in Hilton Head. For information on both events, please call Keith Babcock '73 at 803-771-8000.

CALIF. REGIONAL CONFERENCES: Sat., Mar. 9 and Sun., Mar. 10: Please save these dates as the PC of Southern Calif. and the PC of Northern Calif. will host regional conferences on these respective dates. Featured speakers include President Harold T. Shapiro '64, Dean of Admission Fred Hargadon, Professor of Slavic Languages Caryl Emerson, and Professor of Astrophysics James Gunn. Calif. alumni and parents will be invited and all Princeton alumni and parents are welcome. For information, please call Elizabeth Hunt in the Alumni Council at 609-258-3351.

Notices of events for inclusion in this column should be sent at least eight weeks in advance of the date of the event to Elizabeth Hunt, Alumni Council, Maclean House, Princeton, New Jersey 08544; 609-258-3351; FAX 609-258-1281.

which won top prize in last year's Wichita Art Show. The son of an artist and a lifelong horseman, Harry now makes his home in Bowling Green, Mo. and is slowly easing himself out of the marketing/consulting business he started 20 years ago in St. Louis. All the reviews are glowing and one commentator wrote that "only someone familiar with this kind of action could portray it so well."

Les Salamon, director of the Johns Hopkins Univ.'s Inst. for Policy Studies, spoke at a July conference in Baltimore on "The Future of the Industrial City," which drew participants from the U.S. and 19 European countries. "The information revolution," he noted, "is a decentralizing revolution, permitting manufacturers to separate administrative control from the production of goods... manufacturers that were once concentrated in large urban centers in Europe and America have dispersed to countries in Asia and Latin America where labor costs are low and the supply of young workers is large." The challenge facing the cities, he observed, includes steep declines in population and manufacturing jobs, decaying housing, increasing residential segregation in metropolitan areas by social class, and a widening disparity between the job skills needed in the new urban economy and those that urban workers actually possess. Very sobering.

Just a few miles further south, Peter Heerwagen writes from Winchester, Va., that he's "having fun with my new venture, publishing the North Valley BUSINESS JOURNAL. We are finishing up our first year and our monthly paper has been well-received despite the weak advertising environment."

Nice note from Sheldon Smith, who writes that he's continuing to operate retirement and nursing centers in the Northwest and is now pursuing acquisitions in Ariz. and South Fla. "I always enjoy returning to my Hill Country home in Austin, Tex. every month or so," he concluded.

65 J. MICHAEL PAREN
Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts
1 Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004

This may be dated by the time it reaches print, but currently one of the better windows on what's happening in the Persian Gulf belongs to Karl Jackson, who is presently special assistant to the president for natl. security affairs and senior director for Asia of the Natl. Security Council. Karl is currently on leave from the political science department at Berkeley, just as he was from 1986-88, when he served as deputy asst. secretary of defense for East Asia and the Pacific.

Closer to home, Bill McChesney has just been appointed the Morristown regional manager of the Princeton Bank & Trust, the private banking affiliate of Chemical Bank, where he's worked for the past 23 years. "I am delighted to have the opportunity to concentrate my energies in the local northern N.J. community. The ten-minute commute isn't so bad either, says Bill.

Marv Chelton cheerfully embraces the new $30 Class dues and adds the hope that at our 30th reunion the dues will go to $35. Marv continues his good works for the University, having just hosted a reception on Sept. 16 for incoming grad students and helping, through the Alumni Council Finance Committee, to deal with the financial stringencies currently abounding in academia.

The empty-nest syndrome has just beset Mike Michael, whose daughter Michelle has entered Loyola College in Md.

Two institutions now in the good hands of classmates are the Rocky Mountain Princeton Club, whose new president is Bill Watson, and the dept. of computer science at the Univ. of New South Wales in Sydney, Australia, where Peter Plauser, along with wife, Tana, and son, Geoffrey, will be spending calendar year 1991 while Peter plies the trade of a visiting professor. Peter also continues to write freelance, and those with long memories will remember that it was in 1975 that he received the J.W. Campbell award as the best new science-fiction writer of the year.

Best wishes to all for a happy, healthy, prosperous, and peaceful New Year.

66 JEFFREY M. McCOLLUM, A.T.&T. Products
5 Wood Hollow Rd., Rm. 1J19
Parappany, NJ 07054

Best wishes for an exhilarating and fulfilling 1991. Among other things, 1991 marks the only year that you will ever have a chance to march at the head of the P-rade. So, if you haven't sent off your registration to Tiny Morgan, do it now!

Burt Gay is particular about the debits and credits of Allegheny Particleboard (North America's third-largest particleboard plant) and three others. He serves all as C.F.O. If a major financing package goes through, the world's largest fiberboard plant will be added to Burt's ledger domain next year.

'66 IN PRINCETON'S SERVICE: A large and talented alumni network supports the University by contributing its skills and abilities to Princeton-related activities across the country. Members of the Class hold a number of key leadership positions in that network. Larry Petrowski, Charlie Plohn, John Kalmbach, and Jeff McCollum are all members of the Alumni Council. Lanny Jones is a "special" member, serving on the board of editorial direction of the PAW, working with PAW's editor, Jim Merritt. Others are active in their local Princeton club or association, including Rajaona Andriamananjara, president, P.C. of Madagascar; Willard Bunn, schools chair, P.C. of Central Ill.; Howard Fredman, schools chair, P.C. of Southern Calif.; Michael Goldstein, schools chair, P.A.A. of Utah; Ron Landeck, schools chair, P.C. of Spokane; John Lumpkin, schools chair, P.A.A. of S.C.; Jamie Spencer, schools chair, P.C. of St. Louis; Norm Tabler, president, P.A.A. of Indiana; Randolph Weast, schools chair, P.A.A. of Western N.C.; Stephen Wells, schools chair, P.C. of New Canaan; and Brian Wright, schools chair, P.A.A. of Broome Cty., N.Y.

67 PETER J. TUNICH
6503 Masefield St.
Worthington, OH 43085

As a means of reminding us of our increasing years, the University supplies a list annually of Class offspring on campus. We're up to a dozen now: Nathan Averill '93, Meghan Barber '92, Jennifer Beart '94, Scott Blinder '93, Shannon Bonner '94, Catherine Bramball '92, John Burststein '93, Christopher Himsley '92, Jason Plaks '93, Noah Rbys '92, Leif Torkelsen '91, Janita Turcchi '91. To balance the Princeton mail machine, news from individual classmates on their children's progress at other fine schools would be very much appreciated.

Larry Ely writes: "I have been hunting for the tenth planet using both modern and ancient astronomical techniques, the latter originating in the Atlantean Epoch, 8600-10000 B.C." Apart from this, he tries to keep up with two "high-energy," athletic boys, Alexander (3), and Nicholas (10). Also getting around is Richard Grabam, who, after 14 years in France, including 11 as teacher and headmaster at the American Intl. School on the Cote D'Azur, has moved to within two blocks of the White House. He is now V.P.-operations at the ONL DAILY, a trade journal in Washington.

by TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO. Christmas truce is observed in Vietnam. Ferdinand Marcos, "a lawyer who bolted the Liberal Party," is inaugurated Philippine president, with U.S. V.P. Hubert Humphrey in attendance. Sugar Ray Robinson, at 45, retires from boxing. Dave Clark Five's "Over and Over" replaces Byrd's "Turn! Turn! Turn!"

68

Jon Kumm
Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour St.
Hartford, CT 06115; fax 203-524-7057

Our man in Tokyo has been Linn Wilkams, who is called "Dick Tracy" by local newspapers because he is usually seen in his trademark fedora. CALIFORNIA LAWYER notes that Linn is not a detective but is probably the best-known American lawyer in Japan. Linn, who was founding partner of Gibson, Dunn, and Crutcher's Tokyo office in 1987, is now the deputy U.S. trade representative in Japan. He has been responsible for negotiating some thorny trade issues with the Japanese government. He shuttled between Washington and Tokyo much of last year to lead the U.S. team on a series of unprecedented trade talks that addressed aspects of the Japanese and U.S. economies that impede free trade. The head of the Legal Services Committee of the American Chamber of Commerce in Japan notes that Linn is successful with his Japanese clients because he is perceived as a professional and understands their culture.

Robin Johnson is still practicing international law in Washington, D.C. Robin was also recently promoted to colonel in the Marine Corps Reserves and learned how to use a parachute (silk, not golden) in the special forces parachute course in the Dominican Republic last year.

Greg Smith specializes in employee benefit law and executive compensation in the San Francisco home office of the law firm of Heller, Ehrman, White and McAuliffe. Greg's wife, Bobbye, with a new Ph.D. in marine botany from Berkeley, is now a senior environmental scientist with E.U.S. consultants, an environmental consulting firm. Daughters Michelle (who spent many of her infant evenings watching Greg play poker at Charter) and Pamela have concluded that Southern Calif. weather is preferable to N.J. for education.

69

PAUL GEORGE SITTENFELD
1854 Keys Crescent
Cincinnati, OH 45206

A SUMMER SHOT... As Christmas arrives! X. Shannon, Mike McCorry, and Jim Johnson this past Aug. on vacation in Sandbridge, Va.

A salute to Chris Hart, chosen by President Bush as a member of the Natl. Transportation Safety Board. After Princeton, Chris picked up a master's in aerospace engineering and a juris doctor at Harvard. A pilot, he has been listed in "Who's Who in Aviation" and "Who's Who in American Law."

Legal laurels for Geoff Reveille, who was elected second V.P. of the 5,000 member Seattle-King Cty. Bar Assn.; two years hence, the business and trial attorney will take over the helm of the group. He heads Reveille, Ries & Hawkins's litigation dept.

The John Muir Medical Film Festival has presented Rupert Macneae with its gold medal for "Diabetes: A Positive Approach." The half-hour comedy about diabetes has been released on video cassette.

Happy Holidays and on to a satisfying New Year.

70

JAN KUMK
113 Laurel Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Unless Jolly St. Nicholas brings some news from all you fine folk in the Class of 1970 real soon, future columns might be as empty as a bad person's Christmas stocking. Make it your New Year's resolution to write early and often! As Joe McCarthy said, "I have a list."

However, there ARE many sugarplums on Seventy-Claus's list, who mailed in the following scrumptious tidbits:

Someone who may know something about "chestnuts roasting by the open fire" is Jim Webb, proud owner of Canal Tile and Stove in Lambertville, N.J., with his spouse, Barbara. They feature an Austrian-made wood stove covered with custom tiles which retain heat, efficiently radiating it throughout the house, while greatly reducing harmful chimney emissions.

Cbod Harris, editor of the DX BULLETIN, "America's premier weekly amateur radio publication," claims that he missed his 20th reunion because "my boss forced me to spend that weekend at a money-losing, boring convention in Kansas City," and further reports that he is "his own boss." Nonetheless, he did forward a picture of a tiger which he alleges is of "himself."

Someone who submitted only a slightly better excuse for missing the 20th is Geoff Petrie, who was then the Portland Trail Blazers' V.P. of business operations and radio analyst. With the Blazers still in the playoffs last June, Petrie couldn't make it back. This devotion has since been rewarded with a new title of senior V.P.-operations.

Dr. George Arana has been named executive director of the Medical Univ. of South Carolina Medical Center. His HANDBOOK OF PSYCHIATRIC DRUG THERAPY is the most widely used textbook in psychopharmacology.

As we close out the final column of 1990, here are some final thoughts: "Happy Holidays to All, Peace on Earth (NOW), and 'please write!'"

71

STUART E. PICKERSON
Grace Station, P.O. Box 1142
New York, NY 10028

Bruce Solter is spending considerable time involved in the much-publicized justice dept. investigation of whether the Ivy League colleges have been colluding on tuition and financial aid, in violation of U.S. anti-trust laws. He says, "I'm actually representing Dartmouth in the investigation, but since all the Ivies have common interests I've been working closely with Princeton's lawyers, too."

Résumés: Fritz Hoffecker is now responsible for information management strategic planning for US Sprint. His responsibilities there include work on neural networks and artificial intelligence. He is also getting the liniment out to begin his 29th lacrosse season. Leslie, his wife, has been productive too, writing a children's book about Kansas City, published in Aug. Minnesota's Governor Rudy Perpich appointed Jim Hart to the state's Health Care Access Commission, which is developing a plan to provide healthcare coverage for those who are currently uncovered.

Al Holmer's article on the "Special 301" section of the 1988 Trade and Competitiveness Act recently appeared in the FORDHAM INTERNATIONAL LAW JOURNAL. Special 301's purpose is to promote the protection of intellectual property rights in foreign countries. This is done by "credible threats" of unilateral retaliation by the U.S. to "persuade" its trading partners to reform deficient practices. Al is a partner at Sidley & Austin in Washington, D.C. Mark Swanson moved to Little Rock, Ark., to assume the directorship of a multi-campus training and research program in developmental disabilities for the Univ. of

Grant A. Peacock '46
Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

*Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased*

Suite 2800
450 Park Avenue at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022

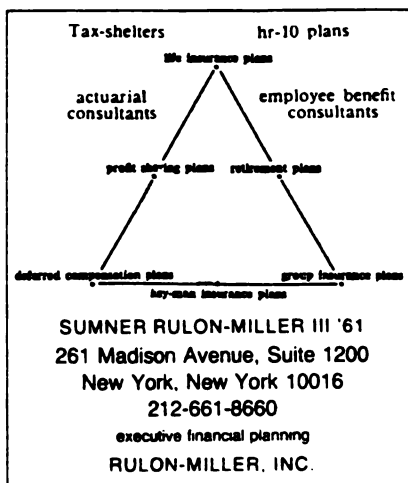

(212) 753-4640

Wanted to Buy

Highest prices paid
for American and European Art,
including paintings, watercolors
and drawings, sculpture and prints
from 18th century to present.
Please contact Stuart P. Feld, '57

Hirsch & Adler
GALLERIES INC.

21 E. 70th St. NY 10021 • (212) 535-8810
Fax: (212) 772-7237

Barge Beautiful Canal du Midi or Burgundy aboard "La Tortue".
Cruising Spacious, comfortable. Large sundeck, lounge, 3 twin staterooms/baths. Notable cuisine, 10-speed bikes, minibus. Seasoned, agreeable British crew. Weekly charters Apr.-Oct. Color brochure: "LaTortue", Dept P, Box 1466, Manchester, MA 01944

Of Finance and Fiction

THOMAS A. BARRON '74, a winner of the Pyne Prize, a former Rhodes Scholar, and an alumni trustee, mixes work in finance and writing children's fiction—and makes it seem perfectly natural, even fun.

Barron's first book, Heartlight, published in September by Philomel, is firmly in the tradition of such writers as Madeleine L'Engle and C.S. Lewis, who used fantasy stories to underscore moral principles. The plot revolves around Kate Prancer Gordon, the adolescent heroine, who hangs out in the laboratory of her grandfather, a famous astrophysicist. The old man is desperate to find some way to save the sun, which he discovers is on the verge of collapse, although the cause of its trouble is a mystery. Eventually, Kate and her grandfather take off for Tretioniel, the brightest star in the Milky Way, in a search for Pure Condensed Light (P.C.L.), the rare substance needed to save the sun. Helping the earthlings are two giant Morpho butterflies and a hexagonal creature from the planet Nel Sauria.

In the author's view, the quest for P.C.L. becomes a contest between mortal love and the selfish desire for immortality. "I didn't want to write for entertainment's sake alone," says Barron, who is appalled by the quality of some of today's entertainment for adolescents. "These kids are the future, and we're not giving them what they deserve. There are too many video games and the like out there, but not enough books dealing with ideas important to young people. One of those ideas—can one person make a difference?—is what Heartlight is about."

Barron didn't set out to be a writer of children's books. After finishing his Rhodes at Oxford, he earned degrees in both law and business from Harvard, then went to work for the Prospect Group, a venture-capital and acquisition firm started by Louis Marx '53. He eventually became president of the company, which is based in New York City. During 1986 and 1987, three events changed his life: he married, a good friend died of cancer, and his first child was born. He began work on Heartlight, a book that deals with life and death, good and evil. After four years of writing early in the mornings and on weekends, he completed it last spring. By then, Barron had left New York City and moved to Colorado, where he had spent much of his youth. There, he invests in small businesses and has started his own investment firm, Evergreen Management, based in Denver.

Since moving to Colorado, he has also begun writing two more books—one a sequel to Heartlight, the other a nonfiction work about the economics of the Rocky Mountain region. An ardent environmentalist, Barron says of the latter book, "I want to show that there are ways to provide jobs without destroying the West's natural assets—clean air, water, and forests—and that the result of enterprise doesn't have to be a toxic waste dump or a Western ghost town."

An outdoorsman since childhood, Barron loves the rugged country around his home in Boulder, Colorado. He recalls that, while at Oxford, he eschewed weekend trips to London in favor of hiking in Scotland or along Hadrian's Wall. He named his daughter, Denali, after the Indian name for Mount McKinley, and his son, Brooks, after the mountain range in northern Alaska.

—Ann Waldron

Tom Barron '74

PHOTO COURTESY OF PHILOMEL

Foreign Service. She joined the state dept. in Jan. 1990 as a political officer. Previously, Holly was international programs director at the Valve Manufacturers Assn. in Washington. During this time she led a trade mission to Mexico in 1989 and managed to find time to become certified as an amateur ski instructor. She agrees that the latter skill will not be of much use in the Middle East. Her assignment in Tel Aviv lasts until June 1992 and she welcomes visits from classmates, knowing of course that events in the region may deter most visitors.

IN PRINCETON: Pictured are Brian Zack and his wife, Ginger, and their two children Rebecca (8) and Ian (6). Brian is in his seventh year as a University physician at Princeton.

John Mann would welcome seeing any classmates in the Northern Va.

area of Marshal, Hume, Front Royal, or Middleburg. Just look for Leeds Manor in Hume. Since leaving Booz-Allen and M.C.I., John has started and sold a couple of high-tech communications equipment companies. He is now a management consultant for several manufacturers in the D.C. area. John and his wife, Martha, who is an oncologist, have two children, Nathaniel (3½) and Nell (1½).

73

R. GREGORY PLUMPTON
Box 14545
North Palm Beach, FL 33408

Gil Serota is pleased to have Suzanne and Jim Lape as new neighbors in the San Francisco Bay area. Bill Good is also there, practicing pediatric ophthalmology at the Univ. of S.F. Bill was out running, as he has since Princeton, during The Quake and didn't even notice it. (Runner's High?)

Also in northern Calif., Gail Finney has returned to U.C.—Davis, to resume her position as prof. of German and comparative literature. Gail witnessed the Wall come down as she was living in West Berlin on a research fellowship last year.

Car dealer and Entrepreneurial Wizard Rob Mancuso has sold his high-volume dealerships, including Cadillac, Honda, Saab, and Peugeot. He plans to concentrate now on the high-price end of the market with his Ferrari-Porsche-Maserati dealership outside of Chicago.

Neal Goins married Theresa Ann Reilly Oct. 14, 1989, in Tyler, Tex. Theresa attended Princeton on a graduate fellowship. Beverly Cayford attended.

Arlene Golbin Burns is continuing her practice in speech and language pathology, working mostly with head-trauma and post-stroke patients. She is still painting canvases and collage pins as well, juggling science, art, and being mom to David (7) and Samantha (4).

Also in the health world is Beth Rom-Rymer. Beth was appointed director of psychological services for the children's unit at Chicago Lakeshore Hospital.

74

JOHN STRYKER
15 Woodbine Rd.
Kendall Park, NJ 08824

A BOUNTY OF BENJAMINS: Tira Harpaz and her husband Peter Cruikshank '79 became the parents of Benjamin Everett Cruikshank Apr. 4, 1990. With only 17 months separating Benjamin and his big sister Elizabeth (pictured here), life for Tira and Peter is "a constant round of dirty diapers and bottles, but we're very happy." Tira has returned to work as an associate in the N.Y. law firm of Davis, Polk &

Arkansas. His wife, Margo, and children Ned (12), Jennie (11), and Laura (3) are "looking forward to the change of pace and scenery."

HOLIDAY GREETINGS: This is the last issue scheduled for 1990. The officers of the Class of 1971 extend sincere holiday wishes to the Class and their families. Next year marks the celebration of the 20th anniversary since our graduation. If you have not already begun to make plans to attend Reunions 1991, do so now. In the meantime, have a happy and prosperous new year.

72

KIP HEWITT
21 Wildcat Rd.
Darien, CT 06820

FROM TEL AVIV: Holly Lovejoy is working in the "front office" in Tel Aviv, where she is serving as staff aide to Ambassador William Brown—her first post in the Wardell. Peter is a human resources officer at Chase Manhattan Bank. Bruce Snyder and his wife, Fran, welcomed their son Benjamin on May 17, 1990. The Snyder clan lives in Edison, N.J., and also includes Shoshana (7), David (5), and Eli (3). Bruce is a partner in the law firm of Lasser, Hochman, Marcus, Guryan & Kuskin in Roseland, N.J.

David Twardy and his wife, Ruth Falik, greeted Benjamin John Twardy on Aug. 14, 1990, and report that number-one son Samuel David (2) is taking it all in stride. Both David and Ruth are physicians in Pittsburgh, Penn.

OTHER TIGER CUBS: George van der Ploeg and his wife, Marna, now have two sons: Nicholas (3) and Charles (1). They have recently moved their family from N.Y. to Old Greenwich, Conn. George sells real estate with Halstead Property in N.Y. and Marna is now a full-time mom.

SEASON'S GREETINGS: Your Class officers want to wish all members of the '74 family the safest and happiest of holiday seasons.

75 MELISSA KOSER MESORIAN
940 Riverside Ave., Berkeley Square
Trenton, NJ 08618

The Class has at least one representative in Operation Desert Shield: LCDR Alexander Jones, the orthopedic spine surgeon aboard the USNS MERCY. Alec's view of the Persian Gulf? "Warm (temperatures above 120° on deck), clear nights (no clouds; no moisture), and plentiful seafood (hundreds of poisonous sea snakes)."

Elissa and Fred Parnon dressed Jay Victor, born Jan. 16, in his tiger hat (pictured) for Reunions. Jay enjoyed the 15th and has now mastered a growl to match his hat.

Randy and Lorraine Longino Barba have moved to Kenilworth, Ill., near Chicago. Randy has joined Andersen Consulting to manage the industrial products marketing and strategy practice in their strategic services consulting division. Lorraine is enjoying time at home with their two children, Randy and Elizabeth.

Robert Hermann and Signa Merrill (St. Lawrence '83) were married June 16 in Locust Valley, N.Y. Classmates in attendance were Andy Cooley, Carl Frischhorn, Becky Trafton Frischhorn, Ted Gamble, Susie Suptin, Walter Haydock, Cece Turner Haydock, Shep Hermann, Robby Pyme, and Jeff Rice. Signa is Sotheby's representative in St. Louis, and Bob is president of the Hermann Companies, a diversified holding company in that city.

Hollis Russell took on the role of regional A.G. chairman for Palm Beach City last year "after some arm-twisting by Tom Raleigh '76" and admits, "It's been some fun (and rewarding) tracking down Floridian tigers for Old Nassau."

We have received the sad news of the death of John Hodge on July 3. A memorial will follow.

76 JAMES L. MARCOTTE
Lane & Miltendorf, 919 18th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20006

RE: REUNIONS—Stand by for your "15-All Call," our Class-wide pre-15th reunion telephone campaign. No, you won't be asked for money. Instead, you'll be asked to come to the 15th and have a good time. You'll also be encouraged to respond to Kristin White's reunion directory questionnaire and Josh Libresco's Class survey (if you haven't already). Class V.P. Charlie Bell and Linda Johnson are spearheading the 15-All Call. You can reach Charlie between 8 and 9 P.M. (Eastern) at 301-320-3318 or write him at 5308 Albemarle St., Bethesda, MD 20816. The deadline for returning the reunion directory questionnaire (not to be confused with the Class survey) has been extended to Jan. 10, 1991. If you've lost your questionnaire or never received one, call Kristin White (H-214-960-7460; O-214-888-4768). Photos can be black and white or color.

Pictured are Rebecca Bennett Clark, daughter of Laurie Bennet and Robert Clark, and Samuel Aaron Gordon, son of Susan Feer and Todd Gordon. Rebecca was born Mar. 26, 1989, in Denver, and Samuel on May 21, 1989, in N.Y. Laurie is back at work as senior counsel for U.S. West in Denver and Susan has returned to G. Schirmer, Inc. where she is V.P. and director of promotions. The Princeton socks were gifts from Carol Hasson.

77 JAMES BARRON
15 W. 72nd St., Apt. 24-B
New York, NY 10023

ONE OF A KIND—A desk designed by architect David McAlpin was displayed in an exhibit of original, non-manufactured furniture and furnishings at the N.Y. Design Center in the fall. David's desk was one of 50 prototypes chosen from more than 300 submissions. The bird's-eye-maple and Australian-lacewood desk was created for a writer's living room and home office. David says it evokes both Art Deco influences and Japanese Toori arches. He planned the floating top and removable frosted-glass cantilevered trays to provide multiple planes for tucking away manuscripts and papers, leaving the main work surface clear. Among David's other space-saving furniture projects are computer and stereo armoires.

THE REVIEWS ARE IN—The Class's liquid-dispensing beverage helmets (LDBHs) are being mentioned far and wide. In THE FINAL CLUB, novelist Geoffrey Wolff '60 raved about this "contrivance made from a baseball batter's hard hat equipped with two brackets for beer cans." It works just as well with nonalcoholic liquids, and on second thought, maybe "raved" is too strong a word. But the ENCYCLOPEDIA OF BAD TASTE by Jane and Michael Stern alleged that most happy beverage aficionados have LDBHs. It's not too late to order several LDBHs at $10 apiece for egg nog on New Year's Eve. Call V.P. Linda Knights at 609-466-4425, or write to her at 57 West Broad St., Hopewell, NJ 08525.

78 BOB PARRON
Box 886
Middlebury, VT 05753

Jeff Harrison writes from Lake Mills, Ia., where he has been living since accepting a call to a pastorate there last March. He had previously been teaching at an undergraduate Bible school in Madison, Wisc., which folded. "This is my first pastorate in the U.S.; my previous experience is in the Philippines, where I spent a year doing missions work with my wife, Karen. Our first child, Tammie Michelle, is 19 months. Tammie is a delight, very advanced for her age (of course)," writes proud dad.

John Hart and family—wife Rebecca Heasley Hart '79, Brian (6), Carolyn (3), and Emily, born Apr. 7, 1990—are living in Oxford, England, where John is in a three-year Ph.D. program in theology. According to John, "It's even prettier than Princeton here!"

Liz Murphy Markiewicz writes, "John and I have a new baby girl, Allison, born on Sept. 22, 1990. So far her sister Kimberly thinks the new addition is O.K., if a bit dull."

Eleanor (McManus) and Gary Moffat have a third son, John Edwin, born Sept. 18, 1990. The Moffats have been living in Cincinnati for four years. Gary is a product supply manager with Procter and Gamble. Eleanor is working part-time as an investment manager with Bartlett & Co., and full-time keeping up with the little boys.

Leslie Eisenbud Quini writes of the arrival of her "new" baby, Jason, born in Nov. 1989. He joins older brother Mark (2½).

And with the Sept. 8, 1990, arrival of Adrienne Elizabeth, Bob Slaughter and Kathy Hammonds-Slaughter are first-time parents.

Best wishes for the holiday season from your Class officers.

79 MARTHA KRAMER
27 Northhill St., Apt. 6-R
Stamford, CT 06907

IN PUBLIC SERVICE: Craig Varoga has been press secretary and director of communications for U.S. Senator Harry Reid, of Nevada, for two years. Prior to this appointment, Craig was press secretary for New Orleans Mayor Sidney J. Barthelemy and campaign aide to Louisiana Congresswoman Lindy Boggs.

ON FILM: Ethan Coen has been featured in the press recently because of MILLER'S CROSSING, the latest movie he has produced with his brother, Joel. Their previous successful collaborations included the movies BLOOD SIMPLE and RAISING ARIZONA. The brothers, N.Y. residents, are now editing BARTON FINK, a film they shot in L.A.

IN PRINT: In case you missed the review in PAW last Spring, Alex Wolff has co-authored a book, RAW RECRUITS, on the dark side of college basketball recruiting. Besides detailing college violations and predatory tactics by shoe manufacturers, the book suggests changes the N.C.A.A. should make. Wolff is a senior writer at SPORTS ILLUSTRATED and his co-author, Armen Keteyian, is a network sports correspondent for ABC News. Robert Goldberg has co-authored a book with his father, Gerald Jay Goldberg. The book, ANCHORS: BROKAW, JENNINGS, RATHER AND THE EVENING NEWS, is in its third printing a month after its publication. It presents a behind-the-scenes look at TV news.

TAKE HEART: Vanessa Lucarella has been elected a fellow of the American College of Cardiology. She is currently a staff cardiologist at the Malcolm Grow Medical Center at Andrews Air Force Base in the Washington, D.C. area.

80 REK D. PARKER
25 Farmhouse La.
Purlong, PA 18925

CONGRATULATIONS to John M. Williams, a member of the Atlanta Olympic Committee, who was part of the team that went to Tokyo to negotiate/lobby the I.O.C. and thereby brought the '96 Summer Games to Atlanta. Where do we write for tickets, John?

Amy Kopp Hopkins reports having survived internship and is now working her way through the rest of her residency, although she says that her salary is still only one-third that of her husband's, the engineer. So much for "rich" doctors.

CLASS ISSUE: Pictured at eight weeks is the first child of Jamie Brickell and his wife Elisa, Joshua Harris, born five weeks early on July 14. According to Jamie, Joshua is smiling because he just finished filling out his application for Princeton '12. Ken Kolaski has been busy. He graduated from Temple Law in May 1989, married law school classmate Cynthia Ann Bertha (Bennington College '83) in Oct. 1989, started as an associate in the commercial litigation dept. of Fox, Rothschild, O'Brien & Frankel in Philadelphia, and became a father to daughter Alexandra, born July 13. He invites lawyers young and old to share war stories. David Azen and wife, Margot '83, had a son, Aryeh Avraham, on Oct. 19. Rabbi David is working towards integrating Judaism and the arts. He's written a screenplay based on the Biblical Book of Numbers, is creating a performance piece on the environment utilizing Jewish wisdom, and has performed in a world-premiere stage production of Dashiell Hammett stories in Philadelphia. Margot is studying at the Reconstructionist Rabbinic College. Jamie Clements welcomed his third child, Austen, in Oct. 1989.

81

JEAN AMABLE TELLOHANN
50 Riverside Dr., Apt. 9F
New York, NY 10024

Demaree Peck married Ken Lambert on June 10, 1990, in Lexington, Va., where they both teach at Washington & Lee Univ. Pictured at the wedding are (back row, l-r) Lisa Roberts '84, Lori Ann Bauman, Ken (the Bucknell interloper!), Larry and Jane Fletcher-Hill, Jacques and Ellen Duranceau; (front row, l-r) Demaree's father, Russell Peck '56, Demaree, her brother Gunther Peck '84, Louise Ober, and Betsy Seal. Other Princetonians in attendance were Dick Atcheson '56, Pete Rousseau '82, Liza Mundy '82, Cathy Norman, and Bob and Chris Desan Husson. Demaree writes that Larry and Jacques, fellow members of the Chapel Choir, sang at the wedding with great gusto.

Cornelia Tilney started a new job as director of marketing and sales administration for U.S. Behavioral Health, which provides psychiatric and substance abuse services to companies for their employees. "San Francisco is the greatest—think I'm a 'lifer' out here," writes Lea. Also living in S.F., Geoff Yang is a general partner at a venture-capital firm called Institutional Venture Partners. Geoff recently spent ten months renovating his home, which he describes as "living hell!" Marty Wolff recently returned from the West Coast to N.Y., where he is in his first term at Columbia B-School.

82

TERI DOOLEY KOGUT
12409 Sadler Lane
Bowie, MD 20715

Happy Holidays . . . Is it winter already? To get you in the mood for some fun in the snow, Rick Coffey sent us a picture from this group's mostly annual ski trip. This past March they set foot on the mountains of Jackson Hole, Wyo. Pictured are (l-r) Chip Monk,

Scott Frantz, Wilson Ervin, Rick, Bill Kissinger, and Robert Van Cleve. Chip is an attorney with Stephoe and Johnson in Washington. Scott is president of a merchant-banking firm in White Plains, N.Y. (On Aug. 1, 1990, Scott summited Mt. Kilimanjaro). Wilson is in the corporate finance group at First Boston. Rick is a partner in an investment banking firm in Washington and is also a co-owner of a contracting firm which restores historic residential properties. Bill is an attorney with McCutchen Doyle in San Francisco. And Cleve is an attorney with Hiller, Clark, Martin & Peterson in Seattle. Also, according to an undisclosed source an unscientific survey was taken and the group concluded that Bill had the biggest brain. Is this true, Bill? Next March there are tentative plans to ski at Telluride in Colo. For more info., contact Bill or Rick.

Robert E. Bennett and Mac True are both working for Goldman Sachs in N.Y. Robert is in the real-estate area and Mac works in the information-technology department. You can also catch Mac playing bass in a rock band "Brave New World" in N.Y. clubs. Russ Abber is working in Torrance, Calif. as a product manager for Tylan General. He says he loves his job, traveling around the country.

We have a memorial in this issue.

83

GAIL FRANK
345 West 87th St., Apt. 3F
New York, NY 10024

The event is John Andrews's Sept. 15 wedding to Beth Morris in Madison, Wisc. The participants are (back) Chip Magid '84, Mark Sber, Erich Groos, Paul Steliotis, Charlie Andrews, Brian Sullivan, John Ross, Lainie Friedman Ross, John, and (front, horizontal) Beth. John is chief resident in pediatrics at the Univ. of Wisc., where Beth is a nurse. Mark is a post-doc at Bell Labs, working with lasers. Erich is finishing his ophthalmology residency in Madison, and plans to do a cornea fellowship.

Eric Horschman married Catherine Woodward '85 on Apr. 21 in Dallas, Tex. Last spring Eric received an M.B.A. and Catherine got a J.D., both at Harvard. They then moved to the San Francisco area, where he works for Digital Equipment and she works at a law firm in Palo Alto. Princetonians pictured are (l-r) Diane Doolittle '85, Almaz Zelleke '84, Marc Berejka '85, Allan Sloan '84, Paul Chamberlain '85, Jody Johnson '86, Ken Hersh '85, David Ross '85, Martha Berlin Brown '84, and Geoff Brown. Not pictured was Brad Urschel.

84

TIMOTHY C. WU
Beacon Court, 175 Beacon St., Apt. 413
Somerville, MA 02143

CLASSMATE TIDBITS JUST IN TIME FOR THOSE HOLIDAY GATHERINGS . . . One '84er whose name can be seen every day on television screens across the country is Karen Wisbod, who is working as a producer for the nationally syndicated Kingworld show, "Instant Recall." Karen reports that Kathryn Agee Gillis is also involved in communications, as the manager of U.S. media relations for Alberta Tourism at Ogilvy and Mather in Seattle. Slightly farther down south is Qui Vuong, who is an associate V.P. of investments with Legg Mason Wood Walker, Inc. in Houston. Qui keeps in touch with David Wilkie, Crawford Moorefield, and Dirk Wilson, all attorneys in Houston, and Jim Ayala, who is a management consultant in Dallas.

Moving east, Brad Parham is now an associate at the law firm of Piper and Marbury in Baltimore, Md., after graduating from Vanderbilt Law School. Moving a lot farther east is Bob Schwarze, who has been deployed to the Middle East as part of operation "Desert Shield." Bob reports that he is flying F-4 "Wild Weasel" fighter jets with the Air Force, and asks that any other Princetonians in the area look him up at the 35th Tactical Fighter Wing. Moving in the opposite direction is Bill Bass, who has settled in Calif. with his wife Pam and daughter Julie (born Aug. 16). Bill recently left the Army, where he was serving as a helicopter pilot instructor, to attend Stanford Business School. Also in graduate school is Aniel Mishra, who is working on his dissertation as well as serving as treasurer of the Princeton Club of Michigan. Aniel was also the source of a recent WALL STREET JOURNAL article on white-collar staff reductions. Aniel reports that he keeps in touch with Tom Robinson in Boston. Another classmate returning to school is Stephen Pearson, who is in his first year at the Georgetown Univ. Business School. Happy Holidays to all!

85

ROB JIRANEK
1578 Oak Ave., Apt. 1
Evanston, IL 60201

THIS EVOLVING CLASS OF 1985: Regard this child carefully. He wears a beer jacket, and he may be pouring ale at your 25th. Congratulations to David Brown and his wife Deborah '84 on the arrival of Jacob Robert Brown, Class of 2008. David is halfway through his residency in internal medicine at Mass. General.

Cheers also to Scott Stanford and his wife, who gave birth in Aug. to their first-born, Crawford.

John Dasilva married Sharon McGinnis in Aug. 1989. They are both employed as architects at Cesar, Pelli & Associates in New Haven, where, rumor has it, they are scheming a mall design as a much needed Yale Bowl renovation project.

Folks are moving. Pamela Berkowsky spent her last two years on a rotational fellowship in the depts. of defense and state in Washington, D.C. Karen Benson has moved back to Beantown and is working as director of alumni and parent relations at nearby Curry College. Ruth Buchanan has reached Vancouver where she invites "all East Coasters to visit the good life" for a bit of mountain biking and ocean kayaking.

Diana Caskey is shepherding America's youth at the Peddie School. Her students consider her a strict disciplinarian.

Congratulations to Jimmy Young who tripped Joe Gallagher to finish steps ahead in the N.Y. Marathon. "Why can't the water stations serve pizza?" Jim asked a race official as he broke the tape.

86

SALLIE KIM
2645 California St., Apt. 303
Mountain View, CA 94040

John Watts writes that he is "saddened to note that Stephen Culbane has forfeited $100 from a senior-year wager because, despite many earlier protestations, he has succumbed to his fate and entered law school this fall at N.Y.U." John has not succumbed to his fate yet; he is pursuing his master's degree in city planning at U.C.-Berkeley this year.

The photo here is from the wedding of J. Timothy Kernan to Audriann Kemenosh, Mar. 10, 1989 in Ocean City, N.J. Tim is a civil engineer at Allan Kammerer, Inc., in Medford, N.J., and Audri is a law student. Pictured are (l-r) Rob Garwood '87, Eric Pearson '87, Mike Novogratz '87, John Orr '85, Wendy Orr, Pete Devlaminck '85, Brian Crane, Joelle Moesetti, Nick Corcoran '85, Tim, Audri, Tom Kernan, and Vince Stravino.

Donna Nuttall graduated from Georgetown Law Center in May and recently married Darryl Joe, a fellow law student. Donna is working as an attorney for the Commodities Futures Trading Commission in the Division of Enforcement.

One of our classmates is participating in Operation Desert Shield in Saudi Arabia: John Hurley was allowed to defer his M.B.A. studies at Stanford to re-join the Army.

87

MARY TAYLOR DENKO
1935 Seville St.
Santa Rosa, CA 95403

Can you imagine a morning commute on 30 miles of dusty road, dodging an occasional camel and sitting next to armed bodyguards? That's how Carl Greppin described the beginning of his day while working as a summer intern for a cement company in Pakistan. Azam Faruque helped Carl get the job; he is the chief planning officer for the company. Carl (left) and Azam (right) are pictured here with their wives, Wendy Bower Greppin '89 and Samia Faruque (Azam got married last winter). Carl has since returned to M.B.A. studies at Chicago.

Others taking the M.B.A. route are Erica Okada, John Marshall, and Grag Berzolla, all at Tuck, and Bill Sheehan, Tad Smith, Lauri Union, Lee Hobson, and Carlos Prieto, at Harvard. Also at Dartmouth, Brian Grady is a med. student.

Several '87ers have hit the international scene. Stylianos Markianos is in Greece after three years of study in Harvard's econ dept. Debby Greenberg is spending time in Israel. Polly Jessen is consulting for International Voice in Osaka, Japan. Andrew Sinuwell works for Alcar Group in Hong Kong. Bitsy Trimble, getting an M.S.W. from Penn., just returned from a semester of study in Scotland.

88

CHRISTOPHER LU
206R Holden Green
Cambridge, MA 02138

Rob Carlson and Pam deVries were married in Hamilton, Mass., on May 12. Princetonians who attended the wedding are pictured: (l-r) Jim Cohen '89, Libby Harris, Alan Pardoe, Rob, Pam, Jay Kloecker, Doug Worthington '89, Sean Sullivan, Eric Noebrenberg, and Terry Marsh '73. Rob is in his first year at Harvard Business School, and Pam is an account executive for Apple Computer. The newlyweds live in Watertown, Mass.

News this month comes from all around the world. On the other side of the Atlantic Ocean is Thomas Frangione, who is a business analyst at McKinsey & Co. in Milan, Italy. Justin Møllgaard is at the Inst. for British and Irish Studies in Oxford. Finally, Rokhaya Waring had a one-woman exhibit of her paintings last month at the Paris Country Club. She hopes to do a similar exhibit early next year in the U.S.

News also comes from the other side of the world. Rob Gluckman is working in Hong Kong, as managing director of Witgang Far East Ltd. And the N.Y. Times reported last month that Doug Burden reached the finals of double-sculls competition at the world rowing championships in Australia.

Many apologies to Julie Lubetkin, who is at Stanford Business School, not some two-bit school in Cambridge, Mass., as I mistakenly reported several issues ago. With the temperature now below freezing here, I'm sure Julie is glad she's in Calif.

89

DAVID MILLER
4698 S. 36th St.
Arlington, VA 22206

Rob McKay is getting a master's in public health from N.Y.U., and teaches English part-time to Latino immigrants. "I spend half the week thinking that it's unfair the way teachers work so hard to give their students a good education, only to have them fall asleep in class," he writes. "The I spend the other half of the week thinking how boring are the lectures I go to and how MTV would be much more enjoyable." And he spends another half providing Class news: Dan Kinney and Todd Darling live together in N.Y. and commute together to the Federal Reserve Bank, where they work two floors apart. Dewey Hoffman attends the Univ. of Pittsburgh law school, and reports that he now understands why Pittsburgh has been touted as the most livable city in the U.S. Conrad Pitcher, who is teaching at a private girls' school in the Philadelphia suburbs, gets a kick out of being called "Mr. Pitcher." Wright Steenrod has joined the Marines.

A NEW CHAMPION: Mimi Corey Maslan and her husband Carl '87 have shattered the First Class Baby record. Pictured here at 15 months is blond, blue-eyed Colin Daniel Maslan, born June 23, 1989. The Maslans are living in Falmouth, Me., "enjoying family life in the Down East tradition." Nuptial and new-born news always welcome, even of the non-record-breaking variety.

OVERSEAS BULLETINS: Anneke Vanmarcke is beginning a two-year stint as a strategy consultant with

Young Alumni Activities

PC OF CANADA: We have several fun get-togethers planned. If you are a young alumnus of Toronto and would like to be on our mailing list, call June Higgins at 416-250-6978.

PA OF NEW ENGLAND: Feb. 21: Boston Alumni Club's party at Venus de Milo or Club Land. Look for fliers in January's mail. For more info please call: Adrienne Della Penna '88 at 617-861-8254, Sarah Helm '89 at 617-868-7808, or Mary Hermann '89 at 617-628-8825.

PCNY: Dec. 20: Young Alumni Holiday Party at club, 6:30-8:30. Jan. 3: Thursday Night Club—young alumni get-together in PC's Tiger Bar & Grill. Jan. 14: Movie Night: PRE-SUMED INNOCENT, 8 P.M., free. Jan. 23: Fresh Air Fund community service. Call the manager's office (212-840-6400) for more info, or for reservations for holiday party or movie.

PC OF NORTHERN CALIF.: Dec. 29: Symposium with Marvin Bressler, sociology dept. chairman. Any questions, please call Angela Kennedy Clark '85 at 609-258-5844.

Tohmatsu & Co. in Tokyo. Nadja Leonard will be in Paris until Jan., attending classes as a French-lit. master's student in the N.Y.U.-in-France program. Louisa Huband is teaching English at a girls' junior high school in Kuashiki City, Japan, and enjoying it so much she renewed her contract through next July.

90

BRETT GOODMAN
22 Berkeley Terrace
Livingston, NJ 07039

Congratulations to Nandini Tharmaratnam, who last July married Rajakanthan Thillairajah. Having a blast at the festivities in the nation's capital are (clockwise from left of back row) Mike Cullen, Stefan Granito, Ron Chen, Sarah Sayeed, Michael Baloing '89, Talat Shah '89, Samta Khandelwal '91, Mamta Khandelwal, Rajiv de Silva '89, Namrita Kapur '89, Sabrina Islam, groom, bride, Beth Alter, and Carl Naib. The couple now lives in Philadelphia, where Nandini attends med school at Penn.

In the "who says law school stinks" category, we have Bob Cameron, Marsh Praise, and Todd Strine. Bob is at the Univ. of Pittsburgh and finds the work "challenging and interesting" and still has time to hang out with Jeff Gerlach, who teaches at nearby ShadySide Academy. Marsh is at Wake Forest and enjoys N.C. because "people down here loathe Jon Bon Jovi. Thank God." Todd is "getting a tan, taking late-night swims in the Pacific, and going to U.C.L.A. law school. Guess which of these I spend most time doing?"

More and more classmates are leaving the States to spend time abroad. Mibir Chaudaria works at his family's business in Sydney, Australia, while Karl Goldstein is in Brazil on a Fulbright Fellowship. Christina Haegler is taking a course on decorative arts at Christie's in London, and Jeff Schultz teaches in Madrid.

Memorials

John Blanchard Miles Jr. '24

JOHNNIE MILES DIED Aug. 28, 1990. After graduating with our Class, he received a Ph.D. in physics from the Graduate School in 1929. Early in his career he was a member of the team of scientists with Du Pont that developed nylon and was "Du Pont's man" both at the Univ. of Chicago and in Hanford, Wash. Later he was associated with Monsanto in Decatur, Ala. and at the Research Triangle at Chapel Hill. In WWII he was with the Manhattan Project, which developed the atom bomb. After retiring from Monsanto he taught physics at Old Dominion Univ. until 1972, when he moved to Lynchburg.

He is survived by his wife, Elizabeth; his son, Burnley Lankford Miles; and his daughter, Elizabeth Roadcap.

To them we express our sympathy.

The Class of 1924

Lytle Graceff Chambers '30

"LYTLE" DIED unexpectedly at his home in Brooklyn Heights Apr. 14, 1990. A memorial service was held at the First Unitarian Church in Brooklyn Apr. 29.

After Princeton Lytle wore many hats. He received an M.A. from Columbia and completed most of the requirements for a Ph.D. In the 1940s the Marines took him from a post as natl. youth administrator for Orange Cty. to teach at the Marine Corps Inst. and later serve in the Pacific.

Lytle was active in Democratic politics in N.Y. and was a candidate for the legislature and City Council. In later years he was a supervisor in the N.Y.C. welfare dept. and also served in the N.Y.C. Retirement System, from which he retired in 1975.

Lytle married Jane Brainerd in 1943. They had no children and divorced in 1985. Jane died in 1986. Mrs. R. Ridgely Lytle '13 survives, and Lytle had three cousins: Scott H. Lytle '40, Jean Lytle Reynolds, and R. Ridgely Lytle III. To them we extend our sincere sympathy.

The Class of 1930

William Samuel McChesney '30

WITH THE DEATH of Bill McChesney in Florida June 30, 1990, the Class lost one of its most loyal members. He served for many years as Class agent and most recently as a regional V.P. Unfortunately, Bill had to miss our 60th reunion because of a disabling illness. This would have been particularly poignant because it was also the 25th reunion of his son, Bill Jr. '65, and the graduation of his grandson Jacques '90.

Bill came to Princeton from the St. Louis Country Day School. At Princeton he was a member of the Glee Club and Cloister Inn. Following graduation Bill joined the Aluminum Co. and remained with them until his retirement in 1970 as V.P.-marketing services. He was largely responsible for popularizing the use of aluminum and for marketing the snap top for aluminum cans.

Bill never lost his interest in Princeton and until recent years could be found at every reunion. Despite his illness, he never lost his sunny disposition and greeted one and all with a warm smile. He was an inspiration to many of us who complain unduly.

Bill is survived by his wife, Ruth; sons, William S. Jr. '65 and Thomas B. '68; and four grandchildren. To them we extend our sympathy on the loss of this good friend.

The Class of 1930

George Bernard Sour '30

GEORGE SOUR died June 27, 1990, at the Northern Westchester Hospital in Mt. Kisco, N.Y., after a long illness.

George came to Princeton from the Franklin School in N.Y.C. At Princeton he roomed all four years with Alan Kridel. After graduation George went out to Calif. to join his uncle, who owned the Brown Derby. During WWII he worked for a time in the Office of Price Administration. Following that he was V.P. of the American Inst. for Food Administration until 1951. He then ventured into Wall Street, starting his own firm after having bought a seat on the exchange. He continued in this business until his retirement in 1973.

George held a record for attendance at Princeton football games probably unmatched by any other alumnus. He, along with his brother Bob '25, attended every Princeton game, home or away, from 1926, when George entered Princeton, until 1988 when Bob died. George then missed a few games but soon resumed his string. His other interests included American history, particularly the Revolution and Civil War eras.

George is survived by his wife, Miriam; a daughter by a previous marriage, Mari Ullman; a stepson, Robert Somow; and two grandchildren. To all of them we extend our sympathy in the death of this quiet and loyal son of Princeton.

The Class of 1930

Charles P. Henderson '32

CHUCK HENDERSON died suddenly of a heart attack Sept. 15, 1990. Born in Youngstown, Ohio, Chuck lived out his life there and served his community with distinction. With a law degree from the Univ. of Michigan, Chuck first practiced in Youngstown, then was elected a municipal court judge in 1941. After four years in the Army he returned to find Youngstown riddled with crime and racketeering. As a Republican in a strongly Democratic town, he ran for mayor, driving out the rackets, reducing smoke and smog, eliminating dumps, and providing housing improvements. In 1955 he was back in court, this time as a county probate judge, the first Republican to hold that post in 40 years. He retired in 1985 after a distinguished career that involved him with many organizations. Among them: Mahoning Cty. and Ohio State Bar assns., Ohio State Municipal League, Assn. of Probate Judges, Judicial Conference, and Judicial College; Public Library of Youngstown, and county boards of Mental Health and Elections. In 1950 he was appointed to the Commission of Intergovernmental Relations by President Eisenhower.

Chuck was married to the former Margaret Arms in 1939. She survives him, as do two sons, Charles Jr. and Warner; also two daughters, Mrs. Margaret Blair and Mrs. Elizabeth Lufkin, and nine grandchildren. Our sympathy goes to them all at the loss of this conspicuously dedicated citizen.

The Class of 1932

William P. Wright Jr. '33

How do we deal with the death of Bill Wright, who died in England June 23, 1990? He was such a leading figure in the Class, not the least of his contributions being the procurement of the brilliant orange-and-black cloth for our reunion jackets, which have been so conspicuous a sight at reunions for many years.

Bill was born May 5, 1912, in East Greenwich, R.I. He later lived in N.Y., and prepared at Horace Mann. In college Bill was on the DAILY PRINCETONIAN, in the Glee Club and Cloister Inn, and roomed with Oscar Mertz.

After graduation Bill joined Greenwood Mills, a Manhattan textile company, with whom he remained until 1955, except for five years in the Air Force. He remained in the A.F. Reserve, as a colonel.

In 1955 Bill joined J. Walter Thompson as a V.P., and in 1965 founded his own silk importing business, Koryo, in Princeton, retiring as its president in 1979.

Among many distinctions, Bill served as deputy secretary of the Air Force and in the Office of Export Production. He was secretary of the Class from 1953-1963, and was chairman of the executive committee of the Alumni Council.

In 1937 Bill married Eula Lee McKnight, who died in 1972. They had four children, Nancy Lee Alter, W. P. III '63, James L., and Elizabeth Wright; and five grandchildren. In Dec. 1973 Bill married Sheila Anderson, who survives him. To her, and to all the family the Class of '33 extends its deep sympathy in our mutual loss.

The Class of 1933

James Alden Arnold '39

JIM DIED at his home in Annapolis June 24, 1990. He had never fully recovered from a liver and kidney disease in 1988. Nevertheless he went on teaching as assoc. professor in the English dept. at the U.S. Naval Academy until his retirement last Dec.

During WWII Jim served as Lt. Cmdr. with the U.S.N.R. in Australia, New Guinea, and the Philippines. He then returned to Princeton as a part-time instructor in the English dept. and earned his Ph.D. in 1951. His love of literature and of teaching combined with his command experience at sea led him to join the faculty of the Naval Academy, where he spent the rest of his career. He was co-author of two books: THE UNITED STATES AND WORLD SEA POWER (1955) and SEA POWER: A NAVAL HISTORY (1960).

Jim's first wife died in 1978. They had two daughters, Gail (Mrs. Thomas Suit) and Jean; and three sons, William, Robert, and Richard. In 1988 Jim married Pamela Jean King. To Pamela and all Jim's family we offer our sincere sympathy.

The Class of 1939

Harry Cushing Piper Jr. '40

THE DEATH of Bob Piper Aug. 19, 1990, marked the loss of one of Minneapolis's most highly regarded citizens. Bob prepared at Lawrenceville, majored in history, was on the golf team, and a member of Triangle and Cottage. In WWII he served in the U.S. Army in the Pacific.

Bob expanded his Piper, Jaffray & Hopwood brokerage house into one of the nation's leading regional investment firms. As a governor of the N.Y. Stock Exchange for eight years and a member of various security exchange advisory committees, he played an important part in his industry's policies. He was equally effective in community, charity, and civic causes. Service, responsibility, and ethical/value behavior were the guiding beacons of Bob's business and civic involvement. Despite the recognition, honors, and acclaim he received for his achievements, he remained throughout modest and unassuming—"a man without guile or pretense"—who cared sincerely about the less fortunate and willingly took on community tasks because they mattered to him and were important. To Bob's three sons—Harry III, Addison, and David; his sister, Mrs. Catherine Knoblauch; and his many friends and colleagues, the Class offers its deepest condolences at the loss of this Princetonian of such great humanitarian character and integrity.

The Class of 1940

Jeffrey Kenneth Kanefield '82

JEFF WAS FOUND dead May 10, 1990, in his room in Sacramento, apparently of an accidental drug overdose. At the time of his death he had nearly completed a residency in anesthesiology at U.C.-Davis.

Born June 22, 1961, and raised in the suburbs of Philadelphia, Jeff attended Cheltenham High School. At Princeton he achieved campus fame with a startling variety of musical accomplishments. He devoted much of his four years to the Princeton Univ. Band, as trombonist, student conductor and finally shell/conductor. A gifted pianist, he performed with the touring Triangle company and with the jazz group Time and a Half; he also sang with the Offbeats and hosted an occasional rock 'n' roll slot on WPRB. For his senior thesis in the music dept., Jeff arranged the score for the 1982 Triangle show STOCKS and BONDAGE, including his own compositions "He's Got the Key" and "Acquisition and Merger." As a respite from all this, Jeff also elected to pursue pre-medical studies, culminating in his graduation in 1986 from Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia.

Jeff is survived by his parents, Marvin and Isobel Kanefield, and by his two sisters, Susan and Karen. To them, as to Jeff's many friends and admirers, we express our condolences and our sense of loss.

The Class of 1982

Hot on the Heels of Women's Liberation, Circa 1990

ILLUSTRATION BY MARCELLA GALLARDO

LAST NIGHT, Sarah, who's almost nine, came clattering down the stairs in her mother's high heels with a big grin on her face. My whole low-heeled life passed before my watery eyes.

"Why? Why? Why are you wearing those?" I wailed, my calm, wise, fatherly act momentarily dislocated. "Must another generation put fashion before its feet?" I pumped her for a response.

She stopped, bewildered by this unmannerly invasion into her fantasy world.

"I am Princess Eglantina," she said, sweeping her stole over her shoulder. Where she saw royalty and style, I saw proto-varicose veins and bound feet.

"High heels are a sexist symbol of the domination of male fashion designers over the needs of women for practical, comfortable footwear," I intoned with all the dread authority I could muster. "It's as bad as—well, bound feet. And they'll give you varicose veins. After a while, anyway. You should wear flats," I concluded lamely.

She knew what bound feet were, and she wasn't impressed.

"Mommy doesn't have varicose veins. And I can take these off whenever I want."

Some foot soldier in the liberation wars I was! I was losing. My knees buckled; I felt like a heel and sat down. In desperation I appealed to her dignity.

"You never saw Supergirl going around on her tippy-toes, did you?" Now she has standing among superheroes.

"So what?" Sarah replied, booting my weak logic out the door.

"Well, Superman, then. He doesn't walk on tiptoes." Perhaps it was time to punt. My footing seemed slippery, my argument shoddy.

She clunked over to me and sat in my lap, giving me a hug. They learn fast. She knew my arguments were flat.

"There, there, Daddy. You're right. Superman doesn't walk on tiptoes. Don't worry."

I tried another footpath. Did this girl have any soul?

"Well, if you're so smart you can talk circles around me, how come you let the fashion industry dictate such dumb orthopedic designs? And besides, how do you run in those things?"

She smiled patiently and folded her hands. She was getting a kick out of this conversation, I could tell.

"In the first place, Daddy, I did not have anything to do with the fashion industry and these shoes. In the second place, I'm only trying them on. I'm not running anywhere. I'm a princess. And, in the third place, what's the big deal?"

I ranted, I raved. I lunged for the encyclopedia, that bulging football of knowledge. We walked together through ancient lore. We found "shoe" between "Shoco" (a variant spelling of "Socoh") and "shoebill stork." We learned that a shoe was indeed a foot covering that consists of a sole and an upper. From the humble hide of prehistory, the shoe progressed to the sandal in Egypt and Greece and the boot in Greece and Rome. The Middle Ages preferred the moccasin—O sensible age!—until the Gothic sense of style ran amok and chains were required to hold up the toes, they had become so elongated.

At the beginning of the fifteenth century, the clog arrived, and after that came the chopine—both forerunners of our modern excrescent footgear in that they had heels. But the high heel first came into fashion in the Elizabethan Age, and—Eureka! I had found it. The smoking toe! The Achilles tendency!

The high heel was originally worn by both men and women.

At last I was on sound footing. I cackled in triumph.

"So what?" Sarah wanted to know.

"Don't you see? Both sexes tried it out, the men discovered what a lousy idea it was for them and what a great way it was to enslave half the human race, so they made it a fashion statement for women only! It just goes to show that you have to mock sin in order to expose it," I added fitly.

She was unimpressed. So was her mother, who by now had joined our footplay.

"I don't know which is worse," spake Mom, "the men (and women) who run the fashion industry and enslave us with short skirts and high heels, or the men who try to run our lives by improving them."

I could tell she had the upper hand. The argument had become clogged; in fact, she'd laid me by the heels. I gathered my piety about me like a cone of silence and hotfooted it out of there. The whole subject rankled me, but I was tongue-tied; I'd worked myself up into a lather for nothing. No man can fill the shoes of two women.

—Nicholas H. Morgan '75

Nick Morgan is the university's director of development communications and a lecturer in the English department.

Exploring Alaska's Coastal Wilderness

July 16-25, 1991

"Thus perfectly beautiful are these blessed evergreen islands, and their beauty is the beauty of youth."

—John Muir

Sven-Olof Lindblad

Along the lower coast of Alaska lies a realm of blue ice and black water, where great islands of virgin forest thrust sharply upward from brimming, deep sea coves. This wilderness region shelters some of earth's rarest creatures, whether immense humpback whales or cliffside colonies of storm petrels and gregarious puffins. In an era of global spoilage Alaska remains America's wildest horizon, a vast northern land that still tugs at the mind and heart, rousing our persistent hunger for wonder and exploration.

Join our Alumni College for ten days of exploring Alaska's seacoast aboard the Sea Lion, a compact luxury vessel for just 70 passengers operated by Lindblad Special Expeditions. We will travel 1200 miles in comfort through stunning wilderness scenes. During the long daylight of Arctic summer, we will cruise narrow inlets and fiords, skirting icebergs to land and walk forest trails or probe coastal tidepools. We will also call at remote village harbors to study Alaska's diverse human heritage, the men and women who created early outposts and sustain today's enduring folkways.

Directed by William Howarth, professor of English and American studies, the faculty of this Alumni College will consist of writers and historians who will enrich our journey with provocative accounts of how Alaska has evolved from its often raucous past toward an increasingly fragile future. Trained Lindblad naturalists will also offer their expertise on Alaska's wildlife and environmental history.

The itinerary includes Sitka, Glacier Bay, Admiralty Island, LeConte Bay, Prince Rupert and points along the way. Tuition is $2850—$3930, depending on cabin preference, plus air fare to Seattle. Tuition includes all meals, lodging, and transportation while in Alaska, except for optional "flightseeing" tours over inland glaciers.

Please return this form to the Alumni Council, Box 291, Princeton University, Princeton, New Jersey 08544-0291 (Telephone: 609-258-5854; fax: 609-258-1281)

Exploring Alaska's Coastal Wilderness

July 16-25, 1991

Name(s) _____

Address _____

Telephone (day) _____ (evening) _____ Princeton class or affiliation _____

Please reserve _____ places ☐ Single ☐ Double ☐ Please send additional information

I enclose a check payable to Princeton University for $ _____ ($800 per person deposit).

ALUMNI COLLEGE

"Learning is the enterprise of a lifetime." —Woodrow Wilson, Class of 1879

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

January 23, 1991

WOODROW WILSON:
A NEW LOOK

ABSOLUT PEAK.

TO SEND A GIFT OF ABSOLUT® VODKA (EXCEPT WHERE PROHIBITED BY LAW) CALL 800-243-3787
PRODUCT OF SWEDEN. 40 AND 50% ALC/VOL (80 AND 100 PROOF). 100% GRAIN NEUTRAL SPIRITS. © 1990 CARILLON IMPORTERS, LTD., TEANECK, N.J.

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

CONTINUING THE ALUMNI PRINCETONIAN, FOUNDED IN 1894

FEATURES

10 PRINCETON IN WHOSE SERVICE?

*Woodrow Wilson's Famous Phrase
Has Come to Mean Much More Than He Intended*
by Theodore J. Ziolkowski

17 COLD HANDSHAKE, WARM HEART

Princeton's Oldest Living Alumnus Recalls Woodrow Wilson
by Arthur C. Holden '12

DEPARTMENTS

3 LETTERS

6 PRINCETON NOTEBOOK

*Princeton Professors Team Up to Survey Cosmos; Two Students Win
Marshall Scholarships*

8 ON THE CAMPUS

It's Not Easy Being Paul Volcker '49 These Days
by Matthew T. Henshon '91

19 BOOKS

20 SPORTS

*Men's and Women's Basketball
Enjoy Early-Season Success*

29 CLASS NOTES

45 MEMORIALS

48 ESSAY

The Madison Blues: What Can Account for Princeton's Worship of Wilson?
by David Williamson '84

On the Cover

This portrait of Woodrow Wilson has hung in 1 Nassau Hall since the presidency of Robert F. Goheen '40 '48. It is attributed to Robert Henri of the Ashcan School.

PAINTING DONATED BY WILLIAM BENTON
PHOTO BY GLEM FIORI
COURTESY PRINCETON ART MUSEUM

FROM THE ARCHIVES

As the university's president, Woodrow Wilson wanted to abolish them, but Princeton's eating clubs—and bicker, the method by which they choose their members—endured. In this picture, which was probably taken during a Bicker Week in the late 1940s, members of a club set out on their nightly calls on prospective members. Today, the five remaining selective clubs host prospects on the premises, rather than visiting them in their rooms.

PHOTO BY J. WAYMAN WILLIAMS, JR. '47

J. I. MERRITT '66, Editor

ANDREW C. MYTELKA '85, Managing Editor
NUALA O'CONNOR '89, Assistant Editor

STACY M. WSZOLA, Art Director
R. T. HOWELL, Production Manager
LORRAINE DONEKER, Graphic Assistant

NANCY S. MACMILLAN, Business Manager
LOLLY O'BRIEN, Advertising Director

BOARD OF EDITORIAL DIRECTION

EDWARD R. WEIDLEIN '68, Chairman
LISA B. BELKIN GELB '82 • CHRISTOPHER V. CONNELL '71
LONDON Y. JONES '66 • ELLIOTT D. LEE '74
PATRICIA H. MARKS '72 • JOHN A. MCPHEE '53

PUBLICATION BOARD

DOROTHY L. BEDFORD '78, Chairman
ROBERT K. DURKEE '69 • ROBY HARRINGTON III '51
WALTER H. LIPPINCOTT, JR. '60 • PETER O. PRICE '62
PETER G. SMITH '46 • DANIEL N. WHITE '65

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE

ROBERT F. SENNOTT, JR.
Ivy League Magazine Network
254 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001 • (212) 684-5603

LOCAL ADVERTISING/PRINCETON EXCHANGE

LOLLY O'BRIEN (609) 258-4886

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is an independent magazine supported by alumni class subscriptions and by paid advertising. Its purpose is to record news of the alumni and at the same time to review without partiality the achievements and problems of the administration, the faculty, and the student body of Princeton University. The views expressed in the Alumni Weekly are those of signed contributors or the editor and do not necessarily represent official positions of the university.

PUBLISHED BY

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540
Telephone (609) 258-4885
TWX 510-685-2306 UNIV PRSS PRIN • Fax (609) 258-6305

ELECTRONIC PAW BBS: (609) 258-3602

Materials can be transmitted to our offices via telecomm-munications, using the upload facility in the file-transfer section of the Electronic PAW computer bulletin board system. Its protocols are 300/1200/2400 baud, eight data bits, one stop bit, and no parity. It is online 24 hours a day.

PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY (ISSN 0149-9270)

Vol. 91, No. 8, January 23, 1991
Printed by William Byrd Press, Richmond, Va. Annual subscription $19.50 (foreign postage $5 extra); single copies $1.50. All orders must be paid in advance. Copyright © 1991 Princeton University Press. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Second-class postage paid at Princeton, N.J., and at additional mailing office.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to PAW Address Changes, 3175 Princeton Pike, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

Digitized by Google

FEBRUARY 16

ALUMNI DAY

1991

The train slows down. People rise and prepare to alight. Along the platform they straighten up with a deep intake of the fresh, soft air, and hasten into the branch train. A strange sense of kinship and mutual understanding, mostly unconscious, spreads among them, a gentle tension drawing all towards one common retreat...They are coming to Princeton.

From "This Princeton" by Charles G. Osgood,
The Modern Princeton. Princeton University Press, 1947

Join the Princeton family—alumni, parents and friends who will be coming to Princeton for Alumni Day, Saturday, February 16. Enjoy the excitement of the campus in session, the kinship of classmates, and the enrichment of stimulating lectures. Join in honoring this year's Woodrow Wilson Award recipient, Laurance S. Rockefeller '32, and the James Madison Medalist, Steven Weinberg *57, at the Alumni Association luncheon and meeting. And take time to reflect at the Service of Remembrance.

Schedule in Brief

Friday, February 15

7:30 p.m.—Evening with Joyce Carol Oates

Saturday, February 16

9:15 a.m.—Concurrent Faculty and Alumni Lectures

- Dreams of a Final Theory—Steven Weinberg *57
- Is the U.S. Economy Financially Fragile?—Ben S. Bernanke
- Figaro: Language and Music in Action—Harold S. Powers *59

10:30 a.m.—Concurrent Faculty and Alumni Lectures

- Reflections on Princeton and Beyond—Laurance S. Rockefeller '32
- German Caricature and Culture—Theodore J. Ziolkowski
- Can Computers Design Computers?—Andrea S. LaPaugh
- Writing Lives: Approaches to Biography and Autobiography—Arnold Rampersad

12:15 p.m.—Luncheon and Awards Ceremony with remarks by Laurance S. Rockefeller '32, Steven Weinberg *57, and President Harold T. Shapiro *64

3:00 p.m.—Service of Remembrance

4:00 p.m.—Careers Seminar

4:15 p.m.—Faculty panel: "Education and Ethics—Closing the Gap," moderated by President Shapiro

5:30 p.m.—Receptions

Tickets are $13 for alumni, parents, and friends, $10 for young alumni, $6 for students. Child care is available so bring the whole family.

If you have not yet received a registration form, and would like to attend, call Margaret Johnson, of the Alumni Council, (609)258-5819.

Alumni
Princeton

Council
University

Digitized by Google

Alcohol Abuse on Campus

Several of us concerned with issues of drug and alcohol abuse have been interested in Princeton's alcohol and drug program, both before and since your March 21 article on drinking at Princeton. On November 26, nine of us met in New York City with Kevin Ferry, director of the program; Carl Wartenburg, assistant to President Shapiro and chairman of the Alcohol and Drug Advisory Council; and Lou Pyle '41, director of university health services. The purpose of the meeting was to explore ways in which Princetonians can support the program.

We learned that the administration views current alcohol abuse as more severe than in the past. It worries that the increase in the legal drinking age to twenty-one has pushed undergraduate drinking underground and made it difficult for the university to influence the conduct of undergraduate drinking. Opinions were expressed that alcohol is involved in almost every serious disciplinary problem at Princeton, including every case of sexual assault on one or both sides, and that at least half of all undergraduates are affected seriously by alcohol problems, either their own or those of their families or close friends. Drugs are believed to be touching a much smaller group. We were heartened by the sincerity of the administration's concern about the problems and its determination to develop effective programs.

I believe that Princeton's existing alcohol and drug-abuse program is one of the best among colleges in the United States. Nevertheless, the meeting showed that the administration sees the current program as a beginning, and all the alumni at the meeting concurred that it should be viewed in that way.

Early in the morning following our meeting, there was a tragic accident at Princeton that reportedly involved alcohol. An undergraduate climbed on top of the PJ&B and was horribly burned by electric current from the train's power line. It is not yet clear whether this was a case of one-time high jinks or repeated abusive drinking. In any event, it is a bona fide tragedy for one young man and his family.

This tragedy underscores questions about the university's understanding of the problems and the measures it is taking to deal with them. President Shapiro has stated that he is terribly saddened and angered by the incident and is attaching the highest priority to issues related to alcohol and drugs.

This is a worthy focus for the interest of alumni and alumnae. Anyone who would like to help the university better understand these problems and do something about them can contact me at 141 West 28th Street (Sixth Floor), New York, NY 10001.

JOHN SHEPARD BURR '53
New York, N.Y.

